And these went vp also, Thelmelah, Thel, Harsa, Cherub, Addon & Emer. But they could not shewe their fathers house nor their seed, whether they were of Israel. The children of Dalaiah, the children of Tobiah, the children of Necoda, six hundred and two and fyftye.

And of the children of the preastes. The children of Habaiah, the children of Hakos, the children of Berzilai, whiche toke one of the daughters of Berzilai the Galeadite to wyfe, and was counted amonge the same names: these sought the register of their byrth, but found none, therfore were they put frome the preasthood. And Hathirsatha sayde vnto them, that they shuld not eate of the most holy, tyl there rose vp a preast with the * lyght and perfectnesse.

The hole congregacion as one man, was two and fourty thousande, three hundred and three score: besyde their seruauntes and maydens, of whome there were seuen thousande, three hundred and seuen and thirtye. And they had two hundred singynge men and women, seuen hundred and sixe and thirty horses, two hundred and three and fourtye Mules, foure hundred and three and thirty Camels, and .vi. thousande, seuen hundred and twenty Asses. And certayne of the chefe fathers, when they came to the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, they offred willyngly vnto the house of God, that it shulde be set in his place, and gaue after their habilite vnto the treasure of the worke, three score and one thousande drammes, and three thousand pounde of syluer, and an hundred preastes garmentes. So the preastes and the Leuites, and certayne of the people, and the syngers, and the porters, and the Nethinims dwelte in their cyties, and all Israell in their cyties.

¶ After the foundacyon of the temple ones renued, they sacrifyce vnto the Lorde.

CAP. III.

When the seuenth moneth came, and the children of Israel were now in their cyties, the people cloustred together as one man, vnto Jerusalem. And Jesua the sonne of Josedec arose and his brethren the preastes, & Zorobabel the son of Salathiel and his brethren, and buylded the aultar of the God of Israel, to offre burntofferynges therevon, as is written in the law of Moses the man of God and the aultar they dyd set vpon his sockettes (for there was a fearfulnes among them because of the nacions and landes) and offred burntofferynges theron vnto the Lorde in the mornynge and at euen. And beside the feast of Tabernacles (as is written) and offred burnt sacrifices dayly in order, accordinge to the custome, daye by daye. Afterwarde the dayely burntofferynges also, and of the new Moones & of all the feast dayes of the Lorde that were halowed, and all maner of freewill offringes, whiche they dyd of their owne motion vnto the Lorde.

Vpon the first daye of the seuenth moneth beganne they to offre burntsacrifices vnto the Lorde. But the foundacion of the temple of the Lorde was not yet layde. Neuertheles they gaue money vnto the maions and carpenters, and meat and drinke and oyle vnto them of Zidon and of Tire, to bringe them Cedre tymbre frome Libanus by see vnto * Joppa, accordinge to the commaundement of Cyrus kynge of Persia.

In the .ii. conde yere of their commynge vnto the house of God at Jerusalem and the .ii. conde moneth, began Zorobabel sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua sonne of Josedec, and the rest of their brethren the preastes and Leuites and all that were come out of captiuite vnto Jerusalem, and appointed the Leuites from twentye yere olde and aboue, to ouersee the worckes of the house of the Lorde. And Jesua stode with his sonnes and brethren, and Cadmiel with his sonnes, and the children of Juda, to forther the workemen of the house of God, namely the children of Henadad, with their children, and their brethren the Leuites.

And when the buylders layde the foundacion of the temple of the Lorde, the preastes stode in their araye, with trompettes. And the Leuites the children of Asaph with Cymbales, to praise the Lorde & after the maner of Dauid kynge of Israel. And they sange together, gruynge praises and thankes vnto the Lorde, that he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer vpon Israel.

And all the people shouted loude in praysinge the Lorde, because the foundacyon of the house of the Lorde was layde. Many also of the olde preastes and Leuites and auncyent fathers fathers, which had sene the first house: when the foundacion of this house was layde before their eyes, wepte with a loude voyce. And many shouted with ioye, so that the noyse gaue a great soundr, in so moch that the people could not perceyue the ioyfull soundr for the noyse of the weppynge amonge the people: for the people shouted with a loude ioye, so that the noyse was herde farre of.

CAP. IIII.

BVt when the aduersaryes of Juda and Ben Jamin heardr, that the children of captiuitie buylded the temple vnto the Lorde God of Jsrael, they came to Zorobabel and to the principall fathers, and sayd to them: We will buylde with you: for we seke the Lorde youre God as ye do. And we haue vsed sacryfice vnto hym, sythens that Asor ha wn kynge of Assur brought vs vp hyther. But Zorobabel and Jesua and the other auncient fathers of Jsrael answered theym: It belongeth not to you, but to vs to buylde the house vnto our God: for we our selues will buylde alone vnto the Lorde our God of Jsrael, as Cyrus kynge of Persia hath commaunded vs.

Then the folke of the lande hyndered the people of Juda, & made them afrayde to buyld and hyred counsellours against them and hyndred their deuyse, as longe as Cyrus kynge of Persia lyued, tyll the raygne of Darius kynge of Persia. And whē Assuerus was made kynge, in the begynninge of his raygne they wrote vnto him a complaynt against them of Juda and Jerusalem.

Also in the tyme of Artaxerxes, wrote Bisthem, Mithridates, Tabeel, and the other of their conspiracie vnto Artaxerxes kynge of Persia. But the scripture of the letter, was written in the Syrians speache, and was red in the language of the Syrians. Rehum the chaunceler, and Samsai the scryde, wrote also an Epistle frome Jerusalem, to Artaxerxes the kynge, of this tenour.

We Rehum the chaunceler, and Samsai the scryde, and other of the counsell of Dina, of Arphasath, of Tarpiat, of Persia, of Arach of Babylon, of Susan, of Deya, and of Sia, and other of the people, whome the great and noble Asenaphar brought ouer, and set in the cytie of Samaria, and other on this syde the water, and in Cenereth, to kyng Artaxerxes greting. Be it knowen vnto the kynge, that the Jewes are come vp frome the to vs vnto Jerusalem a cytie seditious and frowarde, and buylde the same, and laye the foundacion of the walles therof, and repayre them. Knowe now therfore, O kynge, that yf this cytie be buylded and the walles made vp agayn, they shall not gyue tribute, tolle, ne pearely custome and so euen vnto the kynges shall this hurt redounde. But now sythe we al are therby, whiche destroyed the temple, we will no longer se the kynges dishonour. Therfore we haue sent out, and caused the kynge to be certified therof: that sercche maye be made in the Chronycles of thy progenitours, and so shalt thou fynde in the same Chronycles, and perceyue, that this cytie is seditious and noyfull vnto kynges and landes, and that they cause others also to rebell of olde, and for the same cause was this cytie destroyed. Therfore we certifye the kynge, that yf this cytie be buylded, & the walles therof made vp, thou shalte kepe nothinge on this syde the water by reason of it.

Then sent the kynge an answere vnto Rehum Chaunceler, and Samsai the Scribe, & to the other of their counsel that dwelt in Samaria, and vnto the other beyonde the water. Peace and salutacion. The letters whiche ye sent vs, haue bene openly red before me, and I haue commaunded to make sercche: and it is founde, that this cytie of olde hath made insurrection against kynges, and how that sedicion and rebellion hathe bene committed therin. There haue bene mygety kynges also at Jerusalem, whiche haue raigned ouer all that is beyonde the water, and tolle, tribute and pearly custome was gyuen theym. Do ye now after this commaundement, to cause the same men, that the cytie be not buylded, tyll I haue gyuen commaundement. Be nowe ye be not negligent herein, leste the kynge haue harme by meanes of it.

When kynge Artaxerxes letters were red before Rehum the chaunceler and Samsai the Scryde and their counsell, they went vp in al haste to Jerusalem vnto the Jewes, and lorbad them with byolence and power. The kynges answere.

So ceased the worke of the house of God at Jerusalem, and continued so tyll the seconde yere of Darius kynge of Persia. The worke ceaseth.

¶ By the exhortacyon of Aggeus and Zachary the temple is reedified.

CAP. V.

THe Prophetes, Aggeus and Zachary A sonne of Addo, prophecyed vnto the Jewes that were in Juda and Jerusalem, in the name of the God of Jsrael. Then gat vp Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua the sonne of Josedec, and began to buylde the house of God at Jerusalem, and with the the Prophetes of God which helped them. At the same tyme came to theym Thathanai the Capitayne on this syde the water, and Sethar buzanai, and their felowes, and sayd thus vn to theym: Who hathe commaunded you to buylde this house, and to make vp the walles therof? Then tolde we theym the names of the men, that made this buylding. But vpon the Elders of the Jewes came the eye of their God, so that they couldē not cause theym to ceasse, tyll the matter was brought afore Darius, and tyll they had answered by letters therunto.

Ezr. 6. This

This is the coppe of the letters that Thathanat Capitayne on this syde the water, and Stharbuzanai, and their adherentes of Aphar lach (which were on this syde the water) sent vnto kynge Darius. The wordes they sente vnto him were these: Vnto Darius the kyng all peace. Be it knowen to the kynge, that we came into Iewry to the house of ỹ great God which is buylded with rought stone, and beames are layd in the walles, and the worke goeth fast forthe, and prospereth in their handes. We asked therfore the elders, and layd vnto them: Who hath commaunded you to buylde this house, and to make vp the walles therof? We asked them names also, that we myght certifye the, and haue written the names of the men that were their rulers. Thei answered vs these wordes, and sayd: We are the seruaunts of the God of heauen and earth, and buylde the house that was buylded many yeres ago, which a great kynge of Israel buylded and set vp. And after our fathers had iniured ỹ God of heauen vnto wrath, he gaue the ouer into the handes of Nabuchodonozor kynge of Babylon the Caldee, which ouerthrew this house, and caryed the people awaye vnto Babylon. But in the first yere of Cyrus the kynge of Babylon, the same kynge Cyrus commaunded to buylde this house of God, for the vessels of golde and siluer in the house of God, which Nabuchodonozor toke out of the temple at Jerusalem, and broughte them into the temple at Babylon, them dyd Cyrus the kynge take out of the temple at Babylon, and deliuered them vnto Sabazar by name, whom he made Capitayne, and layd vnto him. Take these vessels, go thy waye and bringe them vnto ỹ temple at Jerusalem, & let the house of God be buylded in his place. Then came the same Sabazar and layd ỹ foundacion of ỹ house of God at Jerusalem. Sithes that tyme hath it ben in buyldinge, and as yet is not fynished. Nowe therfore yf it lyke the kynge, let searche be made in the kynges treasure house at Babylon, whether it was kynge Cyrus commaundement, that the house of God at Jerusalem shulde be buylded and send vs the kynges pleasure in this behalfe.

¶ The cõmaundement of Darius, when the temple was buylded and dedycate, the chyldren of Israel kepe the feast of vnleuened bread.

CAPI. VI.

Then commaunded kynge Darius, search to be made in the Library of the kynges bookes, whiche laye at Babylon. So at Ecbatanis in a castel that lyeth in the lande of the Medes, was founde a booke, and in it was a recorde written after this maner: In the first yere of kynge Cyrus, commaunded kyng Cyrus to buylde the house of God at Jerusalem, in the place where ỹ sacrifice is made and to laye a foundacion of thre hoge cubites heyght, and thre hoge cubites breed, and thre walles of rought stones, and one wall of tymber, and the expences shulde be geuen of the kynges house. And the golde and siluer vessels of the house of God (which Nabuchodonozor toke oute of the temple at Jerusalem, and broughte vnto Babylon) shulde be restored agayne, that they may be broughte vnto the temple at Jerusalem to their place into the house of God.

Nowe therfore thou Thathanai capitayne beyonde the water, & Stharbuzanai, & youre felawes which are beyonde the water, get ye awaye from them. Let them worke in the house of God, that the Capitayne of the Iewes and their elders may buylde the house of God in his place. I haue commaunded also, what shall be done to the Elders of Juda for the buyldinge of the house of God, that there shall diligently be taken of the kynges goodes, euen of the reuenues beyonde the water, and geuen vnto the men, and that they be not hyndred. That yt they haue nede of calues, lambes, or gotes, for burntoffrynge vnto the God of heauen, wheate, salt, wyne and oyle, after the custome of the preastes at Jerusalem be it geuen them dayly that no complaynt be made herein. And let them offre swete sauoures vnto the God of heauen, and praye for the kynges lyfe, and for his children. This commaundement haue I geuen. And what man so euer altereth their wordes, there shall a beame be taken from his house, and set vp, & he shalbe hanged theron, and his house shall be confyscated for the dede. Yea the God that hath made his name to dwell there, destroye all Realmes & people, that put to their hand to alter and breake wyne the house of God at Jerusalem. I Darius haue commaunded, that this be diligently wrought.

Then Thathanai, the Capitayne beyonde the water, and Stharbuzanai with their felowes (to whome kynge Darius hadde sent) dyd their deuoir. And the elders of the Iewes buylded, and they prospered thorow ỹ prophecyenge of Aggeus the prophete and Zacharye the sonne of Addo: and buylded, and set vp the worke, accordinge to the commaundment of the God of Israel, and after the commaundement of Cyrus, Darius and Artaxerxes kynges of Persia. And they were in fynishinge the house vnto the thirde daye of the monthe Adar, that was in the sixte yere of the raygne of kynge Darius.

And the chyldren of Israel, the preastes, the Leuites, and the other children of captyuitie helde the dedication of the house of God with ioye, and offred at the dedicacion of the house of God, an hundred calues, two hundred lambes, foure hundred gotes: and for the synnynge for al Israel twelue he gotes, according to the nombre of the trybes of Israel, and set the preastes in their courses, and the Leuites in their offices to minister vnto God which is at Jerusalem, as is written in the booke of Moyses.

And the chyldren of captyuitie helde passouer, vpon the fourtenth daye, of the first moneth: for the preastes and Leuites hadde purified ryfyed them selues, so that they were all clene as one man, and offered Passeouer for all the chyldren of captiuite, and for their brethren the Preestes, and for them selues. And the chyldren of Israell, whiche were returned out of captiuite, and all suche as habde seuered them selues from the fylthynesse of the Paynymes in the lande to seke the Lorde God of Israel, ate and helde the feaste of vnleuened breed seuen dayes with ioye: for the Lorde habde made them glade, and towned the herte of the kynge of Assur vnto them, so that their handes were strengthed in the worke of the houle of God, whiche is the God of Israel.

¶ By commaundement of Artaxerxes/Esdras taketh the chyldren of Israel/ and returneth to Jerusalem.

CAPI. VII.

After these thynges in the raygne of Artaxerxes kynge of Persia, there wente vp from Babilon, Esdras the sonne of Saraiah, the sonne of Azarias, the son of Helkia, the sonne of Helum, the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amariah, the sonne of Azaria, the son of Maraioth, the sonne of Zaraiah, the sonne of Ozi, the sonne of Bokki, the son of Abisua, the sonne of Phinees, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the chefe Preeste. This Esdras was a quicke scribe in the lawe of Moses, which the Lorde God of Israell dyd gyue. And the kynge gaue him all he requyred, accordynge to the hand of the Lorde his God vpon him. So went vp certayne of the children of Israel, and of the preestes, and of the Leuites, of the syngers, of the porters, and of the Nethinims vnto Jerusalem in the seuenth yere of kynge Artaxerxes. And they came to Jerusalem in the fifth moneth, that is the seuenth yere of the kynge. For vpon the first daye of the firste moneth began he to goo vp from Babilon: and on the firste daye of the fifth moneth came he to Jerusalem accordinge to the good hande of God vpon him. For Esdras prepared his herte to seke the lawe of the Lorde, and to wo it, and to teache the precept and iudgement in Israel. This is the copye of the letter that kynge Artaxerxes gaue vnto Esdras the Preest, the scribe, which was a teacher in the wordes of the Lorde, and of his statutes ouer Israell. Vnto Esdras the preest and scribe in the lawe of the God of heuen peax and gretynge. I haue commaunded that all they of the people of Israel, and of the preestes and Leuites in my realme, whiche are mynded to go vp to Jerusalem, that they goo with the, beinge sente of the kynge and of the seuen Lordes of the counsell, to vysyte Juda and Jerusalem, according to the lawe of God, whiche is in thy hande: and that thou take with the, syluer and golde, whiche the kynge and the Lordes of his counsell haue geuen of their good wyll vnto the God of Israel (whose habitacion is at Jerusalem) and all the syluer and golde thou canst fynde in all the countrey of Babilon: with that also that the people and Preestes gyue of their good wyll vnto the houle of God at Jerusalem. Take thou therfore and bye diligently with it, calues, lambes, goates, and sacrifices, and drynckofferynges, to be offered vpon the aultare of the houle of youre God at Jerusalem. And loke what it lyketh the and thy brethren, to do with the reste of the money, that do after the wyll of youre God. And the vessells that are geuen the for the ministracion in the houle of thy God, those deliuer thou before God at Jerusalem.

And what so euer thyng more shall be nedfull for the houle of thy God, whiche is necessarye for the to spende, let the same be geuen oute of the kynges chamber. I kynge Artaxerxes haue decreed and commaunded to all the keepers of our treasure beyonde the water, that loke who so euer Esdras the preest and scribe in the lawe of the God of heuen requyreth of you, that ye fulfyll the same diligentlye, vnto xyll an hundred talentes of syluer, vnto xyll an hundred quarters of wheate, and xyll an hundred Bathes of wyne, and xyll an hundred Bathes of oyle, and salte without measure. What so euer belongeth to the tythes of the God of heuen, let the same be done with diligence for the houle of the God of heuen, that there come no wrath of, vpon the kinges realme and his children.

And knowen be it vnto you, that ye shall haue no auctoryte to requyre tares and customs and penny rentes vpon anye of the Preestes, Leuites, syngers, porters, Nethinims, and ministers in the houle of this God. But thou Esdras (after the wysdome of the God that is in thy hande) set thou Judges and presidentes to iudge all the people that is beyonde Jordan, euen all suche as knowe the lawe of thy God: and them that knowe it not, those se that ye teache. And who so euer wyll not dylygentlye fulfyll the lawe of thy God, and the kynges lawe, shal haue his iudgement for the dede, whether it be vnto death or to be banyshed or to be condemned in goodes, or to be put in prison.

* Praysed be the Lorde God of youre fathers, which so hath inspyred the kynges herte to garnysshe the houle of God at Jerusalem: and hathe enclyned his mercye vnto me in the presence of the kyng and his counsellours, and before all the kynges bye estates. And I was comforted (accordyng to the hand of the Lorde my God ouer me) and so gathered I the prauces of Israel togyther, that they myghte goo vp with me.

¶ The nombre of them that returned to Jerusalem with Esdras.

CAP. VIII.

These are the heades of their fathers that were named, whiche wente vp with me from Babilon, what tyme as kyng Artaxerxes raigned. Of the children of Phinees, Gersom: Of the chyldren of Ithamar, Daniel: of the chyldren of Dauid, Hatus: of the

chyldren of Zerahiah, of the chyldren of Pharos, Zacharye, and with him were nombred an hundred and fiftye men: of the chyldren of Pahath, Moab, Elioenai, the sonne of Zarahiah, and with him two hundred men: of the chyldren of Zechaniah the sonne of Jahaziel, and with him three hundred men: of the chyldren of Adin Abed, the sonne of Jonathan, & with him fiftye men: of the chyldren of Elam Esaias the sonne of Athaliah, and with him seuentye men: of the chyldren of Saphatia, Zabadiah the sonne of Michael, and with him. lxx. men.

Of the chyldren of Joab, Obadiah the son of Jehiel, and with him two hundred & eyghtene men: of the chyldren of Selomith the son of Josphiah, and with him an hundred & three men. Of the children of Bebai, Zacharye the sonne of Bebai, and with him eyght & twenty men. Of the children of Asgad, Johanan the sonne of Hakatan, and with him an hundred and ten men. Of the last chyldre of Adonicam, and these were their names: Eliphelet, Jehuel and Samaiah, and with them three score men. Of the chyldren of Begui, Uthai and Zabud, and with them seuentye men. And I gathered them together by the water that renneth towarde Ahaua, and there abode we thre dayes. And when I loked amonge the people and the preestes, I founde no Leuites there. Then sent I Eliezer, Ariel, Semeiah, Elnathan, Jarib, Elnathan, Nathã, Zachary and Mosollam the rulers, and Joiarib and Elnathã the teachers, and thole sent I vnto Ido the chiefe at Caspia, that they sholde fetche vs ministers for ȳ house of our God, and I told them what they sholde saye vnto Ido, and to his brethren the Nethinims at Caspia.

And (accordynge to the good hande of our God vpon vs) they broughte vs a wyse man frome the chyldren of Moholi the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israell, I meane Sarabia with his sonnes and brethren eyghtene. And Hasabia, and with him Esaias of the children of Merari, with his brethren and their sonnes, twentye. And of the Nethinims, whome Dauid and the Princes gaue to ministre vnto the Leuites, two hundred and twenty, all named by name.

A fastynge proclaymed. And then there at the water beside Ahaua, caused I a fastynge to be proclaymed, that we myght humble our selues before our God, to seke of him a right waye for vs, and our chyldren, and all our substaunce. For I was ashamed to requyre of the kynge, souldioures and horsemen, and to helpe vs agaynst the ennemy in the waye. For we had sayd vnto the kynge: The hande of our God is vpon all them that seke him in goodnesse, and his wyckednesse and wrathe vpon all them that forsake him. So we fasted, and sought this of our God, and he herde vs. Then I toke out twelue of the chiefe preestes, Sarabia, and Hasabia, & ten of their brethren with them, and weied them there the syluer and golde, and vessells for the offeryng vnto the house of our God, whiche the kynge and the lordes of his counsell and princes, and all Israel that were at hand, had gyuen to the offeryng: and there weyed I them vnder their hande, fyue hundred and fiftye talentes of syluer, and in syluer vessell an hundred talentes, and in golde an hundred talentes, twenty cuppes of golde of a thousand drammes, and two costly ornamentes of good brasse, as cleare as golde, and sayd vnto them: Ye are holye vnto the Lorde, the vessells holy also, and so is the syluer and golde that is gyuen of a good will vnto the Lorde God of your fathers: Watche ye therfore and kepe it, till ye weye it downe before the chiefe Priestes and Leuites, and auncient fathers of Israel at Jerusalem in the Thesaurie of the house of the Lorde. Then toke the Priestes and Leuites the weyed syluer and gold and vessell, to bring it to Jerusalem vnto the house of oure God. So we marched forwarde, from the water of Ahaua, on the twelueth daye of the firste moneth, to goo vnto Jerusalem: and the hande of our God was vpon vs, and deliuered vs frome the hande of the ennemye and lyers in awayte by the waye. And we came to Jerusalem, and abode there thre dayes. But on the fourth daye was the syluer and golde, and vessell weyed in the house of oure God vnder the hande of Meremoth the sonne of Uria the Priestes, and with him Eleazar the son of Phinees, and with him Jozabad the sonne of Jesua, and Noadia the sonne of Benui the Leuites, accordynge to the nombre and weyght of euery one. And the weyght was all written at the same tyme.

And the chyldren of the captiuytie, whiche were come out of pryson, offered burntoffrynges vnto the God of Israell: twelue bullockes for all Israell, nyneteye and fyue rammes: seuentye and seuen lambes, and twelue goates for a synneoffrynge, all to the burntoffrynge of the Lorde. And thy deliuered the kynges commyssion vnto the kynges officers, and to the captaynes on this syde the water. And they auaunced the people, and the house of God.

¶ Esdras complayneth on the people, that had maried them selues from God, and entermaryed with the gentyles.

CAPI. IX.

When all this was performed, the rulers cam to me, and sayde: the people of Israell and the Priestes and Leuites are not severed from the nations in the landes as touchyng their abhominacions, namely of the Cananites, Hethites, Pherezites, Jebusites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egyptians, and Amorites. For they haue taken their doughters, and their sonnes, and haue myxte the holye seed with the nacions of the landes: and moreouer the hande of the princes and rulers hath ben principall in this trespace. When I herde this, I tare my clothes and my rayment, and plucke of the heere of my heed and of my berde, and sat mournynge. Then resorted vnto me all suche as feared the worde of the Lorde God of Israel, because of the great transtransgression. And I sate mournynge tyll the euenynge sacrifyce. And aboute the euenynge sacrifice, I rose vp fro my heynnesse, and rente my clothes and my rayment, and fell vpon my knees, and spred out my handes vnto ℔ Lorde my God, and sayd. My God, I am ashamed, and dare not lyfte vp myne eyes vnto the my God: for our wyckednesses are growen ouer our heed, & our trespaces are waxen great vnto the heuen: Sithens the tyme our fathers, haue we ben in great trespace vnto this daye, & and bycause of oure wyckednesse haue we and oure kynges ben gyuen vp in to the handes of ℔ kynges of the nacions in to the swerde, in to bondage, in to spoyle, and in to confusion of face, as it is come to passe this daye.

And now a lytle and sodayne graciousnes is come from the Lord our God, so that some of vs are escaped, that he maye giue vs a nayle in his holy place, that our God maye lyght oure eyes, and giue vs a lytle lyfe in oure bondage. For we are bondmen, and our God hathe not forsaken vs in our bondage, but hath enclyned mercy vnto vs in ℔ sight of the kinges of Persis, that he shulde giue vs lyfe, & auaunce the house of our God, and burlde vp the desolate places therof, and to giue vs an hedge in Iuda and Jerusalem.

And nowe, O our God: what shall we saye after this? for we haue forsaken thy commaundementes, whiche thou haste commaunded by thy seruauntes the Prophetes, and sayd: The lande vnto whyche ye go to possesse, is vncleane thorow the fylthynesse of the people of the landes, by their abhominacions wherwith they haue filled it with vnclennes on euerye syde.

Therfore ye shall not giue your doughters to their sonnes, and their doughters shall ye not take vnto your sonnes, and seke not their peax and welthe for euer, that ye maye be stronge and eniaye the good in the lande, and that ye and your chyldren may haue the inheritaunce of it for euermore.

And after all this that is come vpon vs, bycause of our euyll dedes and great trespace thou our God hast spared oure wyckednesses, and hast gyuen vs a deliuerauncc as it is come to passe this daye.

And neuertheles we haue tourned backe, and haue let goo thy commaundementes, to make contracte with the people of their abhominacions. Wylte thou then be wroth with vs, tyll we be vtterly consumed, so that nothynge remayne, and tyll there be no deliuerauncc? O Lorde God of Israel thou art righteous/ for we remayne yet escaped, as it is this daye. Beholde in thy presence are we in oure trespace, for bycause of it there is no standyng before the.

CAPI. X.

Whyle Esdras prayed after this maner, and knowleged, wepte, and laye before the house of God, there resorted vnto him out of Israel a very great numbre of men and women, & chyldren: for the people wepte verye sore. And Jechonias the sonne of Jahiel one of the chyldren of Elam, and sayd vnto Esdras: We haue trespaced against the Lorde oure God, in ℔ we haue taken straunge wyues of all the people of the lande. Nowe there is hope yet in Israel concernynge this, therfore let vs make a couenaunt nowe with our God, to put awaye all the wyues, & suche as are borne of them, accordynge to the counsell of the Lorde, and of them that feare the commaundement of our God, that we maye wo accordynge to the lawe. Ryse vp therfore for the matter belongeth vnto the. We wyll be with the, be of good comforte and doo it. * Then rose Esdras, and toke an othe of the rulers, ghostlye and Leuites, and of all Israell, that they shulde wo accordynge to this worde: and they sware. And Esdras rose vp before the house of God, and went in to the chamber of Johanan the sonne of Eliasib. And when he came thyther, he ate no breed, nor dranke water: for he mourned bycause of the transgression of them that hadde ben in captiuite.

And they caused a proclamacion be made throwe oute Juda and Jerusalem, vnto all the chyldē which had ben in captiuite, that they shulde resorte vnto Jerusalem: And that who so euer came not within thre dayes, accordyng to the determinacion of the rulers and elders, all his substaunce shulde be forfeyt, and he to be put out of the congregacion of the captiue. Then all the men of Juda and Benjamin assembled vnto Jerusalem in thre dayes, that is on the twentye daye of the nynth moneth: and all the people sate in the strete before the house of God, and trembled bycause of theyr synnes, and for the rayne. And Esdras ℔ preest stode vp and sayd vnto them: * Ye haue transgressed, in that ye haue taken straunge wiues, to make the trespace of Israell yet more: confesse nowe therfore vnto the Lorde God of youre fathers, and do his pleasure, and seuer your selues from the people of the landes, and from the straunge wyues. Then answered all the assemble, and sayd with a loud voyce: Let it be done as thou hast sayde. But the people are many, and it is a rayny wether, and they can not stande here without, neyther is this a worke of one day or two, for we are many that haue offended in this transgression. Let vs appoynte oure rulers therfore in all the congregacion, ℔ all they whiche haue taken straunge wyues in oure cityes, maye come at the tyme appoynted, and the elders of euery cite, and theyr Judges with them, tyll the wrathe of our God be tourned awaye from vs for this offence.

Then were appoynted Jonathan the sonne of Asahel, and Jahasia, the sonne of Thekua ouer this matter: And Mosollam and Sabbathai the Leuite holpe them. And the chyldren of the captyuite, dyd euen so. And Esdras the Preest, and the auncient heades therowe the house of theyr fathers, and all they were nowe reherced by name, seuered them selues, and sat them

THE BOKE OF NEHEMIAS, OTHERVVYSE CALLED THE SECONDE BOKE OF ESDRAS.

¶ Sithemy butteler to kynge Artaxerxes, prayeth to God for the people.

CAPI. I.

THese are the actes of Nehemie the sonne of Hachalia. It fortuned in the moneth Casleu, in the twenty yere, that I was in the castell at Susis: and Hanani one of my brethren came to certayne men of Juda, and I asked them howe the Jewes dyd that were delyuered and escaped from the captiuitie, and how it wente at Jerusalem. And they sayde vnto me: The remnaunt of the captiuitie are there in the lande in greate myserye and rebuke. * The walles of Jerusalem are broken downe, and the gates therof are brent with fyre.

When I herde these wordes, I sate me downe and wepte, and mourned thre dayes, and fasted and prayed before the God of heauen, and sayd: O Lorde God of heuen, thou greate and terrible God, * thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy for them that loue the, and obserue thy commaundementes: Lette thyne eares harken, and thyne eyes be open, that thou mayste heare the prayer of thy seruaunte, whiche I praye nowe before the, daye and nyght, for the chyldren of Israel thy seruauntes, and knowlege the synnes of the chyldren of Israell, whiche we haue committed against the. And I and my fathers house haue synned also. We haue done corrupte vnto the, in that we haue not kepte the commaundementes, statutes and lawes, whiche thou commaundedst thy seruaunte Moses. Yet call to remembraunce the worde that thou commaundedst thy seruaunt Moses, and saydest: If ye transgresse, I wyll scatter you abrode amonge the nacyons. But if ye tourne vnto me, and kepe my commaundementes and do them: thoughe ye were caste out vnto the vttermost parte of heuen, yet wyll I gather you thence, and bringe you euen vnto the place that I haue chosen for my name, to dwelle there. They are thy seruauntes, and thy people, whome thou haste delyuered thorowe thy greate power, and stronge hande. O Lorde, let thyne eares harken to the prayer of thy seruaunte, and the prayer of thy seruauntes, whose desyre is to feare thy name, and let thy seruaunt prospere this daye, and graunte hym mercye in the syghte of this man: for I was the kynges butler.

¶ After Nehemy had obtayned letters of Artaxerxes, he cometh to Jerusalem, and builded the walles.

CAP. II.

IN the moneth of Nisan, in the .xx. yere of kynge Artaxerxes, when the wine stode before hym, I toke vp the wine and gaue it vnto the kynge, and I was sowre in his presence. Then sayde the kynge vnto me: why lokest thou so sadly? Thou art not sycke, this is not without cause, but there is somwhat not well in thyne herte. And I was sore afrayde, & sayde vnto the kynge: God saue the kynges ipse for euer: holde I not sadly? the cyte of my fathers burial lieth waste, and the gates therof are consumed with fyre. Then sayd the kynge vnto me: what is thy requeste? the made I my prayer to the God of heuen, and sayd vnto the kynge: yf it please the kynge, and if thy seruaunt be fauoured in thy syghte: I beseche the sende me in to Juda, vnto the cyte of my fathers buriall, that I may buylde it. And the kynge sayd vnto me, and also the quene that sate by him: howe longe shall thy iourney contynue, & when wilt thou come again? And it pleased the kynge to sende me, and I set him a tyme, and sayd vnto the kynge: yf it please the kynge, let him giue me letters to the capitaynes beyonde the water, that they may conueye me ouer, till I come in to Juda: and letters vnto Asaph keper of ꝑ kinges wod, that he may gyue me wod for beames to the gates of the temple, for the towres of the house, for the walles of the cyte, and for the house that I shal entre in to. And the kynge gaue me accordyng to the good hande of God vpon me. And when I came to the capitaynes beyonde the water, I deliuered them the kynges letters. And the kynge had sent capitaynes and horsmen with me. But whē Sanaballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the seruaunt of the Ammonites herde this, it greued them sore, that there was come a man which sought ꝑ welth of the chyldren of Israel. And when I came to Jerusalem, and had ben there thre dayes, I gat me vp in the night season, and a few men with me: for I tolde no man what God had gyuen me in myne hert to do at Jerusalem, and there was not one beast with me, saue that I rode vpon. And I rode by night vnto valey gate before the dragon well, and to the dunge gate, & considered the walles of Jerusalem that were broken downe, and the gates therof consumed with fyre. And I went ouer vnto the well gate, and to the kinges condite, and there was no rowme for my beast, that it could go vnder me. Then went I on in the night by the broke side, and considered the wall, and turned backe and came home agayne to valey gate.

And the rulers knewe not wyther I wente, or what I dyd, for hither to had I not called ꝑ Jewes and the preestes, the noblemen and the rulers, & the other that shoomed in the worke. And I sayd vnto them: ye se the myserye that we are in, how Jerusalem lyeth waste, & howe the gates therof are brent with fyre, come let vs buylde vp the walles of Jerusalem, that we be no more a reproche. And I tolde them of the good good hande of my God, whiche was vpon me: and the kynges wordes that he had spoken vn to me. And they sayd: Then let vs arise & build: and their handes were stregthed to good. But when Sanabalat the Horonite, and Tobias the seruaunt of the Ammonites, and Gesem ỹ Arabian herde this, they laughed vs to scorne, and despised vs and sayd: what is this that ye do? Wyll ye fal away agayne from the king? Then answered I them, and sayd: the God of heuē it is that causeth vs to prospere: and we be his seruauntes Let vs arise and builde. As for you, ye haue no porcion nor right nor remē braunce in Jerusalem.

¶ The buyldynge of Jerusalem is hyndred and let, but the Jewes buylde it beinge redy harnessed: for theyr enemyes shulde murder them.

CAPI. IIII.

WHen Sanabalat herde that we buylded the wall, he was wroth, and tolde great indignation, and mocked the Jewes, and sayd before his brethren and the hoste of Samaria;

marta what do the weake Iewes? shall they be thus suffred? shall they offre? shall they perfourme it in one daye? shall they make the stones hole agayne that are brought to dust and vtent? And Tobias the Ammonite beyde him sayd: let them buylde on, yf a fore go vp he shall breake downe their stony wall. Heare O thou oure God how we are despised, turne their shame vpon their owne heed, that thou mayste geue them ouer in to despitynge in the lande of their captiuitie. Couer not their wickednesse, and put not oute their synne from thy presence: for they haue prouoked the buylders. Yet buylded we the walle, and ioyned it hole to gyther vnto the halfe bergthe. And the people were well mynded to laboure. But when Sanabalat and Tobias, and the Arabians, and Ammonites, and Aydobites herde that the walles of Ierusalem were made vp, and that they had begon to stoppe vp the gappes, they were very wrothe, and conspyred all together to come and fyght against Ierusalem, and to make an hynderaunce therin. Neuertheles we made our prayer vnto our God and set watchemen vpon the walle daye and nyght ouer against them. And Juda sayd: the strength of the bearers is to feble, and there is to moche ouell, we are not able to buylde vp the wall. And our aduersaryes thought: they shal not knowe neither se, tyll we come in the myddes amonge them, and slee them, and bringe the worke. But when the Iewes ℣ dwelte beyde them came out of all the places where they dwelte aboute vs, and tolde vs as good as ten tymes: then set I the people after their kynredes with their swerdes, speres and bowes benethe in the lowe places behynde the wall, and loked, and gat me vp, and sayde vnto the chefe men and rulers, and to the other people: be not ye afrayed of them, ✠ thynke vpon the greate Lorde, which ought to be feared, and fyght for youre brethren, sonnes, doughters, wyues, and houses. Neuertheles when our enemyes herde that we had gotten warde of it, God brought their counsell to nought, and we turned all agayne to the wall euery one vnto his labour. And from that tyme forthe it came to passe, that the halfe parte of the yonge men dyd the labour, and the other halfe parte helde the speares, shyldes, bowes, and brestplates: and the rulers stode behynde all the house of Juda, which buylded on the walle, and bare burthens frome those that layed them. With one hande dyd they the worke, and with the other helde they their weapon. And euery one that buylded, bade his swerde gryde by his syde, and so buylded they: and the trompetters stode behynde me. And I sayde vnto the principall men and rulers, and to the other people: the worke is greate and large, and we are diuided vpon the walle one farre from an other. Loke in what place now ye heare the noyse of the trompet, resorte ye thither vnto vs. ✠ Our God shal fyght for vs, and we wyll be labouringe in the worke. And the halfe parte of them helde the speares from the morninge spryngе, tyll the starres came forthe. And at the same tyme sayd I vnto the people: euery one abyde with his seruaunte at Ierusalem, that in the nyghte season, we maye geue attendaunce to the watche, and to laboure on the daye tyme. Hereby I and my brethren, and my seruauntes, and the men of the watche behynde me, we put neuer of our clothes, so moch as to washe oure selues.

¶ The people are vexed with vsury. Nehemias forbiddeth vsury. He requyreth not the wages of a capitayne.

CAPI. V.

AND there arose a great complaint of the people and of their wyues against their brethren ℣ Iewes. And there were some that sayd: our sonnes and oure doughters are to many, let vs take corne for them and eate, that we maye lyue. Some sayd: let vs set oure landes, vineyardes and houses to pledge, and take vp corne in the derth. But some sayd: let vs borowe moneye of the kynges tribute for oure landes and vineyardes. Now are oure brethrens bodyes as our owne bodyes, and their children as our children: elles shulde we subdue our sonnes and doughters vnto bondage, and some of oure doughters are subdued alredye, and no strengthe is there in our handes, and other men shall haue oure landes and vineyardes.

But when I herde [illegible] complaynte and suche wordes, it displ[illegible]se me sore, and I aduised me in my mynde, that I rebuked the heades ℣ rulers, and sayd vnto them: ✠ wyll ye requyre vsurye one of an other? And I brought a great congregacion agaynste them, and sayd vnto them: we (after our habilitie) haue bought oute brethren the Iewes, whiche were solde vnto the Paynimes. And wyll ye sell youre brethren, whome ye haue boughte vnto vs? Then helde they their peace, and coulde fynde nothynge to answere.

And I sayde: It is not good that ye so. Oughte ye not to walke in the feare of God, because of the rebuke of the Heythen oure enemyes? I and my brethren, and my seruauntes haue lent them money and corne: but as for vsurye, let vs leaue it. Therefore this same daye, se ye restore them their landes againe, their vineyardes, oyle gardens, and houses, yea, the hundred parte of the money, of the corne, wyne, and oyle, that ye haue wonne of them. Then sayd they: we wyll restore them again, and wyll requyre nothynge of them, and wyl so as thou hast spoken. And I called the preestes, ✠ toke an othe of them, that they shulde so do. And I shoke my lappe and sayde: God shake out euery man after the same maner frome his house and laboure, that maye not this worde: euen thus be he shaken out, and voyde. And all the congregacion sayd, Amen: and praysed the Lorde. And ✠ people dyd so. Yub frome the tyme that it was commaunded vnto me to be a capytayne in the lande of Juda; namely frome the twentyeth yere vnto the two and thyrtyeth yere of kynge

Artaxerxes (that is twelue yere) I and my brethren dyd not eate suche sustenaunce as was D giuen to a capitayne. For the olde capitaynes that were before me, had ben chargeable vnto the people, and dadre taken of them breed and wyne, and fourty syches of syluer: yea and their seruauntes dadre oppressed the people.
But so did not I, and that because of the feare of God. I laboured also in the worke vpō the walle, and bought no lande. And all my seruauntes came thyther together vnto the worke Moreouer there were at my table an hundred and fyfty of the Iewes and rulers, whiche came vnto me from the paynyms that are a-boute vs, and there was prepared me dayly an ore, and fyue chosen sheepe and byrdes, and euer ones in ten dayes a greate quantite of wyne.
Yet required not I the lyuyng of a capitayne, for the bondage was greuous vnto the people. * Thinke vpon me God vnto the beste,
11. Esdr. vi. d and. xvii. d accordynge to all that I haue wonne for this people.

¶ The buyldinge is yet agayne hyndred and let.

CAPI. VI.

Nd when Sanabalat, Tobiah, and Ge-sem the Arabian, and the other of oure enemyes herd that I had buylded the wall, and that there were no moo breakes therin (how be it at the same tyme I had not hanged the doores vpō the gates) Sanabalat and Gesem sente vnto me, sayinge: come and let vs mete togyther in the villages vpon the playne of the ayre Ono. Neuertheles they thoughte to do me euyl. Notwithstandynge
I sent messengers vnto them, sayinge: I haue a great busynesse to do, I can not come downe.
Oure worke shulde stande styll yf I were slacke and came downe to you. How be it they sente vnto me as good as foure tymes after the same maner. And I gaue them the same answere. Then sente Sanabalat his seruaunte vnto me the fyfth tyme, with an open letter in his hande, wherin was wrytten: it was tolde the hey-then, and Gesem hathe sayde it, that thou and the Iewes thynke to rebell: for the whiche cause thou buyldest the walle, and wylte be their kyng in these matters, and hast ordeyned the Prophetes to preache of the at Ierusalem, and to saye he is kyng of Iuda. Now shal this come to the kinges eares: come now therfore, and let vs take our counsel togyther. Neuertheles I sent vnto him, sayinge: there is no suche thynge wonne as thou sayest: thou hast fay-ned it out of thyne owne herte. For they were all mynded to make vs afrayde, and thought:
they shall withdrawe their handes from the worke, that they shall not labour. Now be it I strengthed my hande the more. And I came vnto the house of Semaiah the sonne of De-laiah the son of Mehetabeel, and he had shut him selfe within, and sayd: let vs come togy-ther in to the house of God, euen in to the mid-des of the temple, and shut the dores of the temple: for they will come to slee the, yea euen in the night will they come to put the to deth. But I sayd: shulde any suche man as I flee? Who is that beinge as I am, that wil go in to the temple to saue his lyfe? I will not go in. For I perceyued that God had not sent him: Yet spake
he prophecie vpon me, neuertheles Tobias & Sanabalat had hyred him for money. Therefore take he the money, that I shoulde feare I shulde so do, and synne: that they might haue an euil reporte of me, to blaspheme me. My God thynke thou vpon Tobias and Sanabalat, accordinge vnto these their workes, & of the D prophet Noadiah, and of the other prophetes, that wolde haue put me in feare. And the wal was fynished on the fyue and twentye daye of the moneth Elul, in two and fyftye dayes.
And when all our enemyes herde therof, all the heythen that were about vs, were afrayde and their courage sayled them: for they per-ceyued that this worke came of God. And at the same tyme were there manye of the chyefe of Iuda, whose letters wente vnto Tobias, & from Tobias vnto them (for there were many in Iuda that were sworne vnto him: for he was the sonne in lawe of Sechaniah, the sonne of Arah, and his sonne Iohanan had the dough-ter of Mosolam the sonne of Barachiah, and they spake good of him before me and tolde him my workes) and Tobias sente letters, to put me in feare.

¶ After the wall ones buylded the watche is ap-poynted. They that returned from the captiuyte are nombred.

CAPI. VII.

When we hadde buylded the wall I ban- E ged on the woxes, and the porters, sy-gers, & Leuites were appointed. And I commaunded my brother Hanani and Hana-niah the ruler of the palace at Ierusalem (for he was a faythful man, and feared God more then dyd many other,) And I sayd vnto them:
let not the gates of Ierusalem be opened tyll
the sonne be hote. And whyle they are yet stan-

¶ When the seuen moneth drewe nye, and the chyldren of Israel were in theyr cyties, all the people gathered togyther, as one man, vpon the strete before the water gate, and sayde vnto Esdras the scribe, that he sholde fetche the boke of the lawe of Moses, whiche the Lorde commaunded to Israel. * And Esdras the Preste broughte the lawe before the congregation, bothe of men and women, and of all that coulde vnderstande it, vpon the fyrste daye of the seuenth moneth, and redde therin in the strete that is before water gate (frome the morynge vntyll the noone daye) before men and women, and suche as coulde vnderstande it: and the eares of all the people were inclyned vnto the boke of the lawe. And Esdras the scribe stode vpon an hyghe pulpyt of wodde, whiche they had made for the preachynge, and beside hym stode Mathathiah, Sema, Ananiah, Urias, Helkiah, and Maaseiah on his ryghte hande: and on hys lefte hande stode Phadaiah, Misael, Melchias, Hasum, Hasbadanah, Zacharye and Mosollam.

Deute. xxxi. c
III. Esdr. ix. a

The boke of the lawe is redde to the people.

¶ And Esdras opened the boke before all the people, for he stode above all the people. And when he opened it, all the people stode vp. And Esdras prayse the Lorde the great God. And all the people answered: Amen, Amen/ with theyr handes vp, and bowed them selues, and worshipped the Lorde with their faces to the grounde. And Jesus, Bani, Serabiah, Jamin, Acubs, Sabathai, Hodaiah, Maasaiah, Celita, Azariah, Jozabed, Hanan, Phalaiah, and the Leuites caused the people to gyue eare vnto the lawe, and the people stode in their place. And they redde in the boke of the lawe of God distinctly and playnely, so that men vnderstode the thynge that was redde. And Nehemias (whiche is Hathirsatha) and Esdras the preest and the scribe, and the Leuites that caused the people to take hede, sayde vnto all the people: This daye is holye vnto the Lorde your God: be not ye sorye therfore, and wepe not. For all the people wepte when they herde the wordes of the lawe.

¶ Therfore sayde he vnto them: goo youre waye, and eate the fat, and drynke the swete/ and sende parte vnto them also that haue not prepared them selues, for this daye is holy vnto oure Lorde, be not you sorye therfore: for the ioye of the Lorde is youre strengthe. And the Leuites stylled the people, and sayd: holde youre peace, for the daye is holye/ vexe not ye your selues. And al the people went their waye to eate and drynke, and sende parte vnto other, and to make greate myrthe, bicause they had vnderstande the wordes that were declared vnto them.

And on the nexte daye assembled the chefe fathers amonge all the people and the Preestes and Leuites, vnto Esdras the scribe, that he shoulde teache theym the wordes of the lawe. And they founde wrytten in the lawe * how the Lorde had commaunded by Moses, that the chyldren of Israel shoulde dwell in boothes in the feast of the seuenth moneth. And so they caused it be declared and proclaymed, in all their cityes, and at Jerusalem, sayinge: goo vp vnto the mounte and fetche Oliue braunches, Pyne braunches, Myrte braunches, Palme braunches, and braunches of thycke trees, to make boothes, as it is wrytten.

And the people went vp and fet, and made them boothes, euerye one vpon the roff of his house, and in their courtes, and in the courtes of the house of God, and in the strete by water gate, and in the strete by the gate Ephraim. And all the congregation of theym that were come againe oute of the captiuite, made boothes, and dwelte therin: for sythens the tyme of Jesus the sonne of Nun vnto this daye, had not the chyldren of Israell done so, and there was verye greate gladnesse. And euerye daye frome the fyrst daye vnto the laste, redde he in the boke of the lawe of God. And seuen dayes helde they the feaste, and on the eyghte daye they made a gatherynge, according vnto the maner.

¶ The people repent and forsake their straunge wiues. Esdras reciteth the benefytes of God and the synnes of the people.

CAPI. IX.

¶ In the foure and twentye daye of this moneth, came the chyldren of Israel togyther with * fastynge and sacke clothes, and erth vpon them, and separated the seed of Israell from all the straunge chyldren, and stode and knowleged their synnes, and the wyckednesses of their fathers, and stode vp in their place, and redde in the boke of the lawe of the Lorde their God foure tymes on the daye, and they knowleged, and worshypped the Lorde their God foure tymes on the daye. And the Leuites stode on hyghe, namelye Jesus, Bani, Cadmiel, Sabanias, Bani, Sarebias, Bani and Chanani, and cryed loude vnto the Lorde their God. And the Leuites, Jesus, Cadmiel, Bani, Hasabniah, Serebiah, Hodiah, Sebanias, Pathahiah, sayd: stande vp, prayse the Lorde your God for euer: and let thankes be gyuen vnto the name of thy glorye, whiche excelleth all thankesgyuynge and prayse. Lorde, thou alone hast made heuen, and the heuen of all heuens, with all their hoste, the earthe and al that is therin, the see and all that is therin: thou gyuest lyfe vnto all, and the hoste of heuen bowe them selues vnto the. Thou art the Lorde God, that hast chosen Abram, and broughtest him out of * Ur in Chaldea, * and called him Abraham, and foundest his herte faythfull before the, * and madest a couenaunt with him to gyue vnto his seed the land of the Cananites, Hethites, Amorites, Pherezites, Jebusites, and Gergesites, and hast made good thy wordes: for thou arte ryghteous. * and hast considered the misery of our fathers in Egypte, and herde their complaynt by the redsee/ and shewed tokens and wonders vpon Pharao, and on all his seruauntes, and on all the people of his land: for thou knewest that they

they were presumptuous and cruell agaynste theym, and so madest thou the name as it is this daye. And the rodde fre dyddest thou deuyde in sonder before them, so that they wente thorowe the myddes of the see dryc shode: and their persecuters threwest thou into the depe as a stone, in the myghtye waters, and lodest them on the daye tyme in a cloudye pyller, and on the nyghte season in a pyller of fyre, to shewe them lyghte in the waye that they went.

¶ * Thou camest downe also vpon mounte Sinai, and spakest vnto them frome heuen, and gauest them ryghte iudgementes, true lawes, good commaundementes and statutes, and declaredst vnto them thy holye Sabboth, and commaundedst them precepters, ordinaunces, and lawes, by Moyses thy seruaute: and * gauest them breed frome heauen when they were hungrye, and * broughtest forthe water for them oute of the rocke when they were thyrstye: and promysedst them that they shulde goin and take possession of the lande, ouer which thou haddest lyfte vp thyne hande for to gyue them.

But oure fathers were proude and hardnecked, so that they folowed not thy commaundementes, and refused to heare, and were not myndefull of the wonders that thou dyddest for theym: but became stubbye and headye, in so moche that they returned backe to their bondage in their disobedience. But thou my God forgauest, and wast gracious, mercyfull, pacyent, and of greate goodnesse, and forsokest them not. * And thoughe they made a moulten calfe, (and sayd: this is thy God that broughte the oute of the lande of Egypte) and dyd greate blasphemyes, yet forsokest thou them not in the wyldernesse, according to thy greate mercy. * And the cloudye pyller departed not from them on the day tyme to leade them the waye, neyther the pyller of fyre in the night season, to shewe them light in the way that they went.

And thou gauest theym thy good spirite to enfourme them, * and withholdest not thy Manna frome their mouthe, * and gauest them water when they were thyrstye. Fourty yeres longe madest thou prouysion for theym in the wyldernesse, so that they lacked nothynge * their clothes waxed not olde, and their fete swelled not. And thou gauest them kyngdomes and nations, and partedst theym accordynge to their portions, so that they possessed * the lande of Sehon kynge of Hesebon, and the lande of Og the kynge of Basan. And their chyldren multiplyedst thou as the sterres of heauen, and broughtest them in to the lande wherof thou haddest spoken vnto their fathers, that they shulde go in to it, and haue it in possession.

And the chyldren wente in, and possessed the lande, * and thou subduedst before them the inhabiters of the lande, euen the Cananites, and gauest them in to their hande, and their kynges and the people of the lande, that they myghte do with them what they wolde. And they wanne their stronge citees, and a fatte lande, and toke possession of houses that were full of all maner goodes, welles dygged oute, vyneyardes, oyle gardens, and manye frutefull trees: and they ate and were fylled, and became fat, and lyued in welthe thorowe thy greate goodnesse. Neuertheles they were disobedient, and rebelled agaynste the, and cast thy lawe behynde their backes, and slewe thy Prophetes (whiche exhorted them to earnestly that they shulde conuerte vnto the) and dyd great blasphemyes. Therfore gauest thou the ouer in to the hande of their enemyes that vexed them.

And in the tyme of their trouble they cryed vnto the, and thou herdest them from heuen, and thorowe thy greate mercye, thou gauest them sauiours, whiche helped them out of the hande of their enemies. But when they came to rest, they tourned backe agayne to do yuyll before the: therfore lefte thou them in the hande of their enemies, so that they had the dominion ouer them. And they conuerted, ¶ cried vnto the, and thou herdest them from heuen, and many tymes hast thou deliuered them according to thy great mercye, and testifyedst vnto them, that they shulde turne again vnto thy lawe.

Notwithstandynge they were proude, and hardened not vnto thy commaundementes, but synned in thy lawes, (* wyche a man shulde do, and lyue in them) and tourned the shoulder away, and were stifnecked, & would not heare. And manye yeres dyddest thou forbeare them, and testifyedst wytnesse vnto the thorowe thy spirite, euen by the office of thy Prophetes, and yet wolde they not heare. Therfore gauest thou them in to the hande of the nations in the landes. But for thy greate mercyes sake, thou hast not vtterly consumed the, neyther forsaken them: for thou art a gracious and mercyfull God.

* Lowe oute God, thou great God, myghtye and dreadfull, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy, regarde not a lytle all the trauayle that hath happened vnto vs, and our kynges, princes, preestes, prophetes, fathers, and all thy people, frome the tyme of the kynges of Assur, vnto this daye. Thou arte ryghteous in all that thou hast broughte vpon vs: for thou hast wonne tryste. As for vs, we haue ben vngodlye, and oure kynges, princes, preestes and fathers haue not wrought after thy lawe, nor regarded thy commaundementes, and thy earnest exhortacions, wherwith thou hast exhorted theym, and haue not serued the in their kyngdome, and in thy great goodes that thou gauest them, and in the large and plentious lande whiche thou gauest them, and haue not conuerted frome their wycked workes. Beholde, therfore are we in bondage this daye: euen in the lande that thou gauest vnto oure fathers, to enioye the fruites and goodes therof, beholde, there are we bondmen. And great is the encrease of it vnto the kynges, whome thou hast set ouer vs because of oure synnes, and they haue dominion ouer our bodyes and catell, and we are in greate trouble. Vpon all this therfore we make a sure couenaunt, and wryte it, and let our princes, Leuites and priestes seale it.

¶ The names of them that sealed the couenaunt betwene God and the people.

And Pathaia the sonne of Meseleabel of ꝑ children of Zarah the sonne of Juda were the kynge in all matters concernynge the people and their villages, thorow out all their regions. And ꝑ children of Juda that were without in the townes of their lande, dwelte some at Kiriath Arbe, and in the villages therof, and at Dibon, and in the villages therof: and at Cabzeel, and in the villages therof: and at Jesua, Molada, Bethphalet, Hazersual, Berlabe and in their villages: and at Hikelag & Moconah, and in their villages: And at Enimon, Zarah, Jermuth, Zanoah, Odulla and in their villages: At Lachis, and in the fields therof: At Azekah, and in the villages therof: and dwelt from Berlabe vnto the valley of Hennom.

The children of Ben Jamin of Gaba, dwelt at Machmas, Aia, Bethel and in their villages. And at Anathoth, Nob, Ananiah, Hasor, Ramah, Gethaim, Hadid, Zeboim, Neballath, Lod, Ono and in the carpenters valley. And certayne of the Leuites that had portions in Juda, dwelt in Ben Jamin.

¶ The preestes and Leuites which came with Zorobabel to Jerusalem are nūmbred: and the order to be prayse.

CAPI. XII.

These are the preestes and Leuites that went vp with Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and with Jesua: Saraiah, Jeremy, Esdras, Amariah, Melluch, Hatus, Sechaniah, Rehum, Meremoth, Ado, Genthoi, Abiah, Miamin, Maadia, Bilga, Semaiah, Joiarib, Joada, Nalu, Amok, Helkia, and Jadaiah. These were the heades among the preestes and their brethren in the tyme of Jesua. The Leuites were these: Jesua, Bennui, Cadmiel, Sarabiah, Juda and Mathaniah ouer the office of thankelgyuinge, they & their brethren: Bakbukiah and Unni and their brethren, were about them in the watches.

Jesua begat Joakim. Joakim begat Eliasib. Eliasib begat Joiada. Joiada begat Jonathan. Jonathan begat Jadua. And in the tyme of Joakim were these the chiefe fathers amonge the preestes: vnder Saraiah, Maraiah, vnder Jeremy, Hananiah: vnder Esdras Mosolam: vnder Amariah, Joanan: vnder Melico, Jonathan: vnder Sebaniah, Joseph vnder Harim, Adna: vnder Meraioth, Helkai: vnder Abia, Zachary, vnder Genthon, Mosolam: vnder Abia, Zechri: vnder Miamin and Moadia, Peltai: vnder Bilga, Samua: vnder Semeiah, Jonathan: vnder Joiarib, Mathnai: vnder Jadaiah, Uzi: vnder Sellai, Kelai: vnder Amok, Eber: vnder Helkia, Hasabiah: vnder Jadaiah, Nathanael.

And in the tyme of Eliasib, Joiada, Johanan and Jadua, were the chiefe fathers amōg the Leuites, and the preestes written vnder ꝑ raygne of Darius the Persian. The children of Leui the principall fathers were writen in the Chronycles, vntyll the tyme of Jonathā the sonne of Eliasib. And these were the chiefe amonge the Leuites, Hasabiah, Serebiah & Jesua the sonne of Cadmiel, and their brethre ouer against them, to gyue prayse and thākes accoȝding as Dauid the man of God had ordeyned it, one watche ouer against an other. Mathania, Bakbukiah, Obadiah, Mesolam Talmon and Akub were porters in the watche at the thresholdes of ꝑ gates. These were in the tyme of Joakim the sonne of Jesua the sonne of Josedec, and in the tyme of Nehemias the Capitayne and of the priest Esdras the scribe.

And in the dedication of the wall at Jerusalem, were the Leuites sought out of al their places, that they myght be broughte to Jerusalem, to kepe the dedication and gladnesse, & thankelgyuynges, with singynge with Cymbales, Plaieretes and Harpes. And the children of the singers gathered them selues together from the playne countrey about Jerusalē salem, and frome the villages of Nethophathi, and from the house of Galgal, and oute of the feldes of Geba and Asmaueth: for the singers had buylded them villages about Jerusalem. And the preistes and Leuites purified them selues, and clensed the people, the gates and the wall.

L And I caused the princes of Juda to goo vp vpon the wall, and appointed two greate quires of thanckesgyuynge, whiche went on ye right hande of the wall towarde the Dounge gate, and after them went Osaiah, and half of the princes of Juda, and Azaria, Esdras, Mosolam, Juda, Ben Jamin, Semeiah and Jeremy: and certayne of the preistes childre with trompettes, namely Zachary the sonne of Jonathan, the sonne of Semeiah, the son of Mathaniah, the sonne of Michaiah, ye son of Zecur, the sonne of Asaph, and his brethre Semeiah, Azarael, Melalai, Gelalai, Maai Nathanael and Juda and Hanani, with the musical instrumentes of David the man of God.

And Esdras the scribe before them, towarde the Welgate, and they went vp ouer against them vpon the steppes of the cyty of David at the goynge vp of the wall to the house of David, vnto the Watergate eastwarde.

The other quire of thankesgyuynge went ouer against them, and I after them, and the half part of the people vpon the wal, towarde Fornacegate vpwarde, vntyll the broke wall, D and to the gate of Ephraim, and to Oldgate, and to the fyshgate, and to the tower of Hananeel, and to the tower of Meah, vntyl Sheepegate. And in the prysongate stode they stil, and so stode the two quires of thankesgyuynge of the house of God, and I and the halfe of the rulers with me, and the preistes, namely Eliakim, Maaseiah, Miniamin, Michaiah, Elioenai, Zachary, Hananiah, with trompettes and Maasiah, Semeiah, Eleasar, Vsii, Jehohanan, Melchiah, Elam and Ezer. And the singers sange loude, and Jezrahia was the ouerseear.

And the same daye were there great sacrifices offred, and they reioyced: for God had gyuen them great gladnes, so that both the wyues and children were ioyful, and the myrthe of Jerusalem was herde farre of.

At the same tyme were men appointed ouer the treasure chestes (wherin were the offrynges, firstfruites, & the tythes) that they shuld gather them out of the feldes about the cytes to brynge them vnto the preistes and Leuites, accordynge to the law: for Juda was glad of the preistes, and Leuites, that they stode and waited vpon the office of their God, and the office of the clensinge. And the singers & porters stode after the commaundment of David and of Salomon his sonne: for in the tyme of (Per xviii.a. David and Asaph, were the chefe singers kepte, and the songes of prayse and thankesgyuynge vnto God. In the tyme of Zorobabel and Nehemias, dyd all Israel, gyue portions vnto the singers and porters, euery daye his portion, and they gaue thynges halowed vnto the Leuites, and the Leuites gaue thynges that were sanctified, vnto the children of Aaron.

CAPI. XIII.

A Nd what tyme as the booke of Moses was red in the eares of ye people, there was founde written therin, how that the A Deu. xxiii. Ammonites and Moabites shuld neuer come into the congregation of God, because they met not the children of Israel with bred & water, and hyred Balaam against them, that he shuld curse them: neuertheles our God turned the curse into a blessinge. Now whe they herde the Lawe, they seuered from Israel euery one that had myxte hym self therin. And before this had the preiste Eliasib appointed the chefe of the house of our God vnto his kynsman Tobiah: for he had made hym a great chefe and there had they afore tyme layde the offrynges, frankincense, vessell, and the tythes of corne, wyne and oyle (accordynge to the commaundement gyuen to the Leuites, syngers and porters) and the firste fruites of the preistes.

But in all this was not I at Jerusalem: for in the two and thirtyeth yere of Artarerxes kynge of Babylon, came I vnto the kynge and after certayne dayes I got licence of the kynge to come to Jerusalem. And I gat knowledge of the euyll that Eliasib dyd vnto Tobiah, in that he hadde made hym a chefe in the courte of the house of God, and it greued me sore, and I cast forth all the vessels of ye house B of Tobiah out of the chefe, and commaunded them to clense the chefe. And eftsones brought I agayne the vessels of the house of God, the sacrifice and the incense.

And I perceyued, that the portions of the Leuites were not gyuen them, for which cause the Leuites and singers were fled, euery one to his lande for to worke. Then reproued I the rulers, & sayd: Why forsake we the house of God? But I gathered them together, and set them in their place. Then brought all Juda the tythes of corne, wyne and oyle vnto ye treasure. And we ordeyned to be treasurers ouer the treasure, euen Selemiah the preest, & Zadoc the scribe, and of the Leuites Phadaiah and vnder their hande Haman the sonne of Zacur the sonne of Mathanias: for they were counted faithfull, and their office was to distribute vnto their brethren. Remẽbre me O my God herein, and wype not out my (Ps. cviii. mercye, that I haue shewed on the house of my God, and on the officers therof.

At the same tyme sawe I some treadynge wynt pressis on the Sabboth and bryngynge in clusters, and asses laden with wyne, grapes fygges, and dyuersynge all maner of burthens vnto Jerusalem, vpon the Sabboth daye. And I rebuked them earnestly the same daye that they solde the victayles. There dwelt me of Tyre also therein, whiche brought fysshe and

and all maner of ware, and solde on the Sabboth vnto the children of Juda and Jerusalē.
Then reproued I the rulers in Juda, & sayde vnto them: what euyll thynge is this ye do, & breake ỹ Sabboth day? Dyd not our fathers euen thus, & our God brought all this plage vpon vs and vpon this cyte? And ye make the wrathe more yet vpon Israell, in that ye breake the Sabboth.
And it fortuned, that when the gates of Jerusalem were couched with the euenynge shadowe on the Sabboth, I commaunded to shut the gates, and charged that they shulde not be opened tyll after the Sabboth: & some of my seruauntes set I at the gates, that there shulde no burthen be brought in on the Sabboth daye. Then remayned the chapmen and marchauntes once or twyse ouer nyght without Jerusalem, with all maner of wares. Then reproued I them forth, and sayde vnto them: why tarye ye all nyght about ỹ wall? If ye do it ones agayne, I will laye handes vpon you. From that tyme forth came they no more on the Sabboth. And I sayd vnto the Leuites which were cleane, that they shulde come and kepe the gates, to halow the Sabboth daye. Thinke vpon me (O my God) concernynge this also, and spare me accordyng to thy great mercy.
And at the same tyme saw I Jewes, that maryed wyues of Asdod, Ammon and of Moab, and their children spake halfe in the speche of Asdod, and coulde not speake in the Jewes language, but by the tonge might a man perceyue euery people. And I reproued them, and cursed them, and smote certayne men of them and plucked them by, and toke an othe of them by God: ye shall not geue your doughters vnto their sonnes, neither shal ye take their doughters vnto your sonnes, or for your selues. Did not Salomon the kyng of Israel synne therin? & yet amonge many kynges was there no kynge lyke him, and he was dere vnto his God, and God made him kynge ouer al Israel, and yet neuertheles straunge women caused him to synne? And shall we then obey vnto you, to do all this great euyll, to halte before our God, and mary straunge wyues? 2. Reg. 11. b
And one of the children of Joiada the son of Eliasib the hyghe preest, hadde made a contract with Sanaballat the Horonite: but I chaced him frome me. O my God, thinke thou vpon them that defyle preesthode, and ỹ lawe of the preesthode and of the Leuites. Thus clensed I them frome all suche as were straungers, and appointed the courses of the preestes and Leuites, euery one to his office, and to offre the wood at tymes appointed, and the fyrste frutes. Thinke thou vpon me (O my God) for the best.

THE BOKE OF ESTHER.

¶ Kynge Assuerus, whiche is called Artaxerxes maketh a royall feaste, whereunto the quene Vasthi will not come: for whiche cause she is diuorced.

CAPI. I.

IN the tyme of Assuerus which raygned from Inde vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and seuen and twenty landes, what tyme as he sate on his seate royal in the castell of Susan in the thirde yere of his raygne, he made a feast vnto all his princes and seruauntes, namely vnto the myghty men of Persia and Media, to the capitaynes and rulers of his countreys, that he myght shewe the noble ryches of his kyngdome, and the glorious worshippe of his power, many dayes longe, euen an hundred and foure score dayes.

And when these dayes were ended, ℣ kynge made a feast vnto all the people that were in the castell of Susan, both vnto great & small, seuen dayes longe in the court of the garden by the kynges palace: where there hanged white, red and yelow clothes, fastened with cordes of lynnen and scarlet in siluer rynges, vpon pyllers of Marble stone.

The benches were of gold and siluer made vpon a pauement of grene, white, yelow and blacke Marble. And the drinke was caryed in vessels of golde, and there was euer chaunge of vessell. And the kynges wyne was eyrebdy moche, accordinge to the great power of the kynge. And no man was appointed what he shulde drinke: for the kynge had commaunded all the officers of his house, that euerye one shoulde do as it lyked him. And the quene Vasthi made a feast also for the women in the palace of Assuerus. And on the .vij. daye when the kynge was pleasauntly merry of the wyne he commaunded Mehuman, Biztha, Harbona, Bagatha, Abagatha, Zethar and Carcas the .vij. chamberlaynes, that dyd seruice in ℣ presence of kynge Assuerus, to fetche the quene Vasthi with the crowne regal, that he myght shewe the people and princes her fauncelle: for she was bewtyfull. But the quene Vasthi woulde not come at the kynges worde by his chamberlaynes. Then was the kynge verye wrothe, and his indignacion kyndled in him, and he spake to the wyse men that had vnder standinge in the ordinaunces of the lande, for the kynges matters must be handled before al suche as haue knowledge of the lawe and iudgement: and the next vnto him were, Carsena, Sethar, Admatha, Tharsis, Meres, Marsena and Mamucan, the seuen princes of the Persians, and Medes, whiche sawe the kynges face, and were wont to sit first next him. What lawe shulde be executed vpon the quene Vasthi, because she dyd not accordinge to the worde of the kynge by his chamberlaynes.

Then sayde Mamucan before the kynge and the princes: the quene Vasthi hath not onely hurt the kynge, but also all the princes and al the people in all the prouinces of kynge Assuerus, for this dede of ℣ quene shall come abrode vnto all women, so ℣ they shall despyse their husbandes before their eyen, and shall saye ℣ kynge Assuerus commaunded Vasthi ℣ quene to come before him, but she wolde not. And by this example shal all the princes wyues of Persie and Media set at naught the commaundement of their husbandes, when they heare of this dede of the quene, thus shall there arise despytefulnes and wrath ynoughe. If it please the kynge, let there go forth a Proclamacion frome him, and let it be written accordinge to the lawe of the Persians and Medians (and not to be transgressed) that Vasthi come no more before kynge Assuerus, and let the kynge geue the kyngdome vnto an other that is better then she.

And that this wrytynge of the kynge which he shalbe made, be publyshed throwe out all his empyre which is great, that all wyues maye haue their husbandes in honoure, both great & small. This pleased ℣ kynge & the princes, & the kynge dyd accordinge to the worde of Mamucan. Then were letters sent forth into all the kynges landes, into euery lande accordinge to the wrytinge therof, and to euery people after their language, that euerye man shulde be Lorde and chefe in his owne house. And this caused he to be diuulged amõges all people. The publicacion of lawes.

¶ The quene put away, certayne goodly younge damoselles are searched out amongest whome Esther pleaseth the kyng. Mardochens discouereth to the kynge those that woulde denaye him.

CAP. II.

THese thinges wne whē the displeasure of kyng Assuer* was alayed he thought vpon Vasthi, what she had done, & what was concluded concernynge her. Then sayde the kynges seruātes: Let there be sayre yōg virgins sought for the kynge, & let the kynge appoynt ouerseers in all the landes of his empyre, that they maye bynge togyther all sayre younge virgins vnto the castell of Susan to ℣ womens lodgynge, vnder the hande of Hegai the kynges chamberlayne, that keepeth ℣ women, and let him geue them their apparell. And lohe which damosell pleaseth the kynge, let her be quene in Vasthis stede. This pleased the kyng and he dyd so.

In the castell of Susan there was a Iewe, whose name was Mardocheus, the son of Iair, the son of Semei, the son of Cis, the son of Jemini, which was caryed away from Jerusalem, when Jekonias the kynge of Juda was led away, whom Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babylon caryed awaye) & he norysshed Hadasah, otherwyse called Esther, his vncles daughter: for she had neyther father nor mother, & she was a sayre and bewtyfull damosell. and when her father and mother dyed, Mardocheus receyued her, as his owne doughter.

Now

Nowe when the kynges commaundement was publyshed, and accesdynge to it manye damsels were brought to gyther vnto the castell of Susan vnder the hande of Hagei, Esther was taken also vnto the kinges house vnder the hande of Hagei the keper of the women, and the damsell pleased him, and she founde grace in his syght. And he caused her oyntment to be gyuen her, and her gyftes, & gaue her seuen notable gentyl women of the kynges house, and arayed both her & her gentyllwemen very tychely in the house of the wemen. But Esther shewed not her people nor her kynred: for Mardocheus had charged her, that she shuld not tell it. And Mardocheus walked euery day before the court of the wemens buyldinge, that he myght know howe Esther dyd, and what shuld become of her.

And when the appoynted tyme of euery damsel came that she shuld come to the kynge Assuerus, after that she had bene. xij. monethes in the kechynge of the wemen (for thus kechynge must haue so moche tyme, namely. vj. monethes with Balme and Myrre, and. vj. monethes with good spices, so were the wemen bewtyfyed) then went there one damsel vnto the kynge, and what so euer she required that must be gyuen her to go with her out of the wemens buyldinge vnto the kynges palace. And when one came in the euenynge, the same went frome him on the morowe into the seconde house of wemen, vnder the hande of Saagas the kynges chamberlayne, which kepe the concubynes. And she must come vnto the kynge nomore, oncles it pleased the kyng and that he caused her to be called by name.

Nowe when the tyme came of Esther the doughter of Abihail Mardocheus vncle (whō he had receyued as his owne doughter) that she shuld come to the kynge, she desired nothinge but what Hagei the kynges chamberlayne the keper of the wemen sayd. And Esther founde fauoure in the sight of all them that loked vpon her. So Esther was take vp to kynge Assuerus into the house royall, in the tenth moneth which is called Tebeth, in the. vij. yere of his raygne.

And the kynge loued Esther aboue all the wemen, and she founde grace and mercy in his sight before all the virgines: and he set the quenes crowne vpon her head, and made her quene in stede of Vasthi. And the kynge made a great feast vnto all his princes and seruaūtes (which feast was because of Esther): & he gaue rest to all the landes, and gaue royal gyftes accordinge to a kynges magnificence.

And whan the virgins were gathered togyther the seconde tyme, Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate. And as yet had not Esther shewed her kynred and her people, accordinge as Mardocheus had bydden her: for Esther dyd after the worde of Mardocheus, like as whē he was her tutoure. At the same tyme whyle Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate, two of the kynges chamberlaynes Bagathan & Thares which kepe the dore were wroth, & sought to laye handes on the kynge Assuerus: wherof Mardocheus gat knowledge, and tolde it vn to quene Esther, and Esther certyfyed the kyng thereof in Mardocheus name. And when inquyre was made, it was founde so. And they were both hanged on tre: and it was written in the Chronycles, before the kynge.

¶ Haman obtayned of the kynge that all Jewes shulde be put to death because Mardocheus had not gruen hym worshyp, as other had.

CAPL. III.

After this the kynge promoted Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite, & set him bygde, and set his seate aboue all the princes that were with him. And all the kynges seruauntes that were in the gate, bowed their knees, and dyd reuerence vnto Haman: for the kynge had so commaunded. But Mardocheus bowed not the knee, and worshipped him not. Then the kynges seruauntes whiche were in the kynges gate, sayde vnto Mardocheus: why breakest thou the kynges commaundement? And when they spake this dayly vnto him, and he obeyed them not, they tolde Haman, that they myght se whether Mardocheus matters wolde endure: for he had told them that he was a Jewe. And whē Haman sawe that Mardocheus bowed not the knee vnto him, nay worshipped him, he was full of indignacion and thought it to yuell to laye handes onely on Mardocheus: for they had shewed him the nacion of Mardocheus, but he sought to destroy all the Jewes the nacion of Mardocheus, that were in the hole empyre of Assuerus.

In the. j. moneth (that is the moneth Nisan) in the. xij. yere of kyng Assuerus, they cast Phur (that is a lot) before Haman, on what daye and what moneth this shulde be done: and there came out the. xiij. moneth that is the moneth Adar. And Haman sayde vnto kynge Assuerus: There is a people scattered abrode & dispersed from them selues amonge all people in the landes of thyne empire, & their law is contrary vnto all people, and they do not after the kynges lawes, neyther is it the kynges profyt to suffre them after this maner. If it please the kyng, let him make, that they be destroyed, and so will I weye downe ten thousande talentes of syluer, vnder the handes of the worckmen, to be brought into the kynges chamber. Then toke the kynge his ryngett of his hande, and gaue it vnto Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite the Jewes enemy. And the kynge sayde vnto Haman: Let the syluer be gyuen the, and that people also, to do with all what pleaseth the.

Then were the kynges scribes called vp the xiij. daye of the fyrst moneth, and there was written (accordyng as Haman commaunded) vnto the kynges princes and to the captayns euery where in the landes, and to the rulers of euery people in the countreyes on euery syde, accordinge to the writinge of euery nacion, & after their language in the name of kynge Assuerus, and sealed with the kynges ryngt. And the writinges were sent by purpursuiters into all the kynges landes, to roote out to kyll and

& to destroy al Iewes, both yong & olde, children and women in one daye, that is to wite vpon the thirteenth daye of the twelueth moneth, which is the moneth Adar and to spoile their goodes.

This was the summe of the letters, that there shulde be a commaundement gyuen in all landes, to be publyshed vnto all people, that they shulde be readye agaynste the same daye. And the purseuauntes went in all the haste accordynge to the kynges commaundement. And in the castell of Sulan was ꝑ commaundment dyuyded. And the kynge and Haman sate and dranke. But the cyte of Sulan was disquieted.

CAPI. IIII.

A Whē Mardocheus perceyued all that was done, he rent his clothes, & put on sack clothe, and asshes, and went out into ꝑ myddes of the cyte, and cried loude and lamētably, and came before the kynges gate: for there might no man entre within the kynges gate, that had sacke clothe on. And in all landes and places, as farre as the kynges worde & commaundment extended, there was great lamentacion amonge the Iewes and many fasted, wept, mourned, and laye in sack clothes and asshes. So Esthers damoselles, & her chamberlaynes, came and tolde it her. Then was the quene exceadingly astonyed. And she sent rayment, that Mardocheus shulde put B them on, and laye the sacke cloth frome hym. But Mardocheus wolde not take them. Thē called Esther Hathath one of the kynges chā berlaynes (whyche stode before her) and gaue hym a commaundement vnto Mardocheus, ꝑ he myght knowe what it were, and wherfore he dyd so. So Hathath went forth to Mardocheus vnto the strete of the cyte, which was before the kynges gate.

And Mardocheus tolde him of all that had happened vnto him, and of the summe of Aman that Haman had promysed to weye down in the kynges chamber because of the Iewes for to destroye them, and he gaue him the copy of the commaundement, that was dyuyded at Sulan to destroy them, that he might shewe it vnto Esther, and to speke to her and charge her, that she shulde go in to the kynge, & make her prayer and supplicacion vnto him for her people.

And when Hathath came in, and tolde Esther the wordes of Mardocheus, Esther spake vnto Hathath, and commaunded him to saye vnto Mardocheus: all the kynges seruauntes, and the people in the landes of the kynge C knowe, that who so euer commeth within the courte vnto the kynge, whether it be man or woman, which is not called, the commaundement is that the same shall dye immediatly onelesse the kynge holde out the golden scepter vnto him, in token of clemencie that he maye lyue. As for me, I haue not bene called to come in to the kynge now this thirty dayes.

And when Mardocheus was enformed of Esthers wordes, Mardocheus bad her agayn vnto Esther: thinke not to saue thyne owne lyfe, whyle thou art in the kynges house before all Iewes: for yf thou holdest thy peace at this tyme, then shal the Iewes haue helpe D and delyueraunce out of an other place, and thou and thy fathers house shalbe destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou art come to the kyngdome, for this tymes sake? Esther bad, gyue Mardocheus this answere, go thou thy waye, and gather together all the Iewes that are founde at Sulan, and fast ye for me, that ye eate not and drynke not in thre dayes, neyther daye nor nyght. I and my damoselles will fast lykewyse, and so will I go in to the kynge contrary to the commaundement: yf I perysshe, I perysshe. So Mardocheus wente his waye, and dyd all that Esther had commaunded hym.

¶ Esther entreth in to the kynge and bydeth hym and Haman to a feaste. Haman prepareth a gallous for Mardocheus.

CAPI. V.

ON the thirde day put Esther on her royall apparell, and stode in the courte of ꝑ kynges palace within, ouer against the kynges lodgynge. And the kynge sat vpō his royal seate in his palace ouer against the gate of the house. And when the kynge sawe Esther the quene standynge in the courte, she founde grace in his sighte. And the kynge helde out ꝑ golden scepter in his hande towarde Esther. So Esther kept forth, and touched the toppe of the scepter. Then sayd the kynge vnto her What wilt thou quene Esther? and what requirest thou? aske euen the halfe of the empire, and it shalbe gyuen the. Esther sayde: Yf it please the kynge, let the kynge and Haman come this daye vnto the banket, that I haue prepared. The kynge sayd: Cause Haman to make hast: that he maye do as Esther hathe sayde.

Now when the kynge and Haman came to the banket that Esther had prepared, ꝑ kynge sayde vnto Esther after he had largely dronke of the wyne: Esther, what is thy petition? & it shalbe gyuen the. And what requirest thou? Yf it be euen the halfe of the empyre, it shalbe done.

Then answered Esther and sayde: my petition and desire is, yf I haue founde grace in E the sight of the kynge, and yf it please ꝑ kynge to gyue me my petition, and to fulfill my request, then let the kynge and Haman come to the banket that I shall prepare for them, and so will I doo to morowe as the kynge hathe sayde.

Then went Haman forthe the same daye, ioyfull and mery in his mynde. And when he sawe Mardocheus in the kynges gate, that he stode not vp and kneled before him, he was full of indignacion at Mardocheus. Neuertheles he refrayned him selfe: and when he came home, he sent, and called for his frendes and Zares his wyfe, and tolde them of the glory glorye of his riches, and the multytude of his children all to gyther, howe the kynge had promoted him so greatly, and howe that he was taken above the princes and seruauntes of the kynge. Haman sayde moreouer: Yea & Esther the quene let no man come with the kynge vnto the banchet that she had prepared except me, and to morowe am I bidden vnto her also with the kynge. But in all this am I not satisfied as longe as I se Mardochens the Jewe sittinge at the kynges gate. Then sayd Zares his wyfe and all his frendes vnto him: Let them make a galowes of fyftye cubites hyghe, and to morowe speake thou vnto the kynge, that Mardochens may be hanged ther on, and so thou shalt go merely with the kyng vnto the banket. Haman was well content herewith, and caused a galowes to be made redy.

¶ The kynge turneth ouer the Cronycles and findeth the processe of Mardochens: and then at the counsell of Haman, he commaundeth Mardochens to be had in honoure.

CAPI. VI.

THe same night could not ℔ kynge slepe, and he commaunded to bringe the Cronicles and hystories: whiche when they were red before the kynge, they happened on the place where it was written, how Mardochens had tolde, that the kynges two chamberlaynes (which kept ℔ chefholdes) sought to laye handes on kynge Assuerus. And ℔ kyng sayd: what worshyp and good haue we done to Mardochens therfore? Then sayde ℔ kynges seruauntes that ministred vnto him. There is nothinge done for him. And the kyng sayd: Who is in the court? (for Haman was gone into the court without before ℔ kynges house that he might speake vnto the kynge to hang Mardochens on the tree, that he had prepared for him.) And the kynges seruauntes sayde vnto him: behold, Haman standeth in the court. The kyng sayd: let him come in. And whē Haman came in, ℔ kyng sayd vnto him: what shall be done vnto the man, whō the kynge wolde fayne dyngre vnto worshyppe? But Haman thought in his hert: Whome shulde the kyng els be glad to dyngre vnto worshyp, but me? And Haman sayde vnto the kynge: Let the man vnto whome the kynge wolde be glad to do worshyp, be brought hether, that he maye be arayed with the royall garmentes whiche the kynge vseth to weare: and the horse that the kynge ryeth vpon, and that the crowne royall maye be set vpon his heed. And let this rayment and horse be inquered vnder ℔ handes of one of the kynges princes, that he maye araye the man withall (whō the kynge wolde fayne honoure) and cary him vpon the horse throwe the strete of the cyte, and cause it to be proclaymed before him: thus shall it be done to euery man, whome the kynge wolde fayne honoure.

The kynge sayde: make haste, and take as thou hast sayde, the rayment and the horse: & doo euen so with Mardochens the Jewe that sitteth before the kynges gate, & let nothinge lacke of all that thou hast spoken. Then toke Haman the rayment and the horse, and arayed him, and brought him on horsbacke throwe the strete of the cyte, and proclaymed before him: Even thus shall it be done vnto euery man whome the kynge is disposed to honoure. And Mardochens came agayne to the kynges gate, but Haman gat him home al the hast mourninge with bare heed, and tolde Zares his wyfe & all his frendes, euery thing that had happened him. Then sayde his wise men of his counsayle and Zares his wyfe vnto him: If it be Mardochens of the seed of ℔ Jewes, before whome thou hast begon to fal thou canst do nothinge vnto him, but shalte fall before him. Whyle they were yet talking with him, came the kynges chamberlaynes, & caused Haman to make hast to come vnto the banchet that Esther had prepared.

¶ The quene byddeth the kyng and Haman agayne, and prayeth for her selfe and her people. She accuseth Haman: and he is hanged on the galowes, which he had prepared for Mardochens.

CAPI. VII.

ANd when the kynge and Haman came to the banchet that quene Esther had prepared, the kynge sayde vnto Esther on the seconde daye at the banchet of wyne: what is thy petition quene Esther, that it may be graūted the? And what requirest thou? Yea albe euen halfe of the empyre, and it shall be done. Esther the quene answered and sayde: If I haue founde grace in thy sight (O kyng) and yf it please the kynge then graunt me my lyfe at my desire and my people for my petitions sake: for we are solde both I and my people to be destroyed, to be slayne and to perysh. And wolde God we were solde to be bondmē and bondwemē, then wolde I holde my tonge so shoulde not the enemy be so hyghe to the kynges harme. The kyng Assuerus spake and sayde vnto quene Esther: Who is this? Or where is he that dare presume in his mynde to do suche a thinge after that maner? Esther sayde: the enemy and aduersary is this wycked Haman. Which thing when Haman herd he was exceadingly afrayed before the kynge and the quene. And the kynge arose frome the banchet and from the wyne in his displeasure and went into the palace garden. And Haman stode vp, and besought quene Esther for his lyfe: for he sawe there was a mischefe prepared for him of the kynge alredy.

And when the kynge came agayne out of ℔ palace garden vnto the parlet where they had eaten, Haman hadde layde him vpon the bed that Esther sat vpon. Then sayde the kynge: will he force the quene also beside me in the house? As sone as that worde went out of the kynges mouth, they couered Hamans face. And Harbonah one of ℔ chamberlaynes that stode before the kynge, sayde. Beholde, there standeth a galowes in Hamans house fyftye cubytes hyghe, which he had made for Mardochens, that spake good for the kynge. The kynge sayd: hange him theron. So they hanged Haman on the galowes that he had made for Mardochens. So was the kynges wrath appeased.

¶ After the death of Haman Mardochens is promoted then are wholesome letters sent vnto the Jewes.

CAPI. VIII.

A THe same daye dyd kynge Assuerus gyue the house of Haman the Jewes enemye vnto quene Esther. And Mardochens came before the kyng: for Esther tolde how he belonged vnto her. And the kynge toke the ringe of his kynger, whiche he had taken fro Haman, and gaue it Mardochens. Moreouer Esther sette Mardochens ouer the house of Haman. And she spake yet more before the kynge, and fell downe at his fete, & besought hym, that he wolde put away the malice of Haman the Agagite, and his moost vngracious deuises that he had ymagined agaynste the Jewes. And the kynge helde out the golden scepter vnto Esther. Then rose Esther, & B stode before the kynge, and sayde: yf it please the kynge, and if I haue founde grace in his syghte, and yf he be contente for the kynge, and if it be accepted in his syghte: then let it be written, that the letters of the deuyse of Haman the sonne of Hamedatha the Agagite, maye be called agayne: whiche letters he wrote, to destroye the Jewes in all the kynges landes. For howe can I se the euyll that shall happen vnto my people? and howe can I lyue vpon the destruction of my kyn?

Then sayde the kinge Assuerus vnto quene Esther, and to Mardochens the Jewe: Beholde I haue gyuen Esther the house of Haman, and hym haue they hanged vpon a tree, C because he layed hande vpon the Jewes. Wryte ye nowe therfore for the Jewes, as it lyketh you in the kynges name, and seale it with the kynges ringe (for the wrytynges that were written in the kinges name, & sealed with the kynges ringe, durst noman disanull.) Then were the kynges scrybes called at the same tyme in the thyrde moneth, that is the moneth Siuan, on the thre and twentyeth daye.

And it was wrytten accordinge as Mardochens commaunded vnto the Jewes and to the prynces, to the deputyes and capitaynes in the landes from Ind vnto Ethiopia, namely an hundred and seuen and twentye landes, vnto euerye one accordynge to the wrytynge therof, vnto euerye people after their speche, and to the Jewes also, vnto their wrytynge and language. And it was wrytten in the kynge Assuerus name and sealed with the kynges ringe. And by lyght messangers, sent he the wrytynges, wherin the kynge graunted the Jewes (in what cytyes so euer they were) to gather them selues to gether, and to stande for their lyfe, and for to rote out, to slaye, and to destroye all the power of the people and lande that wolde trouble them, with children and women, and to spoyle their good vpon one day in all the landes of kyng Assuerus namely vpon the thyrteenth daye of the twelueth moneth, which is the moneth Adar.

The summe of the wrytynge was, howe there was a commaundement geuen in all landes to be publyshed vnto all the people, that the Jewes shulde be redye agayns that daye to auenge them selues on their enemyes. And the messaungers that bare the tydynges wet forth with all spede, according to the kynges worde: and the commaundement was deuised in the castell of Susan.

And Mardochens went out from the kynge in royal apparell of yelowe & white & with a great crowne of golde, arayed with a garmet of lynnen and purple, and the cyte of Susan reioyced and was glad: but vnto the Jewes there was come lyght and gladnes & ioye & worshyp. And in all landes and cytyes, into what places soeuer the kynges worde and commaundment reached, there was ioye & myrth, prosperite and good dayes amonge the Jewes: in so moche that many of the people in the lande became of the Jewes belefe, for the feare of the Jewes came vpon them.

¶ The commaundement of the kynge, the Jewes put their foes to ded. The sonnes of Haman are hanged. The Jewes kepe a festiuall daye in remembraunce of their deliuerye.

CAPI. IX.

IN the twelfte moneth (that is the moneth Adar) the thirteth daye, which, the kinges worde and commaundement had appoynted, that the ennemyes shulde haue destroyed the Jewes, it turned contrarye wyse that the Jewes shulde subdue their ennemyes. Then assembled the Jewes together in their cytyes within all the landes of kinge Assuerus, to lay hand on suche as wold haue wone them euil, & no man coulde withstande them: for the feare of them was come ouer all people. And all the rulers in the landes, and princes and lieutenantes, and officers of the king promoted the Jewes: for the feare of Mardochens come vpo them. For Mardochens was great in the kinges house, and the reporte of him was bruted in all landes, how he encreased and grewe.

Thus the Jewes smote all their ennemyes B with a sore slaughter, and slewe and destroyed, and did after their wyll vnto suche as were their aduersaries. And at the castell Susan the Jewes slewe and destroyed fiue hundred men, and slewe Pharsandatha, Delphon, Phasatha, Phasatha, Adalia, Aridatha, Pharmastha, Arisai, Aridai, Vaizatha, the ten sonnes of Haman, the sonne of Amedatha the ennemye of the Jewes: but on his goodes they wolde take no botyes. At the same tyme was the king certified of the nombre of them that were slayne at the castell Susan. And the C kynge sayde vnto quene Esther: The Jewes haue slayne and destroyed fyue hundred men at the castell of Susan, and the ten sonnes of Haman: What shall they do in the other landes of the kynge? What is thy requeſt, that it maye be graunted the? and what requeſt thou moze to be done? Esther ſayde: Yf it pleaſe the kynge, let hym ſuffre the Jewes to mayntayne alſo to do accordynge vnto this dayes commaundement, that they hange Hamans ten ſonnes vpon the tre. And the kynge charged to do ſo, and the commaundement was dreſſed at Sulan, and Hamans ten ſonnes were hanged. And the Jewes gathered them ſelues to gether at Sulan, vpon the fourteenth daye of the moneth Adar, & ſlewe thre hundreth men at Sulan, but theyr goodes they wolde not ſpoyle.

Moreouer the other Jewes in the kynges landes, toke for their lyues, and gat reſt from their ennemyes: and ſlewe of their ennemyes lxv. thouſande, how be it they layd no handes on their goodes. This was done on the. xiij. daye of the moneth Adar, and on the. xiiij. day of the ſame moneth reſted they, whyche daye they ordeyned to be a daye of feaſtinge & gladneſſe. But the Jewes at Sulan were come to gether both on the. xiij. daye and on the. xiiij. and on the. xv. daye they reſted, and the ſame daye ordeyned they to be a daye of feaſtinge & gladneſſe. Therfore the Jewes that dwelt in the villages and vnwalled townes, ordeyned the. xiij. daye of the moneth Adar, to be a day of feaſtinge and gladnes, and one ſent gyftes vnto an other.

And Mardochens wrote all theſe actes, and ſent the wrytynges vnto all the Jewes that were in al the landes of kynge Aſſuerus, both nyghe and farre, that they ſhulde ſtedyly receyue and holde the. xiiij. and. xv. daye of the moneth Adar, as the dayes wherin the Jewes came to reſte from their ennemyes, and as a moneth wherein their payne was tourned to ioye, and their ſorowe into proſperitie: & they ſhulde obſerue the ſame as dayes of weiche & gladnes, and one to ſende gyftes vnto an other, and to diſtribute vnto the poze.

And the Jewes accepted al that they hadde begon to do, and that Mardochens had wryte vnto them: how that Haman the ſon of Hamadatha ennemy to all the Jewes, had deuiſed to deſtroye all the Jewes, & caſted to call Phim (that is Lot) for to put them to ſlaute, & to bynge them to naught: and how Hester hadde ſpoke to the kynge, that thoſe wycked letters his wyckednes ſhulde be preuented againſt the Jewes, myght be turned vpō his owne heed, & how he and his ſonnes were hanged on the tree. For which cauſe they called this daye Phurim after the name of Phim accordinge to all the wordes of this wryting: and what they them ſelues had ſene, & what had happened vnto them. Phurim

And the Jewes let it vp, and toke it vpon them and their ſede, and vpon all ſuch as ioyned them ſelues vnto them, that they wolde not myſſe to kepe theſe two dayes yerely, accordinge as they were written and appoynted, how theſe dayes are not to be forgotten, but to be kept of children childe amonge al kynreders in all landes and cytes. Theſe are the dayes of Phurim & is to ſaye of lotte, which are not to be exempt among the Jewes, and the memorial of them ought not to perysshe frome their ſede. C

And quene Hester the dughter of Abihail and Mardocheus the Jewe wrote with al auctoritie, to confirme this ſeconde wryting of Phurim, and ſent the letters vnto all the Jewes in the. c. and. xxvij. landes of the empire of Aſſuerus, with frendly and faithfull wordes to confirme their dayes of Phurim, in their tyme appointed, accordinge as Mardocheus & Jewe and Esther the quene had ordeyned in that behalfe: lyke as they vpon their ſoules & vpon their ſede had confirmed the actes of the faſtinges and of her complaynte. And Hester commaunded to ſtablyſhe theſe actes of this Phurim, and to wryte them in a boke. Hester.iiij.

CAPL X.

AND the kyng Aſſuerus layd tribute vpō the lande, and vpon the Iles of the ſee. But as touchinge all the actes of his power and auctoritie, and the great worſhyp of Mardocheus, whyche the kynge gaue him, behalde, it is written in the Cronycles of the kynges of Medya and Perſia. For Mardocheus the Jewe was the ſeconde next vnto kyng Aſſuerus, and great amonge the Jewes, and accepted amonge the multitude of his brethren, as one that ſeketh the welthe of his people, and ſpeaketh the beſt for all his ſede. THE BOKE OF IOB.

¶ Iob is plaged of God by the losse of his goodes and children.

CAPI I.

THere in the land of Hus, was a man called Iob: a perfect and vpryght man, suche one as feared God, and eschewed euell. This man hadde seuen sonnes, and three daughters. His substaunce was seuen thousand shepe. iij. thousand camels fyue hundred yoke of oxen, fyue hundred Asses, and a verye greate housholde: so that he was one of the myghtyest men amonge all them of the east countrey. And his sonnes went and made bankettes: one daye in one house, and an other daye in an other, and sent for their. iij. sisters, to eate and drincke with them. So when they had passed ouer the tyme of their bankettinge rounde about, Iob sent for them, and clensed them ageyne, and gat vp early, and offered for euery one a sacrifice. For Iob thought thus: peradventure my sonnes haue done some offence, & haue bene vnthankefull to God in their hertes. And thus dyd Iob euery daye. Now vpon a tyme, when the seruauntes of God came & stode before the Lorde, Satan came also amonge them. And the Lorde sayd vnto Satan: whence commest thou? Satan answered the Lorde, and sayde: I haue compassed the lande and walked thorow it. Then sayde the Lorde vnto Satan: hast thou not considered my seruaunte Iob, howe that he is a perfecte and vpryght man: suche one as feareth God, and eschueth euell, and that there is none lyke him in the lande? Satan answered, and sayd vnto the Lorde: Doth Iob feare God for nought? hast thou not preserued him, his house, and all his substaunce on euery syde? hast thou not blessed the workes of his handes? Is not his possession encreased in the lande? But lay thyne hande vpon him a lytle, and touche ones all y he hath, and y the curse the not to thy face. I meruayle. And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: lo all that he hath, be in thy power: only vpon him selfe se thou laye not thyne hande. Then went Satan forth from the Lorde.

Now vpon a certayne daye when his sonnes and doughters were eatinge, and drynkynge wyne in their eldest brothers house, there cam a messinger vnto Iob, and sayde: Whyle the oxen were plowynge, and the Asses goynge in the pasture beside them: the Habrey came in with force, and tooke them all away: yea they haue slayne thy seruauntes with the sworde, & I onely haue escaped, to tell the.

And whyle he was yet speakynge, there cam an other, and sayde: The fyre of God is fallen from heauen, it hath consumed, & brent vp all thy shepe and seruauntes: and I only am escaped, to bringe the tydinges. In the meane season whyle he was yet speakynge, there came an other, and sayde: The Caldees made three armyes, and fell vpon thy camels, which they haue caryed awaye, yea & slayne thy seruauntes with the sworde: and I onely am gotten awaye, to bringe tydinges. Whyle he was speakynge, there came yet an other, and sayde: Thy sonnes and doughters were eatynge and drynkynge wyne in their eldest brothers house, and lodenly there came a mygthy great wynde out of the South, and smote the. iiij. corners of the house: whiche fell vpon thy children, so that they are dead: and I am gotten awaye alone, to bringe tydinges.

Then Iob stode vp, and rente his clothes shaued his head, fell downe vpon the ground, worshipped, and sayd: Naked came I out of my mothers wombe, and naked shall I turne thyther agayne. The Lorde gaue, & the Lord hath taken awaye: now blessed be the name of the Lorde. In all these thinges, dyd Iob not offende, ne murmured folysshely against God.

¶ Iob is plaged with sore byles, and afterwarde is mocked of his wyfe. His frendes vysyte him, and haue compassion on him.

CAPI. II.

IT happened also vpon a tyme, that when the seruauntes of God came and stode before the Lorde, Satan came amonge them and stode before him. And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: whence commest thou? Satan answered and sayde: I haue circuyted the lande and walked thorow it. Then sayde the Lord vnto Satan: hast thou not considered my seruaunt Iob, howe that he is an innocent and vertuous man suche one as feareth God, and eschueth euyl, and that there is none lyke him in the lande? But thou mouedest me against him, to punyshe him: yet is it in vayne, for he contynueth still in his godlynesse. Satan answered the Lorde, & sayd: Skynne for skynne and all that ever a man hath, he wil giue for his lyfe. But lay thyne hand vpon him, touch him ones vpon the bone and flesshe, and then thou shalt se he shall curse the to thy face. Then sayde the Lorde vnto Satan: lo, he is in thy power, but spare his lyfe. So went Satan forth from the Lorde, and smote Iob with maruelous sore byles, fro the sole of the fote vnto his crowne: so that he sat vpon y grounde in the asshes, and scraped of the fylthe of the sores with a potsherde. Then sayde his wyfe vnto him: Doest thou continue in thy perfectnes? curse God and dye. But Iob sayde vnto her: Thou speakest lyke a folysh woman. Seynge we haue receyued prosperitie at the hand of God, wherefore shoulde we not be content with aduersitie also? In all these thinges dyd not Iob synne with his lyppes. Nowe when Iobs frendes hearde of all the trouble, that happened vnto him, there came three of them, euery one from his owne place: Eliphas the Thamanite, Baldad the Suhite, and Zophar the Naamathite.

For

For they were agreed togyther to come to shewe their compassion vpon hym, and to chere hym. So when they lyft vp their eyes a farre of, they knewe hym not. Then they cryed, and wept: then euery one of them rent his clothes, & sprynkled dust vpon their heades in the ayre. They sat them downe by hym also vpon the grounde seuen dayes and seuen nyghtes. Neyther was there any of them that spake one worde vnto him, for they sawe that his payne was very great.

¶ The wordes of Job, wherin he declareth that the prosperit lyfe is miserable: and the death of the righteous ioyfull and fortunable.

CAPI. VII.

AFter this Job opened his mouth, and cursed his daye, and sayde: Lost be that daye, wherin I was borne: and the nyght in whiche it was sayde, there is a man chyld conceyued. The same daye be turned to darknesse, and not regarded of God aboue, nei ther be shyned vpon with lyght: but be couered with darknesse, and the shadowe of death. Let the dymme cloude fall vpon it, and let it be wrapped in sorowe. Let the darke storme ouercome that nyght, let it not be reckened amonge the dayes of the yere, ne counted in the monethes. Desolate be that nyght, and vncommended: let not that curse the daye, that I saye, be redy to rayse vp Leuiathan grue some also their enuie. Let the starres be dymme thorow darknesse of it. Let it looke for light, but se none, neyther the eyelyng vp of the morning: because it shut not vp the wombe that bare me, ne hyd these sorowes from myne eyen.

Alas, why dyed I not in the matrice? why hyd not I perysh, as soone as I came ouer of my mothers wombe? Why let they me vpon their knees? Why gaue they me suck with their brestes? for now I shuld haue lyen still I shuld haue slept, and bene at rest: yee as the kynges and rulers of the earthe, whiche buylde them selues solytary places: or as the princes that haue great substaunce of golde & their houses full of syluer. O that I vtterly had no beynge, or were as a thyng borne out of tyme (that is put afore) euyther as younge chyldren, which neuer sawe the lyght. There the wycked do ceasse from their cruelnesse, there suche as are ouerlaboured be at rest: there are those set out fre, whiche haue bene in prison, so that they heare no more the voyce of the oppressour: There are small and great: the bonde man, is fre from his master.

Wherfore is the lyght geuen vnto that is in wretchednes? and lyfe vnto them that haue bytter heartes? Whiche longe for death, yf it come not: and searche for it more then for treasure and wolde be exceadinge glad, and reioyce yf they founde their graue. That shulde be hyde to the man whose waye is hyd, whiche God hedeth backe from hym. For my syghes come before I eate, and my roaringe fall out lyke the rayne water. For the thinge I feared, is come vpon me: and the thinge that I was afrayed of, is happened vnto me. Was I not dayntye? had I not quietnesse? Was I not in rest? And nowe commeth indignacion vpon me.

¶ Job is by Eliphas reproued of impacience and murmur, and of the presumption of his owne righteousnes.

CAPI. VIII.

THen answered Eliphas the Themanyte and sayde vnto hym: If we begynne to commen with the, peraduenture thou wilt be displeased, but who canne withholde hym selfe from speakynge? Beholde, thou hast bene a teacher of many, and hast comforted the weye handes.

Thy wordes haue set vp those that were fallen, thou hast erected the weake knees. But now that the plage is come vpon the, thou shrynkest awaye: now that it hathe touched thy self, thou art sayne pacyed. Where is thy awe, thy stedfastnesse, thy patience, and the perfectnesse of thy wayes? Remembre (I praye the) who euer perysshed beynge an innocent? Or, when were the godly destroyed? As I haue sene them that plowe wyckednesse, and sowe mischefe reape the same. With the blast of God dyd they perysshe, and with the breth of his anger consumed they awaye. The roaringe of the Lyon, the voyce of the Lyoncelle, and the teeth of the Lyons whelpes are broken. The Lyon perysheth, for lacke of pray, and the Lyons whelpes are scatred abrode.

And vnto me was the worde hyd, & myne eare hath receyued a lytell therof. In the visitacions and thoughtes of the visions of the nyght, when sleepe commeth on men: feare came vpon me and drede, and made my bones to shake. And when the wynde passed by before my presence, it made the heares of my fleshe stande vp. He stode there and I knewe not his face, an ymage there was before me, & there was sylence, so that I herde thus voyce. Shall man be more iust than God? Or shall man be purer than his maker? Beholde there is no trust to his seruauntes, and in his aungelles layde he sondre vnfaythefulnesse. How much more in them that dwell in houses of clay, whose foundacion is dust and the: whiche shal be consumed by the moth. They shal be smytten from the morninge vnto the euenynge: they shall perysshe euerlastyngly, and no man thynke theron. Is not their dignyte taken away with them, they shall dye yee that or they be ware.

¶ The end of a fole. The rightwisenes of God. The Lorde challengeth Job, and disputeth them against.

CAPI. V.

CAll me one nie, yf thou canst fynde anyone lobe about the, vpon any of the holy men. He that is foly vnto man, destroyeth him selfe, and anger slayeth the ignorannte. I haue sene my selfe, when the foolyshe was aryse rootes, that his dwelyng was sodenly destroyed that his childr̄ were with out prosperite or helth: that they were slayne in the dore, and no mā to deliuer them: that his haruest was eaten vp of the hungry: that the weapened man had spoyled it, and that ꝑ thurstye had dronke vp his riches. Is it not the earth that bringeth forthe the trauayle, neyther commeth forowe out of the grounde: but it is man, that is borne vnto myserye, lyke as the dyrde to flyght.

The power of God.

But nowe wyll I speake of the Lorde, & talke of God: whiche doth thynges, that are vnsearcheable, and maruelles without nombre: which geueth rayne vpon the earth, and powreth water vpon all thinges: whiche setteth vp them of lowe degre, and sendeth prosperite, to those that are in heuynesse: Whiche destroyeth the thoughtes of the wycked, so ꝑ they are not able to performe the thinges ꝑ they take in hande: which compaseth the wyse in their owne craftynesse, and ouerthroweth the counsell of the wycked. In so moche that they run into darcknesse by dayre daye, and grope about them at the none daye, lyke as in the nyght.

And so he deliuereth the poore fro̅me the swerde, from the mouth, and fro̅ the hand of the cruel, that the poore maye haue hope, & that the mouthe of the oppressoure maye be stopped.

Beholde, happy is the man, whom God punisheth: therfore, despyse not thou the chastening of the almyghty. For though he make a wounde, he gyueth a medicine agayn: though he smyte, his handes maketh hole agayne.

He deliuereth the out of fyue troubles, so ꝑ in the seuenth there can no harme touche the. In the myddest of honger he saueth the fro̅me death: and when it is warre, from the power of the swerde.

Ye shall kepe the fro̅me the scourge of the tonge, so that when trouble commeth, thou shalt not nede to feare. In hauocke and derth thou shalt be merry, and shalte not be afrayed of the beastes of the earth: But the stones in the lande shall be confederate with the, & the beastes of the felde shall gyue the peace.

Yea thou shalt know, that thy dwellynge place shalbe in rest: thou shalt beholde thy substaunce, and be no more punyshed for tyme. Thou shalt se also, that thy sede shal encrease and that thy progenye shalbe as ꝑ grasse vpon the earth. Thou shalt come to thy graue in a fayre age, lyke as ꝑ corne wheate are brought in to the barne in due season. Loo, this is the thinge that we our selues haue proued by experience. Therfore now that thou hearest it, take better hede to thy selfe.

¶ Iob answereth, that his payne is more greuous then his faute, yet not withstanding he deliuereth himself.

CAP. VI.

IOb answered, and sayde: O that my myserye were weyed, and my punyshement layd in the balaunces: for then should it be heuyer, then the sande of the see. This is the cause that my wordes are so sorowfull.

For the arowes of the almyghty are in me, whose indignation hath dronke vp my spirite, and the terrible feares of God fight against me. Doth the wylde asse roare when he hath grasse? Or eyreth the oxe, when he hath fodder ynought? That which is vnsauery, shall it be eaten without salt, or is there any taste in the whyte of an egge? The thinges ꝑ some tyme I myght not awaye with, are now my meate for very sorow. O that I myght haue my desyre: O that God wolde graunte me ꝑ thinge, that I longe for: That he wolde begyn and smyte me: that he wolde let his hande go, and hewe me in pyne. Then shulde I haue some comforte: yea I wolde desire him in my payne, that he shulde not spare, for I wil not be against the wordes of the holy one.

What power haue I to endure? Or, what is myne ende, that my soule myght be patient? Is my strength the strength of stones? Or, is my flesh made of brasse? Is it not so that there is in me no helpe: and that my substaunce is taken fro̅me me? He that is in tribulation ought to be comforted of his neyghbour: but the feare of the Lorde is cleane away: My owne brethren passe ouer by me as the water broke, that hastely runneth thorowe the bankes. But they that feare the hore frost, the snowe shall fall vpon them.

When their tyme commeth, they shall be destroyed and perysshe: and when they be set on fire, they shalbe remoued out of their place for the pathes that they go in, are croked: they haste after vayne thinges, and shall perysshe. Confusion the pathes of Theman, & the wayes of Saba, wherin they haue put their trust. Confounded are they, that put any confidence in them: for when they came to obtayne the thinges they loked for, they were brought to confusion.

Euen so are ye also come vnto me: but now that ye se my myserye, ye are afrayde. Dyd I desire you, to come hyther? Or, to gyue me any of your substaunce? To deliuer me from the enemyes handes, or to saue me fro̅me the power of the myghty? Teache me and I wil holde my tonge: and yf I be erre, shewe me wherin.

Wherfore blame ye then the wordes, that are well and truely spoken? which of you can reproue them? Suppose only that ye are subtyll to check mens sayenges, and can speake many wordes in the wynde. Ye fall vpon the fatherlesse, and go about to ouerthowe your owne frende. Wherfore loke not onely vpon me, but vpon your selues: whether I lye, or no. Turne into your owne selues (I pray you) be indifferēt iudges, and consyder myne vnryghtwysnesse: whether there be any vnryghtwysnesse in my tongue, or payne wordes in my mouth.

¶ Iob sheweth that this lyfe is but a battayle, or warfare.

CAPI. VII.

A warf-

A Warefare is the lyfe of man vpon earthe, and his dayes are like the dayes of an hyred seruaunte: For lyke as a bonde seruaunt desyreth the shadowe, and as an hyrelynge wolde fayne haue an ende of his worke: euen so haue I laboured hole moneches longe (but in vayne) and many a carefull nyght haue I tolde. When I layd me downe to slepe, I sayde: O when shall I aryse? Agayne, I longed fore for the nyghte. Thus am I replete with sorowes, tyll it be darke. My flesshe is clothed with wormes, filthinesse and dust: my skynne is withered and crompled together: my dayes passe ouer more hastyly, then a weauer can weaue ouer his webbe: and are gone or I am ware. O remembre, that my life is but a wynde, and that myne eye shall no more se the pleasures therof, and that none other mannes eye shall se me any more. For yf thou fastest thyne eyes vpon me, I come to nought, lyke as a cloude is consumed and vanished away: euen so he that goeth downe to hell, commeth no more vp, ne turneth again in to his house, neither shall his place knowe him any more.

Therfore I wyll not spare my mouthe, but wyll speake in the trouble of my spirite, in the bytternesse of my mynde wyll I talke. Am I a fyr or a Whale fysshe, that thou hepest me so in pryson? When I saye: my bed shall comforte me: I shall haue some reliefe thynge by talkynge by my selfe vpon my couche: Then troublest thou me with dreames, and makest me so afrayde thorowe visyons, that my lyfe wysheth rather to be strangled, and my bones to be dead.

I can se no remedye, I shall lyue no more: O spare me then, for my dayes are but vayne. What is man, that thou haste him in suche estemacion, and lettest so moche by hym? Thou takest diligente care for him, and so deynly doest thou trye him.

Why goest thou not fro me, ne lettest me alone, so longe tyll I swalowe downe my spettle? I haue offended, what shall I woo vnto the, O thou preseruer of men? Why haste thou made me to stande in thy waye, and am so heuye a burthen vnto my selfe? Why doest thou not forgyue me my synne? Wherfore takest thou not away my wyckednesse? Beholde, nowe muste I slepe in the dust: and yf thou seekest me to morowe in the morninge, I shall be gone.

¶ Iob is reprehended and noted to haue deserued his payne. A description of hypocrysye.

CAPI. VIII.

Then answered Baldad the Suhite, and sayd: Howe longe wylte thou talke of suche thynges? howe longe shall thy mouth speake so proude wordes? Dothe God peruerte the thynge that is lawfull? Or dothe the almyghty destroy the thyng that is right? When thy sonnes synned agaynst him, did not he punysshe them for their wyckednesse? Yf thou wouldest nowe stretche vnto God by tymes and make thyne humble prayer to the almyghtye: yf thou wouldest lyue a pure and a godlye lyfe: shulde he not waike by vnto the forthwith, and gyue the, the beautye of ryghteousnesse agayne? In so moche, that wherin so euer thou haddest a lyfe afore, thou shuldest nowe haue a greate aboundaunce. Enquyre of theym that haue bene before the, searche hystygentlye amonge thy forefathers. (For we are but of yester daye, and we knowe not, that our dayes vpon earthe are but a derke shadowe.) They shall shewe the, they shall tell the, yea they shall gladlye confesse the same.

Maye a rushe be greene without moysture? maye the grasse growe without water? Lo, (but or euer it be shot forthe, and or euer it be gathered) it withereth, before any other herbe. Euen so goeth it with all theym that forget God, and euen thus also shall the hypocrites hope come to nought. His confidence shall be destroyed, for he trusteth in a spyders webbe. He leaneth him vpon his house, but he shal not stande: he holdeth him fast by it, yet shal he not endure. Ofte tyme a thyng doth flourysshe, and men thynke that it maye abyde the sunne shyning: it shooteth forthe braunches in his garden, it taketh many rootes, in so moche that it is lyke an house of stones.

But yf it be taken oute of his place, euery man denyeth it, sayenge: I knowe the not: Lo, thus is it with him that reioyseth in his owne goinges: and agayne other growe oute of the earthe.

Beholde, God wyll not caste away an vpryghte man, nyther wyll he helpe the vngodlye. Thy mouthe shall he fylle with laughynge, and thy lyppes with gladnesse. They that hate the, shall be confounded, and the dwellynges of the vngodlye shall come to nought.

¶ Iob declareth the benefytes of God, and howe vnapte reprouffes he maketh.

CAP. IX.

Iob answered and sayd: Certes I knowe it is so of a truthe, that a man compared vnto God, can not be iustifyed. Yf he wyll argue with him, he shall not be able to answere him, one amonge a thousande. He is wyse of herte, and mighty in strength. Who euer persysted, that toke parte agaynst hym? He translateth the mountaynes, or euer they be aware, and ouerthroweth them in his wrathe. He remoueth the erth out of her place, and her pyllers, he all to shaketh. He commaundeth the sonne, and it ryseth not: he closeth vp the sterres, as it were vnder a syguet. He hym selfe alone spreadeth oute the heauens, and goeth vpon the wawes of the see. He maketh the dayres of heuen, the Oxions, the fruen sterres, and the secrete places of the southe. He doth great thynges, suche as are vnsercheable, yea and wonders without nombre.

Yf he came by me, I might not loke vpon him: yf he went his waye, I shulde not perceyue

tryue it. If he be hastye to take any thynge awaye, who shall make him restore it agayne?
Who shall saye vnto him: what doest thou?
He is God, whose wrathe no man can withstande: but the proudest of all must stoupe vnder him. Howe shulde I then answere him?
or what wordes shulde I fynde out agaynst hime? Yea, thoughe I be ryghteous, yet wyll I not gyue him one worde agayne, but meekely submyt my selfe to my iudge. All be it that I call vpon him, and he heare me, yet am I not sure that he hathe herde my voyce: he shall trouble me so with the tempest, and wounde me out of measure without cause. He shal not let my spirite be in rest, but spilleth me with bitternesse.

If men wyll speake of strengthe, he is the strongest of all, if men wyll speake of ryght-ousnesse, who dare be my accuser? If I wyll iustifye my selfe, my owne mouthe shall condemne me: If I wyll put forthe my selfe for a perfecte man, he shall proue me a wycked doer: For that I shoulde be an innocent, my conscience knoweth it not, yea I my selfe am weery of my lyfe.

This one thyng wyll I saye: he destroyeth both the ryghteous and vngodly. And thoughe he slee sodaynly with the scourge, yet laugheth he at the punishment of the innocents. He for the worlde, he geueth it ouer in to the power of the wicked, suche as the rulers be, wherof all landes are full. Is it not so? where is there any but he is suche one?

My dayes haue ben more swifte then a pursueante: they are gone sodaynly, and haue sene no good thynge. They are passed awaye, as the shippes that are good vnder sayle, and as the Egle that passeth to her praye. When I am purposed to forget my complaynynges, to chaunge my countenaunce, and to comfort my selfe: then am I afrayde of all my workes, for I knowe thou takourest not an euyll wer.
If I be then a wicked one, why haue I laboured in vayne? Though I washed my self with snowe water, and made myne handes neuer so clene, yet sholdest thou dyppe me in the myre, and myne owne clothes shoulde defyle me. For he that I muste gyue answere vnto, and with whome I go to lawe, is not a man as I am. Neither is there any dayrsmen to re-proue both the parties, or to laye his hand betweene vs. Let him take his rod away fro me, yea let him make me no more afrayde of hym,
and then shall I answere him without feare.
For as longe as I am in suche fearfulnesse, I can make no answere. And why? it greueth my soule to lyue.

¶ Iob is weery of his lyfe, and desyreth out his sorowe before God. He desyreth time to repent. A description of death.

CAPI. X.

NEuertheles, nowe wyll I put forth my wordes: I wyll speake out of the bytter heauynesse of my soule, and wyll saye vnto God: Ah doo not condemne me, but shewe me the cause why thou iudgest me on this maner? Thynkest thou it well done to oppresse me, to cast me of (beinge a worke of thy han-des) and to mayntayne the counsell of the vngodlye? Hathe thou fleshly eyen, or seest thou lyke as man iudgeth? Are thy dayes as ye dayes of man, and thy yeres as mannes yeres, that thou makest suche inquiry for my wickednesse, and searchest oute my synne? where as thou knowest I am no wycked person / and that there is no man able to rescue me out of thyne handes? Thyne handes haue made me, and facioned me all togyther rounde about, wilt thou then destroye me sodenly? O remembre (I beseche the) that thou madest me of the moulde of earthe, and shalte bringe me to earthe agayne. Hast thou not mylked me like mylke, and pressed lyke chese? Thou hast co-uered me with synewe and fleshe, and ioyned me togyther with bones and sinowes. Thou hast graunted me life, and done me good: and the vysyte yeth that thou takest vpon me, hath preserued my spirite.

Though thou hydest these thynges in thyne herte: yet am I sure that thou remembrest them all. Wherfore bydest thou kepe me, wot
I synned, and haste not cleared me fro myne offence? If I be wickedly, wo is me therfore:
If I be ryghteous, yet dare I not lyfte vp my heed: so full am I of confusion, and se myne owne misery.

Thou huntest me oute, oppressed with bey-nesse, as it were a Lyon, and troublest me beyonde all measure. Thou bringest freshe witnesses agaynste me, thy wrathe encreasest thou vpon me: full many are the plages that I am in. Wherfore hast thou brought me out of my mothers wombe? O that I had perished, and no eye had sene me. If they had caried me to my graue, as sone as I was born, then shoulde I be nowe, as thoughe I had neuer ben.

Shall not my fewe lyfe come soone to an ende? O holde the fro me, let me alone, that I maye ease my selfe a lytle afore I goo hen-ther, whence I shall not retourne. Namely to that lande of darkenesse and shadowe of deth:
yea in to the darke clowdye lande and derkly shadow, where as is no order, but terrible feare continually abydeth.

¶ Iob is vanitie reproued of Sophar. God is not reprouable, but is mercyfull to the repentaunt.

CAPI. XI.

THen answered Sophar the Naamathite and sayd: shulde not he that maketh many wordes be answered? Shoulde he that babbleth moche be commended therfo?
Shulde men gyue eare vnto the onely? Thou wilt fayne other men to saye, & shal no body mocke the agayne? Wilt thou saye vnto God the tyme that I take in hande to perfit, and I am clene in thy sighte? O that God wolde speake, and open his lyppes agaynst the, that he might shewe the out of his secret wisdome, howe manyfolde his lawes is; then shoulest
thou

thou knowe that God had forgotten the, bycause of thy synnes.

Wylte thou synde oute God with thy serchynge? wylt thou attayne to the perfectnesse of the almyghtye? He is hygher then heaven, what wylte thou do? Deper then the hell, how wylte thou then knowe him? his lengthe exceadeth the lengthe of the earthe, and his breadthe the breadth of the see. Thoughe he turne all synnges vp set downe, close them in, or thrust them together, who dare checke him therfore?

For it is he that knoweth the vanitie of men: he seeth their wyckednesse also, thoughe he not them consider it? A vayne bodye vaunteth him selfe, and the sonne of man is lyke a wylde asses foole. If thou haddest nowe a right hert, and stredst vp thyne handes towarde him: yf thou woldest put awaye the wyckednesse whiche thou hast in hande, so that no vngodlynesse dwelte in thy houle: then mightest thou lyfte vp thy face without shame, thou shouldest thou be sure, and haue no nede to feare.

Then shouldest thou forget thy miserie, and thynke no more of it then of the waters that runne by. Then shoulde thy lyfe be as clere as the noone daye, and shynge forthe as the morowning. Then mightest thou haue comforte in the hope that thou hast: and slepe quietly when thou arte layde in. Then shouldest thou take thy rest, and no man to make the afrayde, yea many one shulde set moche by the. But the eyes of the vngodlye shall be consumed, and not escape: their hope shall be misery and sorowe of mynde.

CAPI. XII.

AND Job answered and sayde: Nowe vndoubtedly I se ye are onely men, and that wysdom dye vp you! But I haue vnderstanding as wel as ye, and am no lesse then ye. Yea who knoweth not these thynges? Thus doth he that calleth vpon God, and whome God heareth, is mocked of his neighbour: the godlye and gyltles man is laughed to scorne. Godlynesse is the lampe wrpsed in the hertes of the riche, and is set for them to stomble vpon. The houses of robbers are in welthe and prosperitie, and they that maliciously medle against God, dwell without care: yea God geueth al thynges rychely with his hande. For aske the catell, and they shall enfourme the: the fowles of the ayre, and they shall tell the: Speake to the earthe, and it shall shewe the: Or to the fyshes of the see, and they shall certifye the. Who is he that knoweth not that the hande of the Lorde made all these? In whose hande is the soule of euery lyuynge thynge, and the breth of all men? Haue not the eares pleasure in hearynge, and the mouthe in tastynge the thynge that it eateth? Among olde persones there is wysdome, and amonge the aged is vnderstandynge. Yea with God is wysdome and strength, it is he that hathe counsell and vnderstandynge. If he breake downe a thyng, who can set it vp agayne? If he shutte a thynge, who wyl open it? yf he withholde the waters they dyre vp: If he let them go, they destroye the earthe. With him is strengthe and wysdome: he knoweth both the disceyuer and him that is disceyued.

He carieth awaye the wyse men, as it were a spoyle and bryngeth the iudges out of their wyttes: he looseth the bandes of kynges, and gyrdeth their lopnes with a bande. He leadeth awaye the preestes in to captiuitie, and turneth the mighty vp set downe. He taketh the trouth out of the mouth, and disappointeth the aged of their wysdome. He poureth out confusyon vpon princes, and comforteth them that haue ben oppressed. Lohe what lyeth hyd in darknesse, he declareth it openly: and the derke shadowes of deathe bryngeth he to lyghte. He both increaseth the people, and destroyeth them: he maketh them to multiplye, and driueth them awaye. He chaungeth the hertes of the princes and kynges of the earthe, and disappointeth them: so that they goo wandrynge out of the waye, and grope in the darke without lyghte, staggeryng to and fro lyke dronken men.

CAPI. XIII.

LO, all this haue I seene with myne eye, heard with myne eare, and vnderstande it. Lohe what ye know, that same I know also, neither am I lesse then you. Nouertheles I am purposed to talke with the almyghtye, and my delyte is to commen with God. As for you, ye are mockemasters of lies, & vngodlye physicians all together. Would God ye kepte youre tonge, that ye myghte be taken for wyse men. Therfore heare my wordes, and ponder the sentence of my lyppes.

Wyll ye make answere for God with lyes, and maynteyne him with disceyte? Wyll ye accepte the person of God, & intreate for him? Shall that helpe you, when he calleth you to accompte? Thynke ye to beguyle him, as a man is beguyled? He shal punyshe you, and reproue you, yf ye do secretly accepte anye person. Shall he not make you afrayde, when he sheweth him selfe? Shall not his terrible feare fall vpon you? poore remembraunce shall be lyke vnto ashes, and pryde shall be counted to claye. Holde youre tonges nowe, and let me speake, for there is some thynge come in to my mynde. Wherfore wo I beare my fleshe in my tethe, and my soule in myne handes? Lo, there is neither comforte or hope for me, yf he wyll slee me. But yf I better a reproue myne owne wayes in his syghte, he is euen the same that maketh me bolde: and why? there maye no vnrighteous come before hym. Heare my wordes, and ponder my sayinges with youre eares. Beholde, nowe haue I prepared my iudgement, and knowe that I shall be founde righteous.

Ecclesi. 6. Ecclesiast. Ecclesiast.

Psal. 118. 1. Paralip. 29. Ecclesiast. 10. Luc. 1. 52.

ryghtous. What is he, that wyll goo to lawe with me? For yf I holde my tonge, I shall dye. Onely theise graunte me two thinges, and then wyll I not hyde my selfe from the.

D Withdrawe thyne hande from me, and let not the fearefull dreade of the, make me afrayde. And then sende for me to the law, that I maye answere for my selfe: or els, let me speake; and gyue thou the answere. Howe greate are my wyckednes and synnes? Let me knowe my transgressions and offences. Wherefore hydest thou thy face, and holdest me for thyne enemye? Wylte thou be so cruell and extreme vnto a flyenge leafe, and folow vpon drye stubble, that thou layest so sharply to my charge, and wylte vtterly bringe me for the synnes of my youthe? Thou hast put my foote in the stockes, thou lokest narowly vnto all my pathes, & markest the steppes of my feete: where I must consume lyke a foule carryon, and as a clothe that is motthe eaten.

¶ Iob declareth the lyfe of man, and prophesieth of the resurrection. Hope iudgeth his godly, evil they haue that they woke for.

CAPI. XIIII.

MAn that is borne of a woman, hath but a shorte tyme to lyue, and is full of bytters miseryes. He commeth vp, and falleth awaye lyke a flower. He fleeth as it were a shadowe, and neuer continueth in one state. Iudgest thou it nowe well boone, to open thyne eyes vpon suche one, and to bringe me before the in iudgement? Who can make that cleane, that commeth of an vncleane? No doubt. The dayes of man are shorte, the nombre of his monethes are knowen onely vnto the. Thou hast appointed him his boundes, he can not goo beyonde them. Goo from him, that he maye rest a lytle: vntyll his day come whiche he loketh for, lyke as an hyreling dothe.

If a tree be cut downe, there is some hope yet that it wyll sproute and shote furthe the braunches againe: For though a roote be waxen olde and dead in the grounde, yet when the sacke getteth the sente of water, it wyll budde and bringe forth bowes, lyke as when it was first planted. But man when he is dead, perisheth and consumed awaye, what becommeth of him? The seudes when they be dried vp, and the riuers when they be emptye, are filled againe therowe the flowyng waters of the see: but when man sleepeth, he ryseth not againe, vntyll the heuen perysshe: he shal not wake vp, ne ryse out of his slepe. O that thou wouldest kepe me, and hyde me in the hell, vntil thy wrathe were stylled: and to appointe me a tyme, wherin thou mightest remembre me. Wha a deed man trust againe? All the dayes of this my pylgrymage, am I lokinge when my chaunging shall come, yf thou wouldest but call me, I sholde obeye the: only lyttle not the worke of thyne owne handes.

For thou hast nombred all my goinges, yet be not thou extreme vpon my synnes. Thou hast sealed vp myne offences, as it were in a bagge: but be mercyfull vnto my wickednesse. The mountaynes fall awaye at the laste, the rockes are remoued out of their place, the waters pearse therowe the verye stones by lytle and lytell, the floudes washe awaye the grauell and earthe: Euen so destroyest thou the hope of man. Thou preuaylest againste him, so that he passeth a waye: thou chaungest his face, and puttest him frome the. Whether his children come to worshyp or no, he can not tell: And yf they be men of lowe degree, he knoweth not. Whyle he lyueth, his flesh must haue trauayle: and whyle the soule is in him the must be in sorowe.

¶ Eliphas reproueth Iob because he alowdeth wysdome and pacience to him selfe. He declareth the curse that falleth on the wycked, rehearsyng Iob to be one of that nombre.

CAP. XV.

THen answered Eliphas the Themanite, and sayd: sholde a wyse man answere as the feruence of the wynde, and fill his belye with the wynde of the East? Thou reprouest with wordes that are nothyng worth: and speakest thynges whiche can do no good. As for shame thou passe let alyde, els wouldest thou not make so many wordes before God: but thy wyckednesse teacheth thy mouth, and so thou hast chosen the a craftie tonge. Thyne owne mouthe condemneth the, & not I: yea thyne owne lyppes shape the an answere. Art thou the first man that euer was borne? Or wast thou made before the hylles? hadst thou herd the secrete counsel of God, that al wysdome is so lytle for the? What knowest thou that we knowe not? What vnderstandest thou but we can the same? With vs are olde and aged men, yea suche as haue lined longer then yor fore fathers.

Thynkest thou it a smalle thynge of the consolacions of God? and are they with the a lytyge worde? why doth thyne hert make the so proude? Why standest thou so greatly in thyne owne conceyte? Wherunto loke thyne eyes, that thy mynde is so puffte vp agaynste God, and lettest suche wordes goo out of thy mouth? What is man, that he sholde be clene? what hath he (whiche is borne of a woman) whereby he myght be knowen to be ryghteous? Beholde there is no trust to his sayntes: yea the very heuens are not clene in his sight. How moche more then an abhominable & vile man, whiche drynketh wicke vnrelle lyke water? I wyll tell the, heare me: I wyl shewe the a thing that I knowe, which wise men haue tolde, and hathe not ben hyd frome their fathers: vnto whom only the land was geuen, that no straunger sholde come among them.

The vngodly dispayreth al the dayes of his lyfe, and the nombre of a tyrannes yeres are vnknowen. A fearefull sounde is euer in his eares, and when it is peace, yet feareth he destruction: He bileueth neuer to be delyuered out out of darkenesse, the swerde is alway before his eyes. When he goeth forthe to get his vyttayle, he thynketh playnely that the daye of darkenesse is at hande. Sorowe and carefulnesse make him afrayde, and compasse hym rounde aboute, lyke as it were a kynge with his hoste redye to the battayle. For he hathe stretched out his handes agayns God, and armeth him selfe agaynst the almyghty. He runneth proudly vpō him, and with a thycke necke frabbeth he agaynste him: where as he couereth his face with farnesse, and maketh his bodye well lykynge. Therfore shall his habitacion be in desolate cities, and in houses, whiche no man inhabiteth, but are become heapes of stones.

He shall not be ryche, neither shall his substaunce continue, nor encrease vpon earthe. He shall neuer come out of darkenesse, the flame shall dry vp his braunches, with the blaste of the mouth of God shall he be taken away. He will neyther applye hym selfe to faythfulnesse ne truthe, so sore is he deceyued with vanite.

He shall perysshe afore his tyme be worne out, and his handes shall not be grene. He shall be pluckte of as an vnfrumely grape from the vine, and shall lese his floure fall as the olyue doothe. For the congregacion of hypocrites is vnfrutefull, and the fyre shall consume the houses of suche as are gredy to receyue gyftes. He conceyueth trauayle, he bringeth mischefe, and his body bringeth forth deceyte.

¶ Iob complayne his myserye, sayth that he suffereth more then his wyckednesse hath deserued.

CAPI. XVI.

IOb answered and sayd: I haue ofte times herde suche thynges. Miserable gyuers of comforte are ye, all the sorte of you. Shall not thy vayne wordes come yet to an ende? Or hath thou yet anye more to saye? I coulde speake as ye doo also. But wolde God that youre soule were in my soules stede: then shoulde I heape vp wordes agaynste you, and shake my heed at you. I wolde comforte you with my mouth, and releasse your payne with the swynge of my lyppes. But what shall I doo? For all my wordes, my sorowe will not cease: and thoughe I bolde my tonge, yet will it not departe fro me. And nowe that I am full of payne, and all that I haue destroyed wherof my wyrnesse beare witnesse, there standeth vp a dissemblier to make me answere with lyes to my face. He is angrye at me, he hateth me, and gnasheth vpon me with his teth. Myne enemye scoureth vpon me with his eyes.

They haue opened their mouthes wide vpō me, and smytten me vpon the cheke despytefully, they haue eased their selues thorow myne vnrighte. God hath geuen me ouer to the vngodly, and deliuered me in to the handes of the wicked. I was somtyme in welthe, but sodenly he hath brought me to nought. He hath taken me by the necke, he hath rent me, and set me as it were a marke for him to shote at: he hath compassed me rounde aboute with his darres, he hath wounded my layres, and not spared. My bowelles hath he powred vpon the grounde. He hath geuen me one wounde vpon an other and is fallen vpon me like a gyaunt. I haue sowed a sacke clothe vpon my skynne, and layd my strength in the dust.

My face is swollen with weping, and mine eyes are waxen dymme. Howbeit there is no wyckednesse in my handes, and my prayer is cleane. O erth couer not my blaud, and let my crying finde no rowme. For loo, my witnesse is in heauen, and he that knoweth me, is about in the heyghte. My frendes laughe me to scorne, but myne eye poureth oute teares vnto God. Thoughe a bodye myght pleat with God as one man doothe with an other, yet the nombre of my yeres are come, and I muste goo the waye, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

CAPI. XVII.

MY brethe fayleth, my dayes are shortened. I am hadde at bethes boye. I haue A disceyued no man, yet muste myne eye continue in bytternesse. O deliuer me and set me by the: who shall then be bolde to thruste my handes togyther? Thou hast withholden their hertes fro me vnderstandynge, therfore shall they not be sette vp on hye. He promyseth his frendes parte of his good, but his owne children spende it. He hathe made me as it B were a by worde of the common people. I am his gestynge flocke amonge them. My countenaunce is heuye for very anger, and the membres of my bodye are become lyke a shadowe. Righteous men therfore shal wel consider this, and the innocent shall take parte agaynste the C hypocrite.

The righteous wyll kepe his waye, and he that hathe clenne handes, wyll euer be stronger and stronger. As for you, tourne you and get you hence, for I can not fynde one wyse man amonge you. My dayes are past, my thoughtes are vanyshed awaye, whiche haue vexed myne herte chaungynge the nyght in to daye, and the lyghte in to darckenesse. Thoughe I tary neuer so moche, yet I graue in D my house, and I muste make my bedde in the darcke. I call corruption my father, and the wormes call I my mother and my sister. What helpeth then my longe tarryinge? Or who wyll fulfyll the thynge that I loke for? All that I haue shall goo downe in to the pit, and lye with me in the dust.

¶ Baldad rebuketh the payres of the vnfaythfull and wycked.

CAPI. XVIII.

Then

Then answered Baldad the Suhite, and sayd: when will ye make an end of your wordes? Marke well and consider, we will speake also. Wherefore are we counted as beestes, and reputed so vyle in youre syghte?
Why destroyest thou thy selfe with anger?
Shall the earthe be forsaken, or the stones remoued out of their place because of the?
Shall not the lyghte of the vngodlye be put out? yea the flame of his fyre shall not burne.
The lyght shall be darke in his dwellynge, & his candle shall be put out with him. His presumptuous gayenges shall be kepte in, and his owne counsell shall caste him downe. For his fete shall be taken in the net, and he shall walke in the snare. His sore shall be holden in the trap, and the thirsty shall catche him. The snare is layd for him in the ground, and a pitfall in the ware.

Fearefulnesse shall make him afrayde on every syde, that he shall not knowe, where to get out. Hunger shall be his substaunce, & misfortune shall hange vpon him. He shall eate the strengthe of his skynne, the fyrste borne of death shall eate his members. All his comforte and hope shall be rooted out of his dwelling, they shall bringe him to the king.
Other men shall dwell in his house, whiche now is none of his, and brymstone shall be scattered vpon his habitation. His rotes shall be dried vp beneth, and above shall his harueste be cut downe. His remembraunce shall perysshe from the erth, and his name shall not be prayse in the stretes: he shall be thrust from the lyght into darkenesse, and be caste clene out of the worlde. He shall neyther haue children nor kyns-folkes amonge his people, none any posterite in his countrey: feare and vre shall be astu-nished at his dede. Suche are nowe the dwel-lynges of the wicked, and this the place of him that knoweth not God.

¶ Iob reherseth his myseryes and grefuous payenes. He hopeth vpon the generall resurrection.

CAPI. XIX.

Iob answered and sayde: howe longe will ye vexe my mynde, and trouble me with wor-des? Loo, ten tymes haue ye reproued me:
are ye not ashamed to laughe me to scorne? yf
I go wronge, I go wronge to my selfe. But yf ye will enhaunce your selues agaynste me, and accuse me to be a wycked person because of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe this then, that it is God which hath handled me so violently, and hath compassed me about with his scourges. Beholde, though I crye, yet violence is done vnto me, I can not be herde:
Thoughe I complayne, there is none to gyue sentence with me. He hathe hedged vp my pathe, I can not get awaye, he hathe set darke-nesse in my gate. He hath spoyled me of myne honoure, and taken the crowne awaye fro my hed. He hathe destroyed me on euerye syde, and I am vnbonne: my hope hathe he taken awaye fro me, as it were a tree pluckt vp by the roote. His wrathe is kyndled a-gaynst me, he taketh me as though I were his enemye.

His men of warre came togyther, whiche made theyr waye ouer me, and besieged my dwellynge rounde about. He hathe put my brethren farre awaye fro me, and suche as were of myne acquyntaunce, are become straungers vnto me. Myne owne kynsfolkes haue forsaken me, and my frendes haue put me out of remembraunce. The seruauntes and maydens of myne owne house, take me for a straunger, and I am become as an alcaunte in their syght.

When I call vpon my seruaunt, he gyueth me no answere: no though I praye him with my mouth. Myne owne wyfe maye not abyde my breth, I am layne to speake layre vnto the children of myne owne bodye. Yea the bery-fooles despyse me, and when I am gone from them, they speake euyll vpon me. All suche as were my moste familiars abhorre me: & they whome I loued beste, are coumed agaynste me. My bone hangeth to my skynne, and my flesshe is awaye, onely there is left me the skyn about my teth. Haue pitye vpon me, haue pi-tye vpon me (O ye my frendes) for the hande of the Lorde hathe touched me. Why do ye persecute me as God, and are not satisfyed of my flesshe?

O that my wordes were wrytten, O that they were put in a booke: I wolde God they were grauen with an yron penne in leed or in stone. For I am sure that my redemer liueth, and that I shall ryse out of the earthe in the latter daye: that I shall be clothed agayne with this skynne, and se God in my flesshe.
Yea I my selfe shall behelde him, not with other, but with these same eyes. My reynes are consumed within me, when ye saye: Why do not we persecute him? we haue founde an occasion agaynste him. But beware of the swerde, for the swerde will be auenged of wyckednesse, and be sure that there is a iudge-

¶ Sophar sayeth, that the vnfaythfull, the coue-tous, and the wycked shall haue a shrewd ende.

CAPI. XX.

Then answered Sophar the Naama-thite, and sayde: For the same cause do my thoughtes compell me to answere.
And why? my mynde is tolled here and there.
I haue sufficiently herde thy checkynge and re-proofe, therfore am I purposed to make an-swere after myne vnderstandynge. Knowest thou not this, namely that frome the begynninge (euer sithens the creation of man vpon erth) the prayse of the vngodly hath ben shorte and that the ioye of hypocrites continued but the twynklynge of an eye? Though he be ma-gnified vp to the heuen, so that his hed reucheth vnto the cloudes: yet he perysheth at the last like dong: in so moche that they whiche haue sene him, saye: Where is he? He vanysheth as a dreame, so that he can no more be found, and passeth awaye as a vision in the night

nyghte. So that the eye whiche sawe him before, getteth nowe no syghte of him, and his P place knoweth him no more. His chyldren goo a beggyng, their handes bryng them to sorowe and bruynesse.

From his youth his bones are full of vice,
whiche shall lye downe with him in the earth.
When wickednesse is swete in his mouth, he hydeth it vnder his tonge. That he fauoureth that will he not forsake, but keepeth it close in his throte. The meate that he eateth shall be turned to the poyson of serpentes within his body. The riches that he deuoureth, shall be perforce a gayn, for God shal draw them out of his belly, he shall suche the serpentes heed, a C the adders long shall slee him: so that he shal no more se the ryuers and brookes of hony and butter: But labour shall he, and yet haue no-thynge to eate. Greate trauayle shall he make for ryches, but he shall not ensoye them. And why? he hath oppressed the poore, and not helped them: houses hath he spoyled, & not builded them. His belly could neuer be filled, therefore shall he perysshe in his couetyse. He mu-red so greedyly that he left nothyng behynde:
therfore his goodes shal not prosper. Though he haue store of ryches thynge, yet was he poore, and therfore he was but a wretche on D euery syde.

For though the wycked haue neuer so moche to fyll his belye, yet God shall sende his wrathe vpon him, and cause his battayle to ragyne ouer him: so that yf he flee the yron weapons, he shall be shotte with the stele bowe. The arowe shall be taken forthe, and go oute at his backe, and a glysteryng sweard thorow the gall of him, feare shall come vpon him. There shall no darkenesse be hable to hyde him. And vnkyndled fyre shall consume him, and loke what remaynyeth in his house, it shall be destroyed. The heauen shall declare his wyckednesse, and the earthe shall take parte agaynste him. The substaunce that he hathe in his house, shall be taken awaye and perysshe, in the daye of the Lordes wrath.
This is the portion that the wicked shal haue of God, and the heritage that he maye take for of the Lorde.

C Iob reproueth the prosperite of the wycked, and after declareth their sodayne ruyne & destruction.

CAPL. XXI.

I Ob answered and sayd: O heare my wordes and amende your selues. Suffre me a lytle, &
I may speake also, and then laugh my wor-des to skorne yf ye wyll. Is it with a man that I make this disputacion? Which if it were so, wolde not my spirite be then in sore trouble?
Marke me well, be abashed, & laye your hand vpon your mouth. For when I ponder and consyder this, I am afrayde, and my flesh is smite with feare. Wherfore do wycked men line in healthe and prosperite come to their olde age, and increase in rychesse? Their chyldren chrisom lyue in their syght, and their generacion before their eyes. Their houses are safe from all feare, for the rod of God touche not smyte them. Their bullocke gendreth, & that not out of tyme: their cowe calueth, and is not vnfruteful.

They sende forth their children by flockes, and their sonnes leade the dannce. They beare with them tabrettes and harpes, and reioy-sing at the sweetenesse of musyke of their pleasure. They spende their dayes in welthe: but sodeynlye they goo downe to hell. They saye vnto God:
goo from vs, we desyre not the knowlege of thy wayes. What maner seruice is the almightye, that we shoulde serue him? What profyte shoulde we haue to submyt our selues vnto him? Lo, there is verely no goodnesse in them, therfore will not I haue to do with the counsel of the vngodly. How oft shal the candle of the wicked be put out? how oft chaseth them affliction vpon them? O what sparke shall God geue them for their parte in his wrathe? Yea they shall be as chaffe before the wynde, and as dust that the storme carieth awaye.

And though God saue their chyldren from suche losse, yet will he so rewarde them selues that they shall knowe it. Their owne destruc-cion and misery shall they se with their eyes, and drinke of the fearfull wrathe of the almigh-tye. For what careth he what decommeth of his household after his dethe? whose moneth passe away swifter then an arow. Is as moch then as God hath the hyest power of al, who can teache him any knowlege? One dieth now when he is mightye, and at his ease, riche, and in prosperite: euen when his bowelles are al the fatter, & his bones full of mary. An other dyeth in sorowe and bytternesse, and neuer had good dayes: Lowe layde they bothe alyke in the earthe, and the wormes couer them. But I know what ye thynke, yea & what ye ymaggin agaynste me vnryghteously. For ye saye: where is the Princes palace? Where is the dwellyng of the vngodly? Aske any man that goeth by the waye, and yf ye will not regarde their tokens and deedes, he shall tell you, that the wicked is kepte vnto the daye of destruc-cion, and that the vngodly shalbe brought forth in the daye of wrathe. Who dare reproue him for his wayes to his face? who rewarded him for the vngracyousnesse that he dothe? Yet shall he be brought to his graue, and watche among the heapes of the dead. Then shall he be layne to be buryed amonge the stones of the brooke dyde. All men make folowe him, and there are innumerable gone before him. O howe vayne is the comforte that ye geue me?
Are not youre answeres clerne contrarye to ryght and truthe?

C Eliphas reproueth Iob of vngodlynesse.

CAPL. XXII.

SO Eliphas the Themanite gaue answere and sayd: Maye a man be compared vnto God in wysdome, though he seme to

them selfe for to be lyke hym? What pleasure hath God in that thou art righteous? Or what doth it profyte him, that thy wayes are perfect? Is he aboute to reproue the, and to entre with the in to iudgement? Commeth not this for that greate wyckednesse, and for thyne vngracious dedes, whiche are innumerable? Thou hast taken the pledge from thy brethren for nought, and robbed the naked of their clothynge: To suche as were wery, hast thou geuen no water to drynke, thou hast withdrawen bread from the hungrye: Holde inche one then as vseth violence, wronge, and oppression (doynge all thynge of partialitie, and hauynge respecte of persones) dwell in the lande? Thou hast sente wydowes awaye emptye, and oppressed the poore fatherlesse.

Therfore are thou compassed aboute with snares on euery syde, and so beynge vexed with feare. Shouldest thou then se no darkenesse? Shulde not the water flowe rounde ouer the? Knowe ye not that God is hyer then the heuens, and biholde thou seest that the sterres are so hye, whyle thou therfore sayest: Tushe how shoulde God knowe? Or the his dompsion reache beyonde the cloudes? Tushe the cloudes couer him that he may not se, for he dwelleth in heuen. Well, thou wylte kepe the olde waye that all wycked men haue gone: wiche olde and younge, whose foundation is a runnynge water, which sayd vnto God: go from vs, and after this maner: Tush, what wil the almyghtye do vnto vs? where as he notwithstandynge) filleth their houses with all good. Whose meaninge of the vngodly be farre fro me. For with ioye shall the godly, & with gladnesse shall the innocente it, that their substaunce shal be hewen downe, and their posterite consumed with fyre.

Therfore reconcyle the vnto God, and be content, so shal all thynges prospere with the ryght well. Receyue the lawe at his mouthe, and laye vp his wordes in thyne herte. For yf thou wylt returne to the almyghtye, thou shalt stande faste, and all vnrighteousnesse shall be farre from thy dwellynge: He shall geue the an harueste, whiche in plenty and aboundaunce shall excede the duste of the earthe, and the golde of Ophir lyke vnto stones. Yea the almyghtye his owne selfe shall be thyne harnest, and the heape of thy money. Then shalte thou haue thy delyte in the almyghtye, and lyfte vp thy face vnto God. Then shalte thou make thy prayer vnto him, and he shall heare the, and thou shalte kepe thy promyses. Then, loke what thou takest in hande, he shall make it to prospere with the, and the lyghte shall shyne in thy weyes. For who so humbleth him selfe, hym shall he set vp: and who so loketh meekely, shall be healed. If thou be innocent, he shall saue the: and therowe the vnrighteousnesse of thyne handes shalte thou be deliuered.

¶ Iob affyrmeth that he both knoweth and feareth the power and sentence of the iudge, and sayth that he hath walked in his righteousnes.

CAPI. XXIII.

IOb answered and sayd: My sayinge is yet this daye in bytternesse, and my hande beare amonge my groninges. O that I might fynde him and fynde him: O that I myght come before his seat, to pleade my cause before him, and to fyll my mouth with argumentes, that I myght knowe what answere he wold gyue me: and that I might vnderstande, what he wolde saye vnto me. Will he pleade agaynst me with his great power and strength, or wil he laye him self vtterly vpon me? Oh no, let him not do so with me. But let him gyue me lyke power to go to the lawe, then am I sure to wynne my matter. For though I go before I fynde him not: Yf I come behynde, I can gette no knowlege of him: Yf I goo on the lefte syde to ponder his workes, I can not atteyne vnto them. Agayne, yf I goo on the ryghte syde, he hydeth him selfe that I can not se him: but as for my way he knoweth it, and tryeth me as the golde in the fyre.

Neuertheles my fete kepe his pathe, his byddynge haue I holden, and not gone oute of it: I haue not forsaken the commaundement of his lyppes, but loke what he charged me with his mouthe, that haue I shut vp in my herte. It is he him self alone, who shall counte him backe? He dothe as him lusteth, and bringeth to passe what he wyll. He remembreth me in to my bosome, and many other thynges mo doth he, as he may by his power. This is the cause that I thynke at his presence, so that when I consider him, I am afrayde of him. For in so maner as he is God, he maketh my herte softe: and seynge that he is almyghtye, he putteth me in feare. Thus can not I get out of darcknes, the cloude hathe so couered my face.

¶ Iob descryeth the wycke dare of men, and sheweth what curse belongeth to the wycked.

CAPI. XXIIII.

COnsyderynge then there is no tyme hyd from the almyghtye, how happeneth it that they whiche knowe him, wyll not regarde his dayes? For some there be that remoue other mennes landermarkes: that robbe them of their catell, and kepe the same for their owne: that dryue awaye the asse of the fatherlesse: that take the wydowes oxe for a pledge: that thruste the poore oute of the waye, and oppresse the symple of the worlde togyther. Beholde, the wylde asses in the desarte goo by tymes, as their maner is, to spoyle: Yea the barre wylderneße ministreth foode for their children. They reape the corne felde that is not their owne: and gather the grapes out of his vyneyarde, whom they haue oppressed by violence. They are the cause that so many men are naked and bare, hauynge no clothes to couer them: kepe them from colde: So that when the showers in the mountaynes haue rayned vpon them, and they be all wet,

they haue none other succour, but to hepe them amonge the rockes.

They spoyle the fatherlesse chyldren, and put the poore in pryson: in so moche that they let them goo naked without clothynge, and yet the hungrye beare the sheues. The poore are fayne to labour in thyrsty oyle mylles, yea and to treade in their wyne pacles, and yet to suffre thyrst. The hole cyte cryeth out to the Lorde with syghynge. The soules of the slayne, make their complaynte: But God destroyeth them not for al this, where as they (notwithstandynge) are rebellious & disobedient enemies, which leke not his light and waye, ne turne againe in to his pathe. Timely in the morynge wo they aryse to murther the symple and poore, and in the nyght they go a stealynge.

The eye of the vngodly is lyke the aduoutrer, that wayteth for the darcknesse, and sayth thus in hym selfe: Tush, there shall no man se me, and so he disguyseth his face. In the nyght season they searche the houses, and hyde them selues in the daye tyme, but wyll not knowe the lyght. For as soone as the daye breaketh, the shadowe of deth commeth vpon them, and they goo in horrible darcknesse. The vngodlye is very swyfte. O that his portion also vpon earthe were swyfter then the runnyng water, which suffereth not the fyrman to beholde the fayre and pleasaunt vineyardes. O that they (for the wickednesse whiche they haue wonne) were drawen to the hell soner then snowe melteth at the heate. O that all compassion vpon them were forgotten: that their baynetes were wormes, that they were cleane put oute of mynde, and vtterlye hewen downe lyke an vnfruitful tree. For they mayntayne the barrayn, & make them that they can not beare, and vnto wydowes they do no good. They pluche downe the mightye with their power, and when they them selues are gotten vp, they are neuer without feare, as long as they lyue. And though they might be safe, yet they wil not receyue it, for their eyes loke vpon their owne waies. They are exalted for a litle, but shortly are they gone, brought to extreme pouerte, and taken oute of the waye: yea and diuerely plucke of, as the eares of corne. Is it not so? Who wyll then reproue me as a lyar, and saye that my wordes are nothynge worth?

¶ Baldad proueth that no man is cleane and without synne before God.

CAPI. XXV.

Then answered Baldad the Suhite, and sayd: power and feare is with hym about, that maketh peace, sendynge in his hyghnesse, whose men of warre are innumerable, and whose light ariseth ouer al. But how may a man compared vnto God be iustified? Or how can he be clene, that is borne of a woman? Beholde, the moone shyneth not, & the starres are vncleane in his sight. How much more then man that is but corruption: and the sonne of man, which is but a worme?

¶ Job sheweth that men can not helpe God, and poorely is he by his myracles.

CAPI. XXVI.

IOb answered and sayde: O howe helpest thou the weyke? what comfort giuest thou vnto him that hath no strength? Where is the counsel that thou shouldest geue him which hath no wysdome? Wylt thou to shewe thyne excellent righteousnesse, declare whome hathe thou spoken those wordes? Who made the breth to come oute of the mouthe? The gyauntes and worthyes that are slayne, and lye vnder the worde with their companyons, yea and all they which dwell beneth in the hell are not hyd from him, and the verye destruction selfe can not be hyde oute of his syght. He stretcheth oute the north ouer the empty, and hangeth the earthe vpon nothynge. He byndeth the water in his cloudes, that they fall not downe together. He holdeth backe his seate, that can not be seene, and spreadeth his cloudes before it. The wisdom of God.

He hathe compassed the waters with certayne boundes, vntyll the daye and nyght come to an ende. The verye pyllers of heauen tremble and quake at his reproofe. He stilleth the see with his power, and throwe his wysdome hath he set foorthe the worlde. With his spirite hathe he garnyshed the heauens, and with his hande hathe he wounded the crooked serpente. This is nowe a litle comme of his boyngs. But who is able sufficyently to rehearse his workes? Who can perceyue and vnderstande the thonder of his power?

¶ The constancye and perfectnes of Job, and the parte of the vnfaythfull vnto god.

CAPI. XXVII.

AGayne Job went forthe in his communication, sayinge: as truely as God iuseth (which hathe taken awaye my power fro me) and the almyghtye, that hathe vexed my mynde: my lyppes shall talke of no vanitie, and my tonge shall speake no deceyte, whyle my breth is in me, and as long as the wynde (that God hath geuen me) is in my nostrels.

God forbyd I shoulde graunte youre counsel to be right. So for me, vntyll myne ende come, wyll I neuer goo fro myne innocencye. My righteous dealynge kepe I faste, wherfe I wyll not forsake: my herte shall not reproue me of my dayes. Therfore myne enemye shal be founde as the vngodly, and he that taketh parte agaynste me as the vnrighteous. What hope hathe the hypocryte, though he haue greate good, and though God graut him eyes as often his hertes desire? Wolde God heare him the soner, when he cryeth vnto him in his neue? Hathe he luche pleasure and delyte in the almyghtye, that he dare alwaye cal vpon God? I will teache you in the name of God, and the thynge that I haue of the almyghtye wyll I not kepe from you. Beholde ye stande in your owne conceyte, as thoughe ye knewe all thynges. Wherfore then do ye go about with luche vayne wordes? sayinge: This is the porcion that the wicked hath of God, and the heritage that tyraunces shall receyue of the almyghtye. Yf he get manye children, they shall perysshe with the swerde, and his posterite shall haue scarcenesse of breed. Loke whom he leaueth behynde hym, they shall dye and be buryed, and no man shall haue pyte of his wydowes. Thoughe he haue as moche money as the dust of the earth, and rayment as redye as the claye, he maye well prepare it: but the godlye shall put it vpon him, and the innocent shall deale oute the moneye. His house shall endure as the moth, & as a boothe that the watchman maketh. When the ryche man dyeth, he carryeth nothynge with him: he is gone with the twynklynge of an eye. Destruction taketh holde vpon hym as a water floude, and the tempest stealeth him awaye in the nyghtseason. A vehement wynde carryeth him hence, and departeth: a flownd pluckeh him out of his place. It runneth in vpon him and spareth him not, he maye not escape from the power therof. Then clap men their handes at him, yea and hisse of him when they loke vpon his place.

¶ Iob sheweth that the wysdome of God is vnsercheable.

CAPI. XXVIII.

THere are places where syluer is molten, and where gold is tryed: where yron is dygged oute of the grounde, and stones resolued to metall. The darkenesse shall once come to an ende, he can loke out the ground of all thynges: the stones, the darke, and the dyrdie shadowe. With the ryuer of water parteth he asunder the straunge people, that knoweth no good neyghbourhed: suche as are vnkno, vnmanerly, and vnpleasaunt. He bringeth foode oute of the earth, and that which is vnder, consumeth he with fyre. There is founde a place, whose stones are clere Saphires, and where the clottes of the erth are golde. There is a waye also that the byrdes knowe not, that no vultures eye hathe sene: wherin the proude and hye minded walke not, and where no lyon commeth. There putteth he his hande vpon the flynte rockes, and ouerthroweth the mountaynes. Ryuers flowe oute of the rockes, and loke what is pleasaunt, his eye seeth it. Out of droppes bringeth he great flowdes together: and the thynge that is hydde, bringeth he to lyghte. How commeth a man then by wysdome? Where is the place that men fynde vnderstandynge? Verely no man can tell how worthy a thyng she is, neither is she founde in the lande of the lyuynge. The depe sayeth: she is not in me. The see saith: she is not with me. She can not be gotten for the most fyne golde, neither maye the pryce of her be bought with anye moneye. No wedges of golde, of Ophir, no precious Onix stones, no Saphires maye be compared vnto her. No, neither gold, ne christal, neither swete owres, ne golden plate. There is no thynge so worthy, or so excellet, as is ones to be named vnto her: for perfect wysdome goeth farre beyonde them all. The Topas that commeth oute of Inde, maye in no wyse be lykened vnto her, yea no maner apparell, howe pleasaunt and fayre so euer it be.

Whence then commeth wysdome? & where is the place of vnderstandynge? She is hydde from the eyen of all men, yea & from the foules of the ayre. Destruction and deathe sayen we haue herde tell of her with our eares. But God seeth her waye, and knoweth her place. For he beholdeth the endes of the worlde, and seeth vpon all that is vnder heauen. When he weyed the wyndes, and measured the waters: when he set the rayne in order, and gaue the myghty flouddes a lawe, then dyd he se her, then declared he her, prepared her, and knewe her. And vnto man he sayd: Beholde to feare the Lorde is wysdome: and to forsake euyll, is vnderstandynge.

¶ Iob complayneth of the prosperite of the vngodly, subtelye enterlayenge his frendes of iniurye, because they sayde that Iob suffred accordinge to his deseruynge.

CAP I. XXIX.

MOreouer Iob proceded and wente forthe in his communication, sayinge: O that I were as I was in the monethes paste, and in the dayes when God preserued me: when his lyght shined vpon my heed: when I went after the same lyght, and thynge euen thoswe the darckenesse. As it stode with me, when I was welthye and habde ynought: when God prospered my house: when the almyghtye was with me: when my houssholde folkes stode about me: when my wayes ran ouer with butter, and when the stonye rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle: when I went thoswe the citye vnto the gate, and when they sette me a chayre in the strete: when the younge men (as soone as they sawe me) hyde themselues, and when the aged arose, and stode vp vnto me: when the Princes lefte of their talkynge, and layde their hande to their mouthe: when the myghtye kepte styll their voyce, and when their tonges cleaued to the rofe of their mouthes. When all they that herde me, called me happye: and when all they that sawe me, wytnessed me good. For I deliuered the poore when he cryed, and the fatherlesse that wanted helpe. He that shoulde haue den lost, came me a good worde, and the wydowes harte prayed me. And why? I put vpon me ryghteousnesse, whiche couered me as a garmente, and equitie was my crowne. I was an eye vnto the blynde, and a fote to the lame, I was a father vnto the poore, and and when I knewe not their causes, I sought it oute diligently. I brake the crafftes of the vnrygh-tous, and pluckte the spoyle oute of their teethe.

Therfore I thought verily, that I shoulde haue dyed in my nestе: and that my dayes shoulde haue ben as manye as the sandes of the see. For my roote was spredde oute by the water syde, and the dewe laye vpon my come. Myne honoure encreased more and more, and my bowe was euer the stronger in my hande. Vnto me men gaue eare, me they regarded, and with sylence they tarryed for my counsell. Yf I hadde spoken, they wolde haue it none other wayes, my wordes were so well taken amongst them. They wayted for me as the rayne: and gaped for me, as the grounde bothe to receyue the latter showre. When I laughed, they knewe well it was not earnest: and this testimonye of my countenaunce fell not to the earth. When I agreed vnto their waye, I was the chyefe, and sate as a kynge amonge his seruauntes: Or as one that comforteth suche as be in heuynesse.

CAPI. XXX.

But nowe they that are myne inferiours and yonger then I, haue me in derysyon: yea euen they, whose fathers I wold haue thought scorne to haue set with the dogges of my cattell. The power and strengthe of their handes myghte do me no good, and as for their age, it is spente and paste awaye without anye profyte. For derye mysery and honger, they wente aboute in the wildernesse like wretches and beggers, plucking vp herbes amonge the bushes, and the Iuniper roote was their meate. And when they were dryuen forth, men cryed after them, as it had ben after a theefe. Them dwellynge was beside foule brookes, yea in the caues and dennes of the earthe. Vpon the dyre beth wente they aboute cryenge, and in the bromebylles they gathered them togyther. They were the chyldren of fooles and vylaynes, which are dryuen awaye from the worlde. Now am I their songe, and am become their talking stocke: they abhorre me, they flee farre fro me, and spayne my face with spettle. For the Lorde hathe opened his quyuer, he hathe hyt me, and put my bridle in my mouthe. Vpon my ryghte hande they rose togyther agaynste me, they haue hurte my fete, made awaye to destroye me, and my paths haue they sette warred. It was easye for them to doo me harme, that they neded no man to helpe them. They fell vpon me, as it hadde ben the breakynge in of waters, and came in by heapes to destroye me: Fearefulnesse is tourned agaynste me.

Myne honoure vanysheth awaye more swyftly then wynde, and my prosperitie departeth away lyke as it were a cloude. Therfore is my mynde powred full of heuynesse, and the dayes of my trouble haue taken holde vpon me. My bones are pearsed thorowe in the nyghte season, and my synewes take no reste. With all their power haue they chaunged my garment, and gyrded me therwith as it were with a cote. I am cast as it were claye, and am become like asshes and dust. When I crye vnto the, thou doest not heare me: and thoughe I stande before the, yet thou regardest me not. Thou art become myne enemy, and with thy violent hande, thou takest parte agaynst me.

In tymes past thou dyddest set me vp on hye, as it were aboue the wynde, but nowe haste thou gyuen me a verye sore fall. Sure I am that thou wylt delyuer me vnto death: where as a lodgynge is prepared for all thynge lyuynge. How vse not men to do violence vnto them that are destroyed alreadye: but when hurte is woon, there vse they to helpe. Dyd not I wepe in the tyme of trouble? hadde not my soule compassion vpon the poore? Yet nineteeneth, where as I loked for good, euyll happened vnto me: and where as I waited for lyghte, there came darcknesse. My bowelles in the within me, and take no reste, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpo me. Mourne and lowly came I in, yea and without anye displeasure: I stode vp in the congregation and communed with them. But nowe, I am a companion of Dragons, and a felowe of Ostriches. My skynne vpon me is tourned to blacke, and my bones are brent vp heate: my harpe is tourned to sorow, and my pype to weepynge.

CAPI. XXXI.

I Made a couenaunt with myne eyes, that I wolde not loke vpon a damosell. For howe greate a portion shall I haue of God from aboue? and what enheritaunce frome the almyghtye on hye? Is for the vngodlye, and he that ioyneth him selfe to the company of wicked doers, shall not destruction and mysery come vpon him? Doethe not he se my wayes, and tell all my goynges? Yf I haue dewed vnto vanite, or yf my fete haue runne to disceyte: lette me be weyed in an euen balaunce, that God maye se myne innocencye. Yf so be that I haue withdrawen my foote out of the ryghte waye: yf myne herte hath folowed myne eye syght, yf I haue stayned or defyled my handes: Oh then is it reason, that I sowe, and an other eate, yea that my generacion and ofspryng be cleane rooted oute. Yf myne herte hathe lusted after my neyghbours wyfe, or yf I haue layde wayte at his doore: Oh then lette my wyfe be an other mannes harlot, and let other lye with her. For this is a wyckednesse and synne that is worthy to be punished, yea a fyre that deuyrith shold consume me, and rote oute all my substaunce. Dyd I euer thynke scorne to my ryghte vnto my seruauntes and maydens, when they had any matter agaynst me? But seynge that God wyll syt in iudgement what shall I doo? And for so moche as he wyll nedes vysyt me, what answere shall I gyue him? He that fashyoned me in my mothers wombe, made he not him also? were we not bothe shapen alyke in oure mothers bodyes? When the poore desyreth any thyng at me, haue I denyed it them? Haue I caused ỹ wydowe stande waytynge for me in vayne? Haue I eaten my porcion alone, that the fatherlesse hath had no part with me? for, euen as I grewe vp with me fro my youth, and compassion fro my mothers wombe. Haue I sene any man perysshe thorow nakednesse and want of clothyng? Or any poore man for lacke of rayment, whose lyms thanked me not, because he was warmed with the wolle of my sheepe?

Dyd I euer lyfte vp my hande to hurte the fatherlesse? yea in the gate where I sawe my selfe to be in authoryte: then let myne arme fall fro my shoulder, and myne arme bones be broken fro me the ioynctes. For I haue euer feared the vengeaunce and punyshement of God, and knewe verye well, that I was not able to beare his burthen. Haue I put my truste in golde? Or haue I sayde to the fynest golde of all: thou arte my confidence? Haue I reioyced, bycause my substaunce was greate, and bycause my hande got so moche? Dyd I euer greatly regarde the eyenge of the sonne? or dyd I the goynge downe of the moone in greate reputacion? Hathe my herte medled secretly with any deceyte? Or dyd I euer kysse myne owne hande? that were a wyckednesse worthye to be punyshed, for then shoulde I haue denyed the God that is aboue. Haue I euer reioyced at the hurte of myne enemye? Or was I euer glad that anye harme happened vnto him? Oh no. I neuer suffered my mouthe to be suche a synne as to wysshe him cursynge. Yet they of myne owne housholde sayde: who shall lette vs to haue oure bellye full of his fleshe? I haue not suffered a straunger to lye in the stre̅te, but opened my doores vnto him. Haue I euer vsed anye wicked dede, where thorowe I shamed my selfe before men: or anye abhominacion, that I was fayne to hyde it? For yf I dyd feare greate multytude of people: or yf I dyd holde my peace, and went not out of the dore: O then shoulde I haue ben a hypocrite. Thus haue I quietly spente my lyfe, and not gone out at the dore. O that I had one whiche woulde heare me. Lo, this is my cause. Lette the almyghtye gyue me answere: and let him that is my contrarye parte, fyle me with a lybell. Then shall I take it vpon my shoulder, and as a garlande aboute my heed. I haue tolde the nombre of my goinges, and delyuered them vnto him as to a prynce. But yf case be that my lande crye agaynste me, or that the forowes therof make anye complaynte: Yf I haue eaten the frutes therof vnpayed for, yea yf I haue grieued anye of the plowemen: then lette thystles growe in stede of my whete, and thornes for my barleye.

Here ende the wordes of Job.

Elyu after the other had fynyshed the ꝓcommunycacyon, reproueth them of foolishnes. Age maketh not a man wyse, but the spirite of God.

CAPI. XXXII.

So these thre men wolde speake no more vn A Job, bycause he helde him selfe a ryghteous man. But Elyu the sonne of Barachell the Buzite of the kynred of Ram, was very sore displeased at Job, that he called him selfe iust before God. And vp Jobs thre frendes he was angrye also, bycause they had founde no reasonable answere to ouercome hym.

Nowe tarved Elyu tyll they had ended their communicacion with Job, for why they were elder then he. So when Elyu the sonne of Barachell the Buzite sawe that these thre men were not able to make Job answere, he was myscontent, so that he gaue answere him selfe and sayde: Conydereynge that I am younge, and ye be men of age, I was afrayde, & durste not shewe forthe my mynde, for I thoughte thus within my selfe: It becommeth olde me to speake, and the aged to teache wysdome. Euery man (no doubte) hathe a mynde, but it is the inspiracion of the almyghtye that geueth vnderstandynge. All men are not wyse, neither dothe euerye aged man vnderstande the thynge that is lawfull. Therfore wyll I speake also (in so farre as I maye be herde) and wyll shewe you myne opinion. For when I had wayted tyll ye made an ende of your talkynge, and herde oure wysdome, what argumentes ye made in your communicacion: yea when I had diligently pondred what ye sayde: I founde not one of you that made any good argument agaynste Job, or that directly coulde make answere vnto his wordes: lest ye shoulde prayse your selues to haue founde oute wysdome: bycause it is God that hath caste hym oute, and no man. Neuertheles seynge he hathe not spoken vnto me, therfore wyll not I answere hym as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, that they coulde not make answere, nor speake one worde) but sythe ye wyll not speake, standynge styll lyke domme men, and makinge no answere: I haue a good hope for my parte to shape him an answere, and to shewe him my meanyng. For I am full of wordes, and the spirite that is within me, compelleth me.

Beholde, I am as the newe wyne, whiche hath no vente, and bursteth the newe vessels in sunder. Therfore wyl I speake, that I may haue a vente: I wyll open my lyppes, and make answere. I wyll regarde no maner of persone, no man wyll I spare. For yf I wold go aboute to please men, I knowe not howe sone my maker wolde take me awaye.

Elyu sheweth wherin Job offendeth. With God maye we not stryue, nor curyously serche oute his workes.

CAPI. XXXIII.

Wherfore heare my wordes (O Job) and herken vnto me all that I wyll saye: Beholde, I wyll open my mouthe, and my tonge shall speake oute of my chawes. My herte shall ordre my wordes a ryght, and my lyppes shall talke of pure wysdome. The spirite of God hath made me, and the breth of the almyghty hath geuen me my life. Yf thou canst, then geue me answere: prepare thy self to stande before me face to face. Beholde before God am I eue as thou, for I am fashioned and made euen of the same moulde. Therfore thou nedest not be afrayde of me, neither nedeth thou to feare, that my autoryte shalde be heuy for the. Nowe hast thou spoken in myne eares, and I haue herd the voyce of thy wordes: I am clene without any faute, I am innocent, and there is no wyckednes in me. But lo, he hath pyked a quarell agaynste me, and taketh me for his enemye: he hath put my fote in the stockes, and loketh narowlye vnto all my pathes. Beholde, vnto thefe vnreasonable wordes of thyne wyll I make answere.

Shalde God be reproued of man? Why doest thou then stryue agaynst him bicause he giueth the no accomptes of all his doinges? For when God doth ones commaūde a thing there shold no man be curious, to serche whether it be right. In dreames and vysions of the nyght season (when slombring commeth vpon men that they fall a slepe in their beddes) he openeth them in the eares, he informeth the and sheweth them playnely that it is he whiche withdraweth man from euill, deliuereth him from pryde, keepeth his soule from destruction, and his lyfe from the swerde. He chasteneth him with sycknesse, and bringeth him to his bed: he layeth sore punishment vpon his bones, so ꝑ his lyfe may awaye with no ioye, and his soule abhorreth to eate anye dayntye meat: in so moche that his body is clene consumed awaye, and his bones appere no more. His soule drawyth on to destruction, and his lyfe to deth. Now if there be a messenger (one amonge a thousande) sent for to speake vnto man, and to shewe him the ryght waye: then the Lorde is mercyfull vnto him, and saythe: He shall be deliuered, that he fall not downe to destruction, for I am sufficiently reconcyled. Then his fleshe (whiche hath ben in misery & trouble) shal be as it was in his youth, for yf he yelde him self vnto God, he is gracious, and sheweth him his countenaūce ioyfully, and rewardeth man for his ryghteousnesse. Suche a respecte hathe he vnto men. Therfore let a man confesse (and saye) I offended, but he hathe chastened and reformed me: I dyd vnryghteously, neuertheles he hath not recompenced me therafter. Yea he hath deliuered my soule from destruction, and my lyfe that it seeth the light. Lo, thus worketh God alwaye with man, that he keepeth his soule from perysshynge, and letteth him enioye the lyghte of the iyuynge. Marke well (O Job) and heare me: holde the styll, vntyll I haue spoken. But yf thou hast any thynge to saye, then answere me, and speake, for thy answere pleaseth me. Yf thou hast nothing, then heare me, & holde thy tonge, so shall I teache the wysdome.

¶ Eliu prayseth the iustice of God, whiche iudgeth the worlde, and gouerneth all.

CAP. XXXIIII.

Eliu proceadinge forth in his communication, sayd: heare my wordes (O ye wyse men) herken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge. For lyke as the mouth taseth the meates, so the eare proueth and discerneth the wordes. As for the iudgement, let vs seke it out amonge our selues, that we may knowe what is ryght. And why? Job hath sayde: I am ryghteous, but God bothe me wronge. I muste nedes be a lyer, thought my cause be ryghte, and vyolently I am plaged where as I made no faute: where is there suche one as Job, that drynketh vp scornefulnesse like water? whiche goeth in the company of wycked doers, and walketh with vngodly men? For he sayethe: Thoughe a man be good, yet is he nought before God. Therfore herke vnto me ye that haue vnderstandyng.

Farre be it from God, that he shold medle with wickednes: and farre be it from the almighty, that he shold medle with vnrighteous dealyng: but he rewardeth the workes of man and causeth euery man to fynde accordinge to his wayes. For sure it is that God condemneth no man wrongfully, and the iudgement of the almighty is not vnryghteous. Who ruleth the earthe in his stede? Or whome hathe he set to gouerne the hole worlde? To whome hathe he geuen his hert, for to drawe his spirite and breth vnto him? All fleshe shall come together vnto nought, and all men shall turne againe vnto earthe. Yf thou now haue vnderstandyng, heare what I say, and harken to the voyce of my wordes.

Maye he be made whole, that loueth no ryghte? Yf thou were a very innocent man, shuldest thou then be punyshed? For he is cal the same, that knoweth the rebellyous kynges, and sayth to Princes: Vngodlye men are ye. He hath no respecte vnto the personnes of the lordlye, and regardeth not the ryche more then poore. For they be all the worke of his handes. In the twynklynge of an eye shall they be slayne: and at mydnyght, when the people and the tyraunte rage, then shall they perishe and be taken awaye without handes. And why? his eyes loke vpon the wayes of man, and he seeth all his goynges. There is no darkenesse nor thycke shadowe, that can hyde the wycked doers from hym. For no man shal be suffered to go in to iudgement with God.

Many one, yea innumerable hathe he punyshed, and setteth other in their steades for he knoweth their euyll and darke workes, therfore shall they be outerowed. They that were in the stede of Heare, deaire lyke vnhodlye men. Therfore turned they backe starcke rowtly and vnfaythfully from him, and wold not receyue

his wayes. In so moch ꝑ they haue caused ꝑ poore of the poore to come vnto him, ꝑ nowe he heareth the complaynte of suche as are in necessitie. Yf he kylleth and geueth pardon, who will iudge or condemne? But yf he hyde away his countenaunce, who will turne it about agayne, whether it be to the people or to any man? For the wyckednesse and fynne of the people, he maketh an hypocrite to reygne ouer them. For so moche then as I haue begon to talke of God, I will not dyssyr ꝑ.
Yf I haue done a mysse, enfourme me: yf I haue wrong, I will leaue of. Wilt thou not geue a reasonable answere? Art thou a-frayed of any thinge, seynge thou begannest first to speake, and not I? For els the men of vnderstandinge and wysdome, that haue here me, myght saye: What canst thou speake?
As for Job he hath neyther spoken to the pur pose nor wysely. O father, let Job be well tryed, because he hath turned him selfe to the wycked: yea aboue his synnes he hathe blas-phemed, which offence he hath done euen before vs, in that he stryueth against God with his wordes.

¶ Elyhu declareth that God punysheth and reformeth.

CAPI. XXXV.

ELiu spake more ouer, and sayde: Thinkest thou it ryght that thou sayest: I am ryghteous before God? Seinge thou sayest so, howe wost thou knowest it? What thinge hast thou more excellent then I, that am a synner? Therfore will I geue answere vnto the and thy frendes: loke vnto the heauen, and behold it: consyder the cloudes, how they are hyghe then thou. Yf thou synnest, what doest thou vnto him? Yf thyne offences be many, how greuest thou his kyndnes?
Yf thou be ryghteous: what gyuest thou him?
Or what receyueth he of thy handes? Of in-che an vngodly persoune as thou, and of the sonne of man that is righteous as thou pre-tendest to be: there is a great crye and complaynt made by them that are oppressed with violence, yea euery man complayneth vpon ꝑ cruell arme of tyrannes. For suche one neuer sayeth: Where is God that made me? he that shyneth vpon vs, that we myght praise him in the nyght? Which gyueth vs more vnder-stadinge, then he doeth the beastes of the earth, and teacheth vs more then the foules of heauen.

Yf any suche complayne, no man gyueth answere, and that because of the wyckednesse of proude tyrannes. But yf a man call vpon God, doeth not he heare hym? Doeth not the almyghty accepte his crye? When thou speakest then, shulde not he pardon the, yf thou open thy selfe before him, and put thy trust in him? Then dieth he no violence in his wrathe, neyther hath he pleasure in curyous and depe inquysitions. Therfore hathe Job opened his mouth but in vayne, and fo-lysshly hath he made so many wordes.

¶ Elyhu declareth wherfore God punysheth and reformeth.

CAPI. XXXVI.

ELiu proceded forthe in his talkynge and sayde: Holde the styll a lytle, and I shal shewe the, what I haue yet to speake on Gods behalfe. I will open vnto the yet more of myne vnderstanding, and proue my maker ryghteous. True are my wordes, and no lye:
and the knowledge, wherwith I argue against the, is perfect. Beholde, God casteth not away the myghty, for he him selfe is migh ty in power and wysdome.

He for the vngodly, he preserueth them not but helpeth the poore to their right. He turneth not his eyes away from the ryghteous he setteth vp kynges in their trone, and setteth them, so that they alwaye sit therin.
But yf they be layde in prison and cheynes, or bounde with the bondes of pouertie: then sheweth he them their workes and dedes and the synnes wherwith they haue vsed cruell violence.

He with punyshyng and muttering of the, roundeth them in the eares, warneth them to leaue of from their wyckednesse, and to amende. Yf they now will take hede and be obedient, they shall weare out their dayes in prosperitie, and their yeres in pleasure & ioye.
But yf they will not obeye, they shall go the rowe the swearde, and perysshe, or they be ware. As for suche as be feyned, dissemblers, and hypocrites, they heape vp wrath for them selues: for they call not vpon him, thoughe they be his prysonners. Thus their soule perysheth in ioye, and their lyfe with the condemned. The poore delyuereth he out of his straytnesse, and comforteth suche as be in ne-cessitie and trouble. Euen so shall he bere the (yf thou wilt be content) frome the bottomlesse pytte that is beneth: and yf thou wilt holde the quyete, he shall fyll thy table with plentye.

Neuertheles thou hast condemned the iud-gement of the vngodly, yea euen suche a iud-gement and sentence shalt thou suffre. For the shall not thy cause be stylled with crueltie, nor pacyfyed with many gyftes. Hath God ordyned then, that the glorious lyfe of the, and all suche myghty men, shulde not be put downe? Prolonge not thou the tyme, tyll there come a nyght for the, to set other people in thy steade. But beware that thou turne not aside to wyckednesse and synne, whyche hytherto thou hast chosen more then misery.
Behelde, God is of a myghty hyghe power: Where is suche a gyuer and lawe gy-uer as he? Who shal reproue him of his way?
Who wyll saye vnto hym: thou hast doone wrong?

Consyder how great and excellent his wor-kes be, whome all men loue and prayse: yea and wonder at him, and yet they se hym but afarre

afarre of. Beholde, so great is God, that he passeth our knowledge, neyther are we able to come to the experience of his yeres. He turneth the water to small droppes, he diryueth his cloudes togither for to rayne, so that they powre downe and drop vpon men. He cā spreade out the cloudes (a couering of his tabernacle) and cause his lyght to shyne vpon them, and to couer the bottome of the see. By these thinges gouerneth he his people, and giueth the aboundaunce of meate. In the turnyng of an hande he hydeth the lyght, and at his commaundement it commeth agayne. The ryding vp therof sheweth he to his frendes and to the cattell.

¶ Elihu proueth that the wysdome of god is vnsearchable.

CAP. XXXVII.

AT this, my hert is astonyed, and moued out of his place. Heare then the sounde of his voyce, and the noyse that goeth out of his mouth. He gouerneth euery thinge vnder the heauen, and his lyght reacheth vnto the ende of the worlde. A roaring voyce followeth him: for his glorious maiestie gyueth suche a thondre clap, that (though a man heare it) yet maye he not perceyue it afterwarde. It gyueth an horrible sounde, whē God sendeth out his voyce: greate thinges doth he, which we can not comprehende. Whē he commaundeth the snowe, it falleth vpon the earth: As sone as he gyueth the rayne a charge, forthwith the showers haue their strength and fall downe. He sendeth feare vpon euery man, that they myght knowe their owne workes. The beastes creepe into their dennes, and take their reste. Oute of the South, commeth the tempeast, and colde oute of the North.

B At the byeth of God, the frost commeth, and the waters are shed abrode. The cloudes don their labour in gyuyng moysture, the cloudes powre downe their rayne. He distributeth also on euery syde, according as it pleaseth him to deale oute his workes, that they maye do, what so euer he commaundeth them throwe the hole worlde: whether it be to punyth any lande, or to doo good vnto them, that feare hym.

C Herken vnto this (O Job) stande styll, and consydre the wonderous workes of God. Knowe thou of counsell with God, when he doeth these thinges? When he causeth the lyght to come forthe of his cloudes? Knowe thou of his counsell when he spreadeth out the cloudes? Hast thou the perfect knowledge of his wonders? and howe thy clothes are warme, whē the lande is styll thrown the South wynde? Hast thou helped hym to spreade out the heauen, which is to loke vpon, as it were cast of cleare metall? Teache vs what we shall saye vnto hym, for we are vnmete because of darknesse.

Shal it be tolde him what I saye? Shuld D a man speake, or shulde he hope it herin? For euery man seyth not the lyght, that he kepeth cleare in the cloudes, which he clenseth when he maketh the wynde to blowe. Golde is brought out of the North, but the prayse and honoure of Gods feare commeth frome God him selfe. It is not we that can fynde out the almyghty: for in power, equitie, and righteousnesse, he is hyther than can be expressed. Seyth then that euery body feareth him, why shulde not all wyse men also stande in awe of him?

CAPI. XXXVIII.

THen spake the Lorde vnto Job oute of the storme, and sayde: what is he that hydeth his mynde with folyshe wordes? Gyrde vp thy loynes lyke a man, for I will question the, se thou gyue me a direct answer. Where wast thou, when I layde the foundacions of the earth? Tell playnly yf thou haste vnderstandynge. Who hath measured it, knowest thou? Or, who hath spred the lyne vpō it? Whereupon stande the pyllers of it? Or, who layd the corner stone? Where wast thou when the morninge starres praysed me togyther, and all the children of God sange for triumphauncy? Who shut the see with doores, when it brake forth as a childe out of his mothers wombe? When I made the cloudes to be a couerynge for it, and swadled it with the darcke? When I gaue it thy commaundement, makynge boltes and barres for it, sayenge: Hytherto shalt thou come, but no further, and here shalte thou laye downe thy proude and hyghe wawes? Hast thou geuen the morninge his charge, (as soone as thou wast borne) and shewed the daye spryngе his place, that it might take holde of the corners of the earthe, and that the vngodly myghte be shaken out? Their tokens and weapons, hast thou turned lyke clay, and set them vp againe as the chaungynge of a garment. Yea thou hast spared the vngodly of their lyght, and broken the arme of the proude. Camest thou euer into the grounde of the see? or hast thou walked in the lowe rowmes of the deepe? Were the gates of death bene opened vnto the? or hast thou sene the doore of euerlastyng darknesse? Hadde thou also perceyued how broade the earth is? Tell me yf thou hast knowledge of all, then shewe me where lyght dwelleth, and where darckenesse is: that thou mayste bringe the vnto their quarters, yf thou canst tell the wayes to their houses.

Knewest thou (when thou wast borne) how olde thou shuldest be? Wentest thou euer in to the threasuries of the snowe? or hast thou sene the secrete places of the hayle, whiche I haue prepared against the tyme of trouble, against the tyme of battayle and warre? By what what waye is the lyght parted, and the heate brought out vpon the earthe? Who diuideth the abundaunce of waters into pypes, or who maketh a waye for the stormy weather, that it watereth and moysturyth the drye and barren grounde: to make the grasse growe in places where no body dwelleth, and in the wyldernesse where no man remayneth? Who is the father of rayne? Or who hathe begotten the droppes of dewe? Out of whose wombe came the yse? Who hathe gendred the coldenes of the ayre? that the waters are as harde as stones, and lye congeled about the bye.

Hast thou brought the seuen starres together? Or art thou able to breake the circle of heauen? Canst thou bringe forth the morninge starre in the conuenient tyme, and conuey them home agayne? Knowest thou the course of heauen, that thou mayst set vp the ordinaunce thereof vpon the earthe? Moreouer, canst thou lyfte vp thy voyce to the cloudes, that they maye powre downe a greate rayne vpon the? Canst thou thonder also that they maye goo their waye, and be obedient vnto the, sayenge: Lo here are we? Who putteth sure wysdome in secrete vnderstandinge? who numbreth the cloudes in wysdome? Who powreth the vehement waters of the heauen? Who turneth the clottes to dust, and them to be cloddes agayne?

Hunteth thou the praye for the Lyon? or fedest thou his whelpes lyenge in their denne and lurkynge in their couches? Who puttyeth meate for the rauen, when his younge crye vnto God, and flytter about for want of meate?

CAPL. XXXIX

Knowest thou the tyme when the wylde goates bringe forth their younge among the stony rockes? Or layest thou waite when the hyndes bere to fawne? reckenest thou the monethes after they engender, that thou knowest the tyme of their beringe? or when they bye bowne, when they cast their younge, and when they are delyuered of their trauayle and payne? Doth their younge growe vp, and wax great thorow good feadynge? Who letteth the wylde asse go fre? or who loseth the bondes of the wylde? Vnto whom I haue geuen the wylderneselle to be their house, and the barrayne lande to be their dwellynge place. That they maye gape at no fayre for the multitude of people in the cytie, neyther regarde the crienge of the oppressour: but take their pasture about the mountaynes, and seke after the grene grasse.

Wyll the Vnicorne be so tame as to do the seruice, or to abyde styll by the cradle? Canst thou bynde the vnicorne vnto the furrowes, to make him plowe after the make? Vnicorne.

leyes? Wylte thou trust him (because he is stronge) or commyt thy labour vnto him? Wylt thou beleue him, that he will bringe home the corne? or to carye anye thinge vnto the barne?

The Estryth (whose fethers are fayrer then the wynges of the hayrowe hawke) when he hath layde his Egges vpon the grounde, he bredeth them in the dust, and forgetteth that so that they myght be troaden with fete, or broken with some wylde beast. So harde is he vnto his younge, as though they were not his, & laboureth in vayne without any feare. And that because God hathe taken wysdome from him, and hath not geuen him vnderstandinge. When his tyme is, he mounteth vp on hyghe, and careth neyther for horse ne man.

Hast thou geuen the horse his strength, or clothed him to bow downe his neck with feare that he letteth him selfe be dryuen forth lyke a grashopper, where as the stoute neyenge that he maketh, is fearfull? He breaketh the grounde with the hoofes of his fete cherefully in his strength, and runneth to mete the harnessed men. He layeth aside all feare, his stomach is not abated, neyther starteth he back for any sworde. Though the quyuers rattle vpon him, though the speare and shylde glytter: yet fulfilleth he in fearsely, and beateth vpon the grounde. He feareth not the noyse of the trompettes, but as sone as he heareth the shawmes blowe, cryeth (sayth he) for he smelleth the batayle a farre of, the noyse, the Capitaynes and the shoutinge.

Commeth it thorow thy wysdome, that the Sothsayer flyeth towarde the South? Doth the Egle mount vp, and make his nest on hye at thy commaundement? He abydeth in the stonye rockes, and vpon the hygde toppes of harde mountaynes, where no man can come. From thence maye he beholde his praye, and loke farre about with his eyes. His younge are fed with bloude, and where any dede body lyeth, there is he sodenly.

Moreouer, God spake vnto Job and sayde: Can he that stryueth with the almyghty, be at rest? Shulde not he which disputeth with God, geue him an answere? Job answered the Lorde, sayenge: Beholde, I am to vyle a persone, to answere the, therfore will I laye my hande vpon my mouthe. Once or twyse haue I spoken, but I wyll laye no more.

¶ Job humbleth him selfe vnto God, the dyuersytie of an Elephant. Leuiathan.

CAPL. XL.

Then spake the Lorde vnto Job out of the storme, and sayde: Gyrde vp thy loynes lyke a man, and tel me the thinges that I wyll aske the. Wilte thou dissolue my iudgement? Or wylte thou condemne me, that thou thy selfe mayst be made righ-

ryghteous? Is thyne arme then lyke the arme of God? Clotheth thy voyce suche a sounde as his doth? Then arme thy selfe with thyne owne power, aryse, decke the in thy holy araye, powre out the indignation of thy wrathe: se that thou cast downe all the proude, loothe thou maiest all suche as be stubbourne, to ouerthrowe: Treade all the vngodly vnder thy fete cast them downe into the myre, & couer their faces with darcknesse: Then will I confesse also, that thyne owne ryght hande hath saued the.

Beholde, Behemoth (whom I made with the) whiche eateth hay as an oxe: lo, howe stronge he is in his loynes, and what power he hath in the muscell of his bodye. He spreadeth out his tayle lyke a Cedre tree, all his synnes are knyt. His shynnes are lyke pypes of brasse, his ryggebones are lyke staues of yron. First when God made him, he ordeyned the wylderneesse for him, that the mountaynes shulde geue him grasse, where all the beastes of the felde take their pastyme. He lyeth among the reedes in the fennes, the frunces ouer de him with their shadowe, and the wylowes of the broke couer him rounde about. Lo, without any labour may he dryuen out of the hole floude, and suppe of Jordan without any trauayle. Who darre laye hand vpon him openly, and vndertake to catche him? Or, who darre put a hooke thorow his nose, and laye a snare for him?

Darest thou drawe out Leuiathan with an angle, or bynde his tongue with a snare? & canst thou put a synge in the nose of him? or bore his chaftes thorow with a naule? Will he make many layre wordes with the, (thinkest thou) or flatter the? Will he make a couenaunt with the? Or art thou able to compell him to be vnto the continual seruice? Wylt thou take thy pastyme with him as with a birde? or gyue him vnto thy maydens, that thy companyons maye hew him in peces, to be parted amonge the marchaunt men? Canst thou fyll the net with his skynne, or the fysh panner with his heed? Darest thou laye hande vpon him? It is better for the to consider what harme myght happen the there thorow, and not to touche him. For when thou thinkest to haue holde vpon him, he shall beware the: Euery man also that seyth him, shall go backe. And why? there darre none be so bolde, as to rayse him vp.

¶ Of the same Leuiathan wherof is mencyoned in the chapter afore.

CAPI. XLI.

Who is able to stande before me? Or, who hathe gyuen me anye thinge afore hand, that I am bounde to rewarde hym agayne? All thynges vnder heauen are myne. I feare him not, whether he threaten or speke fayre. Who spyeth hym vp, and strypeth him out of his clothes? Or who taketh hym by hyt of his bridle? Who openeth the doore of his face? for he hathe horrible teth rounde about. His bodye is couered with scales, as it were with shyldes, locke in, kepte, and well compact together. One is so ioyned to an other, that no ayre can come in. Yea one hangeth so vpon an other, and sticketh so together, that they can not be sundered. His neesing is lyke a glysteringe fyre, and his eyes lyke the morninge shyne. Oute of his mouthe go torches and fyre brandes, out of his nostrels there goeth a smoke, lyke as out of an hote sething pot. His breth maketh the coles burne, the flamme goeth out of his mouth. In his necke remayneth strength, and before his face sorow is couered to glad vnto. The membres of his body are ioyned so strayte one to an other, and cleue so fast together, that he can not be moued.

His hert is as harde as a stone, and as fast as the stythye that the hammer man smyteth vpon. When he goeth: the myghtyest of all are afrayed, and the waues heup. If he drawe out the sweard, there maye neyther speare, ne dyrt place, abyde him. He setteth as moch by a strawe as by yron, and as moche by a rotten stocke as by metall. He flyeth not away for him that bendeth the bowe: and as for flynge stones, he careth as moche for stubble as for them. He counteth the hammer no better then a strawe, he laugheth them to scorne that shaketh the speare. He treadeth the golde in the myre lyke the sharpe potsherdes. He maketh the depe to sethe and boyle lyke a pot, and stereth the see together lyke an oynttment. The waye is lyght after him, the depe is his walkynge place. Vpon earthe is there no power lyke vnto his, for he is so made that he feareth not. If a man will consyder all lyghte thinges, this same is a kynge ouer all the children of pryde.

¶ The repentaunce of Job. He prayeth for his frendes, and his goodes are restored double vnto him.

CAPI. XLII.

Then Job answered the Lord, and sayd: I knowe that thou hast power ouer all thinges, and that there is no thought hyde vnto the. For who can hyde his owne counsell so secrete, but it shall be knowen? Therfore haue I spoken vnwyselye, seynge suche thinges are so hygh, and passe myne vnderstandynge. O herken then vnto me alle, & let me speake: answere vnto the thinge that I will aske the. I haue gyuen diligent eare vnto the, and now I se the with myne eyes. Wherfore I gyue myne owne self the blame, and take repentaunce, in the dust and asshes.

Nowe when the Lorde had spoken these wordes vnto Job, he sayde vnto Eliphas the Themanite: I am displeased with the and thy two frendes, for ye haue not spoke the thyng that is ryght to right before me, lyke as my seruaunt Job hath done. Therfore take seuen oxen and seuē rammes, and go to my seruaunt Job, offer vp also for your selues a brentofferinge: and let my seruaunt Job praye for you. Him will I accepte, and not take with you after your folyshnesse: in that ye haue not spoken a thing which is right, lyke as my seruaunt Job hath done.

So Eliphas the Themanite, Baldad the Suhite and Sophar the Naamathite wente their waye, and dyd accordinge as the Lorde commaunded them. The Lorde also accepted the persone of Job, and the Lorde louered him vnto Job, when he prayed for his frendes: Yea the Lorde gaue Job twyse as much as he had afore.

And there came there vnto him all his brethren, all his sisters, with all them that had bene of his acquaintaunce afore, and ate bred with him in his house, wondringe at him, & comfortynge him ouer all the trouble, that the Lorde had brought vpon him. Euery man gaue him a shepe and a Jewell of golde.

And the Lorde made Job ryther then he was before: for he hadde fourteene thousande shepe, fiue thousande Camels, a thousande yoke of oxen, and a thousande asses. He had children also, seuen sonnes and three doughters. The first called Daye: the seconde Kasuerte: the thirde All plentreuthes. In all the lande were none founde so fayre, as the doughters of Job, & their father gaue them enheritaunce amōg their brethren. After this lyued Job fourtye yeres, so that he sawe his children, and his childrens children to the fourth generacion. And so he dyed, beynge old and of a perfect age.

PSAL. I.

BLessed is ꝑ man, that goeth not in the counsell of the vngodly: that abydeth not in the way of synners, and sytteth not in ꝑ seate of the skornefull.

But delyteth in the law of the Lorde, and exercyseth hym selfe in his lawe, daye and nyght.

Suche man is lyke a tree planted by the waterysyde, that bryngeth forthe fruite in due season.

His leaues shall not fall of, and what soeuer he doth, shall prospere.

Not so with the vngodly, not so but they are lyke dust, which the wynde scatereth away from of the grounde.

Therfore the vngodly shall not stande in ꝑ iudgement, neyther the synners in the congregation of the righteous.

For the Lorde alloweth the way of the righteous, but the waye of the vngodly shall perysh.

PSAL. II.

WHy do the heythen grudge? why do the people ymagyne vayne thinges?

The kynges of the earthe stande vp, & the rulers are come togither, against ꝑ Lorde and against his annoynted.

Let vs breake their bondes asunder, and cast awaye their yocke from vs.

But he ꝑ dwelleth in heauen, shall laughe them to scorne: the Lorde him selfe shal haue them in derysion.

The shal he speake vnto them in his wrath and vexe them in his sore displeasure.

Yet haue I set my kynge vpon my holy hill of Sion.

As for me, I will preache the lawe, whereof the Lorde hath sayde vnto me: Thou arte my sonne, this daye haue I begotten the.

Aske of me, and I shall gyue the the heythen for thyne enheritaunce, yea the vttermoste partes of the worlde for thy possession.

Thou shalt rule theym with a rod of yron, and breake them in peces lyke an earthen pot sell.

Be wyse now therfore, O ye kynges, be warned, ye that are iudges of the earth.

Serue the Lord with feare, and reioyse before hym with reuerence.

Embrace instruction, least the Lorde be angry, and so ye perysh from the right waye.

For his wrath shalbe kyndled shortly: blessed are all they that put their trust in hym.

PSAL. III.

¶ A Psalme of Dauid when he fledde from the face of Absalom.

WHy are they so many, O Lord, that trouble me? a great multitude are they that ryse against me.

Many there be that saye of my soule: there is no helpe for hym in God. Selah.

But thou, O Lorde, art my defender, my worshyp, and the lyfter vp of my head.

I call vpon the Lorde with my voyce, and he heareth me out of his holy hill. Selah.

I layde me downe and slept, but I rose vp agayne, for the Lorde sustayned me.

I am not afrayd for thousandes of people, that compasse me rounde about.

Aryse Lorde, and helpe me, O my God: for thou smytest all myne enemyes vpon the cheke bones, and breakest the teth of the vngodly.

Helpe belongeth vnto the Lorde, therfore let thy blessynge be vpon thy people.

PSAL. IIII.

¶ To the chaunter in Neginoth, a Psalme of Dauid.

HEare me when I call, O God of my righteousnes: thou that comfortest me in my trouble: haue mercy vpon me, & herken vnto my prayer.

O ye sonnes of men, how longe will ye blaspheme myne honour? why haue ye such pleasure in vanitie, and seke after lyes? Selah.

Knowe this, that the Lord dearely maynteyneth his sayntes: and when I cal vpon the Lorde, he heareth me.

Be angry, but synne not: comune with your owne hertes vpon your beddes, and remember your selues. Selah.

Offre the sacrifice of righteousnes, and put your trust in the Lorde.

There be many that saye: who will do vs any good? Lorde lyft vp vpon vs the lyght of thy countenaunce.

Thou reioycest myne herte, though their encrease be greate both in corne and wyne.

Therfore will I lay me downe in peace, and take my rest: for thou Lorde only settest me in a sure dwellynge.

PSAL. V.

¶ To the chaunter vpon Nehiloth, a Psalme of Dauid.

HEare my wordes (O Lord) consyder my callynge.

Marke the voyce of my petition, my kynge and my God, for vnto the, will I make my prayer.

Heare my voyce by tymes (O Lord) for early in the morninge will I get me vnto the, & that with diligence.

For thou art not the God that hath pleasure in wyckednesse, there may no vngodly personne dwell with the.

Suche as be euell may not stande in thy

I sight

ſight, thou art an enemye vnto all wycked doers.

Thou deſtroyeſt the lyers: the Lord abhorreth the bloudeth vnthy and diſceytful.

But I will come into thy houſe, euen vpon ℣ the multitude of thy mercye: and in thy awe will I worſhyp towarde thy holy temple.

Leade me (O Lorde) in thy ryghteouſneſſe becauſe of myne enemyes, and make thy way playne before me.

Rom. iii. b For there is no faythfulneſſe in their mouthes: they diſſemble in their hertes: their throte is an open ſepulchre: with their tongues they deſceyue.

Punyſh them (O God) that they may peryſh in their owne ymagination: caſt the out becauſe of the multitude of their vngodlynes for they rebell againſt the.

Agayne, let all them that put their truſt in the, reioyce: let them euer be gruyage of thãkes, becauſe thou defendeſt them: that they which loue thy name, may be ioyfull in the.

For thou Lorde gyueſt thy bleſſinge vnto ℣ righteous: and with thy fauorable kyndnes thou defendeſt him, as with a ſhyld.

PSAL. VI.

℣ To the chaunter by Neginoth vpon Sheminith, a pſalme of Dauid.

℟ LOrd rebuke me not in thyne angre: chaſtẽ me not in thy heuy diſpleaſure.

Haue mercy vpon me (Oh Lorde) for I am weake: Lorde heale me, for all my bones are vexed.

My ſoule alſo is in great trouble, but Lord how longe?

Turne the (Lorde) and deliuer my ſoule: ſaue me for thy mercyes ſake.

For in deathe no man remembreth the: Oh who will gyue the thankes in the hell?

℣ I am wery of grouynge: euery nyght waſh I my bedde, and water my couche with my teares.

My countenaunce is chaunged for very inward griefe, I conſume away, I haue ſo many enemyes.

Awaye from me all ye wycked workes, for the Lorde hathe heard the voyce of my weepynge.

The Lorde hath herde myne humble petitiõ the Lorde hath receyued my prayer.

All myne enemyes ſhalbe confounded and ſore vexed: they ſhalbe turned backe and put to ſhame, and that right ſone.

PSAL. VII.

2. Reg. xxi. ℣ Meditation of Dauid, whiche he ſange for the wordes of Chus the ſonne of Jemini.

℟ O Lorde my God, in the do I truſt: ſaue me from all them that purſue, and deliuer me.

Leaſt he hanche vp my ſoule lyke a Lyon, and teare it in peces, whyle there is none to helpe.

O Lorde my God, yf I haue wrought any ſuch thinge, yf there be any vnrighteouſnes in my handes.

If I haue rewarded euyll vnto them that dealt frendly with me, or hurt the that without cauſe are myne enemyes.

Then let myne enemy perſecute my ſoule, & take me: yea let him treade my lyfe downe in the earth, & laye myne honour in the duſt. Selah.

℣ Stande vp (Lorde) in thy wrathe, lyft vp thy ſelfe ouer the furyous indignacõ of myne enemyes: aryſe vp (for me) in the vengeaũce that thou haſt promyſed.

That the congregacion of the people maye come about the, for their ſakes therefore lyft vp thy ſelfe agayne.

The Lorde is iudge ouer the people: iudge me then (O Lorde) accordinge to my righteouſnes and innocency. ℣

Let the wyckednes of the vngodly come to an ende: but mayntayne thou (O) righteous God, that tryeſt the very hertes and reynes.

My helpe commeth of God, which preſerueth them that are true of hert.

God is a righteous iudge, and God is euer threatninge.

If men will not turne, he bathe whet his ſwerde: he hathe bent his bowe and made it redy. ℣

He hath prepared him the weapõs of death, and ordeyned his arowes to deſtroye.

Beholde, he trauayleth with myſchefe, he hathe conceyued vnhappyneſſe, and brought forth a lye.

He hath graue and dygged vp a pyt, but he ſhall fall him ſelfe into the pyt that he hathe made.

For his vnhappyneſs ſhall come vpon his owne hed, and his wyckednes ſhal fall vpon his owne pate.

But I will gyue thankes vnto the Lorde for his righteouſnes ſake, and will prayſe the name of the moſt hyghe Lorde.

PSAL. VIII.

℣ To the chaunter vpon Githith, a pſalme of Dauid.

℟ O Lorde our gouernour: howe wonderfull is thy name in all the worlde? howe excellent is thy glory about the heauens? ℣

Out of the mouth of the very babes & ſucklynges thou haſt ordeyned prayſe, becauſe of thyne enemyes, that thou myghteſt deſtroye the enemy and the auenger.

For I conſydre thy heauens, euen ℣ worcke of thy fingers: the moone and the ſtarres whiche thou haſt made.

What is man, that thou art ſo myndefull of hym? either the ſonne of man that thou viſiteſt him? ℣

After thou haddeſt for a ſeaſon made him lower then the aungels, thou crowneddeſt him with honour and glory.

Thou

Thou hast set him above the workes of thy handes: and thou hast put all thinges in subiection vnder his feete.

All sheepe and oxen, yea the beastes of the field,

The foules of the ayre, the fishe of the sea, and what so euer walketh thorow the wayes of the sea.

O Lorde our gouernour, how wonderfull is thy name in all the worlde!

PSAL. IX.

¶ To the chaunter vpon Almuth Laben, a Psalme of Dauid.

I Will geue thankes vnto the (O Lorde) with my hole herte, I will speake of all thy meruelous workes.

I will be glad, and reioyce in the, yea my songes will I make of thy name, O thou most highe.

Because thou hast driuen myne enemyes backe, they were discomfyted, and perished at thy presence.

For thou hast maynteyned my right & my cause: thou sittest in the throne that art the true iudge.

Thou rebukest the heythen, and destroyest the vngodly, thou puttest out their name for euer.

The enemyes swordes are come to an ende, thou hast ouerthrowen their cyties, their memorial is perished with them.

But the Lorde endureth for euer, he hath prepared his seate vnto iudgement.

He gouerneth the worlde with righteousnes, and ministreth true iudgement vnto the people.

The Lorde is a defence for the poore, a defence in the tyme of trouble.

Therefore they that know thy name, put their trust in the: for thou (Lorde) neuer forsakest them, that seke the.

Prayse ye the Lorde, which dwelleth in Sion, shewe the people of his workes.

And why? he maketh inquisition for their bloude, and remembreth them: he forgetteth not the complaynt of the poore.

Haue mercy on me (O Lorde) consydre the trouble that I am in amonge myne enemyes, thou that lyftest me vp from the gates of death.

That I may shewe all thy prayses within the gates of the doughter of Sion, and reioyce in thy sauyng health.

But the heythen are sunchen downe in the pyt that they made: in the same nette which they spred out priuely, is their owne foote taken.

Thus the Lorde is knowne to execute true iudgement, when the vngodly is trapped in the workes of his owne handes, Selah.

The wycked shall be turned vnto hell, and all the heythen that forget God.

But the poore shall not alwaye be out of remembraunce, the patient abydinge of such as be in trouble shal not perish for euer.

Ryse Lorde, let no man haue the vpper hande, let the heythen be condemned before the.

O Lorde set a ꝑ scolemaister ouer them, that the heythen maye knowe them selues to be but men. Selah. ꝑ Plague and hurt.

¶ There is no Tyde in the Hebrue.

Here the Hebrues begyn the tenth Psalme.

Why art thou gone so farre of, O Lorde? why hyde thy selfe in tyme of trouble? א

Whyle the vngodly hath the ouerhande, ꝑ poore must suffre persecution.

O that they were taken in the ymagmacio which they go about.

For the vngodly maketh boost of his owne hertes desire, the couetous blesseth him selfe, and blaspemeth the Lorde.

The vngodly is so proude and full of imagnacion, that he careth not: neyther is God before his eyes. ב

His wayes are alway filthy, thy iudgemētes are farre out of his sight, he defyeth all his enemyes.

For he saith in his hert: Tush, I shall neuer be cast downe, there shal no harme happē vnto me.

His mouthe is full of cursinge, fraude and deceyte: vnder his tongue is trauayle and sorow.

He sitteth lurkyng in the gardens, that he maye priuely murther the innocent, his eyes are set vpon the poore. ג

He lyeth in awayte secretly, as it were a lyon in his denne.

He lurketh that he maye rauysh the poore, yea to rauysh the poore, when he hathe gotten him in to his net.

Then smyteth he, then oppresseth he & casteth downe the poore with his auauntes.

For he sayeth in his hert: Tush, God hath forgotten, he hath turned away his face, so that he will neuer se it. ד

Ryse O Lorde God, lyft vp thyne hande, and forget not the poore.

Wherfore shoulde the wycked blaspheme God and saye in his hert: tush, he careth not for it.

Thou seyst, for thou considrest the mysery and sorow.

The poore geueth him selfe ouer into thy hād and committeth him vnto the, for thou art ꝑ helper of the frendelesse. ה

Breake thou the arme of the vngodly and malicious, stretche out the wickednesse wherof he hath done, that he maye perysh.

The Lorde is kynge for euer, the heythen shall perysh out of his lande. ו

Lorde, thou hearest the desirous longynge of the poore: thou hast his hert in sure, that thyne eare herkeneth thereto.

Helpe the fatherlesse and poore vnto their right, that the vngodly be no more exalted vpon earth. ז

To the chaunter, of Dauid.

1 IN the Lorde put I my trust: how wyll ye then saye to my soule: that she shoulde flee as a byrde vpon your hyll?

2 For lo, the vngodly haue bent their bowe, and made redy their arowes in the quyuer, that they maye prively shote at them, which are true of hart.

3 The very foundacion haue they cast downe what can the righteous then do with all?

4 But the Lorde is in his holy temple, the Lordes seate is in heauen: his eyen loke vpon, his eye lyddes beholde the children of men.

5 The Lorde seyth both the righteous & vngodly, but who so delyteth in wickednes, him his soule abhorreth.

6 Upon the vngodly he shal rayne snares, fire brymstone, storme and tempest: this rewarde shall they haue to drynke.

7 For the Lorde is righteous, and he loueth righteousnes: his countenaunce beholdeth the thinge that is iust.

To the chaunter vpon Sheminith, a Psalme of Dauid.

1 HElpe Lorde, for there is not one saynct more: very few faythful are there amog the children of men.

2 Euery man talketh lyes to his neyghboure, they do but flatter with their lyppes and dissemble in their herte.

3 O that the Lorde wolde rote out all disceyt full lyppes, & the tongue that speaketh prowde thinges.

4 Which saye: our tonge shall be puissaunte we are they that ought to speake, who is lorde ouer vs?

5 Now for the troubles sake of the oppressed and because of the complaynte of the poore, I will aryse (sayth the Lorde) I wil helpe the and set them at rest.

6 The wordes of the Lorde are pure wordes: euen as the syluer, which frome earth is tryed and purifyed seuen tymes in the fire.

7 Kepe them therfore (O Lorde) and preserue vs from this generation for euer.

8 For when vanite and vylanes getteth the ouerhande amonge the children of men, al are full of the vngodly.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

1 HOw longe wilt thou forget me, Lorde? for euer? how longe wilt thou hyde thy face from me?

2 How longe shall I seke counsell in my soule? how longe shall I be so vexed in myne herte? howe longe shall myne enemy tryumphe ouer me?

3 Consydre, and heare me, O Lorde my God lyghten myne eyes, that I slepe not in death.

4 Lest myne enemy saye: I haue preuayled against hym: for yf I be cast downe, they that trouble me shall reioyce at it.

5 But my trust is in thy mercye, and my hart is ioyfull in thy sauinge health.

1 THe folysh bodyes saye in their hertes: there is no God.

2 The Lorde loked downe frome heauen, vpon the children of men, to se yf there were anye that wolde vnderstande and seke after God.

3 But they are all gone out of the waye, they are all together become vnprofitable: there is none that doth good, no not one.

4 Howe can they haue vnderstandinge, that worke mischefe, eatynge vp my people, as it were bred, and call not vpon the Lorde?

5 Therfore shall they be brought in great feare for God standeth by the generacion of the righteous.

6 As for you, ye haue made a mocke at þ counsell of the poore, because he putteth his trust in the Lorde.

Pre-

Preserue me (O God) for in the do I trust.

I have sayde vnto the Lorde: thou art my God, my goodes are nothinge vnto the.

All my delyte is vpon the sayntes that are in the earth, and vpon suche lyke.

But they that runne after an other, shall have great trouble.

Their sacrifices of bloude will not I offre, neyther make mencion of their name in my mouth.

The Lorde him selfe is my good and my portion, thou mayntaynest myne enheritaunce.

The lot is fallen vnto me in a fayre ground yea I have a goodly heritage.

I wyl thanke the Lorde for geuyng me warnynge: my reynes also have chastened me in the nyght season.

Afore hande sawe I God allwayes before me, for he is on my righthande, that I shulde not fal.

Therfore dyd my hert reioyce, and my tongue was glad, my flesshe also shall rest in hope.

For thou shalte not leaue my soule in hell, neyther shalt thou suffre thy sayntes to se corruption.

Thou haste shewed me the wayes of lyfe: thou shalt make me full of ioye with thy countenaunce.

At thy right hande there is pleasure & ioye for euermore.

PSAL. XVI.

A prayer of Dauid.

HEare the right (O Lorde) consyder my complaynte: herken vnto my prayer, þ goeth not out of a fayned mouth.

Let my sentence come forth frome thy presence: and loke vpon the thinge that is equall.

Thou hast proued and vysited myne hert in the nyght season: thou haste tryed me in the fyre: and hast founde no wickednesse in me: for I vtterly purposed that my mouth shulde not offende.

Because of þ wordes of thy lyppes, I have kept me frome the workes of men: in þ waye of the murtherer.

Ordre thou my goynges in thy pathes: that my fote steppes slippe not.

For vnto the I crye: heare me O God: enclyne thyne eares to me: and herken vnto my wordes.

Shewe thy marueylous louynge kyndnesse, thou that sauest them which put their trust in the, frome suche as resist thy right hand.

Kepe me as the balle of an eye, defende me vnder the shadow of thy wynges.

Frome the vngodly that trouble me, from myne enemyes which compasse my soule round about.

Which mayntayne their owne wetchydnesse with oppression, and their mouth speaketh prowde thinges.

They lye in wayte in our way on euery syde turnyng their eyes vnto the grounde.

Lyke a Lyon that is gredy of his pray, and as it were a Lyons whelpe lurkynge in his denne.

Aryse Lorde, disapoynte him and cast him vnder: deliuer my soule with thy swerde frō the vngodly.

Frome the men of thy hande (O Lord) frō the men of the worlde, which have their portion in this lyfe: whose belyes thou fyllest with thy treasure.

They have children at their desire, and leaue the rest of their substaunce for their babes.

But I will beholde thy presence in righteousnesse: and when thy glorye appeareth, I shall be satisfyed.

PSAL. XVII.

After the Hebrues. xviii.

To the chaunter of Dauid seruaunt of the Lord whiche spake vnto the Lorde the wordes of this songe, on the daye in whiche the Lorde deliuered him frome the handes of all his enemyes, and frome the hande of Saul, and sayde.

I Wyll loue the (O Lorde) my strength.

The Lorde is my succour, my refuge, my Sauioure: my God, my helper in whom I trust: my buckler, the horne of my helth, and my protection.

I will prayse the Lorde, and call vpon him, so shall I be safe from myne enemyes.

The sorowes of death compassed me, & the bydes of vngodlynes made me afrayed.

The paynes of helle came about me, & snares of death toke holde vpon me.

Yet in my trouble I called vpon the Lorde, and complayned vnto my God.

So he herde my voyce out of his holy temple, and my complaynte came before him, euē into his eares.

Then the earthe trembled and quaked, the very foundacions of the hylles moued & were remoued, because he was wroth.

There went a smoke out of his nostrelles & a consumynge fire out of his mouth, so that coles were kyndled at it.

He bowed the heauens and came downe, & it was darcke vnder his fete.

He rode vpon the Cherubyns and dyd flie: he came flyenge with the wynges of the wynde.

He made darknes his pauylyon roūdabout him, with darcke water and thicke cloudes to couer him.

At the brightnes of his presence the cloudes remoued, with hayle stones and coles of fyre.

The Lorde also thondred out of the heauē and the hyegth gaue his thonder with hayle stones and coles of fyre.

He sent out his arowes and scatered them, he cast forth lyghtenynges, and destroyed them.

The springes of waters were seen, and the foundacions of the rounde worlde were discouered at thy chydyng (O Lorde) at the blas-stynge and byeth of thy displeasures.

He sent downe from the heygth to fetche me, and toke me out of great waters.

He deliuered me from my stronge enemyes, and from my foes which were to migh ty for me.

They preuented me in the tyme of my trou ble, but the Lorde was my defence.

He brought me forth also into liberte: and deliuered me, because he had a fauoure vnto me.

The Lorde shall rewarde me after my rygh teous dealynge, & accordinge to the cleannesse of my handes shall he recompence me.

For I haue kept the wayes of the Lord: & haue not behaued my selfe wickedly against my God.

I haue an eye vnto all his lawes, and caste not out his commaundementes from me.

Vncorrupt will I be before him, and will eschew myne owne wickednes.

Therfore shall the Lorde rewarde me af ter my righteous dealynge, and according vn to the cleannesse of my handes in his eye sight.

With the holy thou shalt be holy, & with the innocent thou shalt be innocent.

With the cleane thou shalt be cleane, and with the frowarde thou shalt be frowarde.

For thou shalt saue the poore oppressed, and bringe downe the hyghe lokes of the proude.

Thou lightest my candle, O Lord my God thou makest my darkenes to be light.

For in the I can discomfort an host of men: yea in my God I can leape ouer the wall.

The waye of God is a perfect waye: the wordes of the Lorde are tryed in the fyre: he is a shylde of defence, for all them that trust in him.

For who is God, but the Lorde? Or, who hath any strength, but our God?

It is God that gyrded me with strength, & made my waye vncorrupt.

He hath made my feete lyke hertes feete, & set me vp on hyghe.

He teacheth myne handes to fight, and ma keth myne armes to breake euen a bowe of stele.

Thou hast gyue me the defence of thy helth thy righthande vpholdeth me, and thy louing correction maketh me great.

Thou hast made rowme enough vnder me for to go, that my foote stypped shoulde not slyde.

I will folowe vpon myne enemyes, and take them: I will not turne till they be dis comforted.

I will smyte them, they shal not be able to stande, but fall vnder my feete.

Thou hast gyrded me with strength vnto ꝓ battell, thou hast throwen them al downe vn der me, that rose vp against me.

Thou hast made myne enemyes to tourne their backes vpon me, thou hast destroyed the that hated me.

They cryed, but there was none to helpe them: yea euen vnto the Lorde, but he herde them not.

I will beate them as small as the dust clay in the wynde, I will cast them out as the clay in the stretes.

Thou shalt deliuer me from the stryuinges of the people, thou shalt make me the head of the heythen.

A people whome I haue not knowen shall serue me.

As sone as they heare of me, they shal obey me, but the straunge children dissemble with me.

The straunge children are waxen olde, and go halting out of their pathes.

The Lorde liueth: and blessed be my hel per, praysed be the God of my helth.

Euen the God which seyth that I be auen ged, and subdueth the people vnto me.

It is he that deliuereth me from my cruell ennemyes: thou shalt lyft me vp from them that ryse against me, thou shalt rydd me from the wycked man.

For this cause I will gyue thankes vnto ꝓ (O Lorde) amonge the gentyles, and synge prayses vnto thy name.

Great prosperite gyueth he vnto his kynge and sheweth louynge kyndnesse vnto Dauid his annoynted, yea and vnto his sede for euermore.

PSAL. XVIII.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

The heuens declare the glorye of God, and the dery firmament sheweth his handy worke.

One daye telleth an other, and one nyght certifieth an other.

There is neyther speache ne language, but their voyces are herde amonge them.

Their sounde is gone oute in to all lan des, and their wordes in to the endes of the worlde.

In theym hathe he set a tabernacle for the Sunne, which commeth forth as a brydgrom out of his chambre, and reioyceth as a gyaunt to run his course.

It goeth forth from the one ende of the hea uen, and runneth about vnto the same ende a gayne, and there maye no man hyde him selfe from the heate therof.

The lawe of the Lorde is a perfect lawe, it quickeneth the soule.

The testimony of the Lorde is true, and gy ueth wysdome euen vnto babes.

The statutes of the Lorde are righte, and reioyce the herte: the commaundement of the Lorde is pure, and giueth lyght vnto the eyes.

The feare of the Lorde is cleane, and endu reth for euer: the iudgementes of the Lorde are true and righteous all together.

More pleasaunt are they then golde, yea then moche fyne gold: sweeter then hony and the hony combe.

Their thy seruaunt kepeth, and for keping of them there is great rewarde.

Who can tell, how oft he offendeth? clense thou thou me fro my secrete faultes.

Kepe thy seruaunt also frome presumptuous synnes, lest they get the dominio ouer me: so shall I be vndefyled, and innocent frome the greate offence.

Yea the wordes of my mouthe, and the meditacion of my herte shall be acceptable vnto the, o Lorde, my helper and my redemer.

Graunte the thy hertes desyre, and fulfyll all thy mynde.

We will reioyse in thy helthe, and triumphe in the name of the Lorde our God: the Lorde perfourme all thy petitions.

Nowe knowe I, that the Lorde helpeth his annoynted, and wyll heare him frome his holye heauen: myghtye is the helpe of his ryghte hande.

Some put theyr trust in charettes, and some in horses: but we wyll remembre the name of the Lorde ouer God.

They are broughte downe and fallen, but we are risen and stande vpryght.

Saue Lorde, and helpe vs, o kyng, when we call vpon the.

Lorde, howe ioyfull is the kynge in thy strengthe! O howe exceadynge glad is he of thy sauynge helthe!

Thou hast graunted him his hertes desyre, and hast not put hym from the requeste of his lyppes. Selah.

For thou hast preuented him with lyberall blessynges: and sette a crowne of golde vpon his heed.

He asked lyfe of the, and thou gauest him a longe lyfe, euen for euer and euer.

His honoure is great in thy sauynge helthe: glorye and greate worshyp shalte thou laye vpon him.

For thou shalte gyue hym euerlastynge welthe: and make him glad with the ioye of thy countenaunce.

And why? because the kynge putteth his truste in the Lorde: and in the mercye of the hyest he shall not mysscarye.

Lette all thyne enemyes fele thy hande: let thy ryghte hande fynde out all them that hate the.

Thou shalte make them lyke a fyre ouen in tyme of thy wrathe: the Lorde shall destroye theym in his displeasure, and the fyre shall consume them.

Their frute shalte thou roote oute of the earthe: and their sede frome the chyldren of men.

For they purposed myschefe agaynst the: and ymagined suche craftes, as they were not able to perfourme.

Therfore shalte thou put them to flyght: with thy stringes thou shalt make redy thyne arowes agaynst the faces of them.

Be thou exalted, Lorde, in thyne owne strengthe: so wyll we synge and prayse thy power.

¶ To the Chaunter vpon Aieleth, of the morninge harte, a Psalme of Dauid.

My God, my God: why hast thou forsaken me? the wordes of my complaynte are farre fro my helthe.

O my God, I crye in the daye tyme, but thou heerest not: and in the nyght season also I take no reste.

Yet dwellest thou in the sanctuarye, o thou worshyp of Israel.

Oure fathers hoped in the: they trusted in the, and thou dyddest deliuer them.

They called vpon the, and were holpen: they put their trust in the, and were not confounded.

But as for me, I am a worme and no man: a derye skorne of men and the outecaste of the people.

All they that se me, laughe me to skorne: they shoote out their lyppes, and shake their heedes.

He trusted in God, let him deliuer him: let him helpe him, yf he will haue him.

But thou art he that toke me out of my mothers wombe: thou wast my hope, whē I hanged yet vpon my mothers breastes.

I haue ben lefte vnto the, euer sythens I was borne: thou arte my God, euen fro my mothers wombe.

Go not fro me then, for trouble is harde at hande, and here is none to helpe me.

Great bulles are come about me: fat oxen close me in on euery syde.

They gape vpon me with their mouthes: as it were a rampynge and rorynge lyon.

I am poured oute lyke water: all my bones are oute of ioynte: my herte in the myddest of my bodye, is euen lyke melteynge wax.

My strengthe is dryed vp lyke a potsherde, my tonge cleaueth to my gommes: and thou hast broughte me in to the duste of deathe.

For dogges are come about me: the counsell of the wycked hathe layde syege agaynste me.

They perced my handes and my fete, I might haue told all my bones: but they stode lokynge and lokynge vpon me.

They haue parted my garmentes among them, and cast lottes vpon my vesture.

But

But be not thou farre fro me, o Lord: thou art my succour, haste the to helpe me.

Deliuer my soule from the swerde, my darlynge from the power of the dogge.

Saue me from the lyons mouth: and heare me bitwene the hornes of the vnicornes.

So will I declare thy name vnto my brethren: in the middest of the congregation will I prayse the.

Prayse the Lord ye that feare him: magnifie him all ye seed of Jacob, and let all the seed of Israel feare him.

For he hath not despised ne abhorred the miserable state of the poore: he hath not hyd his face fro me, but when I called vnto him, he herde me.

I will prayse the in the great congregation, and performe my vowes in the sight of al the that feare the.

The poore shall eate and be satisfied: they that seke after the Lord shal prayse him: our herte shall lyue for euer.

All the endes of the worlde shall remembre them selues, & be turned vnto the Lorde: and all the generations of the heythen shall worshyp before him.

For the kingdom is the Lordes: and he shal be the gouernour of the heythen.

All suche as be fatte vpon earthe: shall eate also and worshyp: all they that lye in the dust and lyue so hardly, shall fall downe before him.

The seed shall serue him, and preache of the Lorde for euer.

They shall come and declare his righteousnesse: vnto a people that shal be borne, whom the Lorde hath made.

Though I shulde walke now in the valey of the shadowe of deth, yet I feare no euyll, for thou art with me: thy staffe and thy shepheke comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me agaynste myne enemyes: thou annoyntest my heed with oyle, and fillest my cup full.

PSAL. XXV.

Of David.

BE thou my iudge, o Lorde, for I walke innocently: my trust is in the Lorde, therfore shall I not fall.

Examin me, o Lord, and proue me: enserche my reynes and my herte.

For thy louynge kyndnesse is before myne eyes: and I walke in thy truthe.

I syt not amonge vayne persons, and haue no felawshyp with the deceytfull.

I hate the congregacion of the wicked, and I will not syt amonge the vngodly.

I wasshe my handes with innocencye, O Lorde, and so go I to thyne aultre.

That I may shewe the voyce of thy prayse and tell of all thy wonderous workes.

Lorde, I loue the habytacyon of thy house, and the place where thy honour dwelleth.

Destroye not my soule with the synners: me thy lyfe with the bloudthurstye.

In whose handes is wyckednesse, and their ryght handes is full of gyftes.

But I will walke innocently: wilt thou me, and be mercyfull vnto me.

My fote standeth ryght: I will prayse the Lorde in the congregacions.

PSAL. XXVI.

Of David.

THe Lorde is my lyghte and my helthe: whome then shalde I feare? the Lorde is the strength of my life, for whom then shalde I be afrayde?

Therfore when the wycked, euen myne enemies came vpon me to eate vp my fleshe, they stombled and fell.

Though an hoste of men were layde against me, yet shal not my herte be afrayd: and though there arose vp warre against me, yet will I put my trust in him.

One thing haue I desyred of the Lord, which I will require: namely, that I maye dwell in the house of the Lorde all the dayes of my life, to beholde the fayre beautie of the Lorde, and to visit his temple.

For in tyme of trouble he hath hyde me in his tabernacle, yea in the secrete place of his dwellyng hath he kepte and set me vp vpon a rocke of stone.

And nowe hathe he lyfte vp my head aboue myne enemyes, that compasse me roundeaboute.

Therfore will I offer in his dwellynge the oblacion of thankesgyuyng: I will syng and speake prayses vnto the Lorde.

Herken vnto my voyce, O Lorde, when I crye vnto the: haue mercye vpon me and heare me.

My hert speaketh vnto the: my face seketh the: yea Lorde thy face will I seke.

Hyde not thou thy face fro me: cast not thy seruaunt of in displeasure.

Thou art my succour, leaue me not, neither forsake me, o God my sauioure.

For my father and my mother haue forsake me: but the Lorde hath taken me vp.

Shewe me thy waye, O Lorde: and leade me in the ryght pathe, because of myne enemyes.

Deliuer me not in to the wyles of myne aduersaryes: for there are false wytnesses risen vp agaynst me: and they ymagen mischefe.

Neuertheles I beleue verily to se the goodnesse of the Lorde, in the lande of the lyuynge.

Tary thou the Lordes leysure: be stronge, let thyne herte be of good comfort, and waite thou styll for the Lorde.

PSAL. XXVII.

After the Hebrues. xxvi.

Of David.

VNto the will I crye, O my stronge rocke: thynche no skorne of me, lest yf thou make that as though thou herdest not, I become lyke them that go downe in to the pytte.

Heare the voyce of my humble peticyon, when I crye vnto the: and hold vp my handes towarde thy holy temple.

Plucke me not awaye amonge the vngodly and wicked doers, whiche speake frendly to their neighbours, but ymagen mischefe in their hertes.

Rewarde them accordynge to their dedes, and wyckednesse of their owne inuencyons.

Recompence them after the workes of their handes: paye them that they haue deserued.

For they regarde not the workes of the Lorde, ne the operacion of his handes: therfore shall he breake them downe, & not builde them vp.

Praysed be the Lorde: for he hath herde the voyce of myne humble petition.

The Lorde is my strengthe and my shylde: my hert hoped in him, and I am holpen: therfore my hert daunceth for ioye, and I will syng prayses vnto him.

The Lorde is the strengthe of his people: he is the defender and sauyoure of his anoynted.

Helpe

Helpe thy people, geue thy blessynge vnto thyne enheritaunce: fede them and set them vp for euer.

PSAL. XXVIII.

Geue the Lorde.

¶ A Psalme of Dauid.

A Geue vnto the Lorde, O ye myghtye: geue vnto the Lorde worshipp & strengthe.

Geue the Lorde the honoure of his name: bowe youre selues to the holye maiestie of the Lorde.

It is the Lorde that commaundeth the waters: It is the glorieous God that maketh the thonder, it is the Lorde that ruleth the se.

B The voyce of the Lorde is myghtye in operation: the voyce of the Lorde is a glorieous voyce.

The voyce of the Lorde breaketh the Cedre trees: yea the Lorde breaketh the Cedars of Libanus.

He maketh them to skyp lyke a calfe: Libanus and Sirion lyke a yong Vnycorne.

The voyce of the Lorde lyghteth the flames of fyre: the voyce of the Lorde shaketh the wyldernesse: yea the Lorde shaketh the wyldernesse of Cades.

C The voyce of the Lorde moueth the hyndes: and discouereth the thycke bushes: in his temple shall euery man speake of his honoure.

The Lorde syttyth aboue the waterfloode: & the Lorde remayneth a kyng for euer.

D The Lorde shall geue power vnto his people, the Lorde shall geue his people the blessynge of peace.

PSAL. XXIX.

¶ A Psalme and songe of the dedycacion of the house of Dauid.

A I Wyll magnifye the, O Lorde, for thou hast set me vp: and not suffred my foes to triumphe ouer me.

O Lorde my God, I cryed vnto the: & thou hast healed me.

Thou Lorde hast brought my soule out of hell: thou hast kepte my lyfe, where as they go downe to the pyt.

Synge prayses vnto the Lorde (o ye sayntes of his) geue thankes vnto him for a remembraunce of his holynesse.

B For his wrath endureth but the twynckling of an eye, and his pleasure is in life: heuynesse maye well endure for a nyghte, but ioye commeth in the mornyng.

C As for me, when I was in prosperite, I sayde: I shall neuer fall more.

And why? thou Lorde of thy goodnes hadst made my hyll so stronge.

But as soone as thou turnedst thy face fro me, I was troubled in feare.

D Then cryed I vnto the, O Lorde, yea vnto the Lorde made I my prayer.

What profyte is there in my bloude: yf I go downe to corruption?

Maye the dust geue thankes vnto the? or shall it declare thy faythfulnesse?

Heare, O Lorde, and haue mercye vpon me: Lorde be thou my helper.

E And so thou hast turned my heynesse in to ioye: thou hast put of my sackcloth, and girded me with gladnesse.

That myne honour myght synge prayses vnto the without ceasing: O Lorde my God, I wyll geue thankes vnto the for euer.

PSAL. XXX.

Mine enemyes.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

IN the, O Lorde, is my trust: let me neuer be put to confusion, but deliuer me in thy ryghteousnesse.

F Bowe downe thyne eare to me, make haste to deliuer me: be thou my stronge rocke and a house of defence, that thou mayst saue me.

For thou arte my stronge holde and my castell: be thou my guyde, and leade me for thy names sake.

Drawe me oute of the nette that they haue layde priuely for me, for thou arte my strengthe.

G Into thy handes I commende my spirite: thou hast deliuered me, o Lorde, thou God of trueth.

I hate them that holde of vanities: and my trust is in the Lorde.

I wyll be glad and reioyce in thy mercy: for thou hast considered my trouble, thou hast knowen my soule in aduersitie.

Thou hast not deliuered me ouer in to the handes of the enemye, but hast set my fete in a large rowme.

H Haue mercy vpon me, o Lorde, for I am in trouble, myne eye is consumed for very heuynesse, yea my soule and my body.

My lyfe is waren olde with heuynesse: and my yeres with mournynge.

My strengthe fayleth me because of myne aduersitie, and my bones are corrupte.

I am become a derye reproche amonge all myne enemyes: my neyghbours and they of myne owne acquayntaunce are afrayde of me: they that se me in the strete, conuey them selues fro me.

I am cleane forgotten and oute of mynde, as a dead man: I am become lyke a broken vessell.

I For I haue herde the blasphemye of the multytude: euerye man abhorreth me, they haue gathered a counsell together against me, and are purposed to take awaye my lyfe.

But my hope is in the Lorde, and I saye: thou art my God.

My tyme is in thy handes: deliuer me from the handes of myne enemyes, and from them that pursue me.

K Shewe thy seruaunt the lyght of thy countenaunce: helpe me for thy mercyes sake.

Let

Lette me not be confounded, O Lorde: for I call upon the: let the vngodlye rather be put to confusyon, and brought vnto the pitt.

Let the lyeng lyppes be put to syleuce: which cruelly, disdaynfully, & wickedly speake agaynst the ryghteous.

Howe greate and manyfolde is thy goodnes which thou hast hydde for them that feare the?

O what thinges bringest thou to passe for them that put their trust in the: euen before the sonnes of men?

Thou hydest them priuely by thyne owne presence from the proude men: thou kepest them secretly in thy tabernacle, from the strife of tonges.

Thankes be to the Lorde: for he hath shewed me crediynge great kyndnes in a strange cyte.

For when the sodeyn feare came vpon me, I sayd: I am cast out of thy sight.

Neuertheles thou herdest myne humble prayer: when I cryed vnto the.

O loue the Lorde (all ye his sayntes) for the Lorde preserueth the faythful, and plentiously rewardeth the proude doer.

Be stronge therfore and take good herte vnto you: all ye that put youre trust in the Lorde.

PSAL. XXXI.

A Instruccion of Dauid.

BLessed are they, whose vnrighteousnesse is forgeuen: and whose synnes are couered.

Blessed is the man, vnto whom the Lorde imputeth no synne: in whose spirite there is no gyle.

For whyle I held my tonge: my bones consumed away, throughe my daylye complaynynges.

And because thy hand was so heuy vpon me both daye and nyght: my moysture was lyke the drouth in sommer. Selah.

Therfore I confessed my synne vnto the: & hyd not myne vnrighteousnesse.

I sayd, I will knowlege myne offence, and confesse my selfe vnto the Lorde: and so thou forgauest me the wickednesse of my synne. Selah.

For this shall euerye sayntt make his prayer vnto the in a season: therfore shall not the great waters flooden come nye him.

Thou arte my defence in the trouble that is come about me: compasse thou me about also with the ioye of deliuerannce. Selah.

I wil enforme the, and shewe the the waye wherin thou shalte goo: I will fasten myne eyes vpon the.

Be not ye now lyke horse & mules, which haue no vnderstandyng.

Whose mouthes thou must holde with bytt and bridle, yf they will not obeye the.

Greate plagues shall the vngodly haue, but who so ye trusteth in the Lorde, mercy shall compasse him on euery syde.

Be glade, O ye righteous, and reioyse in the Lorde: be ioyfull all ye that are true of herte.

PSAL. XXXII. After the Hebrues xxxiii.

REioyse in the Lorde, O ye righteous, for it becommeth well the iuste to be thankfull.

Prayse the Lorde with harpe: synge psalmes vnto him with the lute and instrument of ten stringes.

Synge him a newe songe, yea sing lustely vnto him with a lusty courage.

For the worde of the Lorde is true: and all his workes are saythfull.

He loueth mercy and iudgement: the erth is full of the goodnesse of the Lorde.

By the worde of the Lorde were the heuens made: and all the hoste of them by the breth of his mouthe.

He gathereth the waters togyther as it were in a bottell: and layeth vp the depe in store.

Let all the earthe feare the Lorde: and let all them that dwell in the worlde, stande in awe of him.

For loke what he sayeth, it is done: and what he commaundeth, it standeth fast.

The Lorde bringeth the counsel of the heythen to nought, and cutteth the thoughtes of the people.

But the counsell of the Lorde endureth: and the thoughtes of his herte from generacion to generacion.

Blessed are the people that holde the Lorde for their God: and blessed are the folke whom he hath chosen to be his heritage.

The Lorde loketh downe from heuen, and beholdeth all the children of men: from the strong seat he considereth all them that dwell in the worlde.

He onely hath facioned all the hertes of the, and knoweth all their workes.

A kynge is not holpen by his owne greate hoste: nether is a giaunte saued thorowe the might of his owne strength.

A horse is but a vayne thing to saue a man, it is not the power of his strength that can helpe him.

Beholde, the eye of the Lorde loketh vnto them that feare him, and put their trust in his mercy.

That he may deliuer their soules from deth: and to fede them in the deare tyme.

Let our soule patiently abide the Lorde: for he is our helpe and shylde.

So shall our hertes reioyse in him: because we haue hoped in his holy name.

Let thy mercyfull kyndnesse, o Lorde, be vpon vs: lyke as we put our trust in the.

PSAL. XXXIII. After the Hebrues xxxiv. 1. Reg. xxi. b.

A Of Dauid, when he fayned him selfe madde before Abimelech: which droue him away and he departed.

I will

I Will alwaye gyue thankes vnto the Lord, his prayse shall euer be in my mouthe.

My soule shall make her boste in the Lorde: the humble shall heare therof, and be glad.

O prayse ye the Lorde with me: & let vs magnifye his name together.

I sought the Lorde, and he herde me: yea he deliuered me out of all my feare.

They that haue an eye vnto hym, shall be lightened, and their faces shall not be ashamed.

This poore man cryed vnto the Lorde: and he herde him, yea and deliuered him out of all his troubles.

The aungell of the Lorde pitcheth his tente rounde about them that feare him, and deliuereth them.

Taste and se how frendly the Lord is: blessed is the man that trusteth in him.

Feare the Lorde ye that be his sayntes: for they that feare him lacke nothing.

The riche shall want and suffre hunger: but they whiche seke the Lorde shall want no maner thing that is good.

Come hither, ye children, herken vnto me: I will teache you the feare of the Lorde.

Who so lusteth to lyue, and wolde fayne se good dayes.

Let him refrayne his tonge from euill: and his lyppes that they speake no guile.

Let him eschewe euyl and do good: let him seke peace and ensue it.

For the eyes of the Lorde are ouer the righteous: and his eares are open vnto their prayers.

But the face of the Lorde beholdeth them that do euyl, to destroye the remembraunce of them out of the earth.

When the righteous crye, the Lord heareth them: and deliuereth them out of all their troubles.

The Lorde is nye vnto them that are contrite in herte, and wil helpe suche as be of an humble spirite.

Great are the troubles of the righteous, but the Lorde deliuereth them out of all.

He keepeth al their bones, so that not one of them is broken.

But misfortune shall slee the vngodly, and they that hate the righteous shall be guilty.

The Lorde deliuereth the soules of his seruauntes, and all they that put their trust in him shall not offende.

PSAL. XXXIIII.

Pugna Deus cum pugnantibus me.

Of Dauid.

STryue thou with them, o Lorde, that stryue with me: fyght thou agaynste them, that fyght agaynst me.

Laye hande vpon thy shylde and spere: and stande vp to helpe me.

Drawe out thy swerde and stop the way against them that persecute me: saye vnto my soule, I am thy helpe.

Let them be confounded and put to shame, that seke after my soule: let them be turned backe and be brought to confusion, that ymagen mischiefe for me.

Lette them be as the dust before the wynde: and the aungell of the Lorde scatteryng them.

Lette their waye be darcke and slypperye: and the aungell of the Lorde to persecute them.

For they haue prayuyly layde their net to destroye me without cause: yea & made a pyt for my soule whiche I neuer deserued.

Let a sodein destruction come vpon him vnwares, and the net that he hathe layde priuily catche him selfe, that he maye fall in to his owne mischiefe.

But let my soule be ioyfull in the Lorde: & reioyse in his helpe.

All my bones shal saye: Lorde who is lyke vnto the? which deliuerest the poore fro them that are to stronge for him, yea the poore and the nedy from his spoylers.

False witnesses are risen vp, and lay to my charge thynges that I know not.

They rewarded me euil for good, to the great discomfort of my soule.

Neuertheles when they were sycke, I put on sackclothe: I humbled my soule with fastyng, and my prayer turned in to myne owne bosome.

I behaued my self as though it had ben my frende or my brother: I went heuyly, as one that mourneth for his mother.

But in myne aduersite they reioyce & gather them togither: yea the very lame come together against me vnwares, makinge mowes at me, and cease not.

With the greedye and scornefull hypocrites they gnasshed vpon me with their teeth.

Lorde when wilt thou loke vpon this? Restore my soule from the wicked rumoure of them, my derlynge from the lyons?

So will I geue the thankes in the great congregation: and prayse the amonge moche people.

Let them not triumphe ouer me, that are myne enemyes for nought: lette them not wynke with their eyes that hate me without cause.

And why? their commening is not for peace, but they ymagen false wordes against the quietsse of the lande.

They gape vpon me with their mouthes, sayinge: there, there: we se it with our eyes.

This thou seest, o Lord: hold not thy tong then: go not farre fro me, o Lorde.

Awake Lorde and stande vp: auenge thou my cause my God and my Lorde.

Iudge me, o Lorde my God, accordinge to thy righteousnesse, that they triumphe not ouer me.

Let them not say in their hertes, there there so wold we haue it: let them not say we haue ouercome him.

Let them be put to confusion & shame, that reioyse at my trouble: let them be clothed with rebuke and dishonour, that boste them selues against me.

Let

Lette them also be glade and reioyce, that fauoure my ryghteous dealynge: yea lette them saye alwaye: blessed be the Lorde, who hath pleasure in the prosperite of his seruaunt.

And as for my tonge, it shall be talkynge of thy ryghteousnesse and of thy prayse, all the day longe.

PSAL. XXXV.

To the chaunter, of Dauid the seruaunte of the Lorde.

M Y herte sheweth me the wyckednesse of the vngodly: that there is no feare of God before his eyes.

For he flatteryeth before his face, so longe till his abhominable synne be found out.

The wordes of his mouthe are vnrygh-teousnesse and deceyte: he wyll not be lerned to do good.

He ymagineth mischiefe vpon his bed: he will come in no good waye, ne refuse the thing that is euill.

Thy mercye, O Lorde, reacheth vnto the heauen: and thy faythfulnesse vnto the clouden.

Thy ryghteousnes standeth like the stronge mountaynes: and thy iudgement lyke the great depe.

Thou, Lorde: preseruest bothe men and beastes.

How precious is thy mercy, o God, that the children of men may put their trust vnder the shadow of thy wynges?

They shal be satisfied with the plentifulnes of thy house: and thou shalt gyue them drynke of the ryuer of thy pleasures.

For by the is the well of life: & in thy light, shal we se light.

Spreade forth thy louing kindnesse vnto the that know the, and thy ryghteousnesse vnto the that are true of hert.

Lette not the foote of pryde ouertake me: let not the handes of the vngodly cast me downe.

As for wicked doers, they fall: they are cast downe, and are not able to stande.

PSAL. XXXVI.

A Psalme of Dauid.

FRet not thy self at the vngodly: be not thou enuyous against the euil doers.

For they shall soone be cut downe lyke the grasse: and be withered euen as the grene herbe.

Put thou thy trust in the Lorde, and be doing good: so shalt thou dwel in the land, and verily it shall fede the.

Delite thou in the Lorde: and he shal gyue the thy hertes desyre.

Commyt thy ways vnto the Lorde, set thy hope in hym: and he shall bryng it to passe.

He shall make thy ryghteousnesse as clere as the lyght: and thy iust dealing as the noone daye.

Holde the styll in the Lorde, and abyde patiently vpon him: but grene not thy self at one that hath prosperite, and ryseth in abhominacion.

Leue of from wrath, let go displeasure: let not thy gelousye moue the also to do euil.

For wicked weres shal be rooted out, but they that patiently abyde the Lorde, shal inherite the lande.

Suffre yet a lytle whyle, and the vngodlye shall be clene gone: then shalt loke after his place, and he shall be awaye.

But the meke spirited shall possesse the erth: and haue pleasure in moche peace.

The vngodly layeth wayte for the iust, and gnasheth vpon him with his teeth.

But the Lorde laugheth him to scorne: for he seeth that his daye is commyng.

The vngodly drawe out their swerde and bende their bowe: to caste downe the symple and poore, and to slee suche as go the ryghte waye.

Neuertheles, their swerde shall goe thorowe their owne herte: and their bowe shall be broken.

A smal thyng that the righteous hathe: is better then great riches of the vngodly.

For the armes of the vngodlye shall be broken: but the Lorde vpholdeth the righteous.

The Lord knoweth the dayes of the godly: and their inheritaunce endureth for euer.

They shall not be confounded in the perilous tyme: and in the dayes of dere, they shal haue ynough.

But the vngodly shal perish: and when the enemies of the Lorde are in their floures, they shal consume, yea euen as the smoke shal they consume awaye.

The vngodlye borroweth, and payeth not agayne: but the righteous is mercyfull and liberall.

Suche as be blessed of him, shal possesse the lande: and they whom he curseth, shall be rooted out.

The Lord ordreth a good mans going: and hath pleasure in his way.

Though he fall, he shal not be hurt: for the Lorde vpholdeth him with his hande.

I haue ben yong and now am old: yet saw I neuer the righteous forsaken, ne his seed to seke their bred.

The righteous is euer mercifull, and lendeth gredily: therfore shal his seed be blessed.

Flie from euil, and do that is good: so shalt thou dwell for euer.

For the Lorde loueth that is right, he forsaketh not his seruantes, but they shall be preserued for euermore: where as the seed of the vngodly shal be rooted out.

Yea the righteous shall possesse the lande: & dwell therin for euer.

The mouthe of the righteous is practised in wysdome: and his tonge talketh of iudgement.

The law of his God is in his hert: therefore shal not his fotesteppes slyde.

The vngodly seeth the righteous, and goeth about to slee him.

But the Lorde wyll not leaue hym in his handes: ne condemne hym when he is iudged.

Hope thou in the Lorde, and kepe his way, and he shall so promote the, that thou shalte haue the lande by enheritaunce, and se when the vngodly shal perisshe.

I my selfe haue sene the vngodly in greate power: and flourysshynge lyke a grene baye tree: but when I wente by, loo, he was gone, I soughte hym, but he couldē no where be founde.

Kepe innocencye, and take hede vnto the thynge that is vpright: for that shall bringe a man peace at last.

But the transgressours shall perysshe togyther: and the vngodlye shall be rooted out at the last.

The helpe of the righteous commeth of the Lorde: he is their strength in tyme of trouble.

The Lorde shall standē by them, and saue them: he shal deliuer them from the vngodly, and helpe them, bycause they put their trust in him.

PSAL. XXXVII.

To the chaunter, to bringe to remembraunce.

A PVt me not to rebuke, oh Lorde, in thyne anger: chastē me not in thy deepe displeasure.

For thyne arowes sticke fast in me, and thy hande presseth me sore.

There is no hole parte in my body, bycause of thy displeasure: there is no rest in my bones by reason of my synnes.

For my wickednesses are gone ouer my heed: and are like a sore burthen, to heuy for me to beare.

My woundes stynche and are corrupt, thorowe my folysshenesse.

B I am broughte in to so greate trouble and myserye: that I goo mourninge all the daye longe.

For my loynes are clene dryed vp: and there is no hole parte in my body.

I am feble and sore smytten: I rore for the verye disquietnesse of my hert.

Lorde, thou knowest all my desire: and my groninge is not hyd from the.

My herte panteth, my strengthe hathe fayled me: and the lyghte of myne eyes is gone fro me.

My louers and frendes standē lokynge vpon my trouble: and my kynsmen are gone a farre of.

C They that soughte after my lyfe, and to wo me ryd: spake of lyes and ymagined deceyte all the daye longe.

So for me, I was lyke a deafe man and herde not: and as one that were dom, not openyng his mouthe.

I am become as a man that heareth not: and that can make no reprofe with his mouthe.

For in the, o Lorde is my trust: thou shalte heare me, o Lorde my God.

My desire is that myne ennemies triumphe not ouer me: for yf my fote slyp, they reioyse greatly agaynst me. D

I am redye to suffre trouble: and my heuynesse is euer in my sight.

For I confesse my wickednesse: & my synne greueth me.

But myne ennemyes lyue, and are mighty: and they that hate me without cause, are many in nombre.

They that rewarde me euyll for good: spreade euyll of me, bycause I folowe that good is.

Forsake me not (O Lorde my God) go not farre fro me.

Haste the to helpe me: Lorde, my succoure.

PSAL. XXXVIII.

To the chaunter for Idithun, a Psalme of Dauid.

I Sayd: I will kepe my wayes that I offende not in my tonge. E

And so I shut my mouth, whyle the vngodly layd wayte for me.

I held my tong, I was wmme, I kept silence: yea euen from good wordes, but it was payne and greefe to me.

My hert was hote within me: and whyle I was thus musing, the fyre kyndled, so that I spake with my tonge.

Lorde, let me knowe myne ende, & the nombre of my dayes: that I may be certified what I want.

Beholde, thou haste made my dayes a spanne longe: and my lyfe as it were nothynge before the. F

O howe vayne, are all men lyuynge? Selah.

Yea euery man walketh as it were a shadow, and disquieteth him self in vayne: he heapeth vp ryches, and can not tell to whome he gathereth them. G

And nowe Lorde, wherin shall I comforte me? my hope is in the.

Deliuer me from all myne offences: & make me not a scorne vnto the foolish.

I kepe silence, and open not my mouth: for thou hast done it.

Turne thy plages awaye fro me: for I am consumed thorow the force of thy hande. H

When thou punishest man for synne, thou chastenest him: so that his beautie consumeth away, lyke as it were a moth.

O how vayne are all men? Selah.

Heare my prayer, o Lorde, and cor sider my callynge: shewe not thy selfe as though thou sawest not my teares.

For I am a straunger and pilgrim with the: as all my fore fathers were.

Oh spare me a lytle that I maye refreshe my my life before I goo hence: and be no more seen.

PSAL. XXXIX.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of David.

I WAYTED patiently for the Lorde, whiche enclined vnto me: and herde my callynge.

He brought me out of the horrible pit, out of the myre and claye: he set my feete vpon the rocke, and ordred my goinges.

He hath put a newe song in my mouth, euen a thankesgyuing vnto our God.

Many men seeng this shal feare the Lorde: and put their trust in him.

Blessed is the man that setteth his hope in the Lorde: and turneth not vnto the proude, & to suche as go about with lyes.

O Lorde my God, great are thy wonderous workes whiche thou hast wrought: and in thy thoughtes toward vs, there may none be likened vnto the.

I would declare them and speake of them: but they are so many, that they can not be tolde.

Sacrifyce and offrynge thou wouldest not haue, but a body hast thou ordeyned me: burnt offrynges and sacrifyce for synne thou hast not alowed.

Then sayde I: lo I come. In the begynnynge of the booke it is written of me, that I should fulfyll thy will, o my God, and that am I content to do: yea thy lawe is within my brest.

I will preache of thy righteousnesse in the greate congregacion: loo, I will not refrayne my lyppes, o Lorde, and that thou knowest.

I haue not hyde thy righteousnesse in my herte: my talkyng is of thy truthe and saluacyon: I kepe not thy louynge mercye and trueth close from the greate congregacion.

Withdrawe not thou thy mercy fro me, o Lorde: but let thy louing kyndnes and truth alwaye preserue me.

For innumerable troubles are come aboute me: my synnes haue taken suche holde vpon me that I am not able to loke vp: yea they are more in numbre then the heeres of my head, and my herte hath fayled me.

O Lorde, lette it be thy pleasure to deliuer me: make haste (O Lorde) to helpe me.

Let them be ashamed and confounded that seke after my soule to destroye it: let them fal backwarde and be put to confusion, that wish me euyll.

Let them soone be brought to shame that crye ouer me: there there.

But lette all those that seke the, be ioyfull and glad in the: and let all suche as delyte in thy saluacyon saye alwaye: the Lorde be praysed.

As for me, I am poore and in myserye: but the Lorde careth for me.

Thou art my helper and redemer: make no long tarryeng, o my God.

PSAL. XL.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of David.

BLessed is he that considereth the poore: the Lorde shall deliuer hym in tyme of trouble.

The Lorde shal preserue him, and kepe him alyue: he shal make him to prospere vpō earth and shal not deliuer him in to the wyll of his enemyes.

The Lorde shall refresh him when he lyeth sicke vpon his bed, yea thou makest his bed in all his sickenesse.

I sayd: Lorde be mercyfull vnto me: heale my soule, for I haue synned against the.

Myne enemies speke euil vpon me: when shal he dye, and his name perysshe?

Thoughe he come in to se, yet meaneth he falsehed in his herte: heapyng mischefe vpon him selfe.

All they that hate me, rune together against me: and ymagen euil against me.

They haue gyue a wicked sentence vpō me: when he lyeth, he shal ryse vp no more.

Yea euen mine owne familiare frende whom I trusted, which did eate my breed, hath lyft vp his hele against me.

But be thou mercyfull vnto me, o Lorde: rayse thou me vp, and I shal remarde them.

By this I know thou fauourest me that my enemy shal not triumphe ouer me.

Thou haste vpholden me because of myne innocencye: and sette me before thy face for euer.

Blessed be the Lorde God of Israell: from hence forth, and for euer more, Amen, Amen.

PSAL. XLI.

To the chaunter a myracion of the sonnes of Korah.

LYke as the harte desyreth the water brookes: so longeth my soule after the, O God.

My soule is a thurst for God, yea euen for the liuynge God: when shal I come & behold the face of God?

My teares are my meate daye and nyght, while it is dayly said vnto me: where is now thy God?

Now when I thynke therevpon, I poure out my hert by my selfe: for I wold haue gone there with the multitude, and paste ouer with them vnto the house of God, in the voyce of prayse and thankesgyuinge, amonge suche as kepe holy daye.

Why artest thou so full of heuynesse (o my soule) and why arte thou so vnquiete within me?

Put thy trust in God, for I will yet geue him thankes for the helpe of his countenaunce.

My God

My God, my soule is verie vnquiet in me: therefore I remember thee in the land of Jordan, and the litle hill Hermonim.

C One deepe calleth an other with the noyse of thy spoutes: all the waues and waters flowres are gone ouer me.

The Lord hath promised his louing kyndnesse daylye, therefore will I prayse him in the nyghte season, and make my prayer vnto the God of my lyfe.

I will saye vnto God my stony rocke: why hast thou forgotten me? why go I thus heauy whyle the enemye oppresseth me?

While my bones are brokē, and while mine enemies raile on me in the tethe daylye, saying vnto me: where is now thy God?

Why art thou so heuy, o my soule? and why art thou so disquieted within me?

Put thy trust in God: for I will yet thanke him for the helpe of his countenaunce, and because he is my God.

Pray for the oppressed.

PSAL. XLII.

A GIue sentence vpon me (o God) and defende my cause against the vnholy people: deliuer me from the deceytful and wicked man.

For thou (o God) art my strength: why hast thou shut me from thee? why go I thus to and fro, whyle the enemye oppresseth me?

Send out thy light and thy truth, that they may lead me and bring me vnto thy holy hyll, and to thy dwelling.

That I may go in to the aulter of God, euē vnto the God which is my ioye and pleasure: and vpon the harpe to giue thankes vnto thee, o God, my God.

Why art thou so heuy (o my soule) and why art thou so disquieted within me?

Put thy trust in God, for I will yet giue him thankes for the helpe of his countenaūce, and because he is my God.

Pray the people's returne.

PSAL. XLIII.

C To the chaunter on instrumēts of the sonnes of Corah.

A WE haue herd with our eares, o God, our fathers haue told vs, what thou hast wrought in their time of olde.

How thou hast driuen oute the heithen with thy hande, and planted them in: howe thou hast destroyed the nacions and cast them out.

For they got not the land in possession throwe their owne sworde, neither was it their owne arme that helped them.

But thy right hand, thyne arme & the light of thy countenaunce, because thou hadst a fauour vnto them.

Thou art the kyng and my God: thou sendest helpe vnto Jacob.

Through thee, will we ouerthrow our enemyes: and in thy name will we tread them vnder, that arise vp against vs.

For I will not trust in my bowe: it is not my sworde that shall helpe me.

But it is thou that sauest vs, and puttest our enemies: and puttest them to confusion that hate vs.

We will alwaye make our boste of God: & praise thy name for euer. Selah.

But nowe thou forsakest vs, and puttest vs to confusion, and goest not forth with our hostes.

Thou makest vs to turne our backes vpon our enemyes, so that they which hate vs spoyle our goodes.

Thou lettest vs be eaten vp like sheepe: and scatterest vs among the Heithen.

Thou sellest thy people for nought: and takest no money for them.

Thou makest vs to be rebuked of our neyghbours, to be laughed to scorne, and hable to deryssion, of them that are rounde about vs.

Thou hast made vs a bye byworde among the heithen: and that the people shake their heades at vs.

My confusion is daylye before me: and the shame of my face couereth me,

For the voyce of the blasphemer and blasphemer: for the enemye and auenger.

All this is come vpon vs: and yet haue we not forgotten thee, nor behaued our selues vnfaythfully in thy couenaunt.

Our herte is not turned backe, neither our steppes gone out of the waye.

For thou hast smitten vs in the place of dragons, and couered vs with the shadow of death.

If we had forgotten the name of our God: and holden vp ours handes to anye straunge God.

Should not God find it out? for he knoweth the very secretes of the herte.

But for thy sake we are killed all the daye longe: and are counted as sheepe appointed to be slayne.

Vp Lord, why sleepest thou? awake, & caste vs not of for euer.

Wherefore hydest thou thy face? wilte thou cleane forget oure myserye and oppression?

For our soule is brought low euen vnto the dust, and our belly cleaueth vnto the grounde.

Arise, o Lord, helpe vs and deliuer vs for thy mercy sake.

PSAL. XLIIII.

Of the loue of Christ.

C To the chaunter vpon Schoshanim, an instrumēt of the children of Korah, a louge of loue.

MY herte is endytynge good matter: I speake of that whiche I haue made of the kynge: my tonge is the pen of a redye writer.

Thou art the fayrest amonge the children of men, full of grace are thy lippes, therefore God blesseth thee for euer.

Gyrde thee with thy sworde vpon thy thigh (O thou mightye) with worshyp and renowne.

Good luche haue thou with thyne honour, ryde on ryde on with the truthe, meknesse and ryghteousnesse: and thy right hand shall teache wonderfull thinges.

Thy arowes are sharpe, the people shall be subdued vnto the: euen in the myddest among the kinges enemyes.

Thy seat (God) endureth for euer: the scepter of thy kyngdome is a right scepter.

Thou hast loued ryghteousnesse, and hated iniquite: wherfore God (whiche is thy God) hath annoynted the with the oyle of gladnes aboue thy felowes.

All thy garmentes are lyke Myrre, Aloes, & Casia, when thou commest out of thyne yuorye palaces in thy beautifull glory.

Kynges doughters go in thy goodly araye, and vpon thy right hande standeth a quene in a garment of moost pure golde.

Harken o doughter, consider & bowe vnto thyne eare: forget thine owne people, and thy fathers house.

So shall the kynge have pleasure in thy beautye, for he is thy Lorde, and thou shalte worship him.

The doughters of Tyre shall be there with gyftes, the ryche among the people shal make their supplication before the.

The kynges doughter is all glorious within: her clothing is of wrought golde.

She shall be brought vnto the kynge in rayment of noble workes, and maydens after her: suche as be neste her shall be brought vnto the.

With ioye & gladnesse shal they be brought, and go in to the kinges palace.

In stede of thy fathers thou halte gotten children, whom thou shalte make prynces in all landes.

I will remembre thy name frome one generacion to an other: therfore shall the people geue thankes vnto the, worlde without ende.

PSAL. XLV.

¶ To the chaunter, a songe of the children of Korah vpon Maath.

GOd our trouble & aduersite, we haue founde that God is oure refuge, our strength and helpe.

Therfore we will not feare, though the erth fell, and though the hylles were caryed in to the myddest of the see.

Though the waters of the see raged and were neuer so troublous, and though the mountaynes shooke at the tempeste of the same.

For there is a floude whiche with his ryuers reioyseth the cite of God, the holy dwelling of the hyest.

God is in the middest of her, therfore shall she not be removed: for God helpeth her, and that ryght early.

The heithen are mad, the kyngdomes make moche a do: but when he vttereth his voyce, the erth melteth awaye.

The Lorde of hoostes is with vs: the God of Iacob is oure defence.

Come hyther and behold the workes of the Lorde: what desolations he hathe broughte vpon the earth.

He hathe made warres to ceasse in all the worlde: he hath broke the bowe, he hath knapped the spere in sonder, and brent the charettes in the fyre.

Be styll then, and confesse that I am God: I will be exalted amonge the Gentiles, and I will be exalted vpon erth.

The Lorde of hoostes is with the: the God of Iacob is our defence. Selah.

PSAL. XLVI.

After the maner of the children of Korah.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme of the children of Korah.

CLap your handes together (all ye people) synge vnto God with the voyce of thankesgyuynge. A

For the Lorde most hyest is to be feared: and he is the great kyng vpon all the erth.

He shal subdue the people vnder vs, and the nacyons vnder our fete.

He chosith vs for an heritage the beautie of Iacob whom he loued. Selah.

God is gone vp with a merry noyse: & the Lorde with the sounde of the trompet. B

Synge prayses, synge prayses vnto God: synge prayses, synge prayses vnto our kynge.

For God is kyng of all the erth: sing prayses vnto him with vnderstanding.

God is kyng ouer the heithen: God sitteth in his holy seate.

The princes of the people are gathered together vnto the God of Abraham: for God is mooste hyest exalted, euen the mightye lordes of the earthe.

PSAL. XLVII.

After the maner of the children of Korah.

GReat is the Lorde and hyest to be praysed, in the cite of our God: euen vpon his holy hill. A

The hill of Sion is like a fayre plant wherof all the lande reioyseth: vpon the north syde lyeth the cite of the great kyng.

God is well knowen in her palaces: that he is the defence of the same.

For lo, kynges are gathered, and gone by together.

They maruayled so se suche thynges: they were astonyed, and sodenly rane behynde.

Feare came vpon them: and sorow as vpon a woman in her trauayle.

Thou shalte breake the shyppes of the see: thorow the East wynde.

Lyke as we haue herde, so se we in the cite of the Lorde of hoostes, in the cite of our God: God vpholdeth the same for euer. Selah.

We wayte for thy louing kyndnesse (o God) in the myddest of thy temple. C O God, according vnto thy name, so is thy prayse vnto the worldes ende: thy right hand is full of righteousnesse.

Oh let the mounte Sion reioyse: and the doughters of Iuda be glad, because of iudgementes.

Walke about Sion: go rounde about her and tell her towers.

Marke well her walles, sette vp her houses: that it maye be tolde them that come after.

For this God is our God for euer and euer, and he shall alwaye be our gyde.

PSAL. XLVIII.

Vnto the chorister, a Psalme of the children of Corah.

HEare this, all ye people: ponder it well all ye that dwell vpon the erth.

High and lowe, riche and poore: one with an other.

My mouth shal speake of wisdome, and my hert shall muse of vnderstanding.

I will enclyne myne eare to the parable, and shewe my darke speache vpon the harpe.

Wherefore shulde I feare in euyll dayes, when the wickednesse of my heles com̃eth rounde about?

They that put they̓r truste in their goodes and bost them selues in the fulnesse of they̓r ryches:

No man maye deliuer his brother: ne make agreement vnto him vnto God.

For it costeth more to redeme their soules: so that he must let it alone for euer,

Yea though he lyue long, and se not the graue.

For it shall be seene, that suche wyse men dye and perysshe together, as well as the ignorant and foolysshe, and leue their goodes for other.

Loke what is in their house, it continueth styll: their dwellinge places endure from one generation to an other, & are called after they̓r owne names vpon erth.

Neuerthelesse man abideth not in suche honour, but is compared vnto the beaste that perisshe.

This waye of theyrs is verye foly, and yet their posterite prayseth it with they̓r mouthe. Selah.

They lye in the hell lyke shepe, death shall gnawe vpon them, & the righteous shal haue dominacion of them in the morninge by tymes: their strength shall consume, and hell shall be their dwellynge.

But God shall deliuer my soule from the power of hell, when he receyueth me. Selah.

Be not thou afrayd whē one is made ryche: and the glory of his house increaseth.

For he shall carye nothynge awaye with him when he dyeth, neither shall his pompe folowe him.

Whyle he lyueth he is counted an happye man: and so longe as he is in prosperite men speake good of him.

But when he foloweth his fathers generacion, he shall neuer se lighte any more.

When a man is in honoure, and hathe no vnderstandynge, he is compared vnto the beaste that perisshe, and becommeth like vnto them.

PSAL. XLIX.

A Psalme of Asaph.

THe Lorde euen the mightye God hath spoken and called the worlde from the ryssinge of the sunne, vnto the goynge downe of the same.

Out of Sion appereth the glorious beautye of God.

Our God shall come, and not kepe silence: there goeth before him a consumynge fyre, and a myghtye tempest rounde about hym.

He shall call the heuens from aboue: & the erth, that he may iudge his people.

Gather my saynctes together vnto me: those that sette more by the couenaunt then by any other ynge.

And the heauens shall declare his righteousnesse: for God is Iudge hym selfe. Selah.

Heare, o my people: let me speake, let me testifie amonge you, o Israel: I am God, euen thy God.

I reproue the not because of thy sacrifice, thy burntofferinges are alwaye before me.

I will take no bullockes out of thy house: ne gotes out of thy folde.

For all the beastes of the feld are myne, and thousandes of catell vpon the hylles.

I knowe all the foules vpon the mountaynes: and the wylde beastes of the feld are in my sight.

If I be hungrye, I will not tell the: for the hole worlde is myne, and all that therein is.

Thinkest thou that I will eate the fleshe of oxen, or drynke the bloude of gotes?

Offre vnto God prayse and thankesgyuynge: and paye thy vowes vnto the moste hyest.

And call vpon me in the tyme of trouble: so will I heare the, that thou maist thanke me.

But vnto the vngodly saith God, why wilt thou preache my lawes, and takest my couenaunt in thy mouth?

Where as thou hatest to be reformed: and castest my wordes behynde the?

If thou seest a thefe, thou runnest with him: and art partaker with the aduouterers.

Thou lettest thy mouth speake wickednesse and thy tonge paynteth disceyte.

Thou sittest and speakest agaynste thy brother: yea and sclaunderest thyne owne mothers sonne.

This thou dost, whyle I holde my tonge, and thynkest me to be euen suche one as thy selfe: but I will reproue the, and set my selfe agaynst the.

Consider

Consyder this, ye that forget God: least I plucke you awaye, and there be none to delyuer you.

Who so offereth me thankes and prayse, he honoureth me: and this is the waye, wherby I will shewe him the sauinge health of God.

PSAL. L.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid, when the Prophet Nathan came vnto him, after he had lyen with Bathsabe.

1 HAue mercy vpon me (O God) after thy goodnes, and according vnto thy great mercyes, do awaye myne offences.

Washe me wel from my wickednesse, and clense me from my synne.

For I knowledge my faultes, and my synne is euer before me.

Against the onely, against the haue I synned, and done euill in thy sight: ℣ thou migh test be iustified in thy sayenges, and shouldest ouercome, when thou art iudged.

Behalde, I was borne in wickednesse, and 5 in synne hath my mother conceyued me.

But lo, thou hast a pleasure in the truthe, ℣ hast shewed me secrete wysdome.

Purge me with Hisope, and I shal be clene washe thou me, and I shall be whyter then snowe.

Oh let me heare of ioye and gladnesse, that the bones which thou hast broken, maye reioyce.

Turne thy face from my synnes, and put out all my misdedes.

Make me a clene hert, O God, and renue a right spirite within me.

Cast me not away from thy presence, and 11 take not thy holy spirite from me.

Quycke me the comfort of thy helpe agayne, and stablysh me with thy free spirite.

Then shall I teache thy wayes vnto the wicked, that synners maye be conuerted vnto the.

Deliuer me from bloud gyltynesse, O God, thou that art the God of my healthe, that my tongue maye prayse thy righteousnesse.

Open my lyppes, O Lorde, that my mouth 15 D maye shewe thy prayse.

For yf thou haddest pleasure in sacrifice, I woulde gyue it the: but thou delytest not in burntofferinges.

The sacrifice of God is a troubled spirite, a broken and a contrite hert, O God, shalt thou not despyse.

Be fauorable and gracious vnto Sion, that the walles of Ierusalem maye be buylded.

For then shalt thou be pleased with the sacrifice of righteousnesse, with the burntofferynges and oblacions: then shall they lay bullockes vpon thyne aulter.

PSAL. LI.

¶ To the chaunter, an instruction of Dauid, when Doeg the Edomite came to Saul, and shewed him, sayenge: Dauid is come to the house of Achimelech. 1. Reg. 22.

WHy boastest thou thy selfe, thou tyrant, 1 A that thou canst do mischefe?

Where as the goodnesse of God endureth yet dayly.

Thy tongue ymagineth wickednesse, and with lyes it cutteth lyke a sharpe rasoure.

Thou louest vngraciousnesse more then goodnesse, to talke of lyes more then righteousnesse. Selah.

Thou louest to speake all wordes that may do hurt, O thou false tongue.

Therfore shal God vtterly ℣ smyte the in peces, plucke the out of thy dwellyng, and rote the out of the lande of the lyuynge. Selah.

The righteous shall se this, and feare, and laughe him to scorne.

Lo, this is the man, that toke not God for 10 his strengthe, but trusted vnto the multitude of his ryches, and was mighty in his wickednesse.

But as for me, I am lyke a grene olyue tre in 11 A ℣ house of God: my trust is in the tender mercy of God for euer and euer.

I will alwaye gyue thankes vnto the, for that thou hast done: ℣ will hope in thy name, for thy sayntes lyke it well.

PSAL. LII. After the Hebrues.

¶ To the chaunter vpon Mahalath, an instruction of Dauid.

THe foolysh bodyes saye in their hertes: 1 A there is no God.

Corrupt are they, and become abominable in their wickednesses: there is not one, that doth good.

God loked downe from heauen vpon the children of men, to se yf there were any that would vnderstande, or take after God.

But they are all gone out of the waye, they are all become vnprofytable: there is none ℣ doth good, no not one.

How can they haue vnderstandinge, that 5 A are ℣ workers of wickednes, eatynge vp my people as it were bread, and call not vpon God?

They are afrayd, where no feare is: for God breaketh the bones of them that besiege the: thou puttest them to confusion, for God despyseth them.

Oh that the sauinge health were gyuen vnto Israel out of Sion: Oh ℣ the Lord woulde deliuer his people out of captiuite.

Then shulde Iacob reioyce, ℣ Israel shulde be right glad.

PSAL. LIII. After the Hebrues.

¶ To the chaunter in Neginoth, an instrument of Dauid, when the Ziphites came and sayde vnto Saul: Dauid is hyde amongst vs.

Helpe

HElpe me (O God) for thy names sake, and deliuer me in thy strength.

Heare my prayer (O God) consyder the wordes of my mouth.

For straungers are risen vp against me, and and the mightye (which haue not God before their eyes) seke after my soule. Selah.

But lo, God is my helper: it is he that vpholdeth my soule.

He shall reward euyll vnto myne enemies: and in thy trouth shalte thou destroye them.

A free wyll offeringe wyll I geue the, and prayse thy name, O Lorde, because it is so comfortable.

For thou hast deliuered me out of all my trouble, so that myne eye seeth his desire vpō myne enemyes.

PSAL. LIIII.

¶ To the chaunter in Neginoth, an instruction of David.

HEare my prayer, O God, and hyde not thy selfe from my petition:

Take hede vnto me & heare me, howe pytifully I mourne and complayne.

The enemy cryeth so, and the vngodly so threten so fast: for they are mynded to do me some mischefe, so maliciously are they set against me.

My herte is drowe within me, and the feare of death is fallen vpon me.

Fearfulnesse and tremblynge are come vpō me, and an horrible dreade hathe ouerwhelmed me:

And I sayde: O that I had wynges like a doue, that I might flee somewhere, and be at rest.

Lo, then wolde I get me alwaye farre off, & remayne in the wyldernesse. Selah.

I wolde make haste to escape, from the stormy wynde and tempest.

Destroye their tongues (O Lorde) and deuyde them, for I haue sene vnrighteousnes and strife in the cyte.

This goeth daye and nyght about the walles, mischefe and syn are in the myddest of it.

Wickednesse is therin, deceyt and guyle go not out of her stretes.

For it were myne enemye that reuyled me, I could beare it: or yf one that ought me euyll wyll, dyd threaten me, I wolde hyde my selfe from him.

But it is thou my companyon, my gyde & myne owne familiare frende.

We had swete and secrete communication together in the house of God.

Let death come hastely vpon them, and let them go downe quycke in to hell, for wickednes is amonge them in their dwellynges.

But I will call vnto God, and the Lorde shall helpe me.

In the euenynge, mornynge & at noone daye will I mourne and complayne: and he shall heare my voyce.

He wyll delyuer my soule in peace, from them that fyre in warre for me: for they are many against me.

Yea euen God that endureth for euer, shall heare me, and bringe them downe.

For they will not turne: & why? they feare not God.

For they laye handes on such as be at peace with him, and so they breake his couenaunt.

Their mouthes are softer than butter, and yet haue they battell in their mynde: their wordes are smoother then oyle, & yet be they very swordes.

Cast thy burthen, or care, vpon the Lorde, he shall norysh thee, and not leaue the righteous in vnquyetnesse.

But as for them, thou (O God) shalt cast downe into the pyt of destruction.

The bloudthurstie and deceytfull shall not lyue out halfe their dayes: nevertheles my trust is in the.

PSAL. LV.

¶ To the chaunter, vpon the dumme dooue: a notable ditty for David, when the Philistines toke him in Geth.

BE mercyfull vnto me (O God) for men will treade me downe: they are dayly fyghtinge and troublinge me.

Myne enemies treade me dayly vnder their fete, for they be many that proudly fight against me.

Neuertheles, when I am afrayed, I put my trust in the.

I will comfort my selfe in Gods worde, yea I will hope in God, and not feare: what can flesh then do vnto me?

They vexe me dayly in my wordes: all that they ymagine, is to do me euell.

They holde all together, and kepe them selues close: they marke my steppes, howe they maye catche my soule.

But in vayne, for it shall escape them: and why? thou (O God) in thy displeasure shalt cast downe suche people.

Thou tellest my sorrowes, thou puttest my teares in thy bottell, and nombrest them.

When so euer I call vpon the, myne enemyes are put to flight: wherby I know thou art my God.

In Gods worde will I reioyce, in the Lordes worde will I comfort me.

Yea in God do I trust, and am not afrayd what can man then do vnto me?

Vnto the (O God) will I paye my vowes, vnto the will I geue thankes and prayse.

For thou hast deliuered my soule from death, and my fete from fallynge, that I maye walke before God in the lyght of the lyuinge.

A BE mercyfull vnto me, O God, be mercyfull vnto me, for my soule trusteth in the: and vnder the shawwe of thy wynges shall be my refuge, vntyll wyckednesse be ouerpast.

I call vnto God the hyghest, euen the God that shal helpe me vp agayne.

He shall sende frome heauen, and saue me frome the reproffe of him that wolde swalow me vp.

B This shall God sende, for his mercy & faythfulnes sake.

I lye with my soule amonge the cruell Lyons: euen amonge the childre of men, whose teethe are speares and arowes, and their toge a sharpe swerde.

Set vp thy selfe, O God, aboue & heauens and thy glory aboue all the earth.

They haue layed a net for my fete, and prest downe my soule: they haue digged a pyt before me, and are fallen into it them selues. Selah.

My hert is redy, O God, my hert is redy Psal. 3 to singe and gyue prayse.

Awake, O my glory, awake lute & harpe, I my selfe will awake right early.

I will gyue thankes vnto the, O Lorde, amonge the people, I will singe prayses vnto the amonge the Heythen.

For the greatnes of thy mercy reacheth vnto the heauens, and thy faythfulnesse vnto & cloudes.

Set vp thy selfe, O God, aboue the heauens, and thy glory aboue all the earth.

¶ To the chaunter, Destroye not Michtem of David.

A YF your mynde be vpon righteousnesse in dede, then iudge the thinge & is right, O ye sonnes of men.

But ye imagen mischefe in your hertes, & your handes deale with wickednes.

The vngodly are frowarde, euen frō their mothers wombe: as soone as they be borne, they go a strape and speake lyes.

They are as furyous as the serpent, euen lyke the deafe Adder that stoppeth her eares.

That she shulde not heare the voyce of the charmer, charme he neuer so wysely.

Breake their teth (O God) in their mouthes, smyte the chafte bones of the Lyōs whelpes in sonder, O Lorde.

B That they maye fall away, lyke the water that runneth a pace: and that whē they shote their arowes, they maye be broken.

Let them consume awaye lyke a snayle, & lyke the vntymely frute of a woman, and let them not se the sunne.

Or euer your thornes be warme, the wrath shall take them awaye quycke, lyke a stormy whyrle.

C The righteous shall reioyce when he seyth the vengeaunce, and shall washe his fete in the bloude of the vngodly.

So that men shall saye, verely there is a re warde for the righteous: doubtles, there is a God that iudgeth the earth.

¶ To the chaunter, Destroye not, Michtem of David, when Saul sende to watche the house, to slye him. 1. Regum. 19

DElyuer me frome myne enemyes (my God) and defende me frome them that ryse vp against me. A Delyuer me from the wyked werc, & saue me from the bloudthurstie men.

For lo, they lye wayetinge for my saule: the myghty men are assembled against me, without any offence or faute of me, O Lorde.

They run, and prepare them selues, without my faute: Aryse, come thou helpe me, & beholde.

Stande vp O Lorde God of hoostes, thou God of Israell to vyset all Heythen: be not mercyfull vnto theym that offende of malicious wyckednesse. Selah. B

Let them go to and fro, and run about the cytie, howlynge lyke dogges.

Beholde they speake against me with their mouthe, swerdes are vnder their lippes, for who reproueth them?

But thou (O Lorde) shalte haue theym in derysyon, thou shalte laughe all Heythen to scorne.

My strength wil I ascribe vnto the, for thou (O God) art my defender.

God sheweth me his goodnes plentuously God letteth me se my desire vpon myne enemyes. C

Slaye theym not, least my people forget it: but skatter theym abroade with thy power, and put theym downe, O Lorde my defence.

For the synne of their mouthe, for the wordes of their lippes, and because of their pryde let them be taken: and why? their prayenge is of curssing and lyes.

Consume them in thy wrathe, consume that that they maye perysshe, and knowe that it is God, whiche ruleth in Iacob and in all the worlde. Selah.

Let them go to and fro, and run about the cytie, howlynge lyke dogges. D

Let them runne here and there, for meate, and grudge when they haue not ynoughe.

But for me, I will singe of thy power, and prayse thy mercy by tymes in the morninge: for thou art my defence and refuge in tyme of my trouble.

Vnto the (O my strength) will I singe, for thou (O God) arte my defence, and my mercyfull God.

¶ To the chaunter vpon the relefe of lylies, Phichol of Dauid, to teach: when he fought with Aram Naharaim and with Aram Zoba, & Ioab returned backe, and slue twelue thousand Edomites, in the valley of Salt.

1 O God, thou that haste caste vs out and scattered vs abroade, thou that hast ben so sore displeased at vs, comforte vs again.

2 Thou that hast remoued the lande and deuided it, heale the stoles therof, for it shaketh.

3 Thou hast shewed thy people heuy thinges, thou hast geuen vs a drinke of wyne, that we slombre with all.

4 Yet hast thou geuen a token for such as feare the, that they maye call it vp in the trueth. Selah.

5 That thy beloued might be deliuered, helpe them with thy ryghte hande, & heare me.

6 God hathe spoken in his Sanctuarye, (whiche I tryuge reioyseth me) I will deuide Sichem, and meate out the valleye of Succoth.

7 Galaad is myne, Manasse is myne, Ephraim is the strength of myne heade, Iuda is my lawgiuer.

8 Moab is my washepot, ouer Edom will I stretche out my shoue, Palestina shall be glad of me.

9 Who will leade me into the stronge cytie? Who will bringe me into Edom?

10 Halte not thou no it, O God, thou that hast cast vs out: thou God, that wentest not out with our hostes?

11 Oh thou our helpe in trouble, for vayne is the helpe of man.

12 Through God we shall doo greate actes, for it is he that shall treade downe our enemyes.

PSAL. LX.

¶ To the chaunter vpon Neginoth, of Dauid.

1 HEare my crye inge O God, giue hede vnto my prayer.

2 From the endes of the earthe will I call vnto the, when my herte is in trouble: O set me vp vpon an hye rocke.

3 For thou art my hope, a stronge towre for me against the enemye.

4 I will dwell in thy tabernacle for euer, that I maye be safe vnder the couerynge of thy wynges. Selah.

5 For thou, O Lorde, hast herde my desires, thou hast geuen an heritage vnto those that feare thy name.

6 Thou shalt graunt the kynge a longe lyfe, that his yeres maye endure throughout all generations.

7 That he maye dwell before God for euer: O set thy louynge mercy and faythfulnes yet to serue him.

8 So will I allwaye synge prayses vnto thy name, that I maye dayely performe my vowes.

PSAL. LXI.

¶ To the chaunter, for Iduthun, a Psalme of Dauid.

1 MY soule wayteth onely vpon God, for of him commeth my helpe.

2 He only is my strength, my saluacion, my defence, so that I shall not greately fall.

3 Howe longe will ye ymagen mischefe against euery man? ye shalbe slayne all the lot of you: yea as a tottringe wall shall ye be, & lyke a broken hedge.

4 Their counsyle is onely how to put him out, their delyte is in lyes: they gyue good wordes with their mouthe, but curse with their herte. Selah.

5 Neuertheles, my soule abydeth onely vpō God, for he is my God.

6 He only is my strength, my saluacion, and my defence: so that I shall not fall.

7 In God is my health, my glory, my might and in God is my trust.

8 Put your trust in him allwaye (ye people) powre out your hertes before him, for God is our hope. Selah.

9 As for men, they are but vayne, men are deceytfull: vpon the weyghtes they are all together lyghter then vanytie it selfe.

10 Trust not in wronge and robbery, gyue not your selues vnto vanitie: yf ryches encrease, set not your best vpon them.

11 God spake once a worde, twyse have I herde the same: that power belongeth vnto God.

12 That thou Lorde art mercyfull, and that thou rewardest euery man accordynge to his workes.

PSAL. LXII.

¶ A Psalme of Dauid, when he was in the wylderners of Iuda.

1 O God, thou arte my God: early will I seke the.

My soule thurſteth for the, my flesh longeth after the in a barein and dry lande, where no water is.

2 Thus doo I loke for the to thy Sanctuarye, that I myghte beholde thy power and glorye.

3 For thy louynge kyndnesse is better then lyfe, my lyppes shall prayse the.

4 As longe as I lyue will I magnifye the, & lyft vp my handes in thy name.

5 My soule is satisfyed euen as it were with marye and fatnesse, when my mouth prayseth the with ioyfull lyppes.

6 In my bed will I remembre the, and when I wake my cathynge shalbe of the.

7 For thou hast ben my helper, and vnder the shadowe of thy wynges will I reioyce.

8 My soule hangeth vpon the, thy ryght hand vpholdeth me.

9 They seke after my soule, but in vayne, for they shall go vnder the earth.

They

They shall fall into the swerde, & be a porcion for foxes.

But the kynge shal reioyse in God: all they that sweare by him, shall be commended, for the mouth of lyers shall be stopped.

PSAL. LXIII.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme of David.

1 HEare my voyce, o God, in my complaint preserue my lyfe frome feare of the enemy.

Kepe me frome the gatheryng together of the frowarde, frome the heape of the wycked wers.

Which whet their tongues lyke a swerde, & shute with their venymous wordes lyke as vpon arowes.

That they maye pryuely hurte the innocent, and sodenly to hyt him without anye feare.

They haue kepyed myscheefe, and communed amonge theym selues, howe they maye laye snares: Tushe, (saye they) who shall se them?

They ymagen wyckednes, and kepe it secret among them selues, euery mã in the depe of his hert.

But God shal sodenly shute with an arow that they shalbe wounded.

Yea their owne tongues shall make theym fall, into moche that who so lyeth them, shal laugh them to scorne.

And all men that se it, shal saye: this hath God done, for they shal perceyue that it is his worke.

The righteous shall reioyse in the Lorde, and put his trust in him, and al they that are true of hert, shalbe glad therof.

PSAL. LXIIII.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme and songe of David.

1 THou, O God, art praysed in Sion, and vnto the is the vowe performed.

Thou hearest the prayer, therfore cõmeth all flesh vnto the.

Our myseries preuayle against vs, Oh be thou mercyfull vnto our synnes.

Blessed is the man whome thou chesuste and receyuest vnto the, that he maye dwell in thy courte: he shall be satisfyed with the pleasures of thy house, euen of thy holy temple.

Heare vs, accordynge vnto thy wonderfull righteousnesse, O God our saluacion: thou 2 that art the hope of all the coastes of the erth and of the broade se.

Which is in his strength setteth fast the mountaynes, and is girded about with power.

Which stilleth the raginge of the see, the roaring of his waues, and the woodnes of the people.

They that dwell in the vttermost partes, are afrayde at thy tokens, thou makest bothe the mornynge and eueninge starres to prayse the.

Thou visitest the erth, thou waterest it, & ¶ makest it very plenteous.

The ryuer of God is full of waters, thou preparest man his corne, and thus thou proudest for the earth.

Thou waterest her forowes, thou brekest the harde clottes therof, thou makest it softe with the droppes of rayne, and blessest the increase of it.

Thou crownest the yeare with thy goodnes, & thy fatte steppes drop fatnesse.

The dwellynges of the wyldernesse are fat also, that they drop with all: and the lytle hilles are pleasaunt on euery syde.

The foldes are full of sheepe, the valleyes stande so thicke with corne that they laugh & synge.

PSAL. LXV.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

1 OBe ioyfull in God, all ye landes, singe prayses vnto the honour of his name, make his prayse to be glorious.

Saye vnto God: O howe wonderfull are thy workes! thorowe the greatnesse of thy power shall thyne enemyes be confounded.

O that all the worlde woulde worshippe the, synge of the, and prayse thy name. Selah.

O come hyther and beholde the workes of God, which is so wonderfull in his doynges amonge the children of men.

He turned the see into drye lande, so that they 2 went thorow the water on foote: therfore will we reioyse in him.

He ruleth with his power for euer, his eyes beholde the people: the rebelles shall not be able to exalte them selues. Selah.

Magnify our God, ye people, make his voyce of his prayse to be herde.

Which holdeth our soule in lyfe, and suffreth not our fete to slyp.

For thou, O God, hast proued vs, thou hast tryed vs lyke as syluer is tryed.

Thou hast brought vs into bondage, & layd trouble vpon our loynes.

Thou hast suffered men to ryde ouer our heades, we went thorowe fyre and water, ¶ but thou hast brought vs out, and refreshed vs.

Therfore will I goo in to thy house with burntoffrynges, to paye the my vowes, whiche I promysed with my lyppes, and spake with my mouthe, when I was in trouble.

I will offre vnto the fat brent sacrifices with the smoke of Rammes, I will offre bullockes and gotes. Selah.

O come hyther and beholde, all ye that feare 2 God, I will tell you, what he hath done for my soule.

I called vnto him with my mouth, & gaue him prayses with my tonge.

If I entre into wyckednesse with my herte, the Lorde will not heare me.

Therfore God hath herde me, & considered the voyce of my prayer.

Praysed be God, whiche hathe not cast myne my prayer, ne tourned his mercy from me.

That we may knowe thy waye vpon earthe, thy saluynge health amonge all nacions.

Let the people prayse the, O God, yea let all people prayse the.

O let the people reioyce and be glad, that thou iudgest the folke righteously, and gouernest the nacions vpon earth.

Let the people prayse the, O God, let all people prayse the.

God, euē our owne God, geue vs his bleſſinge, that the earth maye bringe forthe her encrease.

God bielle vs, and let all the endes of the worlde feare him.

PSAL. LXVII.

To the chaunter, a Psalme and songe of Dauid.

LEt God aryse, so shall his enemyes be scattered, and they that hate him, shall flee before him.

Lyke as the smoke vanyssheth, so shalt thou driue them away: and lyke as waxe melteth at the fyre, so shall the vngodly perysshe at the presence of God.

But the righteous shall be glad & reioyce before God, they shall be merry and ioyfull.

Synge vnto God, synge prayses vnto his name: magnifye him that rydeth aboue the heauens (whose name is the Lorde) and reioyce before him.

He is a father of the fatherlesse, he is a defender of wydowes: euen God in his holy habitacion.

He is the God that maketh men to be of one mynde in a house, and bringeth the prisoners oute of captyuyte in due season, but letteth the rebellagates continue in scarcenesse.

O God, when thou wentest forth before thy people, when thou wentest thorow the wyldernesse. Selah.

The earthe shoke, and the heauens dropped at the presence of God in Sinai, at the presence of God, whiche is the God of Israel.

Thou O God sendest a gracious rayne vpō thyne enheritaunce, and refreshest it, when it is dry.

That thy beastes maye dwell therin, whiche thou of thy goodnesse hast prepared for the poor.

The Lorde shall geue the worde, with great hoſtes of Euangelistes.

Kynges with their armyes shall flee, and they of the houſholde, shall deuyde the spoyle.

Yf so be that ye lye amonge the pales, the wynges shal be couered with syluer, and her wynges of the colour of golde.

When the almyghtye setteth kynges vpon the earthe, it shall be cleare euen in the darcknesse.

The hyll of Basan is Gods hyll, the hyll of Basan is a plenteous hyll.

Why hoppe ye so, ye greate hylles?

It pleaseth God to dwell vpon this hyll, yea the Lorde will abyde in it for euer.

The charettes of God are many thousande tymes a thousand, the Lorde is amonge them in the holy Sinai.

Thou art gone vp on hyghe, thou hast led captiuite captiue, and receyued gyftes for me. Yea euen for thyne enemyes, that they might dwell with the Lorde God.

Praysed be the Lorde daylye, euen the God which helpeth vs, and poureth his benefytes vpon vs. Selah.

The God that is our Sauiour, euen God the Lorde by whome we escape death.

The God that smyteth the enemyes vpon the heades and vpon the heary scalpes: suche as go on still in their wyckednes.

The Lorde hath sayde: some will I bring againe from Basan, some will I bringe againe from the depe of the see.

That thy fote maye be dypped in the bloud of thyne enemyes, and that thy dogges may lycke it vp.

It is well seene, O God, howe thou goest, how thou my God and kyng goest in the Sanuary.

The syngers go before, and then the mynstrelles amonge the maydens with the tymbrels.

Geue thankes vnto God the Lorde in the congregation, for the welles of Israel.

There lyeth Ben Iamin, the yonger of Iuda, the Princes of Zabulon, and the Princes of Nephthaly beare rule amongst them.

Thy God hathe committed strength vnto the, stablysshe the thinge, O God, that thou hast wrought in vs.

For thy temples sake at Ierusalem shal kynges bringe presentes vnto the.

Rebuke the beastes amonge the reedes, the heape of bulles with the calues: those that byde for money.

Oh scatter the people that delyte in battayle.

The princes shall come out of Egypte, the Morians lande shall stretche out her handes vnto God.

Synge vnto God, O ye kyngdomes of the earth: synge prayses vnto the Lorde. Selah.

Which sitteth in the heauens euer all from the be-the begynnynge: Lo, he shall sende oute his voyce, and that a mighty voyce.

Ascribe the power vnto God, his glory is in Israel, and his might in the cloudes.

God is wonderfull in his sanctuarye, he is the God of Israel, he will geue strength and power vnto his people. Blessed be God.

PSAL. LXVIII.

¶ To the chaunter vpon Solomon of Dauid.

H Elpe me, O God, for the waters are come in euen vnto my soule.

I stycke fast in the depe myre, where no grounde is: I am come into depe waters, so the floudes will drowne me.

I am wery of crying, my throte is dry, my sight fayleth me, for waytinge so longe vpon my God.

They that hate me without cause, are mo then the heares of my head: they that are myne ennemyes and wolde destroye me grieuously are myghty: I am fayne to paye the thinges that I neuer toke.

God thou knowest my simplenesse, and my faultes are not hyd from the.

Let not them that trust in the, O Lorde God of hoostes, be ashamed for my cause: let not those that seke the, be confounded through me O God of Israel.

And why? for thy sake do I suffre reproche, shame couereth my face.

I am become a straunger vnto my brethren, and an alcaunt vnto my mothers children.

For the zele of thyne house hath euen eaten me, and the rebukes of them that rebuked the, are fallen vpon me.

I wept and chastened my selfe with fasting and that was turned to my reproche.

I put on a sack clothe, and therfore they iested vpon me.

They that sate in the gate, spake against me, and the dronkardes made songes vpon me.

But Lorde I made my prayer vnto the in an acceptable tyme.

Heare me, O God, with thy great mercy & sure helpe.

Take me out of the myre, that I sinke not: Oh let me be deliuered from them that hate me, and out of the depe waters.

Lest the water floude drowne me, that the depe swalowe me not vp, and that the pyt shut not her mouth vpon me.

Heare me, O Lorde, for thy louynge kyndnesse is comfortable: turne the vnto me accordinge vnto thy great mercy.

Hyde not thy face from thy seruaunt, for I am in trouble: haste the to helpe me.

Drawe nyghe vnto my soule, and saue it: deliuer me because of myne ennemyes.

Thou knowest my reproche, my shame and my dishonour: myne aduersaries are all in thy sight.

The rebuke breaketh my hert, and maketh me heuy: I loke for some to haue pitie vpon me, but there is no man: and for some to com forte me, but I fynde none.

They gaue me gall to eate, & when I was thursty, they gaue me vynegre to drinke.

Let their table be made a snare to take them selues with all, an occasion to fall and a recompence vnto them.

Let their eyes be blynded, that they se not and euer bowe thou their backes.

Powre out thyne indignacion vpon them, and let thy wrathfull displeasure take hold of them.

Let their habitation be voyde, and no man to dwell in their tentes.

For they persecute him whō thou hast smytten, and helpest thy woundes they haue grefe him me.

Let theym fall from one wickednesse to an other, and not come into thy righteousnesse.

Let them be wyped out of the booke of the liuynge, and not be written amonge the righteous.

As for me, I am poore and in heuynesse, let thy helpe defende me, O God.

That I may prayse the name of God with a songe, and magnifye it with thanckesgyuinge.

This shall please the Lorde better then a bullocke, that hath hornes and hoofes.

O consyder this and be glad (ye that be in aduersitie) seke after God, & your soule shall liue.

For the Lorde heareth the poore, and despyseth not his prysoners.

Let heauen and earth prayse him, the see & all that moueth therin.

For God will saue Sion, and buylde the cyties of Iuda, that men maye dwell there, & haue them in possession.

The sede of his seruauntes shall inherit it and they that loue his name, shall dwell therin.

PSAL. LXIX.

¶ To the chaunter, of Dauid to bringe to remembraunce.

H Aste the, O God, to deliuer me, and to helpe me, O Lorde.

Let them be shamed and confounded that seke after my soule: let them be turned backwarde, and put to confusion, that wish me euyll.

Let them sone be brought to shame, that crye oute me, there there.

But let all those that seke the, be ioyfull and glad in the: and let all suche as delyte in thy saluynge health, saye alwaye: the Lorde be praysed.

As for me, I am poore and in myserye, hast thou God for to helpe me.

Thou art my helpe, my redemer & my God O make no longe tarynge.

PSAL. LXX.

In the, O Lord, is my trust, let me never be put to confusion, but ryd me, & deliuer me thorow thy righteousnesse: encline thyne eare vnto me, and helpe me.

Be thou my stronge holde (where vnto I maye alwaye fle) thou that haste promysed to helpe me: for thou art my house of defence & my castell.

Deliuer me, O my God, out of the hande of the vngodly, out of the hande of ℣ vnrighteous and cruell man.

For thou, O Lorde God, art the thing that I longe for, thou art my hope euen frome my youth.

I haue leaned vpon the euer sythes I was borne, thou art he that take me out of my mothers wombe, therfore is my prayse alwaye of the.

I am become a wonder vnto the multitude but my sure trust is in the.

O let my mouth be fylled with thy prayse and honour all the daye longe.

Cast me not alwaye in myne olde age, forsake me not when my strength fayleth me.

For myne enemyes speake against me, and they that laye wayte for my soule, take their councell together, sayenge: God hath forsaken him, persecute him, take him, for there is none to helpe him.

Go not farre from me, O God: my God, haste the to helpe me.

Let them be confounded and perysshe, that are agaynste my soule: let them be couered with shame and dishonoure, that seke to do me euyll.

As for me I will paciently abyde alwaye, and will euer encrease thy prayse.

My mouth shal speake of thy righteousnes and sauinge helth all daye longe, for I know no ende therof.

Let me go in (O Lorde God) and I will make mention of thy power and righteousnes onely.

Thou, O God, hast learned me fro my youth vp vntyll now, therfore will I tel of thy wonderous workes.

Forsake me not, O God, in myne olde age, when I am graye headed: vntyll I haue shewed thyne arme vnto chyldren chyldren, and thy power to all them that are yet for to come.

Thy righteousnesse, O God, is very hyghe, thou that wrought great thinges: O God, who is lyke the?

O what great troubles and aduersities hast thou shewed me? and yet dyedst thou tourne and refresh me: and broughtest me frome the depe of the earth agayne.

Thou hast brought me to great honoure, & comforted me on euery syde.

Therfore will I prayse the and thy faythfulnesse, O God, playenge vpon the lute, vnto the will I synge vpon the harpe, O thou holy one of Israel.

My lippes wolde fayne synge prayses vnto the: and so wolde my soule whom thou hast deliuered.

My tongue talketh of thy righteousnesse all the daye longe, for they are confounded & brought vnto shame, that sought to do me euyll.

PSAL. LXXII.

A Psalme of Asaph.

1 O how louynge is God vnto Israel, to such as are of a cleane hert!
2 Neuertheles my feete were almost gone, my treadinges had well nyghe slypte.
3 And why? I was grieued at the wycked, to se the vngodly in such welthe.
4 for they are in no parell of ded, but stand fast lyke a palace.
5 They come in no mysfortune lyke other folke, neyther are they plaged lyke other men.
6 And this is the cause that they be so puft vp in pryde, and ouerwhelmed with cruelte and vnrighteousnesse.
7 Their eyes swell for fatnesse, they wote what they spek.
8 Corrupt are they, and speake blasphemyes P malytiously, proude and presumptuous are their wordes.
9 They stretche forth their mouthe vnto the heauen, and their tongue goeth throwe the worlde.
10 Therfore fall the people vnto them, and there out sucke they no small vauntage.
11 Tush (saye they) how shulde God perceyue it? is there knowledge in the most hyghest?
12 Lo, these are the vngodly, their prosperte in the worlde, these haue rychesse in possess-

A Instruction of Asaph.

1 O God, wherfore dost thou cast vs so cleane away? why is thy wrath so hote against the shepe of thy pasture?
2 O thinke vpon thyne congregacion, whom thou haste purchased frome the begynnynge: the rode of thyne enheritaunce, whom thou hast redemed, euen this hyl of Sion wherin thou dwellest.
3 Treade vpon them with thy fete, and caste them downe to the grounde, for the enemye hath destroyed all together in the Sanctuarye.
4 Thyne aduersaries roare in thy houses, & P set vp their banners for tokens.
5 Men maye se the axes glysten aboue, lyke as those that howe in the wod.
6 They cut downe all the syluyne worke of the holy place with hylles and axes.
7 They haue set fire vpō the Sanctuary, they haue defyled the dwelling place of thy name, euen vnto the grounde.
8 Yea they saye in their hertes: let vs spoyle them al together, thus haue they brent vp al
the houses of God in the lande.
9 We se our tokēs no more, there is not one P;ophet more, no not one that vnderstādeth any more.
10 O God, how longe shall the aduersarye do this dishonour? how longe shal the enemy blaspheme thy name? for euer?
11 Why withdrawest thou thyne hand? why L pluckest thou not thy righthande out of thy bosome, to consume thyne enemyes?
12 But God is my kynge of olde, the helpe is done vpon earth, he doth it him selfe.
13 Thou diuidest the se throwe thy power, thou breakest the heades of the dragons in waters.
14 Thou smytest the heades of Leuiathan in peces, and gyuest him to be meat for the people in the wildernesse.
15 Thou dryuest vp welles and brokes, thou dryest vp myghty waters.
16 The daye is thyne, and the nyght is thyne:
thou hast prepared the lyghte and the Sunne.
17 Thou hast set al the borders of the earthe, thou hast made both somer and wynter.
18 Remembre this, O Lorde, how the enem-pheme thy name.

19 O deliuer not the soule of thy turtle dowe vnto the beastes, and forget not the congrega-cion of the poore for euer.
20 Loke vpon the couenaunt, for the darcke places of the earth are full of wyckednesse. D 21 O let not the symple go awaye ashamed:
for the poore and nedye geue prayse vn-

Arise, O God, and maynteyne thyne owne cause, remembre how the foolysh man blaspheme meth the daylye.

Forget not the voyce of thyne enemyes, for the presumption of them that hate the, increaseth euer more and more.

¶ To the chaunter, destroye not, a Psalme and songe of Asaph.

A VNto the, O God, will we geue thankes, yea vnto the will we geue thankes, and seynge thy name is so nyghe, we shall tell of thy wondrous workes.

When I maye get a conuenient tyme, I shall iudge accordynge vnto right.

The earth is weake and all that is therin, but I beare vp her pyllers.

I sayde vnto the mad people, vse not so muche, and to the vngodly: set not vp youre hornes.

Set not vp your hornes on hyghe, & speake not with a styff neckе.

For promotion commeth neyther from the East nor fro the west, nor yet from the wyldernesse.

And why? God is the iudge: he putteth downe one, and setteth vp an other.

For in the hande of the Lorde there is a cup full of stronge wyne, and he powreth out of the same:

As for the dregges therof, all the vngodly of the earth shall drynke them, and lycke the sute.

But I will talke of the God of Jacob, and praise him for euer.

All the hornes of the vngodly wyl I breake and the hornes of the righteous shall be exalted.

PSAL. LXXV.

¶ To the chaunter, in Neginoth, a Psalme and songe of Asaph.

IN Juda is God knowen, his name is great in Israel.

At Salem is his tabernacle, & his dwellynge in Sion.

There breaketh he the arowes of the bowe the shylde, the swearde, and the hole battayle.

Thou art of more honour and myght then the hylles of robbers.

The proude shall be robbed and slepe their slepe, and the myghty shal be able to worke nothinge with their handes.

When thou rebukest them, O God of Jacob, both the charettes and horsemen shal fall on slepe.

Thou arte fearefull, for who maye abyde in thy sight, when thou art angry?

When thou lettest thy iudgement be herde fro me heauen, the earthe trembleth and is styll.

Yea when God ariseth to gyue iudgemente and to helpe all them that be in aduersite vpō earth. Selah.

When thou punyshest one man, he muste knowledge that thou arte redye to punyshe other mo.

Loke what ye promyse vnto § Lorde youre God, se that ye kepe it, all ye that be rounde aboute him: bringe presentes vnto him that ought to be feared.

Which taketh away the breth of princes and is wonderfull amonge the kynges of the earth.

¶ To the chaunter, for Idithun a Psalme of Asaph.

I Cryed vnto God with my voyce, yea vnto God cryed I with my voyce, and he hearke me. A

In the tyme of my trouble I sought the Lorde, I helde vp myne handes vnto him in § nyghte season, for my soule refused all other comforte.

When I was in heuynesse, I thought vpō God: when my hert was vexed, then dyd I speake. Selah.

Thou holdest myne eyes waakynge, I was so feble, that I coulde not speake.

Then remembred I the tymes of olde, and the yeres that were past. B

I called to remembraunce my songe in the nyght, I communed with myne owne hert, & sought out my spirite.

Will the Lorde cast out for euer?

Will he be no more intreated?

Is his mercy cleane gone?

Is his promyse come vtterly to an ende for euermore?

Hathe the Lorde forgotten to be gracious?

Or, hath he shut vp his louynge kyndnesse C in displeasure?

At the laste, I came to this poynte, that I thought: O why art thou so foolysh? § right hande of the most hyghest can chaunge all.

Therfore will I remembre the workes of § Lorde, and cal to mynde thy wonders of olde tyme.

I will speake of al thy workes, and my talkynge shalbe of thy wyrkynge.

Thy waye, O God, is holye: who is so great and mighty as God?

Thou arte the God that wirkest wonders, thou hast declared thy power among the people.

Thou with thyne arme hast deliuered thy people, euen the sonnes of Jacob and Joseph D Selah.

The waters sawe the, O God, the waters sawe the, and were afraied, the depthes were moued.

The thicke cloudes powred out water, the cloudes thondered, and thyne arowes went abroade.

Thy thonder was herde rounde about, the lyghtlyghtnynges shone vpon the grounde, the earth was moued and shoke withall.

Thy waye was in the see, and thy pathes in the great waters, yet could no man knowe thy foteteppes.

Thou leddest thy people lyke a flocke of sheepe, by the hande of Moses and Aaron.

PSAL. LXXVII.

¶ An instruction of Asaph.

A HEare my lawe, O my people, enclyne your eares vnto ỹ wordes of my mouth I will open my mouth in parables, & speake of thinges of olde.

Which we haue herde and knowen, & suche as our fathers haue told vs.

That we should not hyde theym from the children of the generacyons to come: but to shewe the honoure of the Lorde, his myght and wonderfull workes that he hathe wrought.

He made a couenaũt with Jacob, and gaue Israel a lawe, which he cõmaunded our forefathers to teache their children.

That their posteritie myght know it, & the children which were yet vnborne.

To thintent that when they came vp, they might shewe their children the same.

That they also might put their trust in God & not to forget what he had wrought, but to kepe his commaundmentes.

And not to be as their forefathers, a frowarde and euer froward generacyon, a generacyon that set not their hert a right, and whose spirite was not true towarde God.

B Lyke as the children of Ephraim, which beynge harnessed and carryenge bowes, turned them selues back in the tyme of batayle.

They kept not the couenaunt of God, and would not walke in his lawe.

They forgat what he hadde wrought, and the wonderfull workes that he hadde shewed for them.

Marueilous thinges dyd he in the sight of our fathers in the lande of Egypte, euen in ỹ felde of Zoan.

He dryuyded the see and let theym goo throw it, and made the waters to stande lyke a wall.

In the day tyme he led them with a cloude and all the nyghte throwe with a lyght of fyre.

He cloue the hard rockes in the wyldernes and gaue them drynke therof, as it had bene out of the great deapth.

He brought waters oute of the stony rocke, so that they gusshed out lyke the ryuers.

Yet for all this they synned agaynste him, and prouoked the most hyghest in the wyldernesse.

They tempted God in their hertes, and required meate for their lust.

C For they spake againſt God, and sayde: yea, God shall prepare a table in the wyldernes, shall he?

Lo, he smote the stony rocke, that the waters streames gusshed oute, and the streames flowed with all: but how can he geue bred & prouyde flesh for his people?

When the Lorde herde this, he was wroth so the fyre was kyndled in Jacob, and hevye displeasure againſt Israel. Numer.xi.d

Because they beleued not in God, and put not their trust in his helpe.

So he commaunded the cloudes about, & opened the wyes of heauen.

He rayned downe Manna vpon theym for to eate, and gaue them bred from heauen. Exo.xvi.c

Then ate they angels fode, for he sent the meat ynough. Numer.xi.b.

He caused the east wynde to blow vnder ỹ heauen, and throwe his power he brought in the south wynde. 1.Cor.x.c

He made flesh to rayne vpõ them as thicke as dust, and fethered foules lyke as the sande of the see. Numer.xi.g

He let it fall amonge their tentes rounde about their habitacions.

So they ate, and were fylled, for he gaue them their owne desire.

They were not disappointed of their lust. Numer.xi.g

But whyle the meat was yet in their mouthes: the heuy wrath of God came vpõ them & slewe the welthyest of them, & smote downe the chosen men of Israel. D

But for all this they synned yet more, and beleued not his wonderous workes.

Therfore their dayes were consumed in vanitie, & sodenly their yeres were gone.

When he slewe them, they sought him, and turned them early vnto God.

They thought then that God was their succoure, and that the hyghe God was their redemer.

Neuertheles they dyd but flatter him in their mouthes, & dissembled with him in their tongues.

For their hert was not holy with him, neyther continued they in his couenaunt.

But he was so mercyfull, that he forgaue their myssededes, and destroyed them not.

Yea many a tyme turned he his wrathe awaye, and wolde not suffer his hole displeasure to aryse.

For he consydered that they were but flesh: euen a wynde that passeth awaye, and commeth not agayne.

O how oft haue they greued him in ỹ wyldernesse? E

How many a tyme haue they prouoked him in the desert?

They turned backe, and tempted God, and moued the holy one in Israel.

They thought not of his hande, in ỹ daye when he deliuered theym from the hande of the ennemy.

How he hadde wrought his myracles in Egypte, and his wondres in the lande of Zoan. Exod.vii.d

Howe he turned their waters in to bloude so that they myght not drynke of the ryuers.

How he sent lyce amonge them, to eate them vp, and frogges to destroye them. Exod.viii.d

Howe he gaue their frutes vnto the Caterpyller, and their laboure vnto the Graſshopper.

Howe he bet wyne their vyneyardes with hayle ſtones, and their Mulbery trees with the froſt.

Howe he ſmote their catell with hayle ſtones, and their flockes with hoote thonder bolte.

Exod. 12. a. Exod. 11. a.

Howe he ſent vpon them the furyeuſnes of his wyath, anger and diſpleaſure: with trouble and ſallynge in of euyll aungels.

Howe he made a waye to his fearefull indignacion, and ſpared not their ſoules from death, yea and gaue their catell ouer to the peſtilence.

Howe he ſmote all the firſt borne in Egypt the moſt principal and myghtyeſt in the dwellynges of Ham.

Exod. 15. b. Exod. 13. c.

His owne people he lead theym forth lyke ſheepe, and carred them in the wylderneſſe like a flocke.

He brought the out ſafely, that they ſhuld not feare, and ouerwhelmed their enemyes with the ſee.

He carred the vnto the bordors of his Sanctuarie euen to this hyll, which he purchaſed with his right hande.

Iohue. xiii. b.

He dyd caſt out the Heythen before them, ꝛ cauſed their lande to be diuyded among them for an heritage, and made the tribes of Iſrael to dwell in their tentes.

For all this they tempted and diſpleaſed the moſt hyghe God, and kept not his couenaunt.

But tourned their backes, and fell awaye lyke their forefathers, ſtartinge aſyde lyke a broken bowe.

And ſo they greued hym with their hyghe places, and prouoked him with their ymages.

When God herde this, he was wroth, and toke ſore diſpleaſure at Iſrael.

So that he forſoke the tabernacle in Silo, Psal. 77. a. euen his habitacion wherin he dwelt among men.

He deliuered their power into captiuite, ꝛ their glory into the enemyes hande.

He gaue his people ouer into the ſwerde, for he was wroth with his heritage.

The fire conſumed their yong men, ꝛ their maydens were not geuen to mariage.

Their prieſtes were ſlayne with the ſwerde, and there were no wydowes to make lamentation.

So the Lorde awaked as one oute of ſlepe and lyke a ſtrong champion refreſhed with wyne.

He ſmote his enemyes in the hynder parties, and put them to a perpetual ſhame.

He refuſed the tabernacle of Joſeph, ꝛ chooſe not the tribe of Ephraim.

Neuertheleſſe, he chooſe the tribe of Juda, euen the hyll of Syon which he loued.

And there he buylded his temple on hyghe, and layde the foundacion of it lyke the ground that it myght perpetually endure.

He chooſe Dauid alſo his ſeruaunt, ꝛ toke him awaye from the ſhepe folders.

As he was folowynge the ewes great with yonge, he toke hym, that he myght fede Jacob his people, and Iſrael his enheritaunce.

So he fed theym with a faithfull and true hert, and ruled them with al the diligence of his power.

A Pſalme of Aſaph.

O God, the Heythen are broke into thyne heritage: the holy temple haue they wꝑfyled, and made Jeruſalem an heape of ſtones. 1

The dead bodyes of thy ſeruauntes haue they geuen vnto the foules of the ayre to be deuoured, and the fleſh of thy ſayntes vnto the beaſtes of the lande. 1. Macha. 7. a.

Their bloude haue they ſhed lyke water on euery ſyde of Jeruſalem, and there was no man to bury them.

We are become an open ſhame vnto our enemyes, a very ſcorne and deriſion vnto them that are round about vs. 2

Lorde, how longe wilt thou be angry? shal thy gelouſy burne lyke fire for euer?

Poure out thyne indignacion vpon the heythen that know the not, and vpon the kyngdomes that cal not vpon thy name.

For they haue deuoured Jacob, and layde waſt his dwellynge place. Jeremy. x. b.

O remembre not our olde ſynnes, but haue mercy vpon vs, and that ſone, for we are come to great myſery.

Helpe vs, O God our ſauioure, for the glory of thy name: O deliuer vs, ꝛ forgyue vs our ſynnes for thy names ſake.

Wherfore ſhall the Heythen ſay: where is now their God?

O let the vengeaunce of thy ſeruātes bloude that is ſhed, be openly ſhewed vpon the Heythen in our ſight. 3

O let the ſorowfull ſyghynge of thy priſoners come before the, and accordyng vnto the power of thyne arme, preſerue thoſe that are appoynted to dye.

And for the blaſphemye wherewith our neyghbours haue blaſphemed the, rewarde theym, O Lorde, ſeuen folde into their boſome.

So we that be the people and ſhepe of thy paſture, ſhall gyue the thankes for euer, and will alwaye be ſhewynge forthe thy prayſe more and more.

HEare O thou ſhepeherde of Iſrael, thou that leadeſt Joſeph lyke a flocke of ſheepe ſhewe thy ſelfe, thou that ſytteſt vpon the Cherubyns. 1

Before Ephraim, Ben Jamin, and Manaſſes: ſtyre vp thy power, and come helpe vs.

Turne

Tourne vs agayne, O God, shewe the lyghte of thy countenaunce, and we shall be hole.

O Lorde God of hostes: howe longe wylte thou be angrye ouer the prayer of thy people?

Thou hast fed the with the breed of teares: yea thou hast gruen them plenteousnes of teares to drinke.

Thou hast made vs a verye stryfe vnto our neyghbours: and our ennemyes laughe vs to scorne.

Turne vs agayn thou God of hostes: shewe the lyghte of thy countenaunce, and we shall be hole.

Thou hast brought a vyneyarde forthe of Egypt: thou diddest cast out the Heythen, and plant it.

Thou madest rowme for it, and caused it to take rote, so that it fylled the lande.

The hylles were couered with the shadowe of it: and so were the strong Cedar trees with the boughes therof.

She stretched out her braunches vnto the see: and her boughes vnto the water.

Why hast thou then broken downe her hedge: that all they which go by, pluche of her grapes?

The wylde bore oute of the wod hathe roted it vp: and the beestes of the felde haue deuoured it.

Turne the agayn thou God of hostes: loke downe from heuen, beholde and vysyte this vineyarde.

Mayntayn it that thy right hand hath planted: and the sonne whom thou madest so moche of for thy selfe.

For why? it is brent with fyre, and fyrethwaste: O let them perish at the rebuke of thy wrathe.

Lette thy hande be vpon the man of thy ryghte hande: and vpon the man whom thou madest so moche of, for thyne owne sake.

And so wyll not we goo backe from the: Oh lette vs lyue, and we shall call vpon thy name.

Turne vs agayne, o Lorde God of hostes: shewe the lyght of thy countenaunce, and we shall be hole.

PSAL. LXXX.

To the chaunter vpon Gethith, of Asaph.

SIng merely vnto God, whiche is our strength: make a cheerefull noyse vnto the God of Jacob.

Take the psalme, bring hyther the tabret: the mery harpe and lute.

Blow vp the trompettes in the new mone: vpon our solemne feast daye.

For this is the ordre in Israel: and a lawe of the God of Jacob.

This he ordeined in Joseph for a testimony, when he came out of Egypt: and had herde a straunge language.

When he eased his shoulder from the burthen: & when his handes were deliuered from the potters.

When thou calledst vpon me in trouble, I holpe the & herd the, what time as the storme fell vpon the: I proued the also at the water of stryfe. Selah.

Heare, o my people: for I assure the, o Israel, yf thou wylte herken vnto me:

There shall no straunge God be in the: neyther shalte thou worshyppe any other God.

I am the Lord thy God which brought the out of the lande of Egypt: open thy mouthe wyde, and I shal fyll it.

But my people wolde not heare my voyce: and Israel wolde not obey me.

So I gaue them vp vnto their owne hertes lust: and let them folowe their owne imaginacions.

O that my people wolde obey me: for if Israel wolde walke in my wayes:

I shoulde soone put downe their ennemyes: and tourne myne hande agaynst their aduersaries.

The haters of the Lorde shoulde mysse Israell: but their tyme shoulde endure for euer.

He shoulde fede them with the fynest whete floure: and satisfye them with honye out of the stonye rocke.

PSAL. LXXXI.

A Psalme of Asaph.

GOd standeth in the congregacion of the Gods: and is a Iudge amonge the Iudges.

Howe longe wyll ye geue wronge iudgement: and accept the persons of the vngodly? Selah.

Defende the poore and fatherlesse: se that suche as be in nede and necessite haue ryghte.

Deliuer the outcast and poore: and saue him from the hande of the vngodly.

Neuertheles they wil not be learned and vnderstande, but walke on styll in darckenesse: therfore must all the foundacion of the lande be moued.

I haue sayd, ye are gods: ye are the chyldren of the most hyest.

But ye shal dye lyke men: and fall like one of the tyraunces.

Aryse, O God, and iudge thou the earthe: for all Heythen are thyne by enheritaunce.

PSAL. LXXXII.

A Songe and Psalme of Asaph.

HOlde not thy tonge, O God, kepe not styll silence: ceasse not thy selfe, O God.

For loo, thyne ennemyes make a murmurynge: and they that hate the, lyfte vp their heed.

They ymagen craftely agaynste thy people: and take counsell agaynste thy secrete ones.

For they haue cast theyr heades togyther with one consente: and are confederate agaynst the.

The tabernacles of the Edomytes and Ismaelytes: the Moabytes and Hagarenes.

Gebal, Ammon, and Amalech: the Philistines with them that dwel at Tyre.

Assur also is ioyned vnto them, and helpe the children of Lot. Selah.

But do thou to them as vnto the Madianites, vnto Sisera: and vnto Jabin by the broke of Kison.

Which perished at Endor: and became as the donge of the erth.

Make all their princes lyke Oreb and Zeb: yea make all their princes lyke as Zeba and Salmana.

Which saye, we wyll haue the houses of God in possession.

O my God, make them lyke vnto a whele, as the stubble before the wynde.

Lyke as a fyre that burneth vp the wodde, and as the flame that consumeth the mountaynes.

Persecute them euen so with thy tempest, & make them afrayde with thy storme.

Make their faces ashamed, o Lorde, that they may seke thy name.

Lette them be confounded and vexed euer more and more: let them be put to shame and perysshe.

That they maye knowe that thou arte alone, that thy name is the Lorde: and that thou only arte the moost hyest ouer all the earthe.

PSAL. LXXXIII.

To the chief Musitian vpon Gittith, a Psalme of the sonnes of Corah.

How amiable are thy dwellinges, thou Lorde of hostes?

My soule hath a desire & longing for the court of the Lord: my hert and my flesshe reioyse in the liuing God.

For the sparow hath founde her an house, & the swalow a nest, where she may lay her yong: euen thy aulters, o Lorde of hostes, my kynge and my God.

O howe blessed are they that dwell in thy house? they are alwaye praysynge the. Selah.

Blessed are the men whose strengthe is in the: in whose herte are thy wayes.

Which goyng thorow the valey of misery vse it for a well, and the pooles are fylled with water.

They goo fromte strengthe to strengthe, and so the God of gooddes appeareth vnto theym in Sion.

O Lorde God of hostes, heare my prayer: harken, o God of Jacob.

Beholde o God our defence, loke vpon the face of thyne annoynted.

For one daye in thy courte, is better then a thousande.

I haue rather be a porter in the house of my God: then to dwel in the tentes of the vngodly.

For the Lorde God is a lyght and defence, the Lorde wyll gyue grace and worshyp, and no good thinge shall be withholde from them that liue a godly lyfe.

O Lorde God of hostes: blessed is the man that putteth his trust in the.

PSAL. LXXXIIII.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of the sonnes of Korah.

Lorde, thou hast a loue vnto thy lande thou broughtest bryng agayne the captiuitie of Jacob.

Thou hast forgyue the offence of thy people: and couered all theyr synnes. Selah.

Thou tokest awaye all thy displeasure, and turnedst thy selfe from thy wrathful indignacion.

Turne vs then, o God our sauyour, and let thyne angre cease from vs.

Wilt thou be displeased at vs for euer? wilt thou stretche out thy wrath from one generacion to an other?

Wilt thou not turne agayn and quicken vs, that thy people may reioyse in the?

I wyl harken what the Lord God wil say, for he shal speake peax vnto his people, and to his saynctes, that they tourne not them selues vnto folysshenesse.

For his saluacio is nye them that feare him: so that glory shal dwell in our lande.

Mercy and truth are met togither, rightousnesse and peax kysse eche other.

Truthe shall ryse oute of the earthe: and rightousnesse shall loke downe from heauen.

And why? the Lorde shall shewe louynge kyndnesse: and oure lande shall gyue her increase.

Rightousnesse shall go before him, and prepare the waye for his comming.

PSAL. LXXXV.

A Prayer of David.

Bowe downe thyne eare, O Lorde, and heare me: for I am comfortlesse and poore.

Kepe my soule, for I am holy: my God helpe thy seruaunte that putteth his trust in the.

Be mercyfull vnto me, o Lorde, for I call dayly vpon the.

Comfort the soule of thy seruaunt, for vnto the, o Lorde, do I lyft vp my soule.

For

For thou Lorde arte good and gracyous: and of greate mercye vnto all them that call vpon the.

Gyue eare Lorde vnto my prayer, and pondre my humble desire.

In the tyme of my trouble I cal vpon the, for thou hearest me.

Among the goddes there is none lyke vnto the, o Lorde, there is not one that can worke as thou doest.

All nacyons whome thou hast made, shall come and worshyp before the, o Lorde, & shall glorifye thy name.

For thou art greate, thou doest wonderous thynges, thou art God alone.

Leade me in thy waye, o Lorde, that I may walke in thy truth: o let my hert vnite in fearing thy name.

I thanke the, o Lorde my God: and wyll glorifye thy name for euer.

For great is thy mercye towarde me: thou hast deliuered my soule frome the nethermost hell.

O God, the proude are risen agaynste me, and the congregacion of the myghtye seketh after my soule, and sette not the before theyr eyes.

But thou, o Lorde God, art full of compassion and mercy, long suffringe, great in goodnes and trueth.

O turne the then vnto me, haue mercye vpon me: gyue thy strengthe vnto thy seruaunte, and helpe the sonne of thyne handmayde.

Shewe some token vpon me for good, that they whiche hate me, maye se it, and be ashamed: because thou Lorde hast holpen me, and comforted me.

PSAL. LXXXVI.

A Psalme and songe of the sonnes of Corah.

HEr foundacyons are vpon the holye hylles: the Lorde loueth the gates of Sion more then all the dwellynges of Jacob.

Mercye excellent thynges are spoken of the thou cyte of God. Selah.

I will thynke vpon Rahab and Babylon, so that they shall knowe me.

Yea the Philistynes also, and they of Tyre, with the Moryans. Lo, there was he borne.

And of Sion it shal be reported, that he was borne in her, euen the moost hyest which hath buylded her.

The Lorde shal cause it to be preached and written among the people, that he was borne there. Selah.

Therfore the dwellynge of all syngers and daunsers is in the.

PSAL. LXXXVII.

A Psalme and songe of the sonnes of Corah, to the chaunter vpon Mahelath, for affliction, an instruction of Heman the Ezrahyte.

O Lorde God my sauioure, I crye daye and nyght before the: oh let my prayer enter in to thy presence, enclyne thyne eare vnto my callyng.

For my soule is full of trouble, and my lyfe draweth nygh vnto hell.

I am counted as one of the that go downe vnto the pit: I am euen as a man that hath no strength.

Free amonge the dead, lyke vnto them that lye in the graue: whiche be oute of remembraunce, and are cutte awaye frome thy hande.

Thou hast layde me in the lowest pit, in the darcknesse, and in the depe.

Thyne indignacyon lyeth harde vpon me: and thou vexest me with all thy floudes. Selah.

Thou hast put awaye myne acquayntaunce farre fro me: and made me to be abhorred of them: I am so fast in prison, that I can not get forth.

My syght fayleth for very trouble: Lorde I cal daylye vpon the, and stretche out my handes vnto the.

Doest thou shewe wonders amonge the dead?

Can the Phisitions rayse them vp agayne, that they may prayse the?

Maye thy louynge kyndnesse be shewed in the graue: or thy faythfulnesse in destruction?

Maye thy wonderous workes be knowen in the darcke? or thy righteousnesse in the lande where all thynges are forgotten?

Vnto the I cry, o Lorde, and early commeth my prayer before the.

Lorde, why puttest thou awaye my soule? wherfore hydest thou thy face fro me?

My strengthe is gone for very sorowe and miserye: with fearfulnesse doo I beare thy burthens.

Thy wrathfull displeasure goeth ouer me: the feare of the oppresseth me.

They come rounde aboute me daylye lyke waters: and compasse me togyther on euerye syde.

My louers and frendes hast thou put awaye fro me: and taken awaye myne acquayntaunce.

PSAL. LXXXVIII.

A Instruction of Ethan the Ezrahyte.

MY songe shall be alwaye of the louynge kyndnesse of the Lorde: with my mouthe wyll I euer declarynge thy faythfulnesse frome one generacion to an other.

For I haue sayd: mercye shall be set vp for euer, thy faythfulnesse shalt thou stablyshe in the heuens.

* I haue made a couenaunte with my chosen: I haue sworne vnto Dauid my seruaunte.

Thy seed wyll I stablyshe for euer, and set vp by thy trone frome one generacyon to an other.

Psal. 111. O Lorde, the verye heuens shall prayse thy wonderous worckes, yea and thy faythfulnesse in the congregacion of the sayntes.

For who is he among the cloudes, that may be compared vnto the Lorde?

Yea what is he amonge the goddes, that is lyke vnto the Lorde?

God is greatly to be feared in the counsel of the sayntes, & to be had in reuerence of all them that are aboute him.

O Lorde God of hostes, who is lyke vnto the in power? thy truthe is roundе aboute the.

Thou abatest the ragynge of the see: thou stillest the waues therof, when they aryse.

Thou breakest the proude lyke one that is wounded, thou scatterest thyne enemies abrode with thy mighty arme.

The heuens are thyne, the erth is thyne: thou hast layed the foundacion of the round worlde, and all that therin is.

Thou hast made the Northe and the Southe: Tabor and Hermon shall reioyse in thy name.

Thou hast a mygthye arme, stronge is thy hande, and hye is thy ryght hande.

Ryghteousnesse and equitie is the habitacion of thy seate: mercye and truthe goo before thy face.

Blessed is ỹ people, o Lorde, that can reioyse in the, and walketh in the lyght of thy countenaunce.

Their delyte is in thy name all the daye long, and thorow thy righteousnesse they shall be exalted.

For thou arte the glorye of their strengthe and thorowe thy fauoure shalte thou lyfte vp our hornes.

The Lorde is our defence: and the holy one of Israel is our kyng.

Psal. 89. Then spakest sometimes in visions vnto thy sayntes, and sayedest: I haue layd helpe vpon one that is mighty, I haue exalted one chosen out of the people.

I haue founde Dauid my seruaunt: with my holy oyle I haue annoynted him.

Psal. 2. Act. 13. My hande shall holde him fast: and myne arme shall strengthen him.

The ennemye shall not ouercome hym: and the sonne of wickednesse shall not hurte hym.

I shal smyte downe his foes before his face: and plage them that hate him.

My truthe also and my mercye shall be with him: and in my name shall his horne be exalted.

I will set his hande in the see: and his ryght hande in the floudes.

He shall call me: thou arte my father, my God, and the strengthe of my saluacion.

And I will make him my fyrstborne: hyer then the kynges of the erth.

Psal. 2. My mercye will I kepe for him for euermore: and my couenaunte shall stande fast with him.

His seed will I make to endure for euer, yea and his trone as the dayes of heuen.

But yf his children forsake my lawe: and walke not in my iudgementes.

Yf they breake mine ordinaunces: and kepe not my commaundementes.

I will visit their offences with the rod: and their synnes with scourges.

Neuertheles my louynge kyndnesse will I not vtterly take from him: ne suffre my truth to fayle.

My couenaunt will I not breake: nor disanulle the thynge that is gone oute of my lyppes.

Psal. 132. I haue swoorne onys by my holynesse, that I will not fayle Dauid.

His seede shall endure for euer, and his seate also lyke as the sunne before me.

He shall stande fast for euermore as the moone: and as the faythfull wytnesse in heuen. Selah.

But now thou forsakest and abhorrest thine annoynted: and art displeased at him.

Thou hast tourned backe the couenaunte of thy seruaunte: and caste his crowne to the grounde.

Thou hast ouerthrowen al his hedges: and broken downe his strong holdes.

All they that go by, spoyle him: he is become a rebuke vnto his neyghbours.

Thou settest vp the ryghte hande of his enemyes: and makest all his aduersaryes to reioyse.

Thou hast taken awaye the strengthe of his swerde: and gyuest him not victorye in the battayle.

Thou hast put out his glorye: and cast his trone downe to the ground.

The dayes of his youthe hast thou shortened: and couered him with dishonoure. Selah.

Lorde, howe longe wylte thou hyde thy selfe? for euer? shall thy wrathe burne lyke fyre?

O remembre howe shorte my tyme is: haste thou made all men for nought? what man is he that liueth, and shall not se deathe?

Psal. 49. Kepe a man delyuer his owne soule from the hande of hell? Selah.

Lorde, where are thy olde louynge kyndnesses, which thou swoorest vnto Dauid in thy truthe?

Remembre, Lorde, the rebuke that the multytude of thy people doo vnto thy seruauntes, and howe I haue borne it in my bosome.

Wherewith thyne ennemyes blaspheme the: and slaunder the fotesteppes of thyne annoynted.

Thankes be to the Lorde for euermore: Amen, Amen.

PSAL. LXXXIX.

A prayer of Moyses the man of God.

Lorde

A LOrde, thou art oure refuge frome one generacion to an other.

Before the mountaynes were brought forthe, or euer the earthe and the worlde were made, thou art God from euerlasting & worlde without ende.

Thou tournest man to destruction: & sayne thou sayest: come agayne ye children of men.

For a thousande yeres in thy syghte, are but B as yesterdaye that is past, and lyke as it were a nyght watche.

As soone as thou scatterest them, they are euen as a slepe: and fade awaye sodenly lyke the grasse.

In the morynge it is grene and groweth vp: but in the euenynge it is cut downe and wythered.

For we consume awaye in thy displeasure: and are afrayde at thy wrathfull indignacion.

Thou settest our mysdedes before the: and C our secrete synnes in the syghte of thy countenaunce.

For when thou art angrye, all our dayes are gone: we bringe oure yeres to an ende, as it were a tale that is tolde.

The dayes of oure age are thre score yeres and ten: and thoughe men be so stronge that they come to foure score yeres, yet is their strength then but labour and sorowe: so soone passeth it awaye and we are gone.

But who regardeth the power of thy wrathe, thy fearefull and terrible displeasure?

O teache vs to nombre oure dayes, that we maye applye oure hertes vnto wysedome.

Turne the agayne, o Lorde, at the last: and D be gracious vnto thy seruauntes.

O satisfie vs with thy mercy, and that sone: so shall we reioyse and be glad all the dayes of our lyfe.

Comfort vs agayn now after the time that thou hast plaged vs: and for the yeres wherin we haue suffered aduersitie.

Shewe thy seruantes thy worke: and their children thy glory.

And the glorious maiestie of the Lorde our God be vpon vs: O prospere thou the worke of our handes vpon vs: o prospere thou oure handy worke.

PSAL. XC.

E WHo so dwelleth vnder the defence of the most hyest, and abideth vnder the shadow of the almyghty.

He shall saye vnto the Lorde: o my hope, and my stronge holde, my God, in whome I wyll trust.

For he shall deliuer the frome the snare of the hunter: and frome the noysome pestylence.

He shall couer the vnder his wynges, that thou mayste be safe vnder his fethers: his faythfulnesse and truthe shal be thy shilde and buckeler.

So that thou shalt not nede to be afrayd for any bugges by nyght, ne for the arowe that fleeth by daye.

For the pestilence that creepeth in the darcknesse: ne for the sickenesse that wasteth in the noone daye. B

A thousande shal fall besyde, and ten thousande at thy right hand: but it shal not come nye the.

Yea with thyne eyes shalt thou beholde: & se the rewarde of the vngodly.

For thou Lorde art my hope: thou hast set thyne house of defence very hye.

There shall no euyll happen vnto the: C (Psalm. xci. b; Luc. xxi. a) neyther shall anye plage come nye thy dwellynge.

For he shal giue his aungels charge ouer the to kepe the in all thy wayes.

They shall beare the in their handes, that thou hurt not thy fote agaynst a stone.

Thou shalt go vpon the lyon and adder, the yong lyon and the dragon shalt thou treade vnder thy fete.

Because he hath set his loue vpon me, I shal deliuer him: I shall defende him, for he hath knowen my name.

When he calleth vpon me, I shall heare him: yea I am with him in his trouble, I wyll deliuer him, and bringe him to honoure.

With long lyfe wil I satisfye him, and shewe him my saluacion.

PSAL. CXI. After the Hebrues text.

C A psalme of the longe for the Saboth daye.

IT is a good thing to giue thankes vnto the Lorde: and to sing prayses vnto thy name, A o moost hyest.

To tell of thy louynge kyndnesse earlye in the morynge: and of thy truthe in the nyghtseason.

Vpon an instrumente of tenne stringes: vpon the Lute, and with the songe vpon the harpe.

For thou Lorde hast made me glad thorowe thy workes: and I wil reioyse ouer the operacio of thy handes.

O Lorde, how glorious are thy workes, thy thoughtes are very depe.

An vnwise man wyl not knowe this: and a fole wil not vnderstande it. B

That the vngodly are grene as the grasse: & that all the workes of wickednesse do florisshe to be destroyed for euer.

But thou Lorde, o most hyest, abidest worlde without ende.

For loo, thyne ennemyes, O Lorde, loo, thyne ennemyes shall perysshe: and all the workes of wickednesse shall be scattered abrode.

But my horne shal be exalted like the horne of an Vnicorne, and shall be annoynted with freshe oyle.

Myne eye also shall se his lust of his ennemyes: and myne eare shall heare his desire of the wicked that rise vp agaynst me. C

The

The righteous shall florysshe lyke a palme tree, and growe lyke a Cedre of Libanus.

Such as be planted in the house of the Lorde, be fruytfull, plentyous and grene.

That they may shewe, how true the Lorde my strength is, & that there is no unrighteousnesse in him.

PSAL. XCII.

After the Hebrue.

THe Lorde is kynge, and hath put on glorious apparell: the Lorde hathe put on his apparell: and gyrded hym selfe with strength: he hath made the rounde worlde so sure, that it can not be moved.

From that time forth hath the seat ben prepared: thou art from everlastynge.

The flouddes are lyft up (O Lorde) the flouddes lyft up their noyse, the flouddes lyfte up their waues.

The waues of the see are mighty, and rage horribly: but yet the Lorde that dwelleth on lyne, is mightyer.

Thy testimonyes, O Lorde, are verye sure: holynesse becommeth thyne house for ever.

PSAL. XCIII.

After the Hebrue.

O Lorde God, to whom vengeaunce belongeth: thou God to whom vengeaunce belongeth, shewe thy selfe.

Lyfte thou uppe of the worlde, and rewarde the proude after their deservynge.

Lorde how long shal the ungodly, how long shal the ungodly tryumphe?

Howe longe shall all wycked dedes speake so disdaynfully: and make suche proude boastynge?

They smyte downe thy people, o Lorde, and trouble thyne heritage.

They murther the widow and the straunger: and put the fatherlesse to deth.

And yet they saye, tushe, the Lorde seeth not: the God of Jacob regardeth it not.

Take hede ye unwyse amonge the people: o ye fooles, when will ye understande?

He that planteth the eare, shal he not heare? he that made the eye, shal he not se?

He that nourtureth the Heythen: and teacheth a man knowlege, shall he not punysshe?

The Lorde knoweth the thoughtes of men that they are but vayne.

Blessed is the man whome thou lernest (O Lorde) and teachest him in thy lawe.

That thou mayst geue him pacience in time of aduersitie, untyll the pyt be digged for the ungodly.

For the Lorde will not forsake his people, neither will he forsake his inheritaunce.

And why? iudgement shal be turned againe unto righteousnesse, and all suche as be true of herte shall folowe it.

Who ryseth up with me agaynste the wycked? who taketh my parte agaynst the euyll doers?

If the Lorde had not holpen me, my soule had almost ben put to sylence.

Whē I sayd: my fote hath slypped, thy mercy (o Lorde) holde me up.

In the multitude of the sorowes that I had in my herte, thy comfortes have refreshed my soule.

Wylt thou have any thyng to do with the stole of wickednes, which ymagineth mischefe in the lawe?

They gather them togyther against the soule of the righteous, and condemne the innocent bloude.

But the Lorde is my refuge, my God is the strength of my confidence.

He shall recompence them their wickednesse: and destroye them in their owne malyce: yea the Lorde oure God shall destroye them.

PSAL. XCIIII.

Here the Hebrues begynne.

OCome let us praise the Lord, let us hertely reioyce in the strengthe of oure saluacion.

Let us come before his presence with thankesgyuynge, and shewe our selfe glad in hym with psalmes.

For the Lorde is a greate God, and a greate kynge, above all goddes.

In his hande are all the corners of the earthe: and the strengthe of the hylles is his also.

The see is his, for he made it, and his handes prepared the drye lande.

O come, let us worshyp and bowe downe our selues: let us kneele before the Lorde our maker.

For he is oure God: and we are the people of his pasture, and the shepe of his handes.

To day if ye will heare his voyce, harden not your hertes, as when ye prouoked in tyme of temptacion in the wildernesse.

Where your fathers tempted me: proued me, and sawe my workes.

Fourtye yeres longe was I grieued with that generacion, and sayde: they erre ever in their hertes, they veryly have not knowen my wayes.

Therfore I sayde unto the in my wrath: that they shulde not entre in to my rest.

PSAL. XCV.

OSynge unto the Lorde a newe songe: syng unto the Lorde all the hole earth.

Syng unto the Lorde, and prayse his name: be tellynge of his saluacion from daye to daye.

Declare his honour among the Heythē, and his wonders amonge all people.

For the Lorde is greate, and can not worthely be prayed: he is more to be feared then all goddes.

As for all the goddes of the Heythen: they be but ydols: but it is the Lord that made the heuens.

Than

Thankesgyuynge and worshyp are before him: power and honoure are in his sanc-tuarye.

Ascribe vnto the Lorde (O ye kynredes of the Heithen) ascribe vnto the Lorde worshyp and strength.

Ascribe vnto the Lorde the honoure of his name: bringe presentes, and come into his courte.

O worshyp the Lorde in the beautye of holynesse: let the hole earthe stande in awe of hym.

Tell it oute amonge the heithen: that the Lorde is kyng: and that it is he whiche hathe made the rounde worlde so fast, that it can not be moued, and how that he shal iudge the people righteously.

Let the heuens reioyse, and let the earth be glad: let the see make a noyse, yea and al that therein is.

Lette the felde be ioyfull, and all that is in it: let all the trees in the wodde leape for ioye.

Before the Lorde, for he commeth: for he cõmeth to iudge the earth: yea with righteousnes shall he iudge the worlde, and the people with his truthe.

PSAL. XCVI.

THe Lorde is kyng, the erth may be glad therof: yea the multitude of yles may be glad therof.

Clowdes and darcknesse are rounde aboute him: righteousnesse and iudgement are the habi-tacion of his state.

There goeth a fyre before him, to burne vp his enemyes on euery syde.

His lightenynges gaue shine vnto the worlde:
the erth seeth it, and is afrayde.

The hilles melt lyke waxe at the presence of the Lord of the hole erth.

The heuens declare his righteousnesse: and all the people se his glory.

Confounded be all they that worshyp images, and delite in their idols: worshyp him all ye goddes.

Sion heareth of it, and reioyseth: yea and al the doughters of Iuda are glad because of thy iudgementes, o Lorde.

For thou Lorde arte the moost hyest ouer all the earth: thou art exalted farre aboue al goddes.

O ye that loue the Lorde, se that ye hate the thyng whiche is euyll: the Lorde preserueth the soules of his seruntes, he shall deliuer them from the hande of the vngodly.

There is spronge vp a lyghte for the ryghteous: and a ioyfull gladnesse for suche as be true hearted.

Reioyse therfore in the Lorde ye righteous:
and geue thankes for a remembraunce of his holynesse.

PSAL. XCVII.

A Psalme.

SYng vnto the Lorde a newe songe: for he hathe wone maruelous thynges.

With his owne ryghte hande, and with his holye arme he hathe gotten the vic-torye.

The Lorde hath declared his sauing helth:
his righteousnes hath he openly shewed in the sight of the heithen.

He hath remembred his mercye and truthe towarde the house of Israel: so that all the endes of the worlde se the sauynge helthe of our God.

Shewe youre selues ioyfull vnto the Lorde all ye landes: synge, reioyse, and geue thankes.

Praise the Lorde vpon the harpe: synge to the harpe with a Psalme of thankesgy-uynge.

With trompettes also and shawmes: O shewe youre selues ioyfull before the Lorde
the kynge.

Let the see make a noyse, and all that the-in is: yea the hole worlde, and all that dwell therin.

Let the flodes clap their handes: and let all the hilles be ioyfull together:

Before the Lorde, for he is come to iudge the earthe.

Yea with righteousnesse shall he iudge the worlde, and the people with equitie.

PSAL. XCVIII.

After the 96. in some bookes.

THe Lorde is kynge, be the people neuer so vnpacyent: he sytteth vpon the Cherubyns, be the earthe neuer so vnquiet.

The Lorde is great in Sion, and hye aboue all people.

O let men giue thankes vnto thy great and wonderfull name, for it is holy.

The kynges power loueth iudgement, thou preparest equitie, thou executest iudgemẽt and righteousnes in Iacob.

O magnifie the Lorde our God: fal downe before his fotestole, for he is holy.

Moses and Aaron amonge his Priestes: and Samuel amonge suche as call vpon his name: these called vpon the Lorde, and he herde them.

He spake vnto them out of the cloudy piller for they kepte his testimonies, and the law that he gaue them.

Thou herdest them, o Lorde our God, thou forgauest them, o God, & punishedst their own inuentions.

O magnifie the Lord our God, and worship him vpon his holy hyll, for the Lord our God is holye.

PSAL. XCIX.

After the 98. in some bookes.

A Psalme of prayse.

BE ioyfull in God (all ye landes) serue the Lorde with gladnesse, come before his presence with ioye.

Be ye sure that the Lorde he is God: It Him is he is he that hath made vs, and not we ourselues: we are but his people, and the shepe of his pasture.

O go youre waye in to his gates then with thanckesgyuynge, and in to his courtes with prayse, be thankful vnto him, and speake good of his name.

For the Lord is gracious, his mercy is euerlastynge: and his truthe endureth from generacion to generacion.

PSAL. C.

A Psalme of Dauid.

R MY songe shall be of mercye and iudgement: yea vnto the (O Lorde) will I synge.

O let me haue vnderstandynge in the waye of godlynesse, vntyll the tyme that thou come vnto me: and so shall I walke in my house wt an innocent hert.

I will take no wycked thyng in hande: I hate the synne of vnfaythfulnesse, it shall not cleue vnto me.

A frowarde hert shal depart from me: I will not knowe a wicked person.

V Who so priuily slaundreth his neighbour, him will I destroye: who so hath a proude lokr, and an hye stomache, I maye not awaye with him.

Myne eyes shall loke for suche as be faythfull in the lande: that they maye dwell with me: and who so walketh a godly lyfe, shal be my seruaunt.

There shall no deceytfull person dwell in my house: he that telleth lyes shall not tarye in my syght.

I shall soone destroye all the vngodly of the land: that all wicked wers may be rooted oute of the cyty of the Lorde.

After the thyrde.

PSAL. CI.

A prayer of the afflicted, when he was in woe, and powred out his complaynte before the Lorde.

R HEare my prayer, o Lord, and let my crynge come vnto the.

Hyde not thy face fro me in the time of my trouble: enclyne thyne eares vnto me when I call, O heare me, and that ryghte soone.

For my dayes are consumed away like smoke: and my bones are brent vp as it were a fyre brande.

My herte is smytten downe, and withered lyke grasse: so that I forget to eate my breed.

For the voyce of my groning: my bone will scarce cleue to my flesshe.

I am become lyke a Pellycane in the wylderneesse: and lyke an owle in a broken wall.

I wake, and am euen as it were a sparowe sytting alone vpon the house top.

V Myne enemyes cruelly me all the day long: they laugh me to scorne, and are swome together against me.

I eate asshes with my breed, and mingle my drynke with wepinge.

And that because of thyne indignacion and wrath, for thou hast taken me vp, and cast me awaye.

My dayes are gone like a shadowe: and I am withered lyke grasse.

But thou, O Lorde, endurest for euer: and thy remembraunce throwe oute all generacyons.

Aryse therefore and haue mercy vpon Sion: for it is tyme to haue mercy vpon her, yea the tyme is come.

And why? thy seruauntes haue a loue to her stones: and it pityeth them to se her in the dust. E

The heythen shall feare thy name, O Lorde, and all the kynges of the earthe thy maiestye.

For the Lorde shall buylde vp Sion, & shal appere in his glory.

He tourneth hym vnto the prayer of the poore destitute: and despyseth not their desyre.

This shal be written for those that come after: that the people which shal be borne, may prayse the Lorde.

For he loketh downe from the sanctuarye: out of the heuen dothe the Lorde beholde the earthe.

That he may heare the mournynges of suche as be in captiuitie: and delyuer the chyldren of deathe.

That they maye preache the name of the Lorde in Syon: and his worshyp at Ierusalem.

When the people are gathered together: D and the kyngdomes also to serue the Lorde.

He hath brought downe my strength in my iourney: and shortened my dayes.

Yet will I saye, O my God, take me not awaye in the myddest of myne age: as for thy yeres, they endure throwe oute all generacions.

Thou Lorde in the begynning hast layd the foundacion of the erth, and the heuens are the workes of thy handes.

* They shal perishe, but thou shalt endure: & they all shall waxe olde as doth a garment, & as a vesture shalte thou chaunge them, & they shall be chaunged.

But thou art the same, and thy yeres shall not fayle.

The chyldren of thy seruauntes shall continue: and their seede shall prosperre in thy syght.

He shewed his wayes vnto Moses: and his workes vnto the children of Israel.

The Lorde is full of compassion and mercye: longe sufferynge, and of greate goodnesse.

He wil not alwaye be chiding: neither wil he kepe his anger for euer.

He hathe not dealte with vs after our synnes: ne rewarded vs accordynge to oure wickednesse.

For loke how hye the heuen is in comparison of the erth: so great is his mercy also towarde them that feare him.

Loke howe wyde the East is frome the Weste: so farre hathe he sette oure synnes from vs.

Yea like as a father pitieth his owne children: euen so is the Lorde mercyful vnto them that feare him.

For he knoweth whereof we be made: he remembreth that we are but dust.

That a man in his tyme is but as is grasse: and florisheth as a flowre of the felde.

For as soone as the wynde goeth ouer it, it is gone: and the place therof knoweth it no more.

But the mercyful goodnesse of the Lord endureth for euer and euer, vpon them that feare him, and his righteousnesse vpon their children children.

Suche as kepe his couenaunte: and thynke vpon his commaundementes, to doo them.

The Lorde hath prepared his seat in heuen: and his kyngdome ruleth ouer all.

O prayse the Lord ye aungels of his, ye that be mighty in strengthe: fulfyllynge his commaundement, that men may heare the voyce of his wordes.

O prayse the Lorde all ye his hostes, ye seruauntes of his, that do his pleasure.

O speake good of the Lorde all ye workes of his, in euery place of his dominion: prayse thou the Lorde, o my soule.

PSAL. CIII.

PRayse the Lorde, o my soule: o Lorde my God, thou arte become exceadynge glorious, thou arte clothed with majesty and honoure.

Thou wrappest thy self with light, as it were with a garment, thou spredest out the heuen like a curtayne.

Thou bouldest it about with waters, that maketh the cloudes thy charet, and goest vpon the wynges of the wynde.

Thou makest thyne aungels spirites: and thy ministers flames of fyre. Heb. 1.

Thou hast layde the erth vpon her foundacion, that it neuer moueth at any tyme.

Thou couerest it with the depe like as with a garment: so that the waters stande aboue the hylles.

But at thy rebuke they flee, at the voyce of thy thondre they are afrayde.

(Then are the hylles sene aloft, and the valeys benethe in their place which thou hast appointed for them.)

Thou hast set them their boundes, whiche they may not passe, that they turne not again to couer the erth.

Thou causest the welles to springe vp amonge the valeys, and the waters to runne amonge the hylles.

That al beastes of the feld may haue drinke, and that the wylde asses maye quenche their thirst.

Aboue vpon the hylles haue the foules of the ayre their habitation, & sing among the braunches.

Thou waterest the hylles frome aboue: the earthe is fylled with the fruites of thy workes.

Thou bryngest forth grasse for the catel, and grene herbes for the seruice of men.

Thou bringest fode out of the erth: wine to make glad the hert of man, oyle to make him a chereful countenaunce, and breed to strengthe mans herte.

The trees of the Lorde are full of sape: euen the trees of Libanus which he hath planted.

There make the birdes their nestes: and the fyrre hylles are a dwellynge for the Storche.

The hylles are a refuge for the wylde goates: and so are the stonye rockes for the conyes.

Thou hast appointed the Moone for certayne seasons, the Sunne knoweth his going downe.

Thou makest darcknesse, that it maye be nyght: wherin all the beastes of the forest wo mone.

Yea and the younge Lyons whiche rore after their praye: and seke their meate at God.

But when the sunne ariseth, they get them awaye together, and lye them downe in their dennes.

Then goeth man forth to his worke, and to tyll his lande vntyll the euenyng.

O Lorde, how manyfolde are thy workes, right wisely hast thou made them all: yea the erth is full of thy ryches. Psalm xcii. a

So is this great and wyde see also, wherin are thinges creping innumerable, both smal and great beastes.

There go the shippes ouer, and there is that Leuiathan, whom thou hast made to take his pastyme therin.

They wayte all vpon the, that thou mayste gyue them meate in due season.

When thou gyuest it them, they gather it: when thou openest thyne hande, they are filled with good.

But when thou hydest thy face, they are sorowfull: yf thou takest awaye their breathe, they dye, and are tourned againe to their dust.

Againe, whē thou lettest thy breth go forth, they are made: and so thou renuest the face of the earthe.

The glorious maiestye of the Lorde endureth for euer: and the Lorde reioyceth in his workes.

The earthe trembleth at the loke of him: he touche but touche the hylles, and they smoke.

I wyll synge vnto the Lorde as longe as I lyue: I wyll prayse my God whyle I haue my beynge.

O that my wordes might please him, for my ioye is in the Lorde.

As for synners, they shall be consumed oute of the earth: and the vngodly shal come to an ende: but prayse thou the Lorde, o my soule. Prayse the euerlastynge.

PSAL. CIIII.

Geue thankes.

Gyue thankes vnto the Lorde: and call vpon his name: tell the people what thinges he hath done.

Let your songes be of him: prayse him, and let your talkyng be of all his wonderous workes.

Geue his holy name a good reporte, let their hertes reioyce that seke the Lorde.

Seke the Lorde and his strength: seke his face euermore.

Remembre the merueylous workes that he hath done, his wonders and the iudgementes of his mouth.

O ye sede of Abraham his seruaunt, ye children of Iacob his chosen.

He is the Lord our God, whose punishmentes are thorow out all the worlde.

He is alwaye myndefull of his couenaunt, and promyse that he made to a thousand generacions.

Genes. xxii. c. Yea the couenaunte that he made with Abraham: and the othe that he sware vnto Isaac.

And appoynted the same vnto Iacob for a lawe: and to Israell for an euerlastynge testament.

Sayinge: vnto the will I geue the lande of Canaan, the lot of your heritage.

When there was yet but a fewe of them: & straungers therin.

What tyme as they wente frome one nacion to an other: frome one kyngdome to an other.

1. Par. xvi. c. He suffred no man to hurt them, but reproued euen kynges for their sakes.

Touche not myne anoynted, and my Prophetes no harme.

4. Reg. i. c. Moreouer he called for a dearthe vpon the lande: and destroyed all the prouision of breed.

But he had sente a man before them, euen Ioseph: whiche was solde to be a bonde seruaunt.

They hurt his fete in the stockes: the yron pearsed his hert.

Vntyll the tyme that his worde came: and tyll the worde of the Lorde had tryed hym.

Then sent the kynge, and ranson him & he delyuered: the prince of the people bade lette him goo.

He made him Lorde of his house: and ruler of all his substaunce.

That he myghte enforme his princes after his wyll: and teache his senatours wysedome.

Israel also came in to Egypt: & Iacob was a straunger in the lande of Ham. L

But he increased his people exceedingly: and made them stronger then their ennemies.

Whose herte tourned so, that they hated his people: and dealte vntruly with his seruauntes.

Then sent he Moses his seruaunt, & Aaron whom he had chosen.

Exod. vii. These dyd his tokens among them, & wonders in the land of Ham.

Exod. x. He sente darkenesse, and it was darcke: for they were not obedient vnto his worde.

Exod. vii. Psalm. lxxvii. He turned their waters in to bloud, & slewe their fysshe.

Exod. viii. Psalm. lxxvii. Their landes brought forth frogges: yea euen in their kynges chambres.

Exod. x. Psalm. lxxvii. He spake the worde: and there came all maner of flyes and lyce in all their quarters.

Exod. ix. Psalm. lxxvii. He gaue them hayle stones for rayne: and flames of fyre in their hande.

Exod. ix. Psalm. lxxvii. He smote their vineyardes and figge trees: and destroyed the trees that were in their coastes.

Exod. x. Psalm. lxxvii. He spake the worde, and there were grashoppers and caterpyllers innumerable.

Exod. x. Psalm. lxxvii. These ate vp all the grasse in their land, and deuoured their frutes of the grounde.

Exod. xii. Psalm. lxxvii. He smote all the first borne in the land, euē the chief of al their substaunce.

He brought them forth with siluer & golde: there was not one feble person amonge their tribes. D

Egypt was glad of their departing, for they were afrayde of them.

Exod. xiii. Psalm. lxxvii. He spredde oute a cloude to be a couerynge: and fyre to gyue lyghte in the nyghte season.

Exod. xvi. Psalm. lxxvii. At their desire there came quayles: and he filled them with the breed of heuen.

Exod. xvii. Psalm. lxxvii. He opened the rocke of stone, and the waters flowed oute: so that ryuers ranne in the wylderneße.

Gen. xii. Gen. xv. Gen. xvii. For why? he remembred his holye promyse whiche he had made vnto Abraham his seruaunt.

Psalm. cv. Thus he brought forth his people with ioye: and his chosen with gladnesse.

And gaue them the landes of the heythen: obstrus where they toke the labours of the people in possession.

That they myghte kepe his statutes: and obserue his lawes. Prayse the euerlastynge.

PSAL. CV.

Prayse the euerlastynge.

O Geue thankes vnto the Lorde: for he is gracyous, and his mercye endureth for euer.

Who can expresse the noble actes of the Lord, or shewe forth all his prayse?

Blessed are they that alway kepe iudgement, and do righteousnesse.

Remembre vs, o Lorde, according to the fauour that thou beares vnto thy people: o visit vs with thy sauing helth.

That we myghte se the pleasure of thy chosen, that we myghte reioyse in the gladnesse of thy people, and giue thankes with thyne inheritaunce.

We haue synned with our fathers, we haue done amysse, we haue dealt wickedly.

Our fathers regarded not thy wonders in Egypt, they kepte not thy greate goodnesse in remembraunce: but were disobedient at the see, euen at the red see.

Neuertheles he helped them for his names sake: that he myghte make his power to be knowen.

He rebuked the red see, and it was dried vp: so he led them thorow the depe, as in the wildernesse.

Thus he saued them from the hande of the hater: and deliuered them from the hande of the ennemye.

As for those that troubled them, the waters ouerwhelmed them, there was not one of them lefte.

Then beleued they in his worde, and sange prayse vnto him.

But within a while they forgat his workes, and wolde not abyde his counsell.

A lust came vpon them in the wildernesse: so that they tempted God in the desarte.

Yet he gaue them their desire, and sent them ynough at their willes.

They angred Moses in the tentes, and Aaron the sayntt of the Lorde.

So the earthe opened and swalowed vp Dathan: and couered the congregacion of Abiram.

The fyre was kindled in their company, the flame burnt vp the vngodly.

They made a calfe in Horeb, and worshipped the molten ymage.

Thus they turned their glory in to the similitude of a calfe that eateth hay.

They forgat God their sauiour, which had done so great thinges in Egypt.

Wonderous workes in the land of Ham: & fearfull thinges in the red see.

So he sayde he wolde haue destroyed them, had not Moses his chosen stande before him in the gappe: to turne away his wrathfull indignacion, lest he shulde destroye them.

Yea they thoughte scorne of that pleasaunte lande, and gaue no credence vnto his worde.

But murmured in their tentes, and harkened not vnto the voyce of the Lorde.

Then lyft he vp his hande against them, to ouerthrowe them in the wildernesse. Numer.xiiij.c

To cast out their sede among the nations, & to scatter them in the landes.

They ioyned them selues vnto Baal Peor: & ate the sacrifyces of the dead.

Thus they prouoked him vnto anger with their owne inuencions, & the plage was great amonges them.

Then stode vp Phinehes and executed iustice, and so the plage ceased. Numer.xxv.b

And that was counted vnto him for righteousnesse: amonge all posteritie for euermore.

They angred him also at the waters of strife: so that Moses was punished for their sakes. Numer.xx.d

Because they prouoked his spirite, & he tolde them plainly with his lippes.

Neither destroyed they the Heithen: as the Lorde commaunded them.

But were myngled amonge the Heithen: & lerned their workes.

In so moche that they worshipped their ymages: whiche tourned to their owne decaye.

Yea they offred their sonnes and doughters vnto deuyls.

And shed the innocent blood of their sonnes and of their doughters, whom they offred vnto the ymages of Canaan: so that the lande was defyled with blode.

Thus were they stayned with their owne workes, and went a horeing with their owne inuencions.

Therfore was the wrath of the Lord kindled against his people, in so moche that he abhorred his owne inheritaunce.

And gaue the ouer in to the hand of the Heithen: and they that hated them, were lordes ouer them.

Their ennemies oppressed them, & had them in subiection.

Many a tyme dyd he deliuer them: but they prouoked him with their owne inuencions, and were broughte downe for their wickednesse.

Neuertheles when he sawe their aduersite: he herd their complaynt.

He thought vpon his couenaunt, and pytyed them: according vnto the multitude of his mercyes.

Yea he made all those that had led them away captiue, to pitie them. Deute.xxx.d

Deliuer vs, o Lorde our God, and gather vs from amonge the Heithen: that we may geue thankes to thy holy name, and make our boast of thy prayse.

Blessed be the Lorde God of Israel from euerlastynge and worlde without ende, and let all people saye: Amen, Amen. Prayse the Lord almyghty.

PSAL. CVI.

O Geue thankes vnto the Lorde: for he is gracyous, and his mercy endureth for euer.

Let them geue thankes whome the Lorde hath redemed: and delyuered from the hande of the enemye.

And gathered them out of the landes, from the East, from the West, from the North, and from the South.

They wente astraye in the wyldernesse in an vnfrutefull waye: and founde no cite to dwell in.

Hongry and thyrsty: and their soule fainted in them.

So they cryed vnto the Lorde in their trouble: and he delyuered them frome their distresse.

He led them forthe by the ryghte waye: that they myghte goo to the cite where they dwelte.

O that men wolde prayse the goodnesse of the Lorde: and the wonders that he doth for the children of men.

For he satisfyeth the empty soule: and filleth the hongry soule with good.

Such as sate in darcknesse, and in the shadowe of deathe, being fast bounde in miserye and yron.

Because they were not obedient to the commaundements of God, but lightly regarded the counsell of the most highest.

Their herte was vexed with labour: they fell downe, and there was none to helpe them.

So they cryed vnto the Lorde in their trouble: and he delyuered them oute of their distresse.

He brought them forthe of darcknesse, and from the shadowe of deth: and brake their bondes in sonder.

O that men wolde prayse the goodnesse of the Lorde: and the wonders that he doth for the children of men.

For he hath broken the gates of brasse, and smitten the barres of yron in sonder.

Foolyssh men were plaged for their offence, & because of their wickednesse.

Their soule abhorred all maner of meat, they were euen hard at deathes dore.

So they cryed vnto the Lorde in their trouble: and he delyuered them oute of their distresse.

He sent his worde and healed them, & saued them from their destruction.

O that men wolde prayse the goodnesse of the Lorde: and the wonders that he doth for the children of men.

That they wolde offre vnto him the sacrifice of thankesgyuyng, & tell out his workes with gladnesse.

They that goo downe to the see in shyppes: and occupye their busynesse in great waters.

These men se the workes of the Lorde, and his wonders in the depe.

For at his worde, the stormy wynde ariseth: and lifteth vp the waues therof.

They are caried vp to the heuen, and downe agayne to the depe: their soule melteth away in the trouble.

They reele to & fro, they stacker like a dronke man: and are at their wittes ende.

So they crye vnto the Lorde in their trouble: and he delyuereth them out of their distresse.

He maketh the storme to ceasse: so that the waues are styll.

Then are they glad because they be at reste: and so he bringeth them vnto the haue where they wolde be.

O that men wold prayse the goodnesse of the Lorde: and the wonders that he doth for the children of men. D

That they wold exalte him in the congregacion of the people: and loue him in the seat of the elders.

Whiche turneth the floodes in to dry land, and drieth vp the water springes.

A frutefull land maketh he barreyn, for the wickednesse of them that dwell therin.

Agayne, he maketh the wyldernesse a standynge water: and water springes of a dry grounde.

There he setteth the hongry, that they may buyld for them a cite to dwell in.

That they may sow their ground, plãt vineyardes to yelde them frutes of increase.

He bleseth them, so that they multiplye exceadyngly, and suffereth not their cattell to decrease.

When they are minished and brought low thorowe oppression: thorowe anye plage or trouble.

Though he suffre them to be euill entreated thorow tyrantes, or let them wander out of the waye in the wildernesse.

Yet helpeth he the poore oute of miserye (at the last) and maketh him an housholde lyke a flocke of shepe.

The righteous will consider this & reioyce, the mouth of all wickednesse shal be stopped.

Who so is wise, and pondreth these thinges well, shal understande the louing kyndnesses of the Lorde.

PSAL. CVII.

A Song or a Psalme of Dauid.

O God, my herte is redy to synge, and to geue prayse. A

Awake, o my glorye, awake lute and harpe, I my selfe will awake right early.

I will geue thankes vnto the, o Lord, among the people, I will synge prayses vnto the among the heithen.

For the greatnesse of thy mercy is higher then the heuens, and thy faithfulnesse reacheth vnto the cloudes.

Set vp thy self, o God, aboue the heuens: and thy glory aboue all the erth. B

That

That thy beloued maye be delyuered: helpe them with thy righthande and heare me.

God hath spoken in his sanctuary, whiche thinge reioyseth me.

I will diuide Sichem, & meate out the valley of Succoth.

Galaad is myne, Manasses is myne, Ephraim is the strength of my head, Juda is my captayne.

Moab is my washpot, ouer Edom will I stretche out my shue, Philistea thal be glad of me.

Who shall leade me into the stronge cytie? Who shall bringe me into Edom?

Shalt not thou o lo (O God) whiche hast cast vs out: thou God, that wentest not forth with our hostes?

O be thou our helpe in trouble, for vayne is the helpe of man.

Through God we shall do great actes, for it is he that shall treade downe oure enemyes.

PSAL. CVIII.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of David.

HOlde not thy tongue, O God of my prayse.

For the mouth of the vngodly, ye and the mouthe of the deceytfull is opened vpon me, and speake against me with false tongues.

They compase me about with wordes of hatred, and fyghte agaynste me without a cause.

For the loue that I bare vnto them, they take now my contrary part, but I gyue my selfe vnto prayer.

Thus they rewarde me euyll for good, and hatred for my good will.

Set an vngodly man to be ruler ouer him, & let Satan stande at his righthande.

When sentence is gyuen vpon him, let him be condemned, and let his prayer be turned into synne.

Let his dayes be fewe, and his bysshoprike let an other take.

Let his children be fatherlesse, and his wyfe a wydowe.

Let his children be vagabounders, and beg their bred: let them seke it, as they that be destroyed.

Let the extorcioner consume all that he hathe, and let straungers spoyle his labours.

Let there be no man to pitye, nor to haue compassyon vpon his fatherlesse children.

Let his ende be destruction, and in the nexte generacyon, his name be cleane put out.

Let the wyckednesse of his fathers be had in remembraunce in the sight of the Lorde, and let not the synne of his mother be done away.

Let them alwaye be before the Lorde, but as for the memorial of them selues, let it perysh from out of the earth.

And that because his mynde was not to do good, but persecuted the poore helpelesse, and him that was vexed at the herte, to slaye hym.

His delyte was in cursing, and therfore shal it happen vnto him: he loued not blessing, & that shall be farre from him.

He clothed him selfe with cursinge lyke as with a rayment: yea it wente into his bowelles lyke water, and lyke oyle into his bones.

Let it be vnto him as the cloke that he hath vpon him, and as the girdle that he is gyrded withall.

Let it thus happen frome the Lorde vnto myne enemyes, and to those that speake euyl against my soule.

But deale thou with me, Oh Lorde God, accordynge vnto thy name, for swete is thy mercy.

O delyuer me, for I am helpelesse and poore, & my hert is wounded within me.

I goe hence lyke the shadowe that departeth, and am dryuen awaye as the grashoppers.

My knees are weake throwe fastinge, my flesh is dryed vp for want of ryghteousnesse.

I am become a rebuke vnto them, they loke vpon me and shake their heades.

Helpe me, O Lorde my God, oh saue me for thy mercyes sake.

That they may knowe, how that this is thy hande, and that thou hast done it.

Though they curse, yet blesse thou: and let them be confounded, that ryse vp against me, but let thy seruaunt reioyse.

Let myne aduersaryes be clothed with their owne shame, as with a cloke.

Certes, I will gyue thankes vnto the Lorde with my mouth, and praise him amonge the multitude.

For he standeth at the righthande of the poore, to saue him frome suche as condemne his soule.

PSAL. CIX.

A Psalme of David.

THe Lorde sayde vnto my Lorde: Sytte thou on my righthande, vntyll I make thyne enemyes thy footestole.

The Lorde shall sende the rodde of thy power out of Sion, be thou ruler euen in the myd dest amonges thyne enemyes.

In the daye of thy power shall thy people offer the freewyllofferinges with an holy worshyp, the dewe of thy byrth is of the wombe of the morninge.

The Lorde sware, and will not repente: Thou art a preest for euer after the order of Melchisedec.

The Lorde vpon thy righthande, shall smyte rounde kynges in the daye of his wrath.

He shall be iudge amonge the heythen, he shall

He shall dryncke of the brooke in the waye, therefore shall he lyft vp his hed.

I maye go in there thorow, and gyue thankes vnto the Lorde.

This is the dore of the Lorde, the righteous shall entre in thorow it.

I thanke the, that thou hast herde me, and art become my saluacion.

The same stone which the buylders refused is become the head stone in the corner.

This was the Lordes worcke, and it is meruelous in our eyes.

This is the daye, whiche the Lorde hathe made, let vs reioyse and be glad in it.

Helpe now O Lorde, O Lorde send vs now prosperitie.

Blessed be he that commeth in the name of the Lorde, we wysshe you good lucke, ye that be of the house of the Lorde.

God is the Lorde, & hath shewed vs light: O garnysh the solemne feast with greny braūches, euen vnto the hornes of the aulter.

Thou art my God, and I will thanke the: thou art my God, and I will prayse the.

O gyue thankes vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer.

PSAL. CXVII.

ALEPH.

BLessed are those that be vnblemyshed in the waye: whiche walke in the lawe of the Lorde.

Blessed are they that kepe his testimonies, and seke him with their hole hert.

Which walke in his wayes, and do no wickednesse.

Thou hast geuen strayt charge to kepe thy commaundementes.

O that my wayes were stablysshed to kepe thy statutes.

So shoulde I not be confounded, whyle I haue respect vnto all thy commaundementes.

I will thanke the with an vnfayned hert, because I am lerned in the iudgemētes of thy righteousnesse.

I will kepe thy statutes, O forsake me not vtterly.

BETH.

Where withall shall a yonge man amende his waye? Euen by rulyng him self after thy worde.

With my hole herte do I seke the, O let me not go wronge out of thy commaundementes.

Thy wordes haue I hyd within my herte, that I shulde not synne against the.

Praysed be thou, O Lorde, O teache me thy statutes.

With my lyppes will I be tellynge out all the iudgementes of thy mouth.

I haue as great delyte in the waye of thy testimonies, as in all maner of ryches.

I will exercyse my self in thy commaundementes, and haue respect vnto thy foteptthes.

My delyte shalbe in thy statutes, I will not forget thy wordes.

GIMEL.

O do well vnto thy seruaunt, that I maye lyue and kepe thy wordes.

Open thou myne eyes, and so shall I spye out wonderous thinges in thy lawe.

I am a straunger vpon earthe, O hyde not thy commaundementes frome me.

My soule breaketh out, for the very feruent desire that I haue allwaye vnto thy iudgementes.

Thou rebukest the proude, cursed are they that departe frome thy commaundementes.

O turne frome me shame and rebuke, for I kepe thy testimonies.

Princes also sit and speake against me, but thy seruaunt is occupyed in thy statutes.

In thy testimonies is my delyte, they are my counceilers.

DALETH.

My soule cleaueth to the dust, O quycken thou me accordynge to thy worde.

I knowlieged my wayes, and thou herdest me, O teache me then thy statutes.

Make me to vnderstande the waye of thy commaundementes, and so shall I talke of thy wonderous workes.

My soule melteth awaye for very heuynesse, O set me vp accordynge vnto thy worde.

Take frome me the waye of lyenge, and graunte me thy lawe.

I haue chosen the waye of truth, thy iudgementes haue I layde before me.

I sticke vnto thy testimonies, O Lorde confounde me not.

I will runne the waye of thy commaundementes, when thou hast comforted my hert.

HE.

Teache me O Lorde the waye of thy statutes, and I shall kepe it vnto the ende.

O gyue me vnderstanding, and I shall kepe thy lawe, yea I shall kepe it with myne hole hert.

Leade me in the path of thy commaundementes, for that is my delyte.

Incline myne herte vnto thy testimonies, and not to couetousnes.

Oh tourne awaye myne eyes, least they beholde vanytye, and quycken me in thy waye.

O stablysh thy worde in thy seruaunt, that I maye feare the.

Take awaye the rebuke that I am afrayde of, for thy iudgementes are amiable.

Beholde, my delyte is in thy commaundementes, Oh quycken me in thy righteousnesse.

VAV.

Let thy louynge mercy come vnto me, Oh Lorde, and thy sauynge health according vnto thy worde.

That I maye geue answere vnto my blasphemers, for my trust is in thy worde.

O take not the worde of truthe vtterly out of my mouthe, for my hope is in thy iudgementes.

So shall I alwaye kepe thy lawe, yea for euer and euer.

And I will walke at libertie, for I seke thy commaundementes.

I will speake of thy testimonyes euē before kynges, and will not be ashamed.

My delyte shalbe in thy commaundementes which I loue.

My handes also will I lyft vp vnto thy cōmaundmentes which I loue, and my talkinge shalbe of thy statutes.

ZAIN.

O thinke vpon thy seruaunt as concerninge thy worde, wherein thou hast caused me to put my trust.

For it is my comfort in my trouble, yea thy worde quyckeneth me.

The proude haue me greatly in derisiō, yet shrinke not I frome thy lawe.

I remembre thyne euerlastinge iudgementes, O Lorde, and am comforted.

I am horribly afrayed for the vngodly, yͤ forsake thy lawe.

Thy statutes are my songes in the house of my pylgremage.

I thinke vpon thy name, O Lorde, in the nyght season, and kepe thy lawe.

It is myne owne, for I kepe thy commaundementes.

HETH.

Thou art my porcyon, O Lord, I am purposed to kepe thy lawe.

I make myne humble petition in thy presence with my hole hert, O be mercyfull vnto me accordinge vnto thy worde.

I call myne owne wayes to remembrance, and turne my fete into thy testimonies.

I make hast, and prolonge not the tyme, to kepe thy commaundementes.

The congregacions of the vngodly haue robbed me, but I forget not thy lawe.

At myd nyght stande I vp, to geue thankes vnto the, for the iudgementes of thy righteousnesse.

I am a companion of all them that feare yͤ and kepe thy commaundementes.

The earthe, O Lorde, is full of thy mercy, O teache me thy statutes.

TETH.

O Lorde, thou hast delt frendely with thy seruaunt, according vnto thy worde.

O learne me thy vnderstandinge, nourture and knowledge, for I beleue thy commaundementes.

Before I was troubled, I went wronge, but now I kepe thy worde.

Thou art good & frendly, O teache me thy statutes.

The proude ymagen lyes vpon me, but I kepe thy commaundementes with my hole herte.

Their hert is as fat as braune, but my delyte is in thy lawe.

It is good for me that I haue bene in trouble, that I may lerne thy statutes.

The lawe of thy mouth is dearer vnto me then thousandes of golde and syluer.

IOD.

Thy handes haue made me and fashioned me, O geue me vnderstandinge, that I maye learne thy commaundmentes.

They that feare the, wyll be gladde when they se me, because I put my truste in thy worde.

I know, O Lord, that thy iugementes are right, and that thou of very faithfulnesse hast caused me to be troubled.

O let thy mercyfull kyndnesse be my comfort, according to the promes that thou hast made vnto thy seruaunt.

O let thy louynge mercyes come vnto me, that I maye lyue, for thy lawe is my delyte.

Let the proude be confounded, which handle me so falsly.

But let suche as feare the, and knowe thy testimonies, be turned vnto me.

O let myne herte be vndefyled in thy statutes that I be not ashamed.

CAPH.

My soule longeth for thy sauinge helth, for my trust is in thy worde.

Myne eyes longe for thy worde, sayenge: O when wilt thou comfort me?

For I am become lyke a botel in the smoke, yet forget not I thy statutes.

How many are the dayes of thy seruaunt? When wilt thou be auenged of myne aduersaries?

The proude haue dygged pyttes for me, whi che are not after thy lawe.

All thy commaundmentes are true, they persecute me falsly, O be thou my helpe.

They haue almost made an ende of me vpon earth, but I forsake not thy commaundmentes.

O quycken me after thy louynge kyndnesse, and so shall I kepe the testimonyes of thy mouth.

LAMED.

Oh Lorde, thy worde endureth for euer in heauen.

Thy truth also remayneth frome one generacion to an other: thou hast layd the foundacion of the earth, and it abydeth.

They continue this day according to thyne ordiall thinges, for all thinges serue the.

Yf thy lawe were not thy lawe, I shuld perish in my trouble.

I will neuer forget thy commaundementes, for with them thou quickenest me.

I am thine: O helpe me, for I seke thy commaundementes.

The vngodly laye wayte for me to destroye me, but I consydre thy testimonies.

I se that all thinges come to an ende, but thy commaundement is exceadinge broade.

MEM.

O what loue haue I vnto thy lawe? all the daye longe is my talkinge of it.

Thou shalt make thy commaundment haue me wyser then myne enemies, for it is ever by me.

I haue more vnderstandinge then all my teachers, for thy testymonies are my study.

Yea I am wyser then the aged, for I kepe thy commaundementes.

I refrayne my fete from every euyll waye, that I myght kepe thy wordes.

I shrinke not from thy iudgementes, for thou teachest me.

O howe swete are thy wordes vnto my throte?

Yea more then hony vnto my mouth.

Thorow thy commaundementes I get vnderstaundyng, therfore I hate all falce wayes.

NVN.

Thy worde is a lanterne vnto my fete and a lyght vnto my pathes.

I haue sworne and am stedfastly purposed, to kepe the iudgementes of thy righteousnesse.

I am troubled aboue measure, quicken me, O Lorde, accordinge vnto thy worde.

Let the free wyll offeringes of my mouthe please the, O Lorde, and teach me thy iudgementes.

My soule is alway in my handes, yet do not I forget thy lawe.

The vngodly haue layd a snare for me, but yet swarue not I from thy commaundementes.

Thy testimonies haue I claymed as myne heritage for euer: and why? they are the very ioye of my herte.

I applye myne herte to fulfill thy statutes alwayes, euen vnto the ende.

SAMECH.

I hate the vngodlye, but thy lawe do I loue.

Thou art my defence and shylde, my trust is in thy worde.

Awaye from me ye wycked, I will kepe the commaundementes of my God.

O stablyshe me accordynge vnto thy worde, that I maye lyue, and let me not be disappoynted of my hope.

Holde thou me vp, and I shall be safe: yea I shall euer be talkinge of thy statutes.

Thou treadest downe all them that depart frome thy statutes, for they imagin but disceyte.

Thou puttest awaye all the vngodly of the earth lyke dros, therfore I loue thy testimonies.

My flesh trembleth for feare of the, and I am afrayed of thy iudgementes.

AIN.

I deale with the thinge that is lawful and ryght, O geue me not ouer vnto myne oppressours.

Be thou surety for thy seruaunt to do him good, that the proude do me no wronge.

Myne eyes are wayted away with loking for thy health, and for the worde of thy righteousnesse.

O deale with thy seruaunt accordinge vnto thy louynge mercye, and teache me thy statutes.

I am thy seruaunte, O graunte me vnderstaundinge, that I may knowe thy testimonies.

It is tyme for the (Oh Lorde) to laye to thyne handes, for they haue destroyed thy lawe.

For I loue thy commaundementes aboue golde and precious stone.

Therfore holde I streyght all thy commaundementes, and all falce wayes I vtterlye abhorre.

PHE.

Thy testimonies are wonderfull, therfore kepe they my soule them.

When thy worde goeth forthe, it geueth lyght and vnderstaundinge, euen vnto babes.

I open my mouthe and drawe in my breth, for I desire thy commaundementes.

O loke thou vpon me, and be mercyfull, as thou vsest to doo vnto those that loue thy name.

Order my goynges after thy word that no wyckednesse raygne in me.

O deliuer me frome the wrongefull dealynges of men, and so shall I kepe thy commaundementes.

Shewe the lyght of thy countenaunce vnto thy seruaunt, and leerne me thy statutes.

Myne eyes gushe out with water, because men kepe not thy lawe.

ZADE.

Righteous arte thou, O Lorde, and true is thy iudgement.

The testimonies that thou hast commaunded are exceadinge righteous and true.

My zele hathe euen consumed me, because myne enemyes haue forgotten thy wordes. Iamai

Thy worde is tryed to the vttermost, and thy seruaunt loueth it.

I am small and of no reputacion, yet doo not not I forget thy commaundementes.

Thy righteousnesse is an euerlastinge righteousnesse, and thy lawe is true.

Trouble and heynesse haue taken holde vpon me, yet is my delyte in thy commaundementes.

The righteousnesse of thy testimonies is euerlastinge, O graunte me vnderstandinge, & I shall lyue.

KOPH.

I call with my hole hert, heare me, O Lord I will kepe thy statutes.

Yea euen vpon the to I call, helpe me, and I shall kepe thy testimonies.

Early in the morninge to I crye vnto the, for in thy worde is my trust.

Myne eyes preuente the nyght watches, § I myght be occupyed in thy woorde.

Heare my voyce, O Lorde, accordynge vnto thy louynge kyndnesse, quicken me accordinge as thou art wont.

They drawe nygh that of malice persecute me, and are farre from thy lawe.

Be thou nygh at hande also, O Lorde, for thy promyses are faithfull.

As concernynge thy testimonies, I haue knowen euer sens the begynnyng, that thou hast grounded them for euer.

RES.

O consyder myne aduersitie, and delyuer me for I do not forget thy lawe.

Mayntayne thou my cause and defende me quycken me accordinge vnto thy worde.

Health is farre from the vngodly, for they regarde not thy statutes.

Great is thy mercy, O Lorde, quycken me as thou art wont.

Many there are that trouble me, and persecute me, yet do not I swarue from thy testimonies.

It greeueth me, when I se, that the transgressours kepe not thy lawe.

Consider, O Lorde, howe I loue thy commaundementes, O quycken me with thy louynge kyndnesse.

Thy worde is true from euerlastynge, all the iudgementes of thy righteousnesse endure for euermore.

SIN.

The princes persecute me without cause, but my herte standeth in awe of thy wordes.

I am as glad of thy worde, as one that fyndeth great spoyles.

As for lyes, I hate and abhorre them, but thy lawe do I loue.

Seuen tymes a daye do I prayse the, because of thy righteous iudgementes.

Great is § peace that they haue which loue thy law, and they are not offended at it.

Lorde, I looke for thy louynge health, and do after thy commaundementes.

My soule kepeth thy testimonies, and loueth them exceedyngly.

I kepe thy commaundementes and testimonies, for all my wayes are before the.

THAV.

Let my complaynte come before the, O Lorde, geue me vnderstandinge, according vnto thy worde.

O let my supplication come before the, delyuer me according to thy promise.

My lyppes shall speake of thy prayse, seeing thou hast taught me thy statutes.

Yea my tongue shal synge of thy worde, for all thy commaundementes are ryght.

Let thyne hande helpe me, for I haue chosen thy commaundementes.

I longe for thy sauynge health, O Lorde, and in thy lawe is my delyte.

Oh let my soule lyue and prayse the, that thy iudgementes maye helpe me.

I go astraye, lyke a sheepe that is lost: Oh seke thy seruaunt, for I do not forget thy commaundementes.

When I am in trouble, I call vpon the Lorde, and he answereth me. 1 Ioan. 4. a Delyuer my soule, O Lorde, from lyenge lyppes, and from a deceytfull tongue.

What rewarde shall be geuen or done vnto the, thou false tongue.

Euen myghty & sharpe arowes with hote burnynge coles.

Wo is me that my banishement endureth so longe: I dwell in the tabernacles of the sorowfull.

My soule hath longe dwelt amonge them that be enemies vnto peace.

I laboured for peace, but what I spake ther of, they made them to battayle.

Beholde, he that kepeth Israel, doth neyther slomber nor slepe. Psalm. 121. a

The Lorde him selfe is thy kepar, § Lorde is thy defence vpon thy right hande.

So that the Sunne shall not burne the by daye, neyther the mone by nyght.

The Lorde preserueth the frome all euell, yea it is the Lorde that kepeth thy soule.

The Lorde preserueth thy gayngo out and thy commynge in, frome this tyme forth for Our feet shall stande in thy gates, O Jerusalem.

Jerusalem is buylded as a cytie, that is at vnite in it selfe.

For thyther the tribes go vp, euen the tribes of the Lorde: to testifye vnto Israel, to gyue thankes vnto the name of the Lorde.

For there is the seate of iudgement, euen ꝑ seate of the house of Dauid.

O praye for the peace of Jerusalē, they shall prosper that loue the.

Peace be within thy walles, and plenteousnes within thy palaces.

Beholde, he that kepeth Israel, shall neyther slomber nor sleepe.

The Lorde him selfe is thy kepar, the Lorde is thy defence vpon thy ryght hande.

So that the sunne shall not burne the by day, nether the moone by night.

Haue mercy vpon vs, O Lorde, haue mercy vpon vs, for we are vtterly despysed.

Our soule is fylled with the scornefull reproffe of the welthy, and with the despytefulnesse of the proude.

I Yf the Lorde had not bene of our syde (now maye Israel saye) Yf the Lorde had not bene of our syde, when men rose vp against vs.

They had swalowed vs vp quicke, whē they were so wrathfully displeased at vs.

Yea the waters had drowned vs, ꝑ streame had gone ouer our soule.

The depe waters of the proude had gone euen vnto our soule.

But praysed be the Lorde, which hath not geuen vs ouer for a praye vnto their teeth.

That ꝑ rod of the vngodly come not into ꝑ lot of the righteous, least the righteous put their hande vnto wyckednesse.

Yea the Lorde hath wone great thinges for vs alredy, wherof we reioyce.

Turne our captiuitie, O Lorde, as the ryuers in the south.

Lo, children and the fruite of the wombe are an heritage and gyft, that commeth of ꝑ Lorde.

But the righteous Lorde hathe broken the yoke of the vngodly in peces.

Let them be confounded and turned backwarde, as many as haue euyll will at Sion.

I will not suffre myne eyes to slepe, nor myne eye lydes to slomber.

Vntyll I fynde out a place for the Lorde, an habitation for the mighty one of Jacob.

Lo, we herde of the same at Ephrata, and founde it in the wod.

We will go in to his tabernacle, and fall downe before his foretstoie.

Aryse, O Lorde, into thy resting place, thou and the arche of thy strength. D

PSAL. CXXXIII.

Prayse the euerlastynge.

O prayse the name of the Lorde, prayse it O ye seruauntes of the Lorde.

Ye that stande in the house of the Lorde in the courtes of the house of our God.

O prayse the Lorde, for the Lorde is gracious: O synge prayses vnto his name, for it is louely.

For why the Lorde hath chosen Iacob vnto him selfe, and Israell for his owne possession.

For I knowe that the Lorde is greate, and that our Lorde is aboue all gooddes.

What so euer the Lorde pleaseth that doth he in heauen and in earth, in the see, and in all depe places.

He bringeth forth the cloudes from the endes of the worlde, he turneth the lightenynges vnto rayne, bringynge the wyndes oute of their treasuries.

Which smote the fyrstborne of Egypt, both of man and of beast.

He hath sent tokens and wonders into the myddest of the, O thou lande of Egypte, vpō Pharao and all his seruauntes.

Which smote diuerse nacions, and slewe mygthy kynges.

Sehon kynge of the Amorites, Og the kyng of Basan, and all the kyngedomes of Canaan.

And gaue their lande for an heritage, for an heritage vnto Israel his people.

Thy name, O Lorde, endureth for euer, so doth thy memoriall, O Lorde, from one generacion to an other.

For the Lorde will auenge his people, and be gracious vnto his seruauntes.

As for the ymages of the heythē, they are but syluer and golde, the worke of mens handes.

They haue mouthes, and speake not: eyes haue they, but they se not.

They haue eares, and yet they heare not, neyther is there any breth in their mouthes.

They that make them, are lyke vnto them and so are all they that put their truste in them.

Prayse the Lorde ye house of Israel, prayse the Lorde ye house of Aaron.

Prayse the Lorde ye house of Leui, ye that feare the Lorde, prayse the Lorde.

Praysed be the Lorde out of Sion, which dwelleth at Jerusalem.

Prayse the euerlastynge.

PSAL. CXXXIIII.

O Gyue thankes vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer.

O gyue thankes vnto the God of all gooddes, for his mercy endureth for euer.

O thanke the Lorde of all Lordes, for his mercy endureth for euer.

Which onely doeth great wonders, for his mercy endureth for euer.

Which by his wysdome made the heauens for his mercy endureth for euer.

Which layd out the erth aboue the waters for his mercy endureth for euer.

Which hathe made great lyghtes, for his mercy endureth for euer.

The sunne to rule the daye, for his mercye endureth for euer.

The moone and the starres to gouerne the nyght, for his mercy endureth for euer.

Which smote Egypt with their first borne, for his mercy endureth for euer.

And brought out Israel from among them for his mercy endureth for euer.

With a myghtye hande and stretched oute arme, for his mercy endureth for euer.

Which deuided the red see into partes, for his mercy endureth for euer.

And made Israel to go thorow the myddest of it, for his mercy endureth for euer.

But as for Pharao and his hoste, he ouerthrew them in the red see, for his mercy endureth for euer.

Which led his people thorow the wildernesse, for his mercy endureth for euer.

Which smote great kynges, for his mercye endureth for euer.

Yea, and slue mygthy kynges, for his mercy endureth for euer.

Sehon kynge of the Amorites, for his mercy endureth for euer.

And Og the kynge of Basan, for his mercy endureth for euer.

And gaue away their lande for an heritage, for his mercy endureth for euer.

Euen

Euen for an heritage vnto Israell his seruaunt, for his mercy endureth for euer.

Which remembred vs, when we are in trouble, for his mercy endureth for euer.

Whiche giueth foode vnto all flesh, for his mercy endureth for euer.

O giue thankes vnto the God of heauen, for his mercy endureth for euer.

PSAL. CXXXV.

א BY the waters of Babylon we sat downe and wept, when we remembred Sion.

As for our harpes, we hanged them vp vpon the trees, that are therin.

Then they that led vs awaye captyue, required of vs a songe and melody in our heuynes: singe vs one of the songes of Sion.

Howe shall we singe the Lordes songe in a straunge lande?

ב If I forget the, O Jerusalem, let my right hande be forgotten.

If I do not remembre the, let my tonge cleue to the rofe of my mouth: yea if I prefere not Jerusalem in my mirth.

Remembre the children of Edom, O Lorde, in the daye of Jerusalem, howe they sayde: downe with it, downe with it: euen to the grounde.

O doughter of Babylon, thou shalt come to misery thy selfe: yea, happy shall he be, that rewardeth the as thou hast serued vs.

Blessed shall he be, that taketh thy children and throweth them against the stones.

PSAL. CXXXVI.

Of Dauid.

א I Will giue thankes vnto the, O Lorde, with my hole hert, euen before the Goddes, will I singe prayses vnto the.

I will worshyp towarde thy holy temple, and prayse thy name, because of thy louynge kyndnesse and truthe, for thou hast magnified thy worde, according vnto thy greate name.

When I call vpon the, thou hearest me, & enduest my soule with moche strength.

All the kynges of the earth shall prayse the O Lorde, when they heare the wordes of thy mouth.

ב Yea they shal singe in the wayes of the Lord that great is the glory of the Lorde.

For though the Lorde be hyghe, yet hathe he respect vnto the lowly: as for the proude, he beholdeth him a farre of.

Though I walke in the myddest of trouble, yet shalte thou refreshe me: thou shalte stretche forthe thyne hande vpon the furiousnes of myne enemyes, & thy righthande shall saue me.

The Lorde shal make good for me, yea thy mercy, O Lorde, endureth for euer: despyse not then the worke of thyne owne handes.

PSAL. CXXXVII. After the thyrd transmigration.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

א O Lorde, thou searchest me out, and knowest me.

Thou knowest my downe sittinge & myne vprysing, thou vnderstandest my thoughtes a farre of.

Thou art about my path and about my bed and spyest out all my wayes.

For lo, there is not a worde in my tongue, but thou, O Lorde knowest it altogether.

Thou hast fashioned me behynde and before and layd thyne hande vpon me.

Suche knowledge is to wonderfull & excellent for me, I can not attayne vnto it. Rom. 11. a ב Whyther shall I go then from thy spirite? or, whyther shall I goo then from thy presence?

If I clym vp into heauen, thou art there: if I go downe to hell, thou art there also.

If I take the wynges of the morninge, and remayne in the vttermoost parte of the see:

Euen there also shall thy hande leade me, and thy righthande shall holde me.

If I saye: peraduenture the darcknesse shal couer me, then shall my nyght be turned to daye.

Yea the darcknesse is no darcknesse with the, but the night is as clear as the daye, the darcknesse and lyght are both alyke.

ג For my reynes are thyne, thou hast couered me in my mothers wombe.

I wil giue thankes vnto the, for I am wonderously made: maruelous are thy workes, & that my soule knoweth right well.

My bones are not hyd from the, though I be made secretly, and fashioned beneth in the earth.

Thyne eyes se myne vnperfectnesse, they stande al written in thy booke: my dayes were fashioned, when as yet there was not one of them.

Howe deare are thy counsels vnto me O God? O howe great is the summe of them?

ד If I tell them, they are mo in nombre then the sandes: when I wake vp, I am present with the.

Wilt thou not slaye the wycked (O God) that the bloudthirsty might departe from me?

For they speake wrought of the, thyne enemyes exalte themselues presumptuously.

I hate them, O Lorde, that hate the: and I maye not awaye with those that ryse vp against the?

Yea I hate the eight sore, therfore are they myne enemyes.

Trye me, O God, and seke the grounde of myne hert: proue me, and examen my thoughtes.

Make well of there be any waye of wyckednesse in me, and leade me in the waye euerlastinge.

PSAL. CXXXVIII.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

1 DEliuer me, Oh Lorde, from the euyll men, Oh preserue me from the wycked men.

Which ymagen mischefe in their hertes, & stirre up warre all the daye longe.

They sharpen their tongues lyke a serpent: adders poyson is vnder their lippes. Selah.

Kepe me, O Lorde, from the handes of the vngodly: preserue me from the wycked men whiche are purposed to ouerthrowe my goinges.

The proude haue layde a snare for me, and spred a net abrode with cordes, yea and set traynes in my waye. Selah.

But my sayinge is vnto the Lorde: thou art my God, heare the voyce of my prayers O Lorde.

O Lorde God, thou strength of my health thou shalt couerest my head in the daye of battayle.

Let not § vngodly haue his desire O Lorde let him not haue his purpose, least they be proude. Selah.

Let the mischefe of their owne lyppes fall vpon the head of them, that compasse me about.

Let hote burninge coles fall vpon them, let them be cast into the fyre, and into the pit that they neuer ryse vp agayne.

A man full of wordes shal not prospere vpō the earth: a malicious and wycked persone shalbe hunted awaye, and destroyed.

Sure I am, that the Lorde will auenge § poore, and mayntayne the cause of the helpelesse.

The righteous also shall geue thankes vnto thy name, and the iust shal continue in thy sight.

PSAL. CXXXIX.

¶ A Psalme of Dauid.

1 LOrde, I call vpon the: haste the vnto me and consider my voyce, when I crye vnto the.

Let my prayer be set forth in thy sight as § incense, and let the lyftinge vp of my handes be an euenynge sacrifice.

Set a watche, O Lorde, before my mouth yea a wacche dore vpon my lyppes.

O let not my hert be enclyned to any euyll thinge, to worke wyckednesse as the vngodly do: and that I eate of suche thinges as please them.

Let the righteous rather smyte me frendly and reprouse me for it shall I take it as though Selah [illegible] vpon my heade: I shall not [illegible] yea I will prayse yet for [illegible] vpon my [illegible]

Their iudges stombled at the stone, yet heare they my wordes, that they be ioyful.

Our bones lye scattered before the pit, lyke as when one graueth and byggeth vp the grounde.

But myne eyes lohe vnto the, Oh Lorde God: in the is my trust, Oh cast not out my soule.

Kepe me from the snare whiche they haue layde for me, and from the trappes of § wycked doers.

Let the vngodly fall into their owne nettes together, vntyll I be gone by them.

PSAL. CXL.

¶ The instrucō of Dauid, a prayer when he was in the caue.

I Crye vnto the Lorde with my voyce, yea euen vnto the Lorde do I make my supplicacion. I

I powre out my complaynte before him, & shewe him of my trouble.

When my spirite is in heuynesse, for then knowest my pathe: in the waye wherein I walke haue they priuely layd a snare for me.

I loke vpon my righthande, and se, there is no man that will know me.

I haue no place to flie vnto, no man careth for my soule.

Therfore do I crye vnto the, O Lorde, and saye: thou art my hope and my portion in the lande of the lyuynge.

Consyder my complaynte, for I am brought very lowe.

O deliuer me fro my persecuters, for they are to stronge for me.

Bringe my soule out of prison, that I may geue thankes vnto thy name: whiche thinge yf thou wilt graunte me, then shall § righteous resorte vnto my company.

PSAL. CXLI.

¶ A Psalme of Dauid.

HEare my prayer, O Lorde, consydre my desire: answere me for thy truthe and righteousnesse sake. I

And entre not into iudgement with thy seruaunt, for in thy sight shall no man lyuynge be iustified.

For the ennemye persecuteth my soule, he smyteth my lyfe downe to the grounde, he layeth me in the darknesse, as the dead men of § worlde.

Therfore is my spirite vexed within me, and my hert within me is desolate.

Yet do I remembre the tymes past, I muse vpon all thy workes, yea I exercyse my selfe in the workes of thy handes. B

I stretche forth myne handes vnto the, my soule thyrsteth vnto the out of the thirsty lande. Selah.

Heare me, O Lorde, and that sone, for my spirite waxeth faynte: hyde not thy face fro me, least I be lyke vnto them that go downe into in to the grane.

O let me heare thy louyng kyndnesse by tymes in the mozninge, foz in the is my trust: shewe thou me the waye that I shulde walke in, foz I lyft vp my soule vnto the.

Deliuer me, o Lozde fro myne ennemies, foz I resorte vnto the.

Teache me to wo the thynge that pleaseth the, foz thou art my God: let thy louyng spirite leade me forth vnto the lande of ryghteousnesse.

Quicken me, o Lozde foz thy names sake, o foz thy ryghteousnesse sake bynge my soule out of trouble.

And of thy goodnesse slatter myne ennemies abrode, o destroye all them that veze my soule, foz I am thy seruaunt.

PSAL. CXLII.

Of Dauid.

BLessed be the Lozde my refuge: whiche teacheth my handes to warre, and my fyngers to fight.

My hope and my castell, my defence and my deliuerer, my shylde in whome I truste: whiche gouerneth the people that is vnder me.

Psalm. 8. Lozde what is man, that thou hast suche respect vnto him? o the son of man, that thou so regardest him?

Man is like a thing of naught, his time passeth awaye lyke a shadow.

Bowe thy heuens, o Lozde, o come downe touche the mountaynes, that they may smoke with all.

Cast foorthe the lyghtenynge and skatter them: shoote oute thine arowes and consume them.

Sende downe thyne hande fromne aboue, deliuer me and take me oute of the greate waters: fromne the hande of straunge chyldren.

Whose mouth talketh of vanitie, and theyr right hande is a right hande of falsehed.

That I may synge a newe song vnto the, o God, and synge prayses vnto the, vpon a ten stringed lute.

Thou that gyuest victorye vnto kynges, and hast wituered Dauid thy seruaunt from the peryll of the swerde.

Saue me and deliuer me from the hande of straunge chyldren, whose mouthe talketh of vanitie, and their right hande is a right hande of falsehed.

That oure sonnes maye growe vp as the younge plantes: and that oure doughtres maye be as the polyshed corners of the temple.

That oure garners may be ful and plentious with all maner of store: that our sheepe maye bynge forth thousandes, and hundredthousandes in oure villages.

That our oxen maye be stronge to labour, that there may be no mischaunce, no leapynge, o no complayninge in our stretes.

Happy are the people that be in suche a case yea blessed are the people whiche haue the Lozde for their God.

PSAL. CXLIII.

After the Hebrue.

A prayse of Dauid.

I Wyll magnifie the, o God my kyng, I will prayse thy name foz euer and euer.

Euerye daye wyll I gyue thankes vnto the: and prayse thy name foz euer and euer. A Great is the Lozde, and marueylous worthy to be praysed, there is no ende of his greatnesse.

One generacion shal prayse thy workes vnto an other, and declare thy power.

As foz me I wyll be talkynge of thy worshyp, thy glorye, thy prayse, and wonderous workes.

So that men shall speake of the myghte of thy marueylous actes: and tell of thy greatnesse. B

The memoriall of thyne aboundaunt kyndnesse shall be shewed, and men shal synge of thy ryghteousnesse.

The Lozde is gracious and mercyfull, long suffering, and of great goodnesse.

The Lozde is louyng vnto euery man, o his mercy is ouer all his workes.

All thy workes prayse the, o Lozde, and thy saynctes gyue thankes vnto the. C

They shewe the glory of thy kyngdome, and talke of thy power.

That thy power, thy glorye and worshypfulnesse, of thy kyngdome, might be kowen vnto men.

Thy kyngdome is an euerlastynge kyngdome: and thy dominion endureth throughout all ages.

The Lozde vpholdeth all suche as shoulde fall: and lyfteth vp all those that be bowne.

The eyes of all wayte vpon the: and thou gyuest them their meate in due season.

Thou openest thyne hande, o fyllest al thynges lyuing with plentifulnesse. D

The Lozde is ryghteous in all his wayes: o holy in all his workes.

The Lozde is nye vnto them that call vpon hym: yea all suche as call vpon hym faythfully.

He fulfylleth the desyre of them that feare hym: he heareth their crye, and helpeth them.

The Lozde preserueth all them that loue hym, but skatereth abrode all the vngodlie.

My mouthe shall speake the prayse of the Lozde: and let all flesshe gyue thankes vnto his holy name foz euer and euer. Prayse the euerlasting.

THE PROVERBES OF SALOMON.

CAPI. I.

THe Prouerbes of Salomon the sonne of Dauid kynge of Israell: to lerne wysdome, instruction, vnderstandyng, prudence, ryghteousnesse, iudgement and equite.

That the very babes might haue wit, & that yonge men myght haue knowlege and discretion.

By hearynge, the wyse man shall come by more wysdome: & by experience he shall be more apte to vnderstande a parable, and the interpretacion therof: the wordes of the wyse, and the darcke speaches of the same.

The feare of the Lorde is the begynnynge of wysdome: but fooles despyse wysdom and instruction.

My sonne heare thy fathers doctrine, & forsake not the law of thy mother: for that shall bynge grace vnto thy head, & shall be a cheyne about thy necke.

Psalme. 1. a

My sonne, consent not vnto synners, if they entyse the, and saye: come with vs, lette vs laye waite for bloude, and lurke priuely for the innocent without a cause: lette vs swalowe them vp lyke the helle, let vs deuoure them quycke and hole, as those that go vnto the pyt.

So that we fynd all maner of costly riches, and fyll our houses with spoyles.

Caste in thy lot amonge vs: we shall haue all one purse.

My sonne, walke thou not with them, refrayn thy foote from their wayes.

For their feete runne to euyll, and are hasty to shed bloude.

Ecclesi. 27. b

It is in vayne to the net layde forthe before the byrdes eyes.

Yea they them selues laye wayte one for an others bloude: and one of them wolde slee an other.

These are the wayes of all suche as be couetous: that one wolde rauysshe an others lyfe.

Wysdome.

Wysdom crieth without, and putteth forth her voyce in the streetes.

She calleth before the congregacion in the open gates, and sheweth her wordes thorowe the city, sayinge:

O ye children, how longe wyll ye loue chyldishnesse? How longe wyll the scorners delite in scornynge, and the vnwyse be enuemyes vnto knowlege?

O turne you vnto my correction: lo I will expresse my mynde vnto you, and make you vnderstande my wordes.

Prouer. 1. a Jeremy. 7. a

Seynge then that I haue called, and ye refused it: I haue stretched oute my hande, and no man regarded it, but all my counsailes haue ye despysed, and set my correccions at nought.

Therfore shall I also laughe in youre destruccion, and mocke you, when the thynge that ye feare commeth vpon you: euen when the thynge that ye be a frayde of, falleth on you sodenly lyke a storme, and youre misery lyke a tempest: yea when trouble and anguysshe commeth vpon you. b

Then wyll they call vpon me, but I wyll not heare: they shall seke me early, but they shall not fynde me.

And that bycause they hated knowlege: and receyued not the feare of the Lorde, but abhorred my counsell, and despysed my correccion.

Therfore shal they eate of the frutes of their owne wayes, and be fylled with their owne counsels.

For the turnyng away of the vnwyse shall slee them: and the prosperite of fooles shal be their owne destruccion.

But who so harkeneth vnto me, shall dwell safely, and haue ynough without any feare of euill.

CAPI. II.

MY sonne, yf thou wylt receyue my wordes, and kepe my commaundements by the: that thyne eare maye harken vnto wysdome, applye thyne herte vnto vnderstandynge. a

For yf thou cryest after wysdome, and callest for knowlege: yf thou seekest after her as after money, and byggest for her as for treasure: then shalte thou vnderstande the feare of the Lorde, and fynde the knowlege of God.

For it is the Lord that giueth wysdom, out of his mouth commeth knowlege and vnderstandynge.

He preserueth the welfare of the ryghteous, and defendeth them that walke innocently: he b kepeth them in the right path, and preserueth the waye of his saynctes.

Then shalt thou vnderstande ryghteousnesse, iudgement and equite, yea and euerye good pathe.

Yf wysdome entre in to thyne herte, and thy soule delyte in knowlege: then shall counsell preserue the, and vnderstandynge shall kepe the.

That thou mayst be withdrawen from the euil waye, and from the man that speaketh frowarde thynges.

From suche as leaue the ryght streete, and walke in the wayes of darcknesse: which re- c ioyse in wyng euill, and delyte in wicked thynges: whose wayes are croked, & their pathes slaunderous.

That thou mayst be deliuered also from the Prouer. 5. a straunge woman, & from her that is not thyne owne: which speaketh swete wordes, forsaketh the husbande of her youth, and forgetteth the couenaunt of her God.

For

For her house is enclyned vnto death, & her pathes vnto hell.

D. All they that goo in vnto her, come not agayne, neither take they holde of the waye of lyfe.

That thou mayste walke in the good waye: and kepe the pathes of the righteous.

For the iuste shall dwelle in the lande, and the innocentes shall remayne in it: but the vngodly shall be rooted oute of the lande, and the wycked doers shall be taken oute of it.

CAPI. III.

A MY sonne, forget not my lawe: but let thyne hert kepe my commaundementes.

For they shal prolonge the dayes and yeres of thy lyfe, and bring the peace.

Let mercy and faythfulnesse neuer go from the: bynde them about thy necke, and wryte them in the tables of thyne herte.

So shalte thou fynde fauoure and good vnderstandynge in the syghte of God and men.

Put thy trust in the Lorde with all thyne herte: and leane not vnto thyne owne vnderstandynge.

In al thy wayes haue respect vnto him, and he shall ordre thy goinges.

Be not wyse in thyne owne conceyte, but feare the Lorde, and departe from euyll: so shall thy nauell be hole, and thy bones stronge.

B Honoure the Lorde with thy substaunce, and with the fyrstlinges of all thyne encrease: so shall thy barnes be fylled with plenteousnesse, and thy presses shall flowe ouer with swete wyne.

My sonne despyse not the chastening of the Lorde, neither faynt when thou art rebuked of him.

* For whom the Lorde loueth, him he chastneth: and yet delyteth in him euen as a father in his owne sonne.

Well is hym that fyndeth wysdome, and apteyneth vnderstandynge, for the getynge of it, is better then ayne marchaundise of syluer, and the profyte of it is better then golde.

Wysdome is more worth then precious stones: and al the thinges that thou canst desyre are not to be compared vnto her.

C Vpon her ryghte hande is longe lyfe: and vpon her lefte hande is ryches and honoure.

Her wayes are pleasaunt wayes, and al her pathes are peaceable.

She is a tree of lyfe to them that laye holde vpon her, and blessed are they that kepe her fast.

With wysdome hathe the Lorde layde the foundacyon of the earthe: and therowe vnderstandynge he hathe stablysshed the heuens.

Therowe his wysdome, the depthes brake vp: and the cloudes drop wyne of the dewe.

My sonne, let not these thinges depart from thyne eyes, but kepe my lawe and my counsell: so shall it be lyfe vnto thy soule, and grace vnto thy mouth.

Then shalte thou walke safely in thy waye, and thy foote shall not stomble.

If thou slepest, thou shalte not be afrayde, but shalte take thy rest, and slepe swetely.

D Thou nedest not to be afrayde of anye sodayne feare: neyther for the presente ruinynge in of the vngodlye, when it commeth.

For the Lorde shal besiege the, and kepe thy foote that thou be not taken.

Refuse not to do good vnto him that hath haue it: so longe as thyne hande is hable to do it.

Saye not vnto thy neyghboure: goo thy waye, and come agayne, to morowe will I gyue the: where as thou hast nowe to gyue him.

Intende no hurt vnto thy neyghboure, seyng he dwelleth in rest by the.

Stryue not lightly with any man, where as he hath done the no harme.

Folowe not a wycked man, and chose none of his wayes: for the Lord abhorreth the rowarde, but his secrete is amonge the ryghteous.

The curse of the Lord is in the house of the vngodly: but he blesseth the dwellynges of the ryghteous.

As for the scornefull, he shall laughe them to scorne: but he shall gyue grace vnto the lowly.

The wyse shall haue honoure in possession: but shame is the promotion that fooles shall haue.

CAPI. IIII.

HEare, o ye children the fatherly exhortation: and take good hede that ye may learne wysdome.

A For I shall gyue you a good rewarde, yf ye wyll not forsake my lawe.

For when I my selfe was my fathers dere sonne: and tenderly beloued of my mother, he taught me also, sayinge:

Lette thyne herte receyue my wordes: kepe my commaundementes, and thou shalte lyue.

Get the wysdome, get the vnderstandynge forget not the wordes of my mouth, & shynke not from them.

Forsake not her, and she shall preserue the: loue her, and she shall kepe the.

B The chefe poynte of wysdome is, that thou be wyllynge to obteyne wysdome, and before all thy goodes, to get the vnderstandynge.

Make moche of her, & she shal promote the: yea yf thou imbrace her, she shal bringe the vnto honour.

She shall make the a gracyous heed: & garnysshe the wythe the with a crowne of glorye.

Heare my sonne, and receyue my wordes: that the yeres of thy lyfe maye be many.

I will shewe the, the waye of wysdome, and lede the in the ryght pathes.

So that yf thou goest there, there shall no straytnesse hynder the: and whe thou runnest, thou shalt not fall.

Take fast holde of doctryne, let her not go: kepe her, for she is thy lyfe.

Come not in the pathe of the vngodly, and C walke not in the waye of the wicked.

Eschewe it, and go not therin: depart fro it, and passe ouer by it.

For they can not slepe, except they haue done some mischefe: neither take they ouer rest, except they haue caused some harme.

For they eate the breed of wickednesse, and D drynke the wyne of robbery.

The pathe of the righteous shyneth as the light, and is euer brighter and brighter vnto the perfect daye.

But the waye of the vngodlye is as the darcknesse, wherin men fall or they be aware.

My sonne, marke my wordes, and enclyne thyne eare vnto my sayinges.

Let them not departe from thyne eyes: kepe them euen in the myddest of thyne herte.

For they are lyfe vnto all those that fynde them: and helthe vnto all their bodyes.

Kepe thyne hert with all diligence: for therupon hangeth lyfe.

Put away from the a frowarde mouther: and let the yppes of slaunder be farre from the.

Let thyne eyes beholde the thynge that is aryght: and let thyne eye lyddes loke streyght before the.

Ponder the path of thy fete: so shal all thy wayes be sure.

Turne not a syde, neyther to the ryghte hande, ne to the lefte, but withholde thy fote from euyll.

CAPI. V.

My sonne, gyue hede vnto my wysdom, and bowe thyne eare vnto my prudence: that thou mayste regarde good counsell, and that thy yppes may kepe nourture.

For the yppes of an harlot are a droppynge houre combe, and her throte is softer then oyle.

But at the laste, she is as bytter as wormewod, and as sharpe as a two edged swerde.

Her fete go downe vnto deth, and her steppes pearse thorowe vnto hell.

She regardeth not the pathe of lyfe, so vnstedfast are her wayes, that thou canste not knowe them.

Heare me therfore (o my sonne) and departe not from the wordes of my mouth.

Kepe thy way farre from her, and come not nye the wyes of her house.

That thou gyue not thyne honour vnto an other, and thy yeres to the cruell.

That other men be not fylled with thy goodes: and that thy laboures come not in a straunge house.

Yea that thou mourne not at the last (when thou hast spent thy body and goodes) and then saye:

Alas, why hated I nourture? why did my herte deyspyse correction?

Wherfore was not I obedient vnto the voice C of my teachers: and harkened not vnto them that informed me?

I am come almoost in to all myschefe: in the myddest of the multitude and congregacion.

Drynke of the water of thyne owne well: Prou.
and of the ryuers that run out of thyne owne springes.

Let thy welles flowe out abrode, that there maye be ryuers of waters in the stretes: but let them be onely thyne owne, and not straungers with the.

Let thy well be blessed, and be glad with the wyfe of thy youth.

Louynge is she hynde, and frendly is D
the roo: lette her breastes alwaye satysfye the, and holde the euer content with her loue.

My sonne, why wylte thou haue pleasure in an harlot, and imbrace the bosome of another woman?

For euery mannes wayes are open in the syght of the Lorde, and he pondreth all their goynges.

The wickednesses of the vngodly shal catche him self, and with the snares of his owne synnes shall he be trapped.

Because he wolde not be reformed he shall dye: and for his greate folysshnesse he shall be destroyed.

CAPI. VI.

My sonne, yf thou be surety for thy neyghbour, thou hast fastened thyne hande with an other man: yea thou art bound with their owne wordes: & taken with thyne owne speche.

Therfore, my sonne, do this: discharge thy self, for thou arte come in to thy neyghbours daunger.

Goo thy waye then soone, and intreate thy neyghbour: let not thyne eyes slepe, ne thyne eye lyddes slomber.

Haue thy self as a Roo from the hande, and as a byrde from the hande of the fouler.

Go to the pysmere (thou sluggarde) consyder her wayes, and lerne to be wyse.

She hathe no guyde, no teacher, no leader: yet in the Sommer she prouydeth her meate meat, and gathereth her fode togyther in the harueſt.

How longe wylte thou ſlepe thou ſluggyſhe man?
When wylte thou aryſe oute of thy ſlepe?
Yea ſlepe on ſtyl a lytle ſlombre a lytle, fold thyne handes togyther yet a lytle, that thou mayſt ſlepe.
So ſhal penerte come vnto the, as one that ſtanayleth by the waye, and neceſſitie lyke a weaponed man.
A diſſemblynge perſon, a wycked man goeth with a frowarde mouth, he winketh with his eyes, he tokeneth with his fete, he poynteth with his fyngers, he is euer ymagenynge miſchiefe and frowardneſſe in his herte, and cauſeth diſcorde.
Therfore ſhall his diſtruction come haſtely vpon him: ſodeynly ſhall he be all to broken, and not be healed.
There be ſixe thynges whiche the Lorde hateth: and the ſeuenth he vtterly abhorreth.
A proude lobe, a diſſemblynge tonge, han-des that ſhede innocent bloude, an herte that goeth aboute with wycked ymagynacions, fete that be ſwyfte in rennynge to do myſ-chiefe, a falſe wytneſſe that bringeth vp lyes, and ſuche one as ſoweth diſcorde amonge brethren.
My ſonne, kepe thy fathers commaundementes, and forſake not the lawe of thy mother.
Bynd them vp togyther in thyne herte: and bynde them aboute thy necke.
That they maye leade the where thou goeſt, preſerue the when thou art a ſlepe, and that when thou awakeſt, thou mayſte talke of them.
For the commaundement is a lanterne, and the lawe a lyght: yea chaſtenynge and nour-ture is the waye of lyfe, that they maye kepe the from the euil woman, and from the flattering tong of the harlot: that thou luſt not after her beautye in thyne herte, and leſt thou be taken with her fayre lokes.
An harlot wyll make a man ſo begge his breed: but a maryed woman wyll hunte for the precious lyfe.
Maye a man take fyre in his boſome, & his clothes not be brent?
Or can one go vpon hote coles, and his fete not be burnt?
Euen ſo, who ſo euer goeth in to his neygh-beures wyfe, and toucheth her, can not be vngylty.
Men do not vtterly deſpyſe a theefe that ſteleth to ſatisfye his ſoule, when he is hongry: but yf he maye be gotten, he reſtoreth agayne ſeuen tymes as moche, or elles he meketh recompence with all the good of his houſe.
But who ſo committeth aduoutrye with a woman, he is a foole, and bringeth his lyfe to deſtruction.
He getteth him ſelfe alſo ſhame & diſhonour, ſuche as neuer ſhall be put out.

For the gelouſye and wrathe of the man wil not be intreated: no thought thou wolteſt of the him greate gyftes to make amendes, he wyll not receyue them.

CAPI. VII.

My ſonne, kepe my wordes, and laye vp my commaundementes by the.
Kepe my commaundementes, and my lawe euen as the apple of thyne eye: and thou ſhalt lyue.
Bynde them vpon thy fyngers: and wryte them in the table of thyne herte.
Saye vnto wyſdome, thou arte my ſyſter, and call vnderſtandynge thy kynſwoman:
that ſhe maye kepe the from the ſtraunge woman, and from the harlot whiche gyueth ſwete wordes.
For oute of the wyndowe of my houſe I loked thoroowe the trealeſſe, and beheld the ſympie people: and amonge other yongelyn-ges, I eſpyed one yonge foole gonge ouer the ſtretes: by the corner in the ware towarde the harlottes houſe in the twylyght of the euenynge, when it began nowe to be nyghte and darcke.
And beholde, there met him a woman in an harlots apparel, a diſcreteful woman, wanton & vnſtedfaſt woman, whoſe fete could not abide in the houſe: now in the without, now in the ſtretes, and lurketh in euery corner. She caught the yonge man, kyſſed him, and was not aſha-med, ſaying: I had a bow to pay, & this daye
I performe it.
Therfore came I forthe to mete the, that I myght ſeke thy face: and ſo I haue founde
the.
I haue decked my bed with courtynges and lothes of Egypt.
My bed haue I made to ſmell of Myrre, Aloes, and Cynamon.
Come let vs lye togyther, and take our plea
ſure tyll it be daye lyght.
For the goodman is not at home: he is gone farre of.
He hathe taken the bagge of money with hym: who can tell when he commeth home?
Thus with many ſwete wordes ſhe ouercame him: and with her flatteryng lyppes ſhe wan him.
Immediatly he folowed her, as it were an oxe leadde to the ſlaughter (and lyke as it were to the ſtockes where fooles are punyſhed) ſo long tyll ſhe had wounded his lyuer with her darte: lyke as yf a bryde haſted to the ſnare, not knowynge that the peryl of his lyfe lyeth therupon.
Heare me now therfore, o my ſonne, & marke
the wordes of my mouth.
Let not thyne herte wandre in her wayes, & be not thou diſceyued in her pathes.
For many one hathe ſhe wounded and caſte downe: yea many a ſtronge man hathe ſhe ſlayne.

Oo Her

hyre houses is the way vnto hell, where men go downe in to the chambres of death.

CAPI. VIII.

a DOthe not wysdome crye? dothe not vnderstandynge put forth her voyce?

Standeth she not in the hye places in the stretes and wayes? dothe she not crye before the whole cite, and in the gates where men go out and in?

It is you, o ye men (sayth she) whome I call.

Vnto you o ye children of men) lyfte I vp my voyce.

b Take hede vnto knowlege, o ye ignorant: be wyse in dede, o ye fooles.

Gyue eare, for I wyll speake of great maters, and open my lyppes to tell thynges that be ryght.

For my throte shal be talking of the truthe, and my lyppes abhorre vngodlynesse.

All the wordes of my mouthe are ryghteous: there is no frowardnesse nor falsehed therin.

They are all playne to suche as wyll vnderstand: and right to them that fynd knowlege.

Receyue my doctryne therfore, and not syluer: and my knowlege, more then fyne golde.

For wysdome is more worth then precyous stones: yea all the thinges that thou canst desire, are not to be compared vnto it.

c I wysdome haue my dwellynge with knowlege: and prudente counsell is myne owne.

With me is the feare of the Lorde, and the eschewynge of ryott.

Pryde, disdayne, and ryot waye, and a mouth that speaketh wicked thinges, I vtterly abhorre them.

I can gyue counsell and be a gyde: I haue vnderstandyng, I haue strength.

Through me, kynges reygne: through me, princes make full lawes.

Through me, lordes beare rule: and all iudges of the erth execute iudgement.

I am louing vnto those that loue me: and they that seke me early, shall fynde me.

Ryches and honour are with me: yea excellent goodes and ryghteousnesse.

My frute is better then golde and precyous stone: & myne encrease more worth then fyne syluer.

I walke in the waye of ryghteousnesse: and in the strete of iudgement.

That I may lende prosperitie to those that loue me: and to encrease their treasure.

The Lorde him selfe had me in possession in the beginning of his wayes, or euer he began his workes of old tyme. Hebr. 11.b

I haue ben ordeyned from euerlasting: and from the beginnynge or euer the erthe was made.

When I was borne, there were neyther depthes nor fyrynges of water.

Before the foundacyons of the mountaynes were layde, yea before all hylles, was I borne.

d The earthe, and all that is vpon the erth was not yet made: no not the grounde it selfe.

For when he made the heuens, I was present, when he set vp the depthes in order: whe he hanged the cloudes aboue, when he fastened the fyrynges of the depe.

When he shut the see within certayne bandes, that the waters sholde not go ouer their marches.

When he layde the foundacyons of the earthe, I was with him, ordeynge all thynges: delytynge dayly, and reioysynge alwaye before hym.

As for the round compasse of his worlde, I make it ioyfull: for my delyte is to be among the children of men.

Therfore harken vnto me, o ye children, for blessed are they that kepe my wayes.

e Gyue eare vnto nourture, be wise, and refuse it not.

f Blessed is the man that heareth me, watching dayly at my gates: and gyuing attendaunce at the postes of my doores.

For who so fyndeth me, fyndeth lyfe: and shal obteyn fauour of the Lorde.

But who so offendeth agaynste me hurteth his owne soule.

All they that hate me, are the louers of deathe.

CAPI. IX.

g WYsdome hath buylded her selfe an house, and hewē oute seuen pylleres: she hathe killed her victayles, poured out her wine and prepared her table.

h She hath sent forthe her maydens to crye vpon the hyest place of the cite: who so is ignorant, let him come hyther.

And to the vnwyse she said: i Come on your waye, eate my breed, & drynke my wyne which I haue poured out for you.

k Forsake ignorance, and ye shall lyue: and se that ye goo in the waye of vnderstandynge.

l Who so reproueth a scorneful person, getteth hym selfe dishonoure: and he that rebuketh the vngodlye, blameth hym selfe.

m Reproue not a scorner, lest he owe the euil wyll: but rebuke a wyse man, and he wyll loue the.

n Gyue a discrete man but an occasion, and he wyl be the wyser: teache a ryghteous man and he wil encrease.

o The feare of the Lorde is the begynnyng of wysdome: and the knowlege of holy thynges is vnderstandynge.

p For thorowe me thy dayes shall be prolonged: and the yeres of thy lyfe shall be manye.

Yf thou

If thou be wyse, thy wysdome shall do thy self good: but if thou thinkest scorne therof, it shall be thyne owne harme.

A folysshe rebellyous woman, full of wordes, and such one as hath no knowlege, sytteth in the doores of her house vpon a stoole, about in the cyty to cal suche as go by, & walke streyght in theyr wayes.

Who so is ignorant (sayth she) let him come hyther, and to the vnwyse she sayth: stolen waters are swete, and the breed that is preuely eaten, hath a good taste.

But they consider not that deth is there, and that her gestes go downe to hell.

CAPI. X.

The parables of Salomon.

A Wyse son, maketh a glad father: but an vndiscrete sonne is the heuynesse of his mother.

Treasures that are wickedlye gotten, profyte nothyng, but rightousnesse deliuereth from deth.

The Lorde wyl not let the soule of ỹ righteous suffre hunger: but he putteth the vngodly from his desire.

An ydle hande maketh poore: but a quycke labouryng hand maketh ryche.

Who so gathereth in sommer, is wyse: but he that is sluggish in harueste, bringeth him self to confusion.

Louynge and fauourable is the face of the ryghteous, but the forehed of the vngodlye is full shame and presumptuous.

The memoryall of the iust, shal haue a good reporte, but the name of the vngodlye shall stynche.

A wyse man wyll receyue warnynge: but a foole wyll sooner be smytten in the face.

He that leadeth an innocent lyfe, walketh surely: but who so goeth a wrong waye, shall be knowen.

He that winketh with his eye, wil worke harme: but he that hath a foolysh mouth, shal be beaten.

The mouth of a ryghteous man is a well of lyfe: but the mouthe of the vngodlye is full shame, and presumptuous.

Loue wil couer vp all synne, but loue coureth the multitude of synnes.

In the lyppes of hym that hathe vnderstandynge a man shall fynde wysdome: but the rode belongeth to the backe of the foolysshe.

Wyse men laye vp knowlege: but the mouthe of the foolysshe, is nygh destruction.

The riche mans goodes, are his strong holde: but pouertie oppresseth the poore.

The ryghteous laboureth to doo good: but the vngodlye vseth his substaunce vnto synne.

To take hede vnto the chastenyng of nourture, is the waye of lyfe: but he that refuseth to be reformed goeth wrongc.

Dyssemblynge lyppes kepe hatred secretly: and he that speaketh any slaunder, is a foole.

Where moche babblynge is, there must nedes be offence: he that refrayneth his lyppes, is wyse of all.

An innocent tonge is a noble treasure: but the herte of the vngodlye is nothynge worthe.

The lyppes of the ryghteous fede a hole multytude: but fooles shal dye in their owne folye.

The blessynge of the Lorde maketh ryche men: as for carefull trauayle, it doth nothyng therto.

A foole doth wickedly, and maketh but a sporte of it: neuertheles it is wysdome for a man to beware of suche.

The thyng that the vngodly are afrayde of shall come vpon them: but the ryghteous shall haue their desire.

The vngodly is lyke a tempest that passeth ouer, and is no more seene: but the righteous remayneth sure for euer.

As vynegre is to the teethe, and as smoke is vnto the eyes: euen so is a sluggish person to them that sende him forth.

The feare of the Lorde maketh a longe lyfe: but the yeres of the vngodlye shall be shortened.

The patient abydynge of the righteous shall be turned to gladnesse: but the hope of ỹ vngodly shal perysshe.

The waye of the Lorde geueth a courage vnto the godly: but it is a feare for wyckednesse.

The ryghteous shall neuer be ouerthrowen: but the vngodly shall not remayne in ỹ lande.

The mouthe of the iuste wyll be talkynge of wysdome: but the tonge of the frowarde shall perysshe.

The lyppes of the ryghteous are occupied in acceptable thynges: but the mouth of the vngodly taketh them to the worst.

CAPI. XI.

A falce balaunce is an abhominacion vnto the Lorde: but a true weyghe pleaseth him.

Where pryde is, there is shame also, and confusion: but where as lowlynesse is, there is wysdome.

The innocent dealynge of the iust shall leade them: but the vnfeythfulnesse of the wycked shall be their owne destruction.

Ryches helpe not in the daye of vengeaunce: but ryghteousnesse deliuereth from death.

The ryghteousnesse of the innocent ordreth his waye: but the vngodly shall fall in his owne wickednesse.

The ryghteousnesse of the iust, shall delyuer them: but the despysers shal be taken in their owne vngodynesse.

Supra. v. h. ✠ When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone: the confydence of ryches shall perysshe.

The ryghteous shall be delyuered oute of trouble: and the vngodye shall come in his stede.

Thorowe the mouthe of the dissembler is his neyghboure destroyed: but thorowe knowlege, shall the iuste be delyuered.

When it goeth wel with the ryghteous, the cite is mery: and when the vngodly perysshe, there is gladnesse.

When the iuste are in welthe, the cite prospereth: but when the vngodly haue the rule it decayeth.

A foole bringeth vp a slaunder of his neyghboure: but a wyse man wyll kepe it secrete.

A dissemblynge person wyl discouer priuye thinges: but he that is of a faythful hert, wil kepe counsel.

C Where no good counsell is, there the people decaye: but where as many are that can gyue counsell, there is welth.

He that is suretye for a straunger: burteth him selfe: but he that medleth not with suretyshyp is sure.

A gracyous woman maynteyneth honestye: as for the myghtye, they mayntayne rychesse.

He that hath a gentle lyberall stomache: is mercyful: but who so burteth his neyghboure is a tyraunt.

The labour of the vngodly prospereth not: but he that soweth ryghteousnesse, shal receyue a sure rewarde.

Lyke as ryghteousnesse bringeth life: euil so to cleue vnto euyll bringeth death.

The Lorde abhorreth a fayned herte: but he hathe pleasure in theym that are vnreprehended.

It shall not helpe the wycked, though they laye all theyr handes togyther: but the seed of the ryghteous shall be preserued.

A fayre woman without discrete maners: is lyke a ryngge of golde in a swynes snoute.

The iust labour for peace and tranquillitie: but the vngodly for disquietnesse.

Some man gyueth out his goodes, and is the rycher: but the nygard (hauyng ynough) wil departe from nothynge, and yet is euer in powerte.

He that is lyberall in gyuynge, shall haue D plentye: and he that watereth, shall be watered also him selfe.

Who so hoordeth vp his corne, shal be cursed among the people: but blessing shal lyght vpon his heed that selleth it.

He that laboureth for honestie, fyndeth his desire: but who so seketh after myschiefe, it shall happen vnto him.

He that trusteth in his ryches, shall haue a fall: but the ryghteous, shal florysshe as the grene leafe.

Who so maketh disquietnesse in his owne house, he shall haue wynde for his herytage: and the foole shall be seruaunt to the wyse.

The frute of the ryghteous, is as the tree of lyfe: a wyse man also, wynneth mens soules.

✠ Yf the ryghteous be recompensed vpon earthe: howe moche more then the vngodly and the synner? 1. Pet. 4.

CAPI. XII.

Who so loueth wysdome, will be content to be reformed: but he that hateth to be reproued, is a foole. Z

A good man is acceptable vnto the Lorde: but the wicked wil be condemne.

A man can not endure in vngodynesse: but the roote of the ryghteous shal not be moued. 1. Pet. 5.

A stedfast woman is a crowne vnto her husbande: but she that behaueth her selfe vnhonestly, is a corruption to his bones.

The thoughtes of the ryghteous are ryght: but the ymagination of the vngodly, are deceytfull.

The talkynge of the vngodly is howe they may laye wayte for bloude: but the mouth of the ryghteous wyll deliuer them.

Ouerthrow thou canst turne the about, the vngodly shall be ouerthrowen: but the house of the ryghteous shall stande. B

A man shal be commended for his wisdome: but a foole shal be despised.

A symple man whiche laboureth and worketh: is better then one that is gorgious and wanteth breed. Prouer. 28.

A ryghteous man regardeth the lyfe of his catell: but the vngodlye haue cruell bretes.

He that tylleth his lande, shall haue plentousnesse of breed: but he that followeth vanitie, is a very foole. Prouer. 28.

The desire of the vngodly hunteth after mischefe: but the rote of the ryghteous bryngeth forth frute.

The wicked falleth in to the snare, thorow the malyce of his owne mouth: but the iuste shall escape out of perill.

Euerye man shall inioye good, accordynge to the innocencye of his mouthe, and after the workes of his handes shall he be rewarded.

Lo! what a foole taketh in hand, he thinketh it well done, but he that is wyse, wyll be counselled.

A foole vttereth his wrath in all the haste: but a discrete man forgyueth wronge.

A iust man wyll tell the truthe: and shewe the thynge that is ryght: but a false wytnesse disceyueth.

A slaunderous person pyercheth lyke a swerde: but a wyse mans tong is holsome. C

A true mouth is euer constant: but a dissemblyng tonge is soone chaunged.

The

They that ymagen euil in theyr mynde, wil disceyue: but the counsellours of peace shall haue ioye folowynge them.

There shall no mysfortune happen vnto the iust: but the vngodly shall be fylled with mischefe.

The Lorde abhorreth disceytfull lyppes: but they that laboure for trouthe, please him.

He that hath vnderstandynge, can hyde his wysdome: but an vnthrifte herte telleth out his folysshenesse.

A diligent hande shall beare rule: but the idel shall be vnder tribute.

Heuynesse discourageth the herte of man:
but a good worde maketh it gladde a-gayne.

The righteous is liberall vnto his neyghboure: but the wayes of the vngodly will disceyue them selues.

A discreyt full man shall fynde no dauntager:
but he that is content with that he hathe, is more worth then golde.

In the waye of righteousnesse there is lyfe: as for anye other waye, it is the pathe vnto deathe.

CAPI. XIII.

A Wyse sonne wyll receyue his fathers warnynge, but he that is stomefull, wyl not heare when he is reproued.

A good man shall eniope the fruite of his mouthe: but he that hath a frawarde mynde shall be spoyled.

He that kepeth his mouthe, kepeth his lyfe: but who so speaketh vnaduysed, shall haue harme.

The sluggarde wolde fayne haue, and can not get his desier: but the soule of the diligent shall haue plentye.

A righteous man abhorreth lyes: but the vngodlye shameth bothe other and hym selfe.

Righteousnesse kepeth the innocent in the waye: but vngodlynesse shal ouerthrowe the synner.

Some men are ryche, though they haue nothynge: agayne, some men are poore, hauynge great rychesse.

With goodes euerye man delyuereth his lyfe: and the poore wyll not be repro-ued.

The lyghte of the righteous maketh ioyfull: but the candle of the vngodlye shall be put out.

Amonge the proude there is euer stryfe: but among those that do all thinges with aduisement, there is wysdome.

Hastely gotten goodes are some spent: but they that be gathered together with the hand shall increase.

Longe tarienge for a thynge that is desired, grieueth the herte: but when the desire commeth, it is a tree of lyfe.

Who so despyseth the worde, destroyeth him selfe: but he that feareth the commaundemente shall haue peace.

The lawe is a well of lyfe vnto the wyse, that it maye kepe hym frome the snares of deathe.

Good vnderstandynge geueth fauour: but harde is the waye of the breakers.

A wyse man ordreth all thynges with discrecion: but a foole wyll declare his folye.

An vngodlye messanger bringeth mischefe: but a faythfull ambassadour is holsome.

He that refuseth stryne to be reformed, commeth to pouerte and shame: but who so receyueth correction, shall come to honoure.

When a desyre is brought to passe, it delyteth the soule: but fooles abhorre them that eschewe yuell.

He that goeth in the company of wyse men, shall be wyse: but who so is a companyon of fooles, shall be hurte.

Myschefe folowyth vpon synners, but the righteous shall haue a good rewarde.

Vnto theyr children children shall haue in possession: for the ryches of the synner is layd vp for the iust.

There is plenteousnesse of foode in the tilthe of the poore: and shall be encreased out of measure.

He that spareth the rodde, hateth his sonne: but who so loueth him, chasteth hym euer in nourture.

The righteous eateth, and is satisfyed:
but the belye of the vngodlye hathe neuer ynough.

CAPI. XIIII.

A Wyse women vpholdeth her house, but a foolyshe wyfe plucketh it downe.

Who so feareth the Lorde, walketh in the right path: and regardeth not him that abhorreth the wayes of the Lorde.

In the mouth of the foolyshe is the rodde of Lordshyp: but the lyppes of the wyse, wil beware of hym.

Where no oxen are, there the crib is empty:
but where the oxen labour, there is muche fruite.

A faythfull witnesse will not dissemble, but a false recorde wyll make a lye.

A stomefull body seketh wysdome, and fyndeth it not: but knowlege is easy to come by, vnto him that wyl vnderstande.

Be that thou medle not with a foole:
and doo as thoughe thou hadest no knowlege.

The wisdome of him that hath vnderstanding, is, to take hede vnto his wayes, but the folysshnesse of the vnwyse disceyueth.

Fooles make but a sporte at synne, but there is honourable loue among the righteous.

The herte of him that hath vnderstanding wyll neither dispayre for anye losse, nor be to presumptuous for any lykelyhode.

The houses of the vngodly shall be ouer-thrawen: but the habytacion of the ryghteous shall florysshe.

There is a waye, whiche some men thynke to be ryght, but the ende therof leadeth vnto deathe.

The herte is sorowfull, euen in laughter, & the ende of mirth, is heynesse.

An vnfaythfull person shal be filled with his owne wayes, but a good man wyll beware of suche.

An ignoraunt bodye byleueth all thynges: but who so hath vnderstandynge, loketh well to his goynges.

A wyse man feareth, and departeth from euyll: but a foole goeth on presumptuously.

An vnpacyent man dealeth folysshely: but he that is well aduysed, doothe other wayes.

The ignoraunte haue folysshenesse in possession, but the wyse are crowned with knowlege.

The euyll shall bowe them selues before the good, and the vngodly shall wayte at the dores of the ryghteous.

The poore is hated euen of his owne neyghbours: but the ryche hathe many frendes.

Who so despyseth his neyghbour, doothe a mysse: but blessed is he that hathe pity of the poore.

They that ymagen wyckednesse, shall be disapoynted: but they that muse vpon good thynges, vnto suche shall happen mercye and faythfulnesse.

In diligent labour bryngeth rychesse, and where many dayne wordes are, there is skarcenesse.

Wyckednesse is an ornament vnto the wyse: but the ignoraunce of fooles is verye folysshenesse.

A faythfull witnesse deliuereth soules, but a lyar disceyueth them.

The feare of the Lorde is a strong hold, for vnto his he wyll be a sure defence.

The feare of the Lorde is a well of lyfe, to auoyde the snares of death.

The encrease and prosperitie of the comens, is the kynges honoure: but the decaye of the people, is the confusyon of the Prynce.

Patyence is a token of wysdome: but wrathe and hasty displeasure is a token of folysshenesse.

A mery hert is the lyfe of the body: but rancour consumeth awaye the bones.

He that doth a poore man wrong, blaspheameth his maker: but who so hath pitye of the poore, doth honour vnto God.

The vngodlye is afrayed of euerye perill: but the ryghteous hathe a good hope euen in deathe.

Wysdome resteth in the herte of hym that hath vnderstandyng, and he wyll teache them that are vnlerned.

Ryghteousnesse setteth vp the people: but wyckednesse bryngeth folke to destruction.

A discrete seruaunte is a pleasure vnto the kynge: but one that is not honest, prouoketh him vnto wrath.

CAPL. XV.

A softe answere putteth downe displeasure: but frowarde wordes prouoke vnto angre.

A wyse tonge commendeth knowlege: a folysshe mouthe blabbeth out nothynge but folysshenesse.

The eyes of ℣ Lord loke on euery place, both vpon the good and bad.

A hollsome tonge is a tree of lyfe: but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mynde.

A foole despiseth his fathers correction: but he that taketh heed when he is reproued, shall haue the more vnderstandyng.

In the house of the ryghteous are greate ryches, but in ℣ increase of the vngodly there is myserye.

A wyse mouth powreth out knowlege: but the hert of the folysshe doth not so.

The Lorde abhorreth the sacrifice of the vngodly: but the prayer of the righteous is accepted vnto him.

The waye of the vngodly is an abhominacion vnto the Lorde: but who so followeth ryghteousnesse, him he loueth.

He that forsaketh the right strete, shall be sore punished: and who so hateth correction, falleth into death.

The hell with her payne is knowen vnto the Lorde: how moche more then the hertes of men?

A scornefull bodye loueth not one that rebuketh him: neyther wyl he come among the wyse.

A merye herte maketh a cherefull countenaunce: but an vnquyet mynde maketh it hevy.

A wyse herte wyll seke after knowlege: but the mouthe of fooles medleth with folysshnesse.

All the dayes of the poore are myserable: but a quyete herte is as a contynuall feast.

Better is a lytle with the feare of the Lord, then great treasure, for they are not without sorowe.

Better is a messe of potage with loue: then a fat ox with euyl will.

An angrye man stereth vp stryfe, but he that is patient, stylleth discorde.

The waye of the slouthfull is full of thornes: but the strete of the ryghteous is well clensed.

A wyse sonne maketh a gladde father: but an vnthryfte bodye shameth his mother.

A foole reioyseth in foolysshe thynges: but a wyse man loketh well to his owne goynges.

Vnadui sed thoughtes shall come to nought: but where as men are that can gyue counsell councell, there is stedfastnesse.

O how ioyfull a thinge is it, a mā to gyue a conuenient aunswere?

O how pleasaunt is a worde spoken in due season.

The waye of lyfe leadeth vnto heauē, that a man shulde beware of hell beneth.

D The Lorde will breake downe the house of the proude, but he shal make fast the borders of the wydow.

The Lord abhorreth the ymaginacions of the wycked, but pure wordes are pleasaūt vnto him.

The couetous man roteth vp his owne house, but who so hateth rewardes, shal lyue.

A righteous mā museth in his mynde how to doo good, but the mynde of the vngodly ymagineth, how he may do harme.

The Lorde is farre from the vngodly, but he heareth the prayer of the righteous.

Lyke as the clearnesse of the eyes reioyseth the herte, so doth a good name fede the bones.

The eare that harkeneth vnto holsom warnynge, and enclyneth therto, shall dwell amonge the wyse.

He that refuseth to be reformed, despyseth his owne soule: but he that submitteth him selfe to correction, is wyse.

CAPI. XVI.

¶ The feare of the Lorde is the right scitce of wysdome, and lowlynes goeth before honoure.

A man maye well purpose a thinge in his herte, but the answere of the tonge commeth of the Lorde.

A man thinketh all his wayes to be cleane but it is the Lorde that iudgeth the myndes.

Committe thy workes vnto the Lord, and lohe what thou deuyseth, it shall prospere.

The Lorde doeth all thinges for his owne sake, yea and when he reperth the vngodly for the daye of wrath.

The Lorde abhorreth all presumptuous & proude heartes, there maye neyther strength nor power escape.

With louynge mercy and faythfulnesse synnes be forgyuen, and who so feareth ỹ Lorde eschueth euyll.

When a mans wayes please the Lorde, he maketh his deep ennemyes to be his frendes.

Better it is to haue a lytle thinge wt righteousnesse, then greate rentes wrongfully gotten.

A man deuyseth a waye in his herte, but it is the Lorde that ordreth his goynges.

When the Prophecye is in the lyppes of ỹ kynge, his mouth shall not go wronge in iugement.

A true measure and a true balaunce are the Lordes, he maketh all weyghtes.

It is a great abhommacion when kynges are wicked, for a kynges state shulde be holden vp with righteousnesse.

Righteous lyppes are pleasaunt vnto kynges, and they loue him ỹ speaketh the truth.

The kynges displeasure is a messaunger of death, but a wyse man will pacifie him.

The cheerefull countenaunce of the kynge is lyfe, and his louynge fauoure is as the cue nynge dewe.

To haue wysdome in possessiō is better then golde, & to get vnderstandinge, is more worth then siluer.

The path of the righteous eschueth euyl, and who so loketh well to his wayes, keepeth his owne soule.

Presumptuousnes goeth before destruction and after a proude stomake there followeth a fall.

Better is it to be of humble mynde with ỹ lowlye, then to deuide the spoyles with the proude.

He that handleth a matter wysely, optey neth good: and blessed is he, that putteth his trust in the Lorde.

Who so hath a wyse vnderstandinge, is cal led to councell: but he that can speake fayre getteth more eyches.

Understandinge is a well of lyfe vnto him C that hath it, as for the chastenynge of fooles, it is but foolyshnesse.

The herte of the wyse enformeth his mouth, and amendeth the doctrine in his lyppes.

Fayre wordes are an hony combe, a refreshinge of the mynde, and healthe of the bones.

There is a way that men thinke to be right Prou. xiiii. b but the ende therof leadeth vnto death. Deut. xii. a

A troublous soule disquieteth her self, for Ecclesi. b her owne mouth hath brought her therto.

An vngodly personne stereth vp euyll, and in his lyppes he is as an hote burnynge fyre.

A frowarde body causeth stryfe, and he that is a blabber of his tongue, maketh diuision amonge princes.

A wycked man begyleth his neighboure, & leadeth him the waye that is not good.

He that wynketh with his eyes, ymagi- D neth mischefe: and he that byteth his lyppes will do some harme.

Age is a crowne of worshyp, yf it be found in the waye of righteousnesse.

A patient man is better then one stronge: & he that can rule him selfe, is more worth then he that wynneth a cytie.

The lottes are cast into the lappe, but there fall standeth in the Lorde.

CAPI. XVII.

BEtter is a drye morsell with quietnesse, A then a full house and many fat cattell in stryfe. Eccles. b

A discrete seruaunt shal haue more rule the the sonnes that haue no wysdome, and shall haue lyke heritage with the brethren.

Lyke as siluer is tryed in the fyre and golde in the fornace, euen so doth the Lorde proue the hertes.

A wycked body beholdeth moche of false lyppes, and a dissembling personne giueth eare to a discreyfull tongue.

Who

¶ Who so langheth the poze to skorne, blas phemeth his maker, and he that is glad of an other mans hurte, shall not be vnpunyshed.

Childzen childzen are a woꝛshyppe vnto the elders, and the fathers are the honoure of the childzen.

An eloquent speche becommeth not a foole a dissemblynge mouthe also beseemeth not a prince.

Liberalitie is a precious stone vnto him þ hath it, foꝛ where so euer he becommeth, he prospereth.

Who so couereth an other mans offence, se keth loue: but he that ꝛeuyleth the faute, set teth frendes at variaunce.

One reproffe onely with more good to him that hathe vnderstandinge, then an hundred stripes vnto a foole.

A seditious persone seketh mischefe, but a cruell messaunger shall be sent against him.

It were better to come against a she Beare robbed of her whelpes, then against a foole in his folysshenesse.

Who so rewarded euyll foꝛ good, þ plage shall not departe frome his house.

The beginnynge of strife, is lyke one that openeth vp a waters brooke: but an open enemy is lyke the water that breaketh out and runneth abrode.

The Lorde hateth as well him that iustifi eth the vngodly, as him that condemneth þ innocent.

What helpeth it to giue a foole money in his hande, where as he hath no mynde to bye
wysdome?

He is a frende that all waye loueth, and in aduersitie a man shall knowe who is his bro ther.

Who so promyseth by the hande, and is surety foꝛ an other, he is a foole.

He that loueth stryfe, delyteth in synne: a who so setteth his doꝛe to highe, seketh after a fall.

Who so hathe a frowarde hert optayneth no good: and he that hathe an euerthwarte tongue, shall fall into mischefe.

An vnwyse body bringeth him self into so rowe, and the father of a foole canne have no ioye.

A merry hert maketh a lusty age, but a sozo full mynde dryeth vp the bones.

The vngodly taketh gyftes out of the bo some, to wreste the wayes of iudgement.

Wysdome shyneth in the face of him that hathe vnderstandinge, but the eyes of fooles wandze thoꝛow out all landes.

An vnthrifte sonne is a greffe vnto his fa ther, and an heuynesse vnto his mother that bare him.

To punysh the innocent, and to smyte the princes that giue true iudgement, are bothe euyll.

He is wyse and discrete, that temperith his wordes, and he is a man of vnderstandinge, that maketh moche of his spirite.

Yea a very foole (when he holdeth his tong ue) is counted wyse, and to haue vnderstan dinge, when he shutteth his lyppes.

Who so hath pleasure to sowe discorde, pꝛ keth a quarel in euery thinge.

A foole hathe no delyte in vnderstan dinge, but onely in those thinges wherin his hert reioyseth.

Where vngodlynes is, there is also des payre: and so there followeth shame and dis honeste.

The wordes of a mans mouth are lyke deps waters, and the well of wysdome is lyke a ma ruesome.

It is not good to regarde the person of the vngodly, ne to put backe the righteous in iud gement.

A foles lyppes are euer brawlinge, and his mouth prouoketh vnto battayle.

A fooles mouthe is his owne destruccyon, and his lyppes are the snare foꝛ his owne soule.

The wordes of a slaunderer are very wosh ers, and go thoꝛow vnto the inmost partes of the body.

Who so is slouthfull and slacke in his la bour, is the brother of him that is a wa ster.

The name of the Lorde is a stronge castell, the righteous fleeth vnto it, and shall be sa
ued.

But the ryche mans goodes are his strong holde, yea he taketh them foꝛ an hyghe wall roundabout him.

After pryde commeth destruction, and ho noure after lowlynes.

He that gyueth sentence in a matter before he heare it, is a foole, and woꝛthy to be con founded.

A good stomache digesteth away a mans di sease, but when the spirite is vexed, who may abyde it?

A wyse herte laboureth foꝛ knowlege, and a prudent eare seketh vnderstandinge.

Liberalitie bringeth a man to honoure and woꝛshyppe, and setteth him amonge gre ter men.

The righteous accuseth hym selfe fyrst of all: yer his neyghboure come he shall synde
hym.

The lot pacifyeth the variaunce, & parteth
the mighty a sunder.

The vnitie of brethren is stronger then a ca stell, and they that holde together are lyke the barre of a palace.

A mans belly shalbe satisfied with the frute of his owne mouth, and with the increase of his lyppes shall he be fylled.

Death and lyfe stande in the power of the tongue, he that loueth it, shal eniop the frute therof.

Who so fyndeth a wyfe fyndeth a good thinge, and receyueth an holsome benefyte of the Lorde.

The poore maketh supplicacion and prayeth meekely, but the ryche gyueth a rough an swere.

A frende that delyteth in lowe, weth a man moze frendelyp, and sticketh faster vnto him then

then a brother.

CAPI. XIX.

A Better is the poze that lyueth godly, the the blasphemer that is but a fole.

Where no discretion is, there ꝑ soule is not well: and who so is swyfte on fote, stombleth hastely.

Folyshnesse maketh a man to go out of his waye, and then is his herte impacient against the Lorde.

Riches make many frendes, but the poore is forsaken of his owne frendes.

A false wytnesse shall not remayne vnpunyshed, and he that speaketh lyes shall not escape.

The multitude hangeth vpon great men, and euery man fauoureth him that gyueth ye wages.

As for the poze, he is hated amonge all his brethren: yea his owne frendes forsake him, and he that gyueth credence vnto wordes, getteth nothinge.

He that is wyse, loueth his owne soule: B and who so hathe vnderstandinge, shall prospere.

A false wytnesse shall not remayne vnpunyshed, and he that speaketh lyes shall perysshe.

Delicate eate becommeth not a fole, moche more vnsemely is it, a bonde man to haue the rule of princes.

A wyse man putteth of displeasure, and it is his honour to let some faultes passe.

The hynges displeasure is lyke the roaringe of a Lyon, but his frendshyp is lyke the dew vpon the grasse.

An vndiscrete sonne is the dampnes of his father, and a braulynge wyfe is lyke the top of an house, where thorowe it is euer droppynge.

Houses and ryches maye a man haue by the heritage of his elders, but a discrete woman is the gyfte of the Lorde. ☞

Slouthfulnes bringeth slepe, and an idell soule shall suffer honger.

Who so kepeth the commaundement, kepeth his owne soule: but he that regardeth C not his waye, shall dye.

He that hath pytie vpon the poze, lendeth vnto the Lord: and loke what he layeth out it shalbe payed him agayne.

Chasten thy sonne whyle there is hope, but let not thy soule be moued to slaye him.

For great wrath bringeth harme, therfore let him go, for so mayst thou teache him more nurture.

O gyue eare vnto good councell, and be cõtent to be reformed, that thou mayst be wyse hereafter.

There are many deuyses in a mans herte, ne ☞ nerthelesse the councell of the Lorde shall stande.

It is a mannes worshyppe to be good, and D better it is to be a poore man, then a dissembler.

The feare of the Lorde preserueth the lyfe ꝑ it gyueth plenteousnes, without the visitation of any plage.

A slouthfull bodye shuteth his hande into his bosome, so that he can not put it to his mouth.

Yf thou smytest a scornefull personne, the ignorannt shall take better hede, and yf thou reprouest one that hathe vnderstandinge, he will be the wyser.

He that hurteth his father or shuteth oute his mother, is a shamefull and an vnworthy sonne.

Cease sonne, heare no more the doctrine that leadeth the awaye frome the wordes of vnderstandinge.

A false wytnesse laugheth iudgement to scorne, and the mouth of the vngodly eateth vp wyckednes.

Punyshmentes are ordened for the scornefull, and stryppes for fooles backes.

CAPI. XX.

Wyne is a voluptuous thinge, and dronkennes causeth lustion: who so delyteth therin, shall neuer be wyse. A

The kynge ought to be feared as the roaringe of a lyon, who so prouoketh him vnto anger, offendeth agaynste his owne soule.

It is a mans honoure to kepe him selfe frome stryfe, but they that haue pleasure in braulynge, are fooles euery one.

A slouthfull body will not go to plowe for colde, therfore shall he go a beggynge in Ho- mer, and haue nothynge.

Wyse counsell in the herte of man is lyke a water in the depe of the earth, but he that hath vnderstandynge, bringeth it forth.

Many there be that are called good men, but where shall one fynde a true faythfull man?

Who so leadeth a godly and an innocente lyfe, happy shall his children be whom he leaueth behynde him.

A kynge that sitteth in iudgement, and loketh well aboute him, dryueth awaye all e- B uyll.

Who can saye: my herte is cleane, I am innocent frome synne? 1. Iohn. 1.b iii. Reg. viii. c ii. Para. vi. c Eccles. vii. c

To vse two maner of weyghtes, or two maner of measures, both these are abominable vnto the Lorde.

A childe is knowen by his conuersacõ, whether his workes be pure and right.

As for the hearynge of the eare and the syght of the eye, the Lorde hath made them both.

Delyte not thou in slepe, least thou come vnto pouerte: but open thyne eyes, and thou shalt haue bred ynough.

It is naught, It is naught (saye men) whē C they haue it, but when it is gone, they gyue it a good worde.

A mouth of vnderstandinge is more worth then golde, many precious stones, and costely Iewels.

Take

Take his garment that is suretie for a strā ger, and take a pledge of him for the vnkno-wen mans sake.

Every man thinketh the bird that is gotten with deceyte, but at the last his mouth shalbe filled with gravell.

Thorow councell the thinges that men ta-kyle, go forwarde: and with discretion ought warres to be taken in hande.

Medle not with him that bewrayeth secrets, and is a flatterer, and dilcyeveth w his lyppes.

Who so curseth his father and mother, his light shall be put out in the myddest of dark-nesse.

The heritage that commeth to hastely at first, shall not be prayse at the ende.

Saye not thou: I will recompence evell, but put thy trust in the Lorde, and he shal re-leade the.

The Lorde abhorreth two maner of weyght es, and a falle balaunce is an evyll thinge.

The Lorde ordreth every mans goynges, for what is he, that understandeth his owne wayes?

It is a snare for a man to blaspheme that which is holye, and then to go about with vowes.

A wyse kynge destroyeth the ungodly, and bringeth the wheele ouer them.

The lanterne of the Lorde is the breethe of man, and goeth thorow all the inwarde par-tes of the body.

Mercy and faithfulnes preserve the kynge, and with mayntayning kyndnes his seate is bolden up.

The strength of yeunge men is their worshippe, and a grave head, is an honour vnto the aged.

Woundes dryve awaye evell, and so doth pis the inwarde partes of the body.

CAPI. XXI.

The kynges herte is in the hande of the Lorde, lyke as are the ryvers of waters:
he maye tourne it whether so ever he will.

Every man thinketh his owne waye to be right, but the Lorde iudgeth the hertes.

To do righteousnesse and iudgment is more acceptable to the Lorde then sacrifice.

A presumptuous looke, a proude stomache, and the lanterne of the ungodly is synne.

The devices of one that is diligent, bringe plentiousnesse: but he that is unadvised, cometh vnto povertie.

Who so boasteth vp riches with the disceytfulnes of his tongue, he is a fole, & lyke vnto them that seke their owne death.

The robberies of the ungodly shalbe their owne destruction, for they wolde not doo the thinges that was right.

The wayes of the forwarde are straunge,
but the workes of him that is cleane, are right.

It is better to dwell in a corner vnder the house toppe, then with a brawlynge woman in a wyde house.

The soule of the ungodly wysheth evell, & hath no pitie vpon his neyghboure.

When the scornefull is punished, the simple maye take the better hede: and when a wyse man is warned, he will receyve the more vnderstandinge.

The righteous enformeth the house of the ungodly, but the ungodly go on still after their owne wyckednesse.

Who so stoppeth his eare at the crye of the poore, he shall crye him selfe and not be herde.

A privy rewarde pacifieth displeasure, and a gyfte in the bosome stilleth furious nesse.

The iust delyteth in doynge the thing that is right, but the workers of wyckednesse abhorre the same.

The man that wandreth out of the way of wysdome, shall remayne in the congregation of the dead.

He that hath pleasure in banketters, shalbe a poore man: Who so delyteth in wyne and delicates, shall not be riche.

The ungodly shalbe given for the ryghte-ous, and the wycked for the iust.

It is better to dwell in a wyldernesse, then with a chydinge and an angry woman.

In a wyse mans house there is great treasure and plentiousnesse, but a folyshe body spendeth vp all.

Who so followeth ryghteousnesse and mercy, fyndeth both lyfe, righteousnesse and honour.

A wyse man wynneth the cytie of the mighty, and as for the strength that they trust in, he bringeth it downe.

Who so keepeth his mouth and his tonge,
the same keepeth his soule fro troubles.

He that is proude & presumptuous, is called a scornefull man, which in wrathe doeth worke maliciously.

The voluptuousnesse of the slouthfull is his owne deathe, for his handes will not labour.

He coveteth and desireth all the day longe but the righteous is allwaye givinge and kepeth nothinge backe.

The sacrifice of the ungodly is abhomination, for they offre the thinge that is gotten with wyckednesse.

A false witnesse shall perysh, but he that will be content to heare, shall alway have power to speake him selfe.

An ungodly man goeth forth rashly, but he that refourmeth his owne waye.

There is no wysdome, there is no vnderstandinge, there is no councell againste the Lorde.

The horse is prepared againste the daye of battayle, but the Lorde giveth the victo-rye.

CAP. XXII.

A good

A Good name is more worth then great ryches, and louynge fauoure is better then siluer and golde.

Whether ryches or powerte wo mete vs, it commeth all of God.

A wyse mā seyth the plage and byeth him selfe, but the folyshe go on styll and are punyshed.

The ende of lowlynes, and the feare of God; is rychesse, honoure, prosperitie and healthe.

Speares and snares are in the waye of the frowarde, but he that will kepe his soule, let him flee frome suche.

Yf thou teachest a chylde in his youth what waye he shulde go, he shall not leaue it when he is olde.

The ryche ruleth the poore, and ỹ borower is seruaunt to the lender.

He that sowyth wyckednesse shal reape sorowe, and the rodde of his plage shall destroy him.

A louynge eye shalbe blessed, for he geueth of his breed vnto the poore.

Cast out the scornefull man, and so shall stryfe go out with him, yea bearaunce & iniurie shall cease.

Who so delyteth to be of a cleane hert and of gracious lyppes, the kynge shall be his frende.

The eyes of the Lorde preserue knowlege, but as for the wordes of the delyctefull, he bringeth them to nought.

The slouthfull body seyth: there is a Lyon without, I myghte be slayne in the strete.

The mouthe of an harlot is a deepe pyt, wherein he fallyth that the Lorde is angry withall.

Foolyshenesse styckyth in the herte of the babe, but the rod of correction dryueth it awaye.

Who so wyth a poore man wronge to increase his owne rychesse, geueth (commonly) vnto the ryche, and at the last commeth to powre him selfe.

My sonne, bowe downe thyne eare, and herken vnto the wordes of wysdome.

Applye thy mynde vnto my doctrine: for it is a pleasaunt thinge yf thou kepest it in thyne herte.

And practise it in thy mouth: ỹ thou mayst alwaye put thy trust in the Lorde.

Haue not I warned the very oft with counsell and lernynge? that I myghte shewe the truth and that thou with the verite myghtest answere them that laye any thinge againste the?

Be not thou one of them that bynde their hande vpon promyse, and are suretye for ore: for yf thou hast nothinge to paye, they shall take awaye thy bed frome vnder the.

Thou shalte not remoue the lande marke, which thy fore eldres haue set.

Seyst thou not, that they which be diligēt in their busynes stande before kynges, & not amonge the simple people?

CAP. XXIII.

When thou sittest at the table to eate wt a lorde, ordre thy self manerly with the thinges that are set before the.

Measure thyne appetite: and yf thou wilt rule thyne owne selfe, be not ouer greedye of his meate, for meate begyleth and disceyueth.

Take not ouer great trauayle and laboure to be ryche, beware of suche a purpose.

Why wilt thou set thyne eye vpon ỹ thing which sodenly vanyssheth awaye?

For riches make them selues wynges, and take their flyght lyke an Aegle into the ayre.

Eate not thou with the enuyous, and desyre not his meate, for he hathe a marueilous herte.

He sayth vnto the: eate and drynke, where as his herte is not with the.

Yea the morsels that thou hast eaten shalt thou perdiake, and lese thyne swete wordes.

Tell nothinge into the eares of a fole, for he will despyse the wysdome of thy wordes.

Remoue not the olde lande marke, & come not within the felde of the fatherlesse:

For he that defendeth them is myghty, & when he shall defende their cause against the.

Applye thyne hert vnto lernyng, and thyne eare to the wordes of knowledge.

Withholde not correction frome the childe for yf thou beatest him with the rodde, he shal not dye therof. Prouerb. xiii. b Eccles. xxx. d.

Thou smytest him with the rod, but thou deliuerest his soule frome hell.

My sonne, yf thy herte receyue wysdome, my herte also shall reioyce.

Yea my reynes shalbe very glad, yf thy lyppes speake the thynge that is right.

Let not thyne hert be geloous to folowe sinners, but kepe ỹ styll in ỹ feare of ỹ Lorde all the daye longe. Prou. xxiii. a and d

For the ende is not yet come and thy parte abydinge shall not be in vayne.

My sonne, geue eare and be wyse, so shall thyne hert prospere in the waye.

Kepe no company with wyne bybbers and ryotous eaters of flesh: for suche as be dronkardes and ryotous shall come to powertie, & he that is geuen to moche slepe, shal go with a ragged cote.

Geue eare vnto thy father that begat the, and despyse not thy mother when she is olde.

Labour for to get the truth: sell not awaye wysdome, nourture and vnderstandinge (for a right a ryghteous father is marueilous glad of a wyse sonne, and reioyceth in him: so shall thy father be glad, and thy mother that bare the, shall reioyce.

My sonne, gyue me thyne hert, & let thyne eyes haue pleasure in my wayes.

For an hore is a depe graue, and an harlot is a narow pyt.

She lurketh lyke a theef, and chose that be not aware she bringeth vnto her.

Who. Who is wo? where is sorowe? where is stryfe? where is drawlynge? where are woũ des without cause? where be red eyes?

Euen amonge those that be ouer at the wyne and seke out where the best is.

Loke not thou vpon the wyne, how red it is, and what a colour it geueth in the glasse.

It goeth downe softly, but at the last it bytteth lyke a serpent, and styngeth as an adder.

So shal thyne eyes loke vnto straunge women, and thyne hert shall muse vpon frowarde thinges.

Yea thou shalte be as though thou slepteste in the myddest of the see, or vpon the top of the mast.

They wounded me (shalt thou saye) but it hath not hurt me, they smote me, but I felte it not.

When I am well wakened, I will go to the dynckes agayne.

CAPI. XXIIII.

BE not thou gelous ouer wycked men, & desire not thou to be amonge them.

Prou. xxiii. & xxiiii.

For thyne hert ymagineth to do hurt and thyne lyppes talke of mischefe.

Through wysdome an house shalbe buylded, and with vnderstandinge it shall be set vp.

Through discrecion shall the chambers be fylled with all costly and pleasaunt ryches.

A wyse man is stronge, yea a man of vnderstandinge is better then he that is myghty of strength.

For with discrecion must warres be taken in hande, and where as are many that can gyue councell, there is the victory.

Wysdome is an hyghe thinge, yea euen to the fole, for he darre not open his mouth in the gate.

He that ymagineth mischefe, may well be called an vngracious personne.

The thought of the folyshe is synne, and the skornefull is an abomination vnto men.

If thou be ouertyme and negligent in tyme of nede, then is thy strength but small.

Deliuer them that go vnto death, and are led awaye to be slayne, and be not negligent therin.

If thou wilt saye: I knowe not of it, thin hert thou that he which made the herte doth not consyder it? and that he which regardeth thy soule, seyth it not? Shall not he recompence euery man accordinge to his workes?

My son, thou eatest hony and the swete honycombe, because it is good and swete in thy mouth.

Euen so shall the knowledge of wysdome be vnto thy soule, as sone as thou hast gotten it.

And there is good hope, yea thy hope shall not be in vayne.

Lape no priuye wayte wickedly vpon the house of the righteous, and disquiete not his restinge place.

For a iust man falleth seuen tymes, and ryseth vp agayne, but the vngodly fal in to wickednes.

Reioyce not thou at the fall of thyne enemye, and let not thyne hert be glad when he stombleth.

Lest the Lorde (when he seyth it) be angry and turne his wrathe fromt him vnto the.

Let not thy wrathe and gelousy moue the, to folow the wycked and vngodly.

And why? the wycked hathe nothinge to hope for, and the candle of the vngodly shall be put out.

My sonne, feare thou the Lorde & the kyng and kepe no companye with the selounderous: For their destruction shall come sodenlye, and who knoweth the fall of them both?

These are also the sayenges of the wyse.

It is not good, to haue respect of any person in iudgement.

He that sayth to the vngodly: thou arte righteous, him shall the people curse, yea the commenalte shall abhorre him.

But they that rebuke the vngodly shall be commended, and a syche blessynge shall come vpon them.

He maketh him selfe to be well loued, that geueth a good answere.

First make vp thy worke that is without, & loke wel vnto that which thou hast in thy felde then buylde thyne house.

Be no false wytnes against thy neyghbour and hurt him not with thy lyppes.

Saye not: I will handle him, euen as he hath dealt with me, and will rewarde euery man accordinge to his dedes.

I went by the felde of the slouthfull, and by the vyneyardes of the folysh man.

And lo, it was all couered with nettels, & stode full of thistels, and the stone wall was broken downe.

This I sawe, and considered it well: I layd it vpon it, and toke it for a warnynge.

Yea slepe on styll a lytle, slomber a lytle, folde thyne handes togyther yet a lytle: so shall powerte come vnto the as one that trauayleth by the waye, and necessite lyke a well penid man.

CAPI. XXV.

THese

¶ These also are the sayenges of Salomon, whiche the men of Ezekiah kyng of Juda gathered to gether.

IT is the honour of God to kepe a thynge secrete, but the kynges honour is to searche out a thing.

The heauen is hye, the earth is deepe, and the kynges herte is vnsearcheable.

Take the dysse from the syluer, and there shalbe a clene vessell therof.

Take away vngodlynesse from the kyng, and his seate shall be stablysshed with rygh-teousnes.

Put not forthe thy selfe in the presence of the kynge, and preace not in to the place of greate men.

Better is it that it be sayde vnto the: come vp hyther, then thou to be sette downe in the presence of the prynce whome thou hast with thyne eyes

Be not hasty to go to the lawe, lest happly thou order thy selfe so at the laste, that thy neyghbour put the to shame.

Handle thy matter with thy neyghbour hym selfe, and discouer not another mans secrete, lest when men heare therof, it turne to thy dishonoure, and lest thyne euell name do not trasse.

A worde spoken in due season, is lyke apples of golde in a syluer dysshe.

The correction of the wyse is to an obedient eare, a goldem chayne and a Jewell of golde.

Lyke as the wynter coole in the harueste, so is a fayethfull messaunger to hym that sent hym, and refresshyth his maysters mynde.

Who so maketh great bostes and geueth nothynge, is lyke clowdes and wynde without rayne.

With pacience maye a prynce be pacifyed, and with a softe tonge maye rygoure of be broken.

If thou fyndest hony, eate so moche as is sufficyent for the: lest thou be ouer full, & perbroke it out agayne.

Withdrawe thy foote from thy neyghbours house, lest he be weery of the, and so abhorre the.

Who so beareth false wytnesse agaynste his neyghbour, he is a very speare, a swearde, and a sharpe arowe.

The hope of the vngodlye in tyme of nede is lyke a rotten toth and a sliperye foote.

Who so syngeth a songe to a wycked hert, clotheth hym with ragges in the colde, and poureth vynegre vpon chalke.

If thyne enemye honger, fede hym: yf he thyrste, geue hym drynke: for so thalte thou heape coles of fyre vpon his heade, and the Lorde shall reward the.

The North wynde bryngeth alwaye the rayne, euen so doth an earnest sober countenaunce a backbytyng tonge.

It is better to sytte in a corner vnder the rofe, then with a chydyng woman in a wyde house.

A good ryghte out of a farre countre, is lyke colde water to a thyrstie soule.

A rychteous man fallynge downe before the vngodlye, is lyke a troubled well and a spronge that is destroyed.

Lyke as it is not good to eate to moch hony, euen so he that wyll searche out hye thynges, it shall be to hurt for hym.

He that can not rule hym selfe, is lyke a cyte whyche is broken downe, and hathe no walles.

CAPI. XXVI.

LYke as snowe is not mete in sommer, nor rayne in harueste: euen so is worshyp vnsemely for a foole.

Lyke as the bryde and the swalowe take theyr flyghte and flytte and flee: so the curse that is geuen in vayne, shall not lyghte vpon a man.

Vnto the horse belongeth a whippe, to the Asse a bridle, and a rodde to the fooles backe.

Geue not the fole an answere after his folyshnesse, lest thou become lyke vnto hym: but make the foole an answere to his foolyshnesse, lest he be wyse in his owne conceate.

He is lame of his fete, yea dronken is he in vayne, that committeth any thynge to a foole.

Lyke as it is an vnsemely thynge to haue leggys, and yet to halte, euen so is a parable in the fooles mouth.

He that setteth a foole in hye dignite, that is euen as yf a man shuld caste a precious stone vpon the gatoun.

A parable in a fooles mouthe is lyke a thorne that prycketh a dronken man in the hande.

A man of experience discerneth all thynges well, but who so hyreth a foole, hyreth lache one as wyll take no rede.

Lyke as the dogge turneth awaye to his vomyte, euen so a foole begynneth his folysh nesse agayne a fresh.

If thou seest a man that is wyse in his owne conceate, there is more hope in a foole then in hym.

The slouthfull sayeth: there is a leoparde in the waye, and a lyon in the myddest of the stretes.

Lyke as the dore turneth aboute vpon the hyrchelde, euen so doth the slouthfull wetter hym selfe in his bedde.

Prouer.27.a

✠ The slouthfull body thrusteth his hand in to his bosome, and it greueth hym to put it agayne to his mouth.

The slogarde thynketh hym selfe wyser, then .vij. men, that syt and teache.

Who so goeth by and medleth with other mens stryfe, he is lyke one that taketh a dog by the eares.

Lyke as one shoteth deadly arowes and darres out of a privy place, euen so doth a deceytfull man with his neyghboure.

And then sayth he: I dyd it but in sporte.

Where no wod is, there the fyre goeth oute, and where the backbyter is take away, there the stryfe ceaseth.

Eccles.26.b

✠ Coles kyndle heate, and wod the fyre: euen so doth a braulynge frowarde man sette vp bastaunce.

A slaunderers wordes are lyke flatterye, but they pearse the inwarde partes of the body.

Enuymous lyppes and a wycked herte, are lyke a potsherde couered with syluer dosse.

An enemye dissembleth with his lyppes, and in the meane season he ymagineth wyckednesse: but when he speaketh fayre, beleue hym not, for there are seuen abhominacions in his herte.

Who so hideth enuy will, secretlye to do hurte, his malyce shall be shewed before the whole congregacion.

Eccles.27.b. Eccles.22.a.b

✠ Who so diggeth vp a pyt, shall fall therin: and he that setteth a stone, shall stomble vpon it ymediate.

A dissemblynge tonge hateth one that rebuketh hym, and a flatterynge mouthe worketh mysshefe.

CAPI. XXVII.

Make not thy boost of to morowe, for thou knowest not what maye happen to daye.

Let an other man prayse the, and not thyne owne mouthe, yea other folkes lyppes, and not thyne.

The stone is heuye, and the sande weyghtye, but a fooles wrathe is heuyer then they bothe.

Wrath is a cruell thynge, and furiousnesse is a heuye tempest: yea who is able to abyde enuye?

An open rebuke is better then a secrete loue.

Faythfull are the woundes of a louer, but the kysses of an enemye are deceatfull.

The that is full, abhorreth an honye combe, but vnto hym that is hongrye, euerye sowre thynge is sweete.

Job.36.b

The that ofte tymes flyeth, is lyke a byrde that forsaketh her nest.

The herte is glad of a swete ointment and sauoure, but a displeasaunt counsell, reioyseth a mans neyghboure.

Thyne owne frende and thy fathers frende forsake not, but go not into thy brothers house in tyme of thy trouble.

Better is a frende at hande, then a brother farre of.

My sonne, be wyse, and then shalte make me a glad herte: so that I shal make answere vnto my rebukers.

A wyse man seynge the plage, hydeth hym selfe, as for fooles they go on styll, and suffer hurte.

✠ Take his garmente that is suertye for a straunger, and take a pledge of hym for the vnknowen mans sake.

He that is to harlye to prayse his neyghboure aboue measure, shall be taken as one that geueth hym an euell reporte.

A braulynge woman and the rofe of the house droppynge in a rayny daye, maye well be compared together.

He that refrayneth her, refrayneth the wynde, and holdeth oyle fast in his hande.

Lyke as one yron whetteth another, so doth one man comforte another.

Who so kepeth his fygge tre, shall enioye the fruites therof: he that waiteth vpon his master, shall come to honoure.

Lyke as in one water there appeare dyuerse faces, euen so diuerse men haue diuerse hertes.

Lyke as hell and destruccion are neuer full, euen so the ✠ eyes of men can neuer be satisfyed.

Syluer is tryed in the moulde, and golde in the fornace, and so is a man, when he is openly prayed to his face.

Though thou shuldest braye a fole with a pestell in a morter lyke otemele, yet wyll not his foolysshnesse go from hym.

Be that thou know the noumbre of thy catell thy selfe, and loke well to thy flockes.

For ryches abyde not alway, & the crowne endureth not for euer.

The hey groweth, the grasse commeth vp, and herbes are gathered in the mountaynes.

The lambes shall clothe the, and for the gotes thou shalte haue money to thy husbandry.

Thou shalt haue gotes mylche ynough to fede the, to vphoulde thy household, and to fastayne thy maydens.

CAPI. XXVIII.

The vngodlye fleeth no man chasynge hym, but the righteous standeth sure as a lyon.

Because of synne the lande bothe ofte chaunge her prynce: but therfore men of vnderstandynge and wysdome a realme endureth longe.

One poore man oppressynge an other by violence, is lyke a continuall rayne that destroyeth the fruite.

The

They that forsake the lawe, prayse the vngodlye, but suche as kepe the lawe, abhorre them.

Wycked men discerne not the thynge that is ryght, but they that seke after the Lorde, vnderstande all thynges

A poore man ledynge a godlye lyfe, is better then the ryche that goethe in frowarde wayes.

Who so kepeth the lawe, is a chylde of vnderstandynge: but he that feedeth ryotous me, shameth his father.

Who so increaseth his ryches by vsaunge and vsurynge, let hym gather them to helpe the poore withall.

He that turneth awaye his eare frome hearynge the lawe, his prayer shall be abhorred.

Who so leadeth the ryghteous into an euyl waye, shall fall in to his owne pytte, but the iust shall haue the good in possession.

The ryche man thynketh hym selfe to be wyse, but the poore that hath vnderstandynge, can perceaue hym well ynough.

When ryghteous men are in prosperite, then doth honoure flow the: but when the vngodly come vp, the state of men chaungeth.

He that hydeth his synnes, shall not prosper: but who so knowledgeth them and forsaketh them, shall haue mercy.

Well is hym that standeth alway in awe: as for hym that hardeneth his harte, he shall fall in to myschefe.

Lyke as a rorynge lyon and an hongry beare, even so is an vngodly prynce ouer the poore people.

Where the prynce is without vnderstandynge, there is greate oppression and wrong: but yf he be lorde one as hateth couetousnesse, he shall longe raygne.

He that by violence shedeth any mannes bloude, shall be a vnnagate vnto his graue, and no man shall be lyable to succoure hym.

Who so leadeth a godly and an vnocente lyfe, shalbe safe: but he that goeth frowarde wayes, shall ones haue a fall.

He that tylleth his lande, shall haue plentifulnesse of breade: but he that followeth pestilnesse, shall haue poouerte ynough.

A faythfull man is greatly to be commended, but he that maketh to moche haste for to be ryche shall not be vnpunyshe.

To haue respecte of personnes in iudgemente is not good.

And why? he will do wronge, yee euen for a pece of breade.

He that will be ryche all to soone, hath an euyll eye, and considereth not, that poouerte shall come vpon hym.

He that rebuketh a man, shall fynde more fauoure at the laste, then he that flatereth hym.

Who so robbeth his father and mother, and sayeth it is no synne: the same is lyke vnto a murtherer.

He that is of a proude stomache, stereth vp stryfe, but he that putteth his truste in the Lorde, shalbe well fedde.

He that trusteth in his owne herte, is a fooler: but he that dealeth wysely, shalbe safe.

He that geueth vnto the poore, shall not wante: but he that turneth awaye his eyes from such as be in necessite, shall suffer greate poouerte hym selfe.

When the vngodly are come vp, men are fayne to hyde them selues: but when they perysshe, the ryghteous increase.

CAPI. XXIX.

HE that is styffnecked and will not be reformed, shall sodenly be destroyed without any helpe.

Where the ryghteous haue the ouerhand, the people are in prosperite: but where the vngodlye beareth rule, there the people mourne.

Who so loueth wysedome, maketh his father a glad man, * but he that kepeth harlotes, spendeth awaye that he hath. * Prou.28. Luke.15.

With true iudgement the kynge setteth vp the lande, but yf he be a man that taketh gyftes, he turneth it vpsyde downe.

Who so flattereth his neyghbour, layeth a nette for his fete.

The synne of the wycked is his owne snare, but the ryghteous shall be glad and reioyse.

The ryghteous considereth the cause of the poore, but the vngodly regardeth no vnderstandynge.

Wycked people brynge a syle in treason, but wyse men let it vp agayne.

Yf a wyse ma go to law with a foole (whether he deale with hym frendly or roughly) he getteth no rest.

The bloud thyrstie hate the ryghteous, but the iust seke his soule.

A foole poureth oute his spyrite all together, but a wyse man kepeth it in tyll afterwarde.

Yf a prynce delyte in lyes, all his seruauntes are vngodly.

The poore and the lender mete together, the Lorde lyghteneth both their eyes.

The seate of the kynge that faythfully iudgeth the poore, shall continue sure for euermore.

The rodde and correction maynteyne wysedome, but yf a chylde be not subiect vnto, he bryngeth his mother to shame.

When the vngodly come vp, wyckednesse increaseth, but the ryghteous shall se their fall.

Nurture thy sonne with correction, and he shall comfort the, yea he shall do the good at thyne herte.

Where no Prophete is, there the people perysshe: but well is hym that kepeth the lawe.

A seruaunt will not be the better for wordes, for though he vnderstande, yet will he not regarde them.

If thou seyst a man that is hastye to speche vnaduysed, thou mayst trust a fole more then hym.

D He that delycately bringeth vp his seruaut frome a chylde, shall make hym his master at length.

Iob.5.m.b An angry man stereth vp stryfe, and he that beat. to wrath wyll in his mynde, bredeth moche euyll

Myrrer pryde commeth a fal, but a lowly spyryte bringeth great worshyp.

Who so keperh company with a theefe, hateth his owne soule: he heareth blasphemies and telleth it not forth.

For that fearefth men, shall haue a fall: but who so putteth his trust in the Lorde shall come to honour.

Many seke the Princes fauoure, but euery mans iudgement commeth frome the Lorde.

The righteous abhorreth the vngodly: but as for them that be in the right waye, he wyl kepe their path.

CAPI. XXX.

The wordes of Agur the sonne of Iakeh.

¶ The prophecie of a true faythfull man, whome God hathe helped, whome God hath comforted and nourished.

For though I am the leest of all, and haue no mans vnderstandynge (for I neuer learned wysedome) yet haue I vnderstandynge, and am well informed in godly thynges.

Who hathe clymmed vp in to heuen? Who hath come downe frome thence? Who hathe holden the wynde fast in his handes? Who hath comprehended the waters in a garment? Who hathe sette all the endes of the worlde? What is his name, or his sonnes name? Canst thou tell?

a Psal.xvii.c Deut.iii.a.5 iiii.b. Psal.xviii.c *All the wordes of God are pure & cleane, for he is a shyld vnto all them, that put their trust in hym.

Put thou nothynge therfore vnto his wordes, lest he reproue the, and thou be founde a lyar.

Two thynges I requyre of the, that thou wylt not denye me before I dye.

Remoue frome me vanite and lyes: geue me neither pouerte nor ryches, only graunte me a necessary ipuynge.

B Lest yf I be to full, I denye the, and saye: what knowe I the Lorde? And leste I beyng constrayned, thorowe pouerte, fall vnto stealynge, and forswearre the name of my God.

Accuse not a seruaunte vnto his master, leste he speake euell of the also, and thou be hurte.

He that bringeth vp an euell reporte vpon the generacion of his father and mother, is not worthy to be commended.

The generation that thynke themselues cleane, shal not be cleared from their filthynesse.

There are people that haue a prowde lokc, and cast vp their eye lydes.

This people (whose teethe are swerdes, and with their chekebones they consume and deuoure the symple of the earth, and the poore frome amonges men.

This generacion (whiche is lyke an horseleche) hath two daughters: the one is called, fetch hyther, and the other, bringe hyther.

C There be fyue thynges that are neuer satisfyed, and the fourth sayth neuer hoo.

The hell, a womans wombe, and the earth hath neuer water ynough.

As for fyre, it sayeth neuer, hoo.

Who so laugheth his father to scorne, and setteth his mothers commaundemente at naught: the rauens pycke out his eyes in the valeye, and deuoured he of the yonge Eagles.

There be fyue thynges to hye for me, and as for the fourth, it passeth my knowledge.

The waye of an Eagle in the ayre, the way of a serpent ouer a stone, the waye of a shyppe in the sea, and the way of a man with a yong woman.

Such is the waye also of a wyfe that hyreth herselfe, which wypeth her mouth lyke as when she hath eaten, and sayeth: I haue done no harme.

Thorowe fyue thynges the earth is disquieted, and the fourth maye it not beare.

Thorowe a seruaunt that beareth rule, thorowe a foole that hath great ryches, thorowe an vile person wyfe, and thorowe an handemayden that is heyre to her maistres.

D There be foure thynges in the earthe, the whiche are verye lytle: but in wysdome they excede the wyse.

The Pismyres are but a weake people, yet gather they their meate to gether in the harueste.

The Conyes ar but a feble folke, yet make they their couches amonge the rockes.

The grasshoppers haue not a gide, yet go they forth together by heapes.

The spyder laboureth with her handes, & that in the Kynges palace.

There be thre thynges that go stately, but the goynge of the fourthe is the godlyest of all.

A Lyon, whiche is kynge of beastes, and geueth place to no man: A Cocke readye to fyght: & ramme and a Kyng that goeth forth with his people.

If thou be so folysh to magnifie thy selfe, or medle with any lothe thynge, then laye thyne hande vpon thy mouth.

CAPI. XXXI.

MY sonne, thou sonne of my body: O my most beloued sonne, gyue not ouer thy substaunce & myght vnto women, which are the destruction euen of kynges.

O Lamuel, gyue kynges no wyne, gyue kynges and princes no stronge drynke: least they beynge dronken forget the lawe, and regarde not the cause of the poore, and of all suche as be in aduersitie.

Gyue stronge drynke vnto suche as are consumed to death, & wyne vnto those y mourne that they maye drynke it, and forget their misery and aduersitie.

Be thou an aduocate, and iudge in iudgement thy selfe, to speake for all suche as be dumme and succourles.

Open thy mouth & defende the thynge that is lawfull and right, and the cause of the poore and helpeles.

¶ The ende of the Prouerbes of Salomon.

¶ All that is in this worlde is vanite.

CAPI. I.

THese are the wor-des of the preacher, the sonne of Dauid, kynge of Ierusalem. All is but vanite (sayth the preacher) all is but playne vanite: for what els hath a man, of all his laboure that he taketh vnder the Sunne? One generation passeth awaye, an other commeth, but the earth abi-deth styl. The Sunne ariseth, the Sunne goeth downe, and returneth to his place, there he maye there ryse vp agayne. The wynde goeth towarde the South, and fetcheth his copase about vnto the North, and so turneth in to him selfe agayne. All floudes run into the see and yet the see is not fylled: for loke vnto what place the waters ren, thence they come agayne. All thinges are so harde, that no man can expresse them. The eye is not satisfyed w syght, the eare is not fylled with hearinge.
The thinge that hath bene, commeth to passe agayne: and the thinge that hath bene done, is done agayne, there is no new thinge vnder the Sunne. Is there any thinge wherof it may be sayde: lo, this is newe? For it was longe ago in the tymes that have bene before vs.
The thinge that is past, is out of remembraunce Euen so the thynges that are for to come, shal no more be thought vpon amonge them that come after. I my selfe the preacher, beynge kynge of Israel and Ierusalem, applyed my mynde to seke out and serche for the knowledge of all thinges that are done vnder heauen. Suche trauayle and laboure hathe God geuen vnto the children of men, to exercyse them selues therin.
Thus I haue consydred al the thinges that come to passe vnder the Sunne, and lo, they are all but vanite and veracion of mynde.
The croked can not be made straight, and the faultes can not be nombred. I cõmoned with myne owne hert, sayenge: lo, I am come to a great estate, and haue gotten more wysdome, then all they that haue bene before me in Ie-rusalem. Yea my hert had great experience of wysdome and knowledge, for there vnto I applyed my mynde, that I might know what were wysdome & vnderstandinge, what were errour and folysshenes. And I perceyued that this also was but a veracion of mynde: for where moche wysdome is, there is also great trauayle and disquietnesse: & the more knowledge a man hath, the more is his care.

¶ I thoughte in my hert, to withdrawe my flesh from wyne, to applye my mynde vnto wysdome, and to comprehende folysshnes vntyll the tyme I (among al the thinges which are vnder the sunne) I might se what were best for men to do, so longe as they lyue vnder heauen. I made gorgious layte workes. I buyl-ded me houses, & planted vyneyardes. I made me orchardes and gardens of pleasure, and planted trees in them of all maner frutes. I made poles of water, to water the grene and frutefull trees withall. I bought seruauntes and maydens, and had a great housholde.
Als for catell and shepe, I had more substaunce of them, then all they that were before me in Ierusalem. I gathered syluer and golde together, euen a treasure of kynges and landes.
I prouyded me singers and women whiche coulde playe of instrumentes, to make men myrth & pastyme. I gat me bumbinge cuppes alle and glasses. (Shortly) I was greater & in more worshyp, then all my predecessours in Ierusalem. For wysdome remayned with me and loke what so euer myne eyes desired, I let them haue it: and wherin so euer my hert delyted or had any pleasure, I withdrewe it not from it. Thus my hert reioyced in all I ioyed, and this I toke for the portion of all my trauayle. But when I consydred all the workes that my handes had wrought, and al the labours that I had taken therin: lo, all was but vanite and veracion of mynde, and nothing of any value vnder the Sunne. Then turned I me to consyder wysdome, errours & folysshnesse (for what is he amonge men, that might be compared to me the kynge in suche workes?) and I saw that wysdome excelleth folysshnesse, as farre as ryght doth darcknes.
For a wyse man beareth his eyes about in his head, but the fole goeth in the darcknesse. I perceyued also that they both had one ende.
Then thought I in my mynde: If it happen vnto the fole as it doth vnto me, what needeth me then to labour any more for wysdome? so I cõmuned within my hert, that this also was but vanite. For the wyse are euer as lytle in remembraunce as the folyssh, and al the dayes for to come shalbe forgotten, yea the wyse mã dyeth as well as the fole. Thus began I to be wery of my lyfe, in so moche that I could away with nothing that is done vnder the Sun for al was but vanite & veracion of mynde. Yea
I was wery of all my labour, which I had taken vnder the sunne, because I should be fayne to leaue the vnto an other mã, that cõmeth after me, for who knoweth, whether he shall be a wyse mã or a fole? & yet shal he be lorde of al my labours, which I so sore wysdom haue taken vnder the Sunne. Is not this a vayne thing?
Then I turned me to withdrawe my mynde frõ all suche trauayle, as I toke vnder the sunne so much as a man should vexe him selfe with labour, with vnderstandinge and ouer sumynge, and yet he layne to leaue it to labours men an other, that neuer swete for it. This is also a vayne thinge and a great mysery.

For what getteth a man of all the labour and trauayle of his mynde, that he taketh vn der the Sunne, but heuynes, sorowe and disquietnes al the dayes of his lyfe? In so much that his herte can not rest in the nyght. Is not this also a vayne thinge? Is it not better the for a man to eate and drinke, and his soule to be merry in his labour? Yea I sawe that this also was a gyfte of God. For who may eate or drinke, or bringe any thinge to passe without him? And why? he geueth vnto man, what so pleaseth him: whether it be wysedome, vnderstandinge, or gladnesse. But vnto the synner he geueth wearynes and sorowe, that he may gather and heape together the thinge, ¶ afterwarde shalbe geuen vnto him whome it pleaseth God. This is now a vayne thinge, yea a very vnquietnesse & vexacion of mynde.

¶ All thinges come in their tyme and passe away in their tyme.

CAP. III.

EVery thinge hath a tyme, yea all that is vnder the heauen, hathe his conuenient season.

There is a tyme to be borne, and a tyme to dye.

There is a tyme to plante, and a tyme to plucke vp the thinge that is planted.

A tyme to slay, and a tyme to make hole.

A tyme to breake downe, and a tyme to buylde vp.

A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laughe.

A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunce.

A tyme to cast awaye stones, and a tyme to gather stones together.

A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to refrayne from embracynge.

A tyme to wynne, and a tyme to lese.

A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spende.

A tyme to cut in peces, and a tyme to sowe together.

A tyme to kepe silence, and a tyme to speake.

A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate.

A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace.

What hath a man els (that doth any thing) but werynesse and laboure? For as touching the trauayle & carefulnesse which God hathe geuen vnto men, I se ¶ he hath geuen it them to be exercysed in it. All this hath he ordred maruelous goodly, to euery thinge his due tyme. He hath planted ignorance also in the hertes of men, that they should not fynde out the grounde of his workes, which he doth frō the begynnynge to the ende. So I perceyued, that in these thinges there is nothinge better for a man, then to be merry and to do well so longe as he lyueth. For all that a man eateth and drinketh, yea what so euer a man enioy-eth of all his labour, that same is a gyfte of God. I considered also that what so euer God doth, it continueth for euer, and that nothing can be put vnto it nor taken from it: and ¶ God doth it to the intente, that men shoulde feare him. The thinge that hath bene, is now and the thinge that is for to come, hath bene afore tyme, for God restoreth againe ¶ thing that was past. Moreouer, I sawe vnder the Sunne vngodlynesse in the stede of iudgemēt and iniquite in stede of righteousnesse. Then thought I in my mynde: God shal separate ¶ righteous frome the vngodly, and then shalbe the tyme and iudgement of all councels and workes. I commened with myne owne herte also concerninge the children of men: howe God hath chosen them, and yet letteth them apeare: as thoughe they were beastes: for it happeneth vnto men as it doth vnto beastes, and as the one dyeth, so dyeth the other: yea they haue both one maner of byrth, so that (in this) a man hath no preeminence aboue a beast but all are subdued vnto vanite. They go all vnto one place, for as they be all of dust, so shall they all turne vnto dust againe. Who knoweth the spirite of man ¶ goeth vpwarde and the byrth of the beaste that goeth downe into the earth? Wherfore I perceyue, ¶ there is nothing better for a man, then to be ioyful in his labour, for that is his portion. But who wil bringe him to se the thinge that shal come after him?

¶ The mysteryes of the vngodly. The superfluous labours of men. The thyng ¶ is good and wyse.&c.

CAP. IIII.

SO I turned me, and consydred all the violent wronge that is done vnder ¶ sunne and beholde the teares of suche as were oppressed, and there was no man to comforte them or that wolde deliuer and defende the from the violence of their oppressours. Where fore I iudge o those that are dede, to be more happy then suche as be a lyue: yea him that is yet vnborne to be better at-ease then they both, because he seyth not the myserable wor kes that are done vnder the sunne.

Agayne, I sawe that all trauayle and diligence of labour was hated of euery man. This is also a vayne thinge, and a vexacion of mynde.

The fole foldeth his handes together, and eateth vp his owne flesh. One handfull (saith he) is better with rest, then both the handes full with laboure and trauayle.

Moreouer, I tourned me, and beholde yet an other vanite vnder the Sunne.

There is one man, no mo but him selfe alone, hauynge neyther childe nor brother: yet is there no ende of his carefull trauayle, his eyes cānot be satisfied with ryches, (yet doeth he not remembre him selfe, and saye:)
For whome do I take suche trauayle? For whose pleasure do I thus consume away my lyfe? This is also a vayne and myserable thinge. Therfore two are better then one, for they maye well enioye the profyt of their laboure. If one of theym fall, his companyon hel-

helpeth him vp agayne. But woo is him that is alone, for yf he fall, he hathe not an other to helpe him vp. Agayn, when two lepe together they are warm: but how can a body be warm alone? One may be ouercome, but two maye make resistence: a thre fold cable is not lightly broken. A poore chylde being wyse, is better then an olde king that doteth, and can not be ware in tyme to come. Some one cometh out of prison, & is made a king: and an other which is borne in the kingdome, cometh vnto pouertie. And I perceyued that all men lyuing vnder the sunne, go with the seconde chylde, that cometh vp in the stede of the other.

As for the people that haue ben before him, and that come after him, they are innumerable: yet is not their loye the greater therowe him. This is also a vayne thynge, and a veracion of mynde. When thou commest in to the house of God, kepe thy foote, & drawe nye, that thou mayste heare that is better then the offerynges of fooles, for they know not what euyll they do.

¶ Admonicion to beware of rashe communication. We ought not to marueill at the oppression of the poore. The couetous is not satisfyed in his ryches.

CAPI. V.

BE not hasty with thy mouth, and let not thyne herte speake any thynge rashly before God. For God is in heuen, and thou vpon erth, therfore let thy wordes be few. For where moche carefulnesse is, there are manye dreames: and where many wordes are, there men may heare fooles. ✠ Yf thou make a vowe vnto God, be not slacke to performe it. As for foolysshe vowes, he hath no pleasure in them. Yf thou promyse any thynge, pay it: for better it is that thou make no vowe, then þ thou shouldest promyse and not pay. Suffre not thy mouthe to cause thy flesshe for to synne, that thou saye not before the aungell: my folysshnesse is in the fawte. For then God wil be angrye at thy voyce, and destroye all the woorkes of thyne handes. And why? where as are manye dreames and many wordes, there are also bruere vanities: but loke þ thou feare God. Yf thou seest the poore to be oppressed, & wrongfully dealte withall, so that equitie and the right of the lande is wrested in the lande: marueil not thou at suche iudgement, for one great man hedeth vnder with an other, & the mighty helpe them selues together. The hole land also with the felde, and all that is therin, is in subiection and bondage vnto the kynge. He that loueth money, wil neuer be satisfied with money: and who so delyteth in rychesse, shall haue no profyte therof. Is not this also a vayne thyng? Where as moche ryches is, there are many also that spende them awaye: And what pleasure more hath he þ possesseth them, saue that he maye loke vpon them with his eyes? A labouring man sleepeth sweetely, whether it be lytle or moche that he eateth: but the aboundaunce of the ryche wyll not suffre him a sleepe.

Yet is there a sore plage, which I haue sene vnder the sunne (namely) rychesse kepte to the hurt of him that hath them in possession. For ofte tymes they perisshe with his great misery and trouble: and if he haue a chylde, it getteth nothynge. ✠ Lyke as he came naked out of his mothers wombe, so goeth he thither agayne, & carieth nothing away in hym of all his labour. This is a miserable plage, that he shall go awaye euen as he came. What helpeth it him then, that he hath laboured in the wynde? All the dayes of his lyfe also muste he eate in the darcke, with great carefulnesse, sycknesse and sorowe. Therfore me thynke it a better and a fayrer thynge, a man to eate and drynke, and to be refreshed of all his labour, that he taketh vnder the sunne all the dayes of his lyfe, whiche God giueth him, for this is his portion. For vnto whome so euer God giueth rychesse, goodes and power, he giueth it hym to enioye it, to take it for his portion, and to be refreshed of his labour: this is now the gyfte of God. For he thinketh not moche how long he shall lyue, for so moche as God fylleth his herte with gladnesse.

¶ The mysery of the ryche and couetous. The difference of a foole and a wyse man.

CAPI. VI.

THere is yet a plage vnder the sunne, and it is a generall thyng among men: whē God giueth a man rychesse, goodes and honour, so that he wanteth nothyng of al that his herte can desire: and yet God giueth him not leue to enioye the same, but an other man spendeth them. This is a vayne thynge, and a miserable plage. Yf a man beget an hundred chyldren, & lyue many yeres, so that his dayes are many in nombre, and yet can not enioye his good, neither be buried: as for him I say, that an vntymely byrthe is better then he. For he commeth to nought, and goeth his waye in to darcknesse, & his name is forgotten. Moreouer he seeth not the sunne, and knoweth of no rest neither here ne there. Yea though he lyued two thousand yeres, yet hath he no good life. Come not all to one place? All the labour that a man taketh, is for him selfe, & yet his desire is neuer fylled after his mynde. For what hath the wise more then the fole? What helpeth it the poore that he knoweth to walke before the lyuing? The syght of the eyes is better, then that the soule shold so depart awaye. How be it this is also a vayne thing, & a vnquietnesse of mynde. What is more excellent then man? yet can he not in the lawe get the victorye of him that is mightier then he. A vayne thing is it to cast out many wordes, but what hath a man els?

¶ That whiche passeth our strengthes and wyttes ought we not to serche after.

CAPI. VII.

FOr who knoweth what is good for man lyuynge, in the dayes of his vayne lyfe, whiche is but a shadow? Or who wil tell

a man what shall happen after him vnder the sunne? A good name is more worth then a precious ointment, and the day of deth is better then the daye of byrth. It is better to go into an house of mournynge, then in to a banketynge house. For there is the ende of all men, and he that is lyuynge taketh it to hert. It is better to be sorye then to laugh, for when the countenaunce is heuy, the herte is ioyful. The hert of the wyse is in the mourninge house, but the hert of the fayrth is in the house of myrth. It is better to gyue eare to the chalenging of a wyse man, then to heare the song of fooles. For the laughynge of fooles is lyke the crackynge of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thynge. Who so doeth wronge, maketh a wyse man to goo oute of his wyt, and destroyeth a gentle hert. The ende of a thynge is better the the beginninge. The patient of spirite is better then the hye minded. Be not hastely angry in thy mynde: for wrath resteth in the bosome of a foole. Say not thou: what is the cause that the dayes of the old tyme were better then they be now? for that were no wise question. Wysdome is better then ryches, yea moche more worthe then the eye sight. For wysdome is riches as well as money, and the excellent knowlege of wisdome giueth life vnto him that hath it in possession. Consider the worke of God how that no man can make the thynge streyghte, which he maketh croked. Vse wel the tyme of prosperite, and remembre the tyme of misfortune: for God maketh the one by the other, so that a man can fynde nothyng els.

These two thinges also haue I considered in the tyme of vanitie: that the iust man perisheth for his righteousnesse sake, and the vngodly prospereth in his wickednesse. Therfore be thou neither ouerrighteous ne ouer wyse, that thou perysshe not: be neither to vnrighteous also, ne to foolysshe, lest thou dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take holde of this, and not to let that go from thy hande. For he that feareth God, shal escape them all.

Wysdome giueth more courage vnto the wyse then x. mighty men of the cite: for there is not one iust vpon erth that doth good, and synneth not. Take not hede vnto euery word that is spoken, lest thou heare thy seruaunte curse the: for thyne owne herte knoweth that thou thy self also hast oft times spoken euil by other men. All these thinges haue I proued by cause of wisdom also: I thought to be wise, but she went farther fro me then she was before, yea and so depe that I might not reache vnto her. I applied my mynde also vnto knowlege, and to like ouer lasinesse, wysdome and vnderstanding: to knowe the folysshnesse of the vngodly, and the errours of dotynge fooles. And I founde that a woman is bytterer then death: for she is a very angle, her hert is a net, and her handes are chaynes. Who so pleaseth God, shall escape from her: but the synner shall be taken with her.

Beholde (sayth the preacher) this haue I by ligence serched out and proued, that I might come by knowlege: which as yet I seke, and finde it not. Among a thousande men I haue founde one, but not one woman amonge all. Lo, this onely haue I founde, that God made man right, but they seke dyuers subtelties, where as no man hath wysdome and vnderstanding to gyue an answere therunto.

¶ The kynges commaundement ought to be obeyed. Gladnes is one of the chefe thinges vnder the sun.

CAP. VIII.

WIsdome maketh a mannes face to shyne, ouer malyce putteth out of fauour. Kepe the kynges commaundement (I meane the) and the othe that thou hast made vnto God. Be not hastye to go out of his sighte, ne set thou continue in no euil thinge: for what so euer it pleaseth him, that doth he. Lyke as when a kynge geueth a charge, his commaundement is mighty: euen so who may saye vnto hym? what doest thou? Who so kepeth the commaundement, shall fele no harme: but a wyse mannes herte discerneth tyme and maner. For euery thynge hath opportunite and iudgement, and this is the thynge that maketh man full of carefulnesse and sorowe. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come, for who wyll tell hym? Neyther is there any man that hathe power ouer the spirite, to kepe styll the spirite, ne to haue any power in the tyme of deathe: it is not be also that can make an ende of the batayle, neyther may vngodynesse deliuer him that vseth it withall.

All these thynges haue I considered, and applied my mynde vnto euery worke that is done vnder the sunne: how one man hathe lordshyp vpon an other to his owne harme. For I haue oftentyme seen the vngodly brought to their graues, & fallen downe from the hye and glorious place: in so much that they were forgotten in the cite, where they were had in so hye and great reputacion. This is also a vayne thing. Because now that euil workes are not hastely punished, the hert of man geueth him self ouer vnto wickednes. But though an euyll person offende an hundreth tymes, and haue a longe lyfe: yet am I sure that it shall go well with them that feare God, because they haue him before their eyes. Agayne, as for the vngodly, it shall not be well with him, neither shal he prolonge his dayes: but euen as a shadow, so shall he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanitie vpon earthe: There be iuste men, vnto whome it happeneth, as though they hadde the workes of the vngodly: Agayne, there be vngodly, with whome it goeth as though they had the workes of the righteous. Vnto me thynche also a vayne thynge. Therfore I commende gladnesse, because a man hathe no better thynge vnder the sunne, then to eate and drynche, and to be merry: for that shall he haue of his labour all the dayes of his lyfe, which God geueth him vnder the sunne. When I applyed my mynde to knowe wysdome, and to knowe the trauayle that is in the worlde (and that of nyght

a fection, that I ſuffred not myne eyes to ſlepe neither daye ne nyght) I vnderſtode of all the workes of God, that it is not poſſible for a mã to attayne vnto the workes that are done vnder the ſunne: & though he beſtowe his labour to ſeke them out, yet can he not reach vnto the: yea thoughe a wyſe man wolde vndertake to know them, yet might he not fynde them.

¶ A man woteth not, by the righteouſneſſe of his owne workes, whether he be worthy of loue or hate. A man ought to lyue merely with his wife. A praiſe of wyſdome.

CAPI. IX.

1 FOr all theſe thynges purpoſed I in my mynde to ſeke out. The righteous & wyſe, yea and their workes alſo, are in the hand of God: and there is no man that knoweth either & loue or hate of the thing that he hath before him. It happeneth vnto one as vnto an other: It goeth with the righteous as with & vngodly: with the good and clene, as with the vncleane: with him that offreth, as with him that offreth not: lyke as it goeth with & good, ſo goeth it alſo with the ſynner: & it happeneth vnto the periured: ſo happeneth it alſo vnto him that is afrayde to be forſworne. Amonge all thynges that come to paſſe vnder the ſunne, this is a miſerye, that it happeneth vnto all alyke. This is the cauſe alſo that the hertes of men are ful of wickednelle, and mad fooliſhneſſe is in their hertes as long as they lyue, vntyll they dye.

2 And why? As longe as a man lyueth, he is carefulle: for a quicke dog (ſaye they) is better then a dead lyon: for they that be liuing know they ſhall dye: but they that be dead, know nothynge, neither deſerue they any more. For their memoryall is forgotten, ſo that they be neither loued, hated, ne enuyed: neither haue they any more parte in the worlde, in all that is done vnder the ſunne. Go then thy way the eate thy bred with ioye, and drinke thy wine with gladnes, for thy workes pleaſe God. Let thy garmentes be alwaye whyte, and let thy hed want none ointment. Lyue thy felfe merely with thy wyfe whom thou loueſt, all the dayes of thy lyfe, which is but vayne, that God hath geuen the vnder the ſunne all the dayes of thy vanitie: for that is thy portion in this lyfe, of all thy labour and trauayle that thou takeſt vnder & ſunne. What ſo euer thou 3 takeſt in hande to do, that do with all thy power: for among the dead where thou goeſt vnto, there is neither worke, counſell, knowlege, ne wyſdome.

4 So I tourned me vnto other thynges vnder the ſunne, and I ſawe that in runnyng, it helpeth not to be ſwyft: in batell, it helpeth not to be ſtronge: to fedynge, it helpeth not to be wyſe: to rychelle, it helpeth not to be ſubtyle: to be had in fauoure, it helpeth not to be cunnyng: but that all lyeth in tyme and fortune. For a man knoweth not his tyme, but lyke as the fyſſhe are taken with the angle, and as the byrdes are catched with the ſnare: Euen ſo are men taken in the perylloꝰ tyme, when it commeth ſodeynly vpon them.

5 This wyſdome haue I ſene alſo vnder the ſunne, and me thought it a great thyng. There D was a litle citie, and a fewe men within it: ſo there came a great kyng, and beſieged it, & made great bulwerkes againſte it. And in the citye there was founde a poore man (but he was wyſe) which with his wyſdome delyuered the citye: yet was there no body that had any reſpect vnto ſuche a ſymple man. Then ſayde I: wyſdome is better then ſtrength. Neuertheles 6 a ſymple mans wyſdome is deſpyſed, and his wordes are not herde. A wyſe mans counſell that is followed in ſylence, is farre aboue & crienge of a captayne among fooles. For wiſ- * Chapt. 10.a dome is better then harneſſe: but one vnthryft m. Mat. xiii. c alone deſtroyeth moche good. 1. Mark. viii. c

¶ The differences betweyt a fole and a wyſe man. Fortunate and happye is that realme which hath a wyſe prynce.

CAPI. X.

1 DEd flyes that corrupt ſwete ointment and make it to ſtynche, are ſome thynge more worth then the wyſdome and honour of a foole. A wiſe mans hert is vpon the right hande, but a fooles hert is vppon & left. A dotyng foole thynketh that euery man doth as foliſhly as him ſelfe. If a principall ſpirite be eyuil the to beare rule, be not negligẽt there in thyne office: for ſo that great wickednelle be put downe as it were with a medicine. An o- 2 ther plage is there, whiche I haue ſene vnder B the ſunne: namely the ignoraunce that is commonly among princes: in that a foole ſytteth in great dignitie, and the ryche are ſet downe benethe: I ſe ſeruauntes ryde vpon horſes, & princes goinge vpon their feete as it were ſeruãtes. But he that diggeth vp a pyt, ſhall fall Proue.xxvi.d therein him ſelfe: and who ſo breaketh downe Eccle.xxvii.d the hedge, a ſerpent ſhal byte him. Who ſo remoueth ſtones, ſhal haue trauayle withall: & he that heweth wod, ſhal be hurt therwith.

3 When an yron is blont, and the payne not ſharpened, it muſt be whet agayne, and & with myght: Euen ſo dothe wyſdome folowe diligence. A babler of his tonge is no better then a 4 ſerpent & ſtingeth without hyſſing. The wor- C des of a wiſe mans mouthe, are gracious, but the lyppes of a foole will deſtroye hym ſelfe. The begynning of his talking is fooliſhneſſe, & the laſt word of his mouth is great madneſſe. A foole is ſo full of wordes, that a man can not tel what ende he wil make: who wil the warne him to make a concluſion? The labour of the foliſh is greuous vnto them, while they know not how to go in to the city.

16 Wo be vnto the (o thou realme and lande) whoſe kyng is but a chylde, and whoſe prin- D ces are early at their banketting. But well is the (o thou realme and lande) whoſe kynge is come of nobles, and whoſe princes eate in due ſeaſon, for ſtrength and not for luſt. Through 18 ſlouthfulneſſe the walles ſhal downe, and through 19 lowe yele handes it rayneth in at the houſe.

Merry

Meate maketh men to laugh, & wyne maketh them merry: but vnto money are all thynges obedient. Wish the kinge no euil in thy thought and speake no hurte of the ryche in thy priuye chambre: for a byrde of the ayre shall betraye thy voyce, and with her fethers shall she bewraye thy workes.

¶ Wyckednesse ought to be destroyed out of the body.

CAPI. XI.

A SEnde thy vytayles ouer the waters, and so shalte thou fynde them after many yeres. Departe it awaye among seuen or eight, for thou knowest not what misery shall come vpon earthe. When the cloudes are full, they poure out rayne vpon the erthe. And when the tree falleth, whether it be towarde the southe or northe, in what place so euer it fall, there it lyeth. He that regardeth the wynde, shall not sowe: and he that hath respect vnto the cloudes shal not reape. Now lyke as thou knowest not the waye of the wynde, ne how the bones are fylled in a mothers wombe: euen so thou knowest not the workes of God, whiche is the workemaister of all.

Cease not therefore with thy handes to sowe thy seed, whether it be in the morning or in the euenyng: for thou knowest not whether this or that shall prosper, and yf they bothe take, it is the better. The lyght is swete, and a pleasaunt thynge it is for the eyes to loke vpon the sunne. Yf a man lyue many yeres, & be glad in them all, let him remembre the dayes of darcknesse, which shall be many: and when they come, all thinges shal be but vanitie. Be glad then (o thou yonge man) in thy youthe, and let thyne hert be merry in thy yong dayes: folowe the wayes of thyne owne hert, and the lust of thyne eyes: but be thou sure that God shall bringe the in to iudgement for all these thynges.

¶ From our youth ought we to conforme and regarde the goodnesse of God.

CAPI. XII.

PUt alwaye displeasure out of thyne herte, and remoue euil from thy body: for childhode and youthe is but vanitie. Remembre thy maker in thy youthe, or euer the dayes of aduersitie come, and or the yeres drawe nye when thou shalte saye: I haue no pleasure in them before the sunne, the lighte, the moone & sterres be darckned, and or the cloudes towne agayn after the rayne: when the keepers of the house shall tremble, and when the stronge men shal bow them selues whe the myllers stande still, because they be so few and when the light of the wyndowes shall waxe dymme: when the doores in the streetes shal be shut, and when the voyce of the myller shall be layde downe: when men shal rise vp at the voyce of ♀ byrde, and when al the doughters of musyke shall be brought low: when men shal feare in the places, and be afrayde in the streetes: when the almonde tree shall be despised, the grashopper bourne our: and when great poueretie shal breke in: when man goeth to his longe home, & the mourners go about the streetes. Or euer the siluer lace be taken awaye, & or the golden bande be broken: or the pot be broken at the well, & the wheele vpon the cesterne: or dust be turned againe vnto the erth from whence it came, & or the spirite returne vnto God, whiche gaue it. All is but vanitie (sayth the preacher) all is but playne vanitie.

The same Preacher was not wyse alone, but taught the people knowlege also: he gaue good hede, sought out ♀ grounde, and set forth many parables. His diligence was to fynd out acceptable wordes, ryght scripture, & the wordes of truthe. For the wordes of the wyse are lyke pynches & nayles that go thorowe, wherewith men are kept together: for they are gyuē of one shepherde onely. Therfore beware (my sonne) that about these thou make the not many and innumerable bokes, nor take diuers instrumēts in hand, to wery thy body withall.

Let vs heare the conclusion of all thinges: feare God, and kepe his commaundements, for that toucheth all men: for God shal iudge all workes and secrete thynges, whether they be good or euil.

THE BALLET OF BALLETES OF SALOMON: CALLED IN LATYNE, Canticum Canticorum.

¶ Mystically deuyse of the spirituall and godly loue betwene Christe the spouse, and the churche or congregacion his spouse. Salomon made this Ballet or songe by him selfe and his wyfe the doughter of Pharao, vnder the shadowe of umselfe signyfyenge Christ, and vnder the person of his wyfe the church.

CAPI. I.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

1 That thy mouth wold gyue me a kysse, for thy breastes are more pleasaunt then wyne; and that bycause of the good and pleasaunt sauoure. Thy name is a swete smellyng oynt̄met, therfore do the maydens loue the: yea that same moueth me also to runne after the.

☞ The spouse to her companyons.

The kynge hath brought me in to his priuy chambre. We will be glad and reioyce in the, we thynke more of thy brestes then of wyne: well is them that loue the.

☞ The voyce of the church in persecucion.

B I am blacke (o ye doughters of Jerusalem) like as the tentes of Cedarenes, and as the hangynges of Salomon: but yet am fayre and welfauoured withal. Maruell not at me that I am so blacke, and why? the sun hath shyned vpon me.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge.

For when my mothers childre had euill wyl at me, they made me ꝑ keper of the vineyarde. Thus was I fayne to kepe a vineyarde, which was not myne owne.

☞ The voyce of the churche to Christe.

Tel me (o thou who my soule loueth) where thou feedest, where thou restest at the noone day: lest I go wrong, and come vnto the flockes of thy companions.

☞ Christ to the churche.

C If thou knowe not thy selfe (o thou fayrest among women) then go thy waye forth after the foteteppes of the shepe, as thoughe thou woldest fede the gotes beside the shepeherdes tentes. There wil I tary for ꝑ, my loue, vp myne hed and with my charettes, whiche shal be no fewer then Pharaos. Then shall thy chekes & thy necke be made fayre, and banged with iewels: and goodly iewels: a neckbande of golde wyl we make the, with siluer botons.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

When the kyng sytteth at the table, he shal D smel my Nardus: for a bundel of Myrre is my beloued vnto me, he shal lye betwene my brestes. A cluster of grapes of Cypres, or of the vineyardes of Engaddi art thou vnto me, o my beloued.

☞ Christ to the churche.

O how fayre arte thou, my loue, how fayre art thou? thou hast doues eyes.

☞ The churche to Christ.

O how fayre arte thou, my beloued, how welfauoured art thou? Our bed is decked with flowres, the tymbres of our houses are of Cedre tree, and our balkes of Cypresse.

CAPI. II.

☞ The voyce of Christe.

I Am the flowre of the felde, and lyly of ꝑ valeys: As the lely amonge the thornes, so is my loue among the doughters. A

☞ The voyce of the churche.

Lyke as the apple tree amonge the trees of the wod, so is my beloued among the sonnes. My lust is to syt vnder his shadowe, for his frute is swete vnto my taste. He bringeth me in to his wyne seller, and loueth me specially well. Refresh me with grapes, comforte me ꝙ apples, for I am sycke of loue. His lefte hande lyeth vnder my heed, and his ryght hand embraceth me.

☞ The voyce of Christe.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

Me thinke I heare the voyce of my beloued: lo, there commeth he hopping vpon the mountaynes, and leaping ouer the lute hylles. My beloued is lyke a roo or a yong hart. Beholde C he standeth behynde ours wall, he loketh in at the wyndowe, and peepeth thorowe the grate. My beloued answered and sayd vnto me.

☞ The voyce of Christe.

O stand vp my loue, my doue, my beautiful, and come: for lo the wynter is now past, and D the rayne is alwaye and gone. The flowres are come vp in the felde, the swelling time is come, the voyce of the turtle wue is herd in our lande. The fig tree bryngeth forth her fygges, the vynes beare blossome, and haue a good smell. O stande vp my loue, my beautiful, and come (o my doue out of the caues of the rockes, out of the holes of the wall: O let me se thy countenaunce, and heare thy voyce. For swete is thy voyce, and fayre is thy face.

☞ The voyce agaynste the heretikes.

Get vs the foxes, yea the lytle foxes ꝑ hurt the vines, for our vines beare blossomes.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

My loue is myne, & I am his, which feedeth among the lilyes vntyl the daye breke, and tyl the shadowes be gone. Come againe quickly (o my beloued) lyke as a Roo or a yong hart, vnto the mountaynes.

CAPI. III.

☞ The voyce of the churche wherin he is chosen out of the congregacion.

By nyght in my bed I sought him whome my soule loueth: yea diligently sought I him, but I founde him not. I will get vp (thought I) and go about the city, vpon the market, and in all the stretes will I seke him whom my soule loueth: but when I sought him, I found him not. The watchmen that go about the city, founde me.

Saw ye not him whome my soule loueth? So when I was a litle past them, I found him whome my soule loueth. I haue gotten holde vpon him, & will not let him go, vntil I bringe him in to my mothers house, and in to her chaber that bare me.

Who is this that commeth out of the wildernesse like pilers of smoke, as it were a smell of Myrre, frankencense, and all maner spices of the Apotecary?

☞ The voyce of the churche.

Beholde, about Salomons beddede there stande .lx. valeaunt men of the mighty in Israel. They holde swerdes euery one, and are expert in warre. Euery man hath his swerde vpon his thygh, because of feare in the nyght. King Salomon hathe made him selfe a beddede of the wod of Libanus, the pylers are of syluer, the courtynge of golde, the seate of purple, the ground pleasauntly paued for the doughters of Jerusalem.

☞ The churche speakynge of Christ.

Go forth, ye doughters of Sion, & behold king Salomon in the crowne wherwith his mother crowned him in the daye of his mariage, and in the daye of the gladnesse of his hert.

CAPI. IIII.

☞ The voyce of Christe.

How fayre art thou, my loue, how fayre art thou? thou hast mare eyes, besides which lyeth hyd within. Thy heary lockes are lyke a flocke of shepe that be clypped, whiche go first vp from the washynge place: where euery one beare two twynnes, and not one vnfruitfull amonge them. Thy lyppes are lyke a skarlet coloured ryboude, thy wordes are louely: thy cheke are like a pece of a pomegranet, besides that whiche lyeth hid within. Thy neke is like the tower of Dauid buylded with bulwerkes, wherupon there hang a thousande shyldes, yea all the weapons of the gromtes.

Thy two brestes are lyke two twynnes of yong Roes which feade amonge the lilyes.

☞ The spouse speaketh to hym selfe.

O that I myght goo to the mountayne of Myrre, and to the hyll of frankencense: vntil the daye breake, and vntil the shadowes be past awaye.

☞ The voyce of Christe speakynge vnto the churche.

Thou art al fayre, o my loue, and no spot is there in the. Come to me from Libanus, o my spouse, come to me from Libanus: come lorde the next waye from the top of Amana, from the top of Sanir and Hermon, from the lyons dennes, & from the mountaynes of the leopardes. Thou hast wounded my hert, o my syster, my spouse, thou hast wounded my hert with one of thyne eyes, and with one cheyne of thy necke. O how fayre and louely are thy brestes, my sister, my spouse? Thy brestes are more pleasaunt then wyne, and the smell of thyne ointmentes passeth al spices. Thy lyppes, o my spouse, drope as the hony combe, yea mylke and hony is vnder thy tonge, and the smell of thy garmentes is lyke the smell of frankencense. Thou art a well kepte garden, o my syster, my spouse, thou art a well kepte watersyngе, a sealed well. The frutes that spryng in the, are lyke a very Paradise of pomegranettes, with swete frutes: as Cypresse, Nardus, Saffron, Calmus, and all the trees of Libanus: Myrre, Aloes, & all the best spices. Thou art a well of gardens, a well of lyuynge waters, whiche ren downe from Libanus.

☞ Christ calleth the Heythen.

Vp thou north wynde, come & south wynde, & blowe vpon my garden, that the smell therof may be caried on euery syde: yea that my welbeloued may come in to my garden, and eate of the frutes and apples that growe therin.

CAPI. V.

☞ Christe speaketh to the churche.

Come in to my garden, o my syster, my spouse: I haue gathered my Myrre with my spyce. I will eate my hony, and my hony combe, I will drynke my wyne and my mylke.

☞ Christe speaketh to the Apostles.

Eate, o ye frendes, drynke and be merye, o ye beloued.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

Be I was a slepe and my herte wakynge, I herde the voyce of my beloued, when he knocked.

☞ Christe to the churche.

Open to me (sayd he) o my syster, my loue, my doue, my derlynge, for my heed is full of dewe, and the lockes of my heere are full of the nyght droppes.

☞ The voyce of the spouse.

I haue put of my cote, how can I doo it on agayne? I haue washed my fete, how shall I fyle them agayne?

☞ The voyce of the churche speakynge of Christ.

But when my loue put in his hande at the hole, my gret was moued (to amase him: to) I rose vp to open vnto my beloued. His handes dropped with myrre, and the myrre ran downe my fyngers vpon the locke. Neuertheles, when I had opened vnto my beloued, he was departed and gone his waye.

How like as a lyre fynt when he spake, my hert could not longer refrayne: I sought him now I sought him, but I could not fynde him: I cryed vpon him, neuertheles he gaue me no answer.

☞ The churche complayneth of her persecutours.

The watche men that went about the cite found me, smote me, and wounded me, yea they that kepte the walles, toke away my garment fro me.

☞ She yonglie speaketh to her companions.

I charge you therfore, o ye doughters of Jerusalem, yf ye fynd my beloued, that ye tell him how that I am sicke for loue.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge.

Who is thy loue about other louers, o thou fayrest among women? Or what can thy loue be more then other louers, that thou charges vs so straytly?

☞ The churche, answeryng of Christe.

As for my loue, he is whyte and red coloured, a sygular person amonge many thousandes: his heed is the most fine gold, the lockes of his herre are bushed, blowne as the sute ny: his eyes are as fyres of houes by the waterbroches, washen with mylke, and remayning in a plenteous place: his chekes are like a garden bed, where the apotecaryes plante all maner of sweete spyces: his lyppes drop as the floures of that moost pleasaunt myrre, his handes are full of golde rynges & precious stones. His body is as the pure yuory, all ouer with Saphire: his legges are as the pylers of marble, set vpon sockettes of gold. His face is as Libanus, and as the beautie of the Cedres: his mouth is sweete, yea he is all together louely. Such one is my loue, o ye doughters of Jerusalem, suche one is my loue.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge speakynge to the churche.

Whyther is thy loue gone then (o thou fayrest among women) whyther is thy loue bygone, that we may seke him with the.

CAPI. VI.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

MY loue is gone downe in to his garden, vnto the sweete smellynge beddes, that he maye refresshe him selfe in the gardens and gather floures. My loue is myne and I am his, which feedeth amonge the lyles.

☞ Christe to the churche.

Thou art pleasaunt (o my loue) and as louelynesse it selfe, thou art fayre as Jerusalem, glorious as an army of men with their banners. (Turne away thyne eyes fro me, for they make me to proude.) Thy heery lockes are lyke a flock of goates vpon the moht of Galaad. Thy teth are like a flocke of shepe that be clypped, which go out of the washyng place: where euery one beareth two twynnes, and not one barrenfull amonge them. Thy chekes are lyke a pece of a pomegranet, besides that which is hyd within. There are thre quenes, foure score concubynes, and yong wemē without nombre. My one is my doue, my perfyte. She is the onely beloued of her mother, and dere vnto her that bare her. When the doughters sawe her, they sayd she was blessed: yea the quenes and concubynes prayse her.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge.

What is she this that peepeth out as the morninge? fayre as the moone, excellent as the sunne, glorious as an army of men with their baners.

☞ Christe to the Synagoge.

I went downe in to the nutte garden, to se what grene sprynges, to loke yf the vynes had flowred, and if the pomegranettes were spronge.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge.

Then the chekettes of the pypes of my people, made me sodenly afrayed.

☞ The voyce of the churche callynge again the Synagoge.

Turne agayne, turne agayne, o thou Sulamite: turne again, turne again, that we may loke vpon the.

CAPI. VII.

☞ Christe to the Synagoge.

What pleasure haue ye more in the Sulamite, then when she daunceth among the quyre of maydē?

☞ Christe to the churche.

O how pleasaunt are thy treadynges with thy shoes thou prince wughter! thy thyghes are like a fayre iewell, which is wrought by a cunning workmaister: thy nauel is lyke a round goblet whiche is neuer without dronke: Thy wombe is lyke an heepe of wheate, set about with lyses: thy two breastes are lyke two twynnes of yonge Roes: Thy necke is as it were a towre of yuory: thyne eyes are lyke the water pooles in Hesebon, by the port of Bathrabbim: Thy nose is lyke the tower of Libanus, which loketh towarde Damascus: That pece that standeth vpon the, is lyke Carmel: the heere of thy heed is lyke the kynges purple folden vp in plaites.

O how fayre & louely art thou, my derlyng, in pleasures! Thy stature is like a date tree, & thy brestes lyke the grapes.

☞ The voyce speakynge of the churche.

I sayde

I loue: I wil clym vp vnto the date tree, I take hold of his bowes, &c.

The spouse speakynge vnto the spouselles.

Thy brestes also shal be as the vine grapes, the smell of thy nostrils lyke the smell of apples, and thy throte lyke the best wyne. This shall be pure and clere for my loue, his lyppes and teethe shall haue their pleasure. There wil I turne me vnto my loue, and he shall returne him vnto me.

The churche speakynge to Christ.

O come on my loue, let us go forth in to the felde, and take our lodgynge in the villages. In the morninge wil we ryse betymes, and go in the vines also, yf it be sprongē forthe, yf the grapes be growen, and yf the pomegranettes be shot out. There wyl I geue the my brestes: there shal the Mandragoras geue their smell before our doores: there, o my loue, haue I kepte vnto the all maner fruites, bothe newe and olde.

CAPT. VIII.

The voyce of the Patriarches speakynge of Christe.

O That I might fynde the without a lisse one, vnto whom I loue as my brother vnlyke sucke my mothers brestes: and yf thou wolest not be offended, if I take the & brynge the in to my mothers house: yf thou myghtest teache me, and that I might geue the drinke of spyced wyne, of the sweete lapt of my pomegranettes. His left hand lieth vnder my heed, and his right hand embraceth me.

The voyce of Christe.

I charge you, o ye doughters of Jerusalem, that ye wake not vp my loue, ne touche her, til she be content her selfe.

The Synagog speakynge of the churche.

What is he this that commeth vp frō the wilderneſſe, and leaneth vpon her loue.

The voyce of the spouse, before the spouselles.

I am the same that waked the vp among the apple trees, where thy mother bare the, where thy mother brought the in to the worlde.

The churche speakynge to Christ.

O set me as a seale vpon thyne hert, and as a seale vpon thyne arme: for loue is myghtye as the ieth, and gelousy as the hell. Her coles are of fyre, and a very flame of the Lorde: for many waters are not able to quenche loue, neither may the stremes ouerwhelme it. Yea if a man wolde geue all the good of his house for loue, he sholde count it nothyng.

Christ speakynge of the churche to the Synagog.

When our loue is colde, our power sister whose brestes are not yet growen, what shall we do vnto her?

The answere of Christe for the churche.

If she be a wall, we shal buylde a syluer bulwarke therupon: yf she be a tower, we shal fasten her with bordes of Cedre tree.

The churche answereth to the Synagoge.

If I be a wall, and my brestes lyke towres, then am I as one that haue founde fauoure in his syght.

The Synagog speakynge to the churche.

Salomon had a vineyard at Baal Hamon, this vineyarde delyuered he vnto the kepers: that euery one for the frute therof sholde geue him a thousand peces of syluer.

The voyce of Christe.

But my vineyard, o Salomon, pertayneth the a thousande, and two hundred to the kepers of the frute. Thou that dwellest in the gardens, o let me heare thy voyce, that my compaynions may harken to the same.

The voyce of the churche, speakynge to Christ.

¶ Esaye prophecyeth that the anger of God shall come vpon Jerusalem because of theyr sinnes

CAPI. I.

The vysyon of Esay the son of Amos, which he sawe vpon Juda and Jerusalem. In the tyme of Osiah, Joathã Achay, & Ezechias kynges of Juda. Hearke, o heuens, harken, o erth, for the Lord speaketh: I haue norysshed and brought vp children, and they are fallen awaye fro me. An ox knoweth his Lorde, and an asse his masters stal, but Israel knoweth nothyng, my people hath no vnderstanding. Wo be to this synfull people, whiche are ouer charged with wickednes, a frowarde generacion, vnnaturall children. They haue forsaken the Lorde, they haue prouoked the holy one of Israel vnto anger, and are gone backewarde. Wherefore shoulde ye be plaged anye more? For ye are euer fallynge awaye. The hole heed is sicke, and the herte is very heuy. From the sole of the foote vnto the heed, there is no hole parte in all youre bodye: but all are woundes, botches, sores and styepes, whiche can neyther be helped, bounde vp, mollified, ne eased with anye oyntment.

Youre lande lyeth waste, youre cityes are brente vp, youre enemyes deuoure youre lande, and ye muste be layne to stande, and loke vpon it: and it is desolate, as it were with enemyes in a battell. Moreouer the doughter of Sion is lefte alone lyke a cotage in a vyneyarde, lyke a watchehouse in tyme of watre, lyke a besieged cyty. And except the Lorde of hostes had left vs a fewe almest we shulde haue ben as Sodoma, and like vnto Gomorra.

Heare the worde of the Lorde ye tyraunts of Sodoma, and harken vnto the lawe of oure God, thou people of Gomorra. Why offre ye so many sacrifices vnto me? I am fulfilled with the dyent offerynges of wethers, and with the fatnesse of fed beestes. I haue no pleasure in the bloude of bullockes, lambes and gotes. When ye appeare before me, who requyreth these thinges of youre handes, that ye shulde walke in my courtes. Offre me no mo oblacyons, for it is but lost laboure. I abhorre youre incense. I maye not awaye with youre newe moones, youre Sabbothes and solemne dayes. Youre assemblees are also in vayne. I hate youre newe holydayes and fastynges, euen fro my herte besle. They make me werye, I can not abyde them. Thoughe ye holde out youre handes, yet tourne I myne eyes fronte you. And thoughe ye make many prayers, yet heare I nothynge at all, for youre handes are full of bloude.

Washe you, make you cleane, put awaye youre euyll thoughtes out of my syght, cease fromte doynge of euyll and violence. Lerne to worshyp, applye youre selues to equitie, relyeue the oppressed, helpe the fatherlesse to his ryghte, lette the widowes complaynte come before you. Nowe go to (sayeth the Lorde) we will talke together. Is it not so? Thoughe youre synnes be as reed as skarlet, shall they not be white even snowe? And though they were like purple, shall they not be lyke white wolle? Is it not so? If ye be louynge and obedient, ye shall eniope the beste thynge that groweth in the lande. But if ye be obstinate and rebellious, ye shal be deuoured with the swerde: for so the Lorde hathe promysed with his owne mouth.

How happeneth it then that the ryghteous cyty (whyche was full of equitie) is become vnfaythfull as an hoore? righteousnes dwelte in it, but nowe murther. Thy syluer is tourned to drosse, and thy wyne myxte with water. Thy princes are traytoures and companyons of theues. They loue gyftes all together and folowe rewardes. As for the fatherlesse, they helpe him not to his ryghte, neyther wyll they let the widowes causes come before the. Therefore speaketh the Lorde God of hostes, the myghty one of Israel: Ah, I muste ease me of myne enemyes, and auenge me vpon them. And therfore shal I lay my hand vpon the, and burne out the drosse fromte the fourth and parte, and put out all the leade, and set thy iudges agayne as they were somtyme, & thy counsaylours as they were from the begynnynge. Then shalte thou be called the ryghteous cyty, the faythfull cyte. Sion shall be redemed with equitie, and her captiuitie with ryghteousnesse. For the tramplyngeours & vngodly, and suche as are become vnfaythfull vnto the Lorde, muste all together be vtterly destroyed.

And onlesse ye be ashamed of the ydolatres wherin ye haue so delyted, and of the gardens ye haue chosen: ye shall be an oke, whose leaues are fallen awaye, and as a garde that hath no moysture. And the glory of these thinges shall be tourned in to dry stramme, and be that made them to a sparke. And they shall bothe burne together, so that no man shal be able to quenche them.

¶ Of the commynge and deth of Christ: and of the callynge of the heathen.

CAPI. II.

Moreouer this is the worde that was opened vnto Esaye the sonne of Amos, vpon Juda and Jerusalem. It wyll be also in the last dayes: That the hyll where the house of the Lorde is buylded, shal be the chefe amonge hylles, and raysed aboue all litle hylles. And all the heathen that preache vnto him, and the multitude of ỹ people shall go vnto him, speakynge thus one to an other: arise, let vs goo to the hyll of the Lorde, and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he may shewe vs his waye, and that we maye walke in his pathes. For the lawe shal come oute of Syon, and the worde of God from Jerusalem, and shall gyue sentence amonge the heathen, and shall reforme the multytude of people: So that they shall breake theyr swerdes and speres, to make sythes, sickles and sawes therof. From that time forth shall not one people lyft vp weapen against an other, neither shall they learne to fight fromhence forth. ¶ O house of Jacob) arise, let vs walke in the lyghte of the Lorde. But thou arte scattered abrode with thy people (o house of Jacob) for ye goo farre beyonde youre fathers, whether it be in sorceries (whome ye haue as the Philistines haue) or in children of menne byrthes, wherof ye haue to many. As soone as youre lande was full of syluer and golde, and no ende of youre treasure: so soone as youre lande was full of stronge horsses, and no ende of youre charettes: Immediatly was it full of idolles, also, euen workes of youre owne handes, whiche ye youre selues haue layeyonde, and youre fyngers haue made. There knoeleth the man, there falleth the man downe before them, so that thou canst not forgyue hym awaye thence.

And therfore gette the soone in to some rocke, and hyde the in the grounde from the lyghte of the fearefull iudge, and fromthe glorye of his maiestye: Whych taketh awaye the lyghte lokes of the presumptuous persones, and bringeth lowe the pryde of man, and he onely shall be exalted in that daye.

For the daye of the Lorde of hoostes shall goo ouer all pryde and presumption, vpon all them that exalte them selues, and shall brynge them all downe: vpon lyghte and stoute Cedre trees of Libanus, and vpon all the okes of Basan, vpon all lyghte hylles, and vpon all stoute mountaynes, vpon all costly towres, and vpon all stronge walles, vpon all shyppes of the see, and vpon euery thyng that is glorysous and pleasaunt to loke vpon.

And it shall brynge downe the pryde of man, and take mans presumption full lowe, and the Lorde shall onely haue the victorye in that daye. But the idolles shall vtterly be roted oute. Men shall creepe in to holes of stone, and in to caues of the earthe, fromthe lyghte of the fearfull iudge, and from the glorye of his maiestye: whatsoeuer tyme as he shall arise to shake the earth. Then shal man cast awaye his goddes of syluer & golde, (which vnderneithe he had made to honour them vnto moles and backes: that he may the better creepe in to the caues and rockes, & in to the clifftes of hard stones, from the lyghte of the fearefull iudge, and fromthe glorye of his maiestie.

¶ He pronounceth that at the comminge of Christe all strength and power shall be put forth of Iurye.

CAPI. III.

BEholde, the Lorde of hoostes take awaye from Jerusalem and Juda all possessions and power, all meate and drynke, the captayne and the souldyour, the iudge and the prophete, the wyse and the aged man, the worshipful of fyfty yeres olde, and the honourable: the senatoures & men of vnderstanding: the maisters of craftes and orators. And I shall gyue you chyldren to be youre princes (saythe the Lorde) and babes shall haue the rule of you. One shall ouer be doing violence and wronge to another. The boye shall presume agaynste the elder, and the vyle person agaynst the honourable. Yea one shall take a frend of his owne kynred by the bosome, and saye: thou hast clothynge, thou shalte be our heed, let thou mayste kepe vs frome this fall and perill.

Then shall he sweare and saye, I can not helpe you. Moreouer there is neither meate ne clothynge in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Jerusalem and Juda must decaye, because that both theyr wordes and counsels are agaynste the Lorde, they prouoke the presence of his maiestie vnto angre. The chaungynge of theyr countenaunce bewrayeth them, yea they declare theyr owne synnes them selues, as the Sodomites, and hyde them not. Wo be vnto theyr soules, for they shal be vtterly rewarded. Then shal they saye: O happye are the godly, for they maye enioye the frutes of theyr studyes. But woo be to the vngodly and vnryghteous, for they shall be rewarded after theyr workes. O my people, ỹ rybaudes oppresse the, and women haue rule of the.

O my people, thy leaders deceyue the, and treade out the waye of thy forefeyppes. The Lorde is here to common of the matter, and standeth to gyue iudgement with the people. The Lorde shall come forthe to reason with the senatours and princes of his people, and shal saye thus vnto them: Ye ye that haue burnt vp my vyneyarde, the robberye of the poore is in youre house. Wherfore doo ye oppresse my people, and marre the faces of the innocentes? thus shall the God of hoostes reuyle them.

Moreouer thus saythe the Lorde: Seynge the doughters of Syon are become so proude, and come in with stretched oute neckes, and with dayne wanton eyes: seynge they come in creppynge so nycely with theyr feete: Therfore shall the Lorde shewe the scabbes of the doughters of Syon, and make theyr beautye bare in that daye. In that daye shall the Lorde take awaye the gorgeousnesse of theyr apparell, and spangen cheynes, pattletes, collers, & bracelettes and bearers, the goodly kercheifs, wyde and brodered rayment, bynsshes and herebandes, ryngs and and garlandes, holy dayes clothes and bates, kerchues and pynnes, glasses and smockes, bonnettes and tasches.

And in stede of good smell there shall be stynke amonge them. And for theyr girdles there shall be loose bandes. And for well set heere, there shal be baldnesse. In stede of a sote mather, a sake cloth, and for their beauty wythereduesse and sunneburning. Their husbandes, and their mightye men shall perysh with the swerde in battell.

¶ For wante of men shall women desyre to haue one man.

CAPI. IIII.

AT that tyme shall theyr gates mourne and complayne, and they shall sytt as desolate folke vpon the earthe. Then shal seuen wyues take holde of one man, and saye: we wyll saye all oure meate and clothynge together in common, onely that we may be called thy wiues, and that thou shamest vs not more. At that time shall the braunche of the Lorde be beautyfull and mightye, and the fruite of the erth shall be playe and pleasaunt for those Israelites that shall escape therof. Then shal the remnaunt in Syon and the remnaunt at Jerusalem be called holy: namely all suche as are wrytten amonge the lyuynge at Jerusalem: what tyme as the Lorde shall washe awaye the defoulynge of the doughters of Syon, and pourge the bloud out frō Jerusalem with the wynde of his smoke and fyre. More ouer vpon all the dwellynges of the hyll of Syon, and vpon their hole congregacion, shal the Lord prouyde a cloude and smoke by day, and the shynynge of a flamyng fyre by nyght: for all theyr glorye shall be preserued. And Jerusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowe, because of heate in the daye tyme, a place and refuge where a man maye kepe him for weather and rayne.

¶ Of Christ and his vyneyarde, with an exclamacion of vnrighteousnesse and of dronkennesse.

CAPI. V.

NOw well then, I wyll synge my beloued frendes a songe of his vyneyarde. My beloued frende hathe a vyneyarde in a very frutefull plenteous grounde. This he hedged, this he walled rounde about, and and planted it with goodly grapes. In the myddest of it he buylded he a towre, and made a wyne presse therin. And afterwarde when he lokyd that it shoulde bringe him grapes, it brought forth thornes. Iudge now my cause (o ye enhabytauntes of Jerusalem and bole Juda:) Judge I praye you betwene me and my vyneyarde. What more coulde haue ben done for it, that I haue not done? Wherfore then haue it gruen thornes, where I lokyd to haue had grapes of it?

Well I shall tell you how I wyl do with my vyneyarde: I wyll take the hedge from it, that it maye perysshe, and breake downe the wall, that it maye be treaden vnder foote. I wyll laye it waste, that it shall neyther be trymmed nor cut, but brere thornes and breares. I wyll also forbyd the cloudes, that they shall not rayne vpon it. For the vineyarde of the Lorde of hoostes, it is the house of Israell, and bole Juda his fayre plantynge. Of these he loked for equitie, but se there is wronge: for righteousnesse, loo, it is but mysery.

Woo be vnto you that ioyne one house to an other, and bynde one lande to nygh vnto an other, tyll ye can gette no more grounde. Wyl ye dwell vpon the earthe alone? The Lorde of hoostes rounded me thus in the eare: Shal not many greater and more gorgyous houses be so waste, that no man shal dwel in them? And ten akers of vynes shal geue but a quarte, and thirty bushels of seed shal gyue but foure.

Woo be vnto them that ryse vp early to vse them selues in dronckennesse, and yet at nyghte are more superfluous with wyne. In their companyes are harpes and lutes, tabrettes and pypes, and wyne. But they regarde not the worke of the Lorde, and consyder not the worke of his handes. Therfore commeth my folke also in captiuitie, because they haue no vnderstandynge. Their glorye shall be myrte with hunger, and their pryde shall be marred for thyrste. Therfore gapeth hell, and openeth her mouth measurelesse wyse: that pryde, boastyng and wilsome wyll suche as reioyse therin, may descende in to it.

Thus shall man haue a fall, he shall be brought lowe, and the hyghe lookes of the proude lorde bowne. But the Lorde of hoostes, that holy God, shall be exalted, and vnto vched, when he shall declare his equitie and righteousnesse after this maner: Then shall the lambes eate theyr appoynted fodder, and shall fede plenteously in the mountaynes.

Woo be vnto them that draw wickednesse vnto them, as it were with a corde, and synne, as it were with a cart rope, which dare speake on this maner: lette him make haste now, and go forth with his worke, that we may se it. Let the counsel of the holy one of Israel come and drawe nye, that we maye knowe it.

Woo be vnto them that call euyl good, and good euyll: which make darcknesse lyghte, and lyghte darcknesse: that make sower swete, and swete sower. Woo be vnto them that are wise in their owne sight, and thynke them selues to haue vnderstandynge. Woo be vnto them that are cunnynge men to suppe out wyne, and expert to set by dronkennesse. Which geue sentence vnrighteously for rewardes, but condemne the iuste cause of the ryghteous.

Therfore lyke as fyre licketh vp the straw, and as the flame consumeth the chaffe: euen so (when their roote is full) their blossome shall vanysshe away lyke dust or smoke: for they despise the lawe of the Lorde of hostes, and blaspheme the worde of the holy maker of Israel.

5 Therfore is the wrathe of the Lorde kindled also agaynste his people, and he stretcheth his hande at them: yea he shal smyte, so that the hylles shall tremble. And their carkases shall lye in the open stretes lyke myre. After all this, the wrathe of God shall not cease, but he shall stretche his hande wider. And he shall gyue a token vnto a straunge people, & call vnto them in a farre countrey: and behold they shall come hastely & spew. There is not one faynt nor feble amonge them, no not a slugguish nor slippery person. There shal not one of them put of the gyrdle from his loynes, ne lose the latchet of his shoo. Their arrowes are sharpe, and their bowes bente. Their horses hoofes are lyke flynt, and their cart wheles lyke a storme wynde. Their cry is as it were of a lyon, and the youngo of them lyke lyons whelpes. They shall roare & pantche vp the pray, and no man shall recoure it, or get it from them. In that daye they shall be so fearce vpon them as the sea. And yf we loke vnto the lande, beholde it shal be all darcknesse and sorowe. Yf we loke to heauen: beholde, it shall be darcke with carefull deliberacion.

¶ Esay sawe the glorye of the Lorde, and was sent to prophecye the deolacion of Iurye.

CAPI. VI.

1 In the same yere that kynge Osiah dyed, I sawe the Lorde sytting vpon an hygh and glorious seate, and his traync fylled the temple. From about sastered the Seraphins, whereof euery one hadde sire wynges. With twayne he couered his face, with twayne his fete, and with twayne dyd he flye. They cried also the one toother on this maner: holy holy, is the Lorde of hostes. The hole worlde is full of his glory. Yea the gates and dorestedes moued at their crienge, and the house was full of smoke. Then I sayde: O wo is me, for I was astonyed: that I (which am a man of vncleane lyppes, and dwell amonge people that hath vncleane lippes also) shulde se the kynge and Lorde of hostes with myne eyes.

Epenth. a.

6 Then flew one of the Seraphins vnto me hauynge a hote cole in his hande, whiche he had taken from the auter with the tonges, and touched my mouthe, and sayd: loo, this hath touched thy mouth, and thyne vnrighteousnesse is taken awaye, and thy synne forgiuen. After this I herd the voyce of the Lorde saynge aduisement on this maner: Whome shall I sende, and who wyll be oure messenger? Then I sayde: here am I, sende me. And he sayde: go and tell this people: Se ye alwayes here in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande, se ye shall playnely se, and not perceyue. Harden the herte of this people, stoppe their eares, and shute their eyes: that they se not with their eyes, heare not with their eares, and vnderstande not with their hertes, and conuerte and be healed.

Then spake I: Lorde, how longe? he answered vntyll the cityes be vtterly without inhabitoures, and the houses without men, & yl the lande be also desolate, and lye vnbuylded. For the Lorde shall take the men farre awaye, so that the lande shall lye waste. Nu- mercheles, the tenth part shal remayne therin, for it shall conuerte and be fruteful. And lyke wyse as the Terebynthe and okettree bryng forth their frutes, so shal the holy sede haue frute.

¶ The Syrians moue battayle agaynste Ierusalem. A virgin shall beare a chylde.

CAPI. VII.

1 It happened in the time of Achaz the sonne of Ioatham, whiche was the sonne of Osiah kynge of Juda: that Rezin the kyng of Syria, and Phaked the sonne of Romelias kynge of Israel, wente vp towarde Ierusalem to besiege it, but wanne it not.

2 Now when the house of Dauid (that is Achas) herde worde therof, that Syria and Ephraim were confederate togyther: his herte quaked (yea, and the hertes also of his people) lyke as a tree in the felde that is moued with the wynde.

3 Then sayd God vnto Esay: go mete Achaz (thou and thy sonne Sear Jasub) at the herd of the ouer pole, in the fote pathe by the fullers stronde, and saye vnto him, take hede to thy selfe, and be stil, but feare not, neither be fayne herted, for these two tables, that is, for these two smokynge fyre brandes, the wrath and furiousnesse of Rezin the Syrian, and Romelies sonne: because that the kyng of Syria Ephraim and Romelies sonne haue wickedly counsered agaynst the, saying: We wyl go downe in to Juda, vexe them, & bringe them vnder vs, and set a kyng there, euen the sonne of Tabeel. For thus sayth the Lorde God therto: It shall not so go forth, neither come to passe: for the hed cite of the Syrians is Damascus, but the hed of Damascus is Rezin. And after fyue and thre score yere, shal Ephraim be no more a people. And the chefe cite of Ephraim is Samaria, but the hed of Samaria is Romelies sonne. And yf ye beleue not, there shall no promyse be kepte with you.

4 Moreouer, God spake vnto Achaz, saying: requyre a token of the Lorde thy God, whether it be towarde the depth beneth, or towarde the heyght aboue. Then sayde Achaz: I wyll requyre none, neyther wyll I tempte the Lorde. The Lorde answered: Then heare to ye of the house of Dauid: Is it not inough for you that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye muste greue my God also? And therfore the Lorde shall gyue you a token of hym selfe: Beholde, a virgin shall conceyue and beare a sonne, and shall call his name Emanuel. Butter and honye shall he eate, that he may knowe the cuyll, and chose the good. Yer or Rezin. Phaked. Romelies sonne.

Emanuel.

euer that chylde come to knowledge, to eschue the euell and chose the good. The lande (that thou art so afrayde for) shalbe desolate of both her kynges.

The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, and vpon thy fathers house (such as neuer came sence the tyme that Ephraim departed from Juda,) thorowe the kynge of the Assirians. For at the same tyme shall the Lorde whistle for the flies that are about the watre of Egipt, and for the Bees in the Assirians lande. These shall come, and shall lygge all in the valleyes, in the dawtes of stone, vpon all grene thynges, and in all caues.

D At the same tyme shall the Lorde shaue the heare of the heade and the fete and ꝑ beerde cleane of, with the rasoure that he shall paye them withall beyonde the water, namelye, with the kynge of the Assirians. At the same tyme shall a man lyue with a cowe, and two shepe. Then because of the aboundaunce of mylke, he shall make butter and eate it. So that euery one whiche remayneth in the land shall eate butter and hony. At the same tyme all vyneyardes (though there be a thousande vynes in one, and were solde for a thousande syluerlynges,) shall be turned to breers and thornes. Lyke as they shall come in to the land with arowes and bowes, so shall all the lande become breers and thornes. And as for all hylles that nowe are dewen downe, thou shalt not come vpon them, for feare of breers and thornes. But the catell shalbe dryue thyther, and the shepe shall fede there.

¶ The deliuerraunce of the land by Emanuel. The sume of offence, at whiche many shall stomble.

CAPI. VIII.

M Oreouer the Lorde sayde vnto me: Take the a great leaf, and wryte in it, as men do with a penne, that he spede hym to robbe, and haste hym to spoyle. And immediatly I called vnto me faythfull wytnesses: Uriah the preste, and Zacharias the sonne of Barachias. After that went I vnto the Prophetisse, that nowe had conceyued ꝑ borne a sonne. Then sayde the Lorde to me: geue hym this name: Maherschalal haschbas (that is: a spedy robber, an hasty spoyler.) For why, or euer the chylde shall haue knowledge to saye: Abi and Imi, (that is father and mother,) shall the ryches of Damascus and the substaunce of Samaria be taken awaye, thorowe the kynge of the Assirians.

D The Lorde spake also vnto me, sayenge: for so moche as the people refuseth the styll renninge water of Silo, and put theyr delyte in Rasin and Romelies sonne. Beholde, the Lorde shall bringe myghtye and greate floudes of water vpon them, namelye, the kynge of the Assirians with all his power. Whiche shall poure out his furiousnes vpon euerye man, and renne ouer all theyr bankes. And shall breake in vppon Juda, increasynge in power, tyll he get him by the throte. He shall styll also the wydenesse of thy lande with his brode wynges, O Emanuel. Go together ye people, and gather you, broken to all pe of farre countrees. Muster you, and gather you: muster you, and gather you, take youre counsell together, yet must youre councell come to nought: go in hande withall, yet shall it not ꝓsper. Except Emanuel, (that is God) be with vs. For the Lorde chastised me, and toke me by the hande, and warned me, sayenge vnto me: that I shulde not walcke in the waye of this people. He sayde moreouer: rounde with none of them, who so euer saye: ponder people are bound together. Neuertheles feare them not, neyther be afrayd of them, but sanctifye the Lorde of hoostes, let hym be youre feare and dreade. For he is the sanctifyeng, and stone to stomble at, ✠ the rocke to fall vpon, a snare and net to both the houses to Israel, and the inhabitours of Jerusalem. And many shall stomble, fall, and be broken vpon tym: yea they shalbe snared and taken.

Luc. 2. c
Rom. 9. c
1 Pet. 2. b

Bynde vp the wytnesses together (sayde the Lorde) and seale the lawe with my disciples. Thus I wayte vpon ꝑ Lorde that hath turned his face from the house of Jacob, and I loke vnto hym. But lo, as for me, and the children which the Lorde hath geuen me: we are a token and a wonder in Israell, for the Lorde of hoostes sake, whiche dwelleth vpon the hyll of Syon.

Hebr. 2. b

D

And therefore yf they saye vnto you: aske counsell at the sothesayers, wytches, charmers and coniurers, then make them this answere: Is there a people any where, that asketh not counsell at his God, whether it be concernynge the dead, or the lyuynge. Yf any man wante lyght, let hym loke vpon the law and testimony, whether they speake not after this meanynge: Yf he do not this, he stombleth and suffreth hunger. And yf he suffer hunger, he is out of patience, and blasphemeth his kynge ꝑ his God. Then loketh he vpwarde, ꝑ downe warde to the earth, and beholde there is trouble and darkenesse, vexacion is rounde about hym, and the cloude of errour. And oute of soche aduersite, shall he not escape.

¶ The prophecyeth of Christes natiuytye and dominyon.

CAPI. IX.

E Uen lyke as in tyme paste it hathe bene well sene, that the lande of Zabulō and the lande of Nephtali (whiche thorowe the see waye goeth ouer Jordane in to ꝑ land of Galilee) was at the fyrst in ygle trouble, but afterwarde saye breed.

Neuertheles the people that haue dwelte in darkenesse, shall se a great lyght. He for the that dwell in the lande of the shadowe of death, vpon them shal the lyght shyne. Thou multiplyes the people, and not increase the ioye also! They shal reioyse before the, as men make merry in haruest, and as me that haue gotten the victory, when they deale the spoyle. For thou shalt breake the yocke of the people peoples burthen: the staf of his holder and the rod of his oppressoure, as in the † daye at Madian.

Iudicū. 7

B Moreouer all temerarious and seditious power, (yea where there is but a cote spied with blonde) shalbe burnt, and lesse the fyre. For vnto vs a childe shalbe borne, and vnto vs a sonne shalbe geuen: Vpon his shoulder shall the kyngdome lye, and he shalbe called with his owne name. The wonderous geuer of counsell, the mighty God, the euerlasting father, the prynce of peace, he shall make no ende to encrease the kyngdome and peace, and shall sytte vpon the seate of Dauid and in his kyngdome, to set vp the same, to stablysshe it with equite and rygh tousnesse, from thence forth for euermore. This shall the gelousy of the Lorde of hostes dyrnge to passe.

The Lorde sente a worde vnto Iacob, the same is come into Israell. And the people also of Ephraim, and they that dwell in Samaria, can saye with pryde and hye stomackes, on this maner. The tyle werke is fallē down, but we wyll buylde it with harder stones. The Mulberry trymbre is broken, but we shall sette it vp agayne with Cedre. Neuertheles, the Lorde shall prepare Rasin the enemye a-gaynst them, and so stirre their aduersaryes, that the Syrians shall laye holde vpon them before, and the Philistines behynde, and so deuoure Israell with open mouth.

C After all this, the wrath of the Lorde shall not ceasse, but yet his hande shall be stretched out styll. For the people turneth not vnto hym, that chastyseth them, neyther doo they seke the Lorde of hostes. Therfore the Lord shall rote oute of Israell bothe heade & tayle, braunche and twygge in one daye.

By the head, is vnderstande the Senatour and honorable man, and by the tayle, the prophete that preacheth lyes. For all they which enstructe the people that they be in a ryghte case, such be disceyuers. Suche as men thynke also to be perfecte amonge them, are but caste awaye.

Therfore shall the Lorde haue no pleasure in their ponge men, neyther fauoure their fatherlesse and widowes. For they are all foge thers prowders and wycked, & all their mouthes speake folye. After all this shall not the Lordes wrath ceasse, but yet his hande shall be stretched out styll. For the vngodly burne, as a fyre in the bryers and thornes. And as it were out of a fyre in a wodde a rodde burthe, so ascendeth the smoke of their pryde.

D For this cause shall the wrath of the Lorde of hostes fall vpon the lande, and the people shalbe consumed, as it were with fyre, no mā shall spare his brother. If a mā do turne hym to the ryght hande, he shall hunger, or to the lefte hande he shall not haue ynough. Euery man shall eate the fleshe of his owne arme, Manasses shall eate Ephraim, and Ephraim Manasses, and they bothe shall eate Iuda. After all this shall not the Lordes wrath ceasse, but yet shall his hande be stretched out styll.

¶ He threatneth the oppressours of the poore, and prophecyeth agaynste Sennacherib.

CAPI. X.

W Oe vnto you that make vnrygh teous lawes, and decrye thynges, which be to harde for to kepe: wher thorow † poore are oppressed on euery syde, and the innocentes of my people are therwith robbed of iudgement, that wydowes maye be your praye, and that ye may robbe the fatherlesse. What wyll ye do in tyme of the visitacion and destruction, that shall come from farre? To whō wyll ye renne for helpe, or to whome wyll ye geue your honoure, that he maye kepe it? that ye come not amonge the presoners, or ye a-monge the deade? After all this shall not the wrath of the Lorde ceasse, but yet shall his hande be stretched oute styll.

E Woe be also vnto Assur, whiche is a staf of my wrath, in whose hand is the rod of my in dygnacyon. For I shall sende hym amonge those prowdy folk people, amonge the people that haue deserued my displeasure, shall I sende hym, that he maye vtterly robbe them, spoyle them, and treade them downe lyke the myre in the streete. Howbe it, his meanynge is not so, neyther thynketh his herte of this lykewyse. But he ymagyneth onely, howe he maye ouerthrowe and destroye moch people, for he sayeth: are not my princes all kynges. Is not Calno as easye to wynne, as Charchamis? Is it harder to conquere Antiochia then Arphad? Or is it lyghter to ouercome Damascus then Samaria? As who saye: I were able to wynne the kyngdome of the Idolatres and their goddes, but not Ierusalem and Samaria. Shall I not do vnto Ierusalem and their ymages as I dyd vnto Samaria and their ymages?

F Wherfore the Lorde sayeth: As soone as I haue performed my hole worke vpon the hyll of Syon and Ierusalem, then wyll I visyte the noble and stoute kynge of Assyria, with his wysdome and pryde. For he thynketh thus in his owne conceyte. This do I, thorowe the power of myne owne hande, and thorowe my wysdome. For I am wyse, I am he that remoue the landes of the people, I robbe their princes, and (lyke out of the wayes) I dryue them from their dye seates. My hande hath founde out the hostes of the people, as it were a nest. And lyke as egges that were layde here and there, are gathered together. So do I gather all countreyes. And there is no man, that darre be so bolde, as to touche a fether, that darre open his mouth, or once whysper.

G But doth † axe boast it selfe, agaynste hym that heweth therwith, or doth the saw make any brackynge, agaynste hym that ruleth it? That were euen lyke, as yf the rod dyd exalte it selfe agaynste hym that beareth it, or as thoughe the staf shulde magnifye it selfe, as who saye: it were no wod. Therfore shall the Lorde of hostes sende hym pouerte in his tythes, and burne vp his power, as it were with

with a fyre. But the lyght of Israel shall be that fyre, & his Sanctuary shalbe the flamme and it shall kyndle, and burne vp his thornes and breres in one day, yea all the glory of his woddes and feldes shalbe consumed with bo dy and soule. As for hymselfe, he shalbe as one chased away. The trees also of his felde shal be of suche anombre, that a chylde maye tell them.

After that daye shall the remnaunt of Israell, and such as are escaped out of the house of Jacob, lene no more comforte at hym that smote them, but shal cōfort themselues with faythfulnesse and trouth in the Lorde, the ho lye one of Israell. The remnaunt, yea and the posterite of Jacob, shall conuerte vnto God the myghty one. For thoughe thy people (O Israell) be as the sande of the see, yet shall but the remnaunt of them onely conuerte vn to hym. Perfect is the iudgement of hym that flowreth in tyghtousnesse, and therfore the Lorde of Hostes shall perfectlye fulfyll the ende, that he hath determyned in the myd dest of the hole worlde. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God of Hostes: Thou my people, that dwellest in Sion, be not afrayed for the hynge of the Assirians, he shall wag his staf at the, yea and beate the with the rod, as the Egyptians dyd some tyme. But soone after, shall my wrath and myne indignacion be fulfylled agaynst theyr blasphemyes.

Moreouer the Lorde of Hostes shall pre pare a skourge for hym, lyke as was the pu nyshment of Madian vpon the mount of Oreb. And he shall lyfte vp his rod ouer the see, as he dyd sometyme ouer the Egyptes. Then shall his burthen be taken frō thy shoulders, & his yoche frō thy necke, yea the same yoche shall be corrupte for very fatnesse. He shall come to Aiath, and go thorowe towarde Migron. But at Machmas shall he muster his host, & goo ouer the foorde. Gabaah shall be theyr restynge place, Ramah shall be afrayed, Gabaah Saul shall fle awaye. The voyce of the noyse of thy hostes (O daughter Gallim) shalbe herde vnto Lais and to Anathoth, which also shalbe in trouble. Madmena shall tremble for feare, but the cytesins of Gadim are mīy, yet shall he remayne at Nob that daye. After that, shal he lyft vp his hand agaynst the mount of Sion, and agaynst the hyll of Jerusalem. But se, the Lorde God of Hostes shal take away the pryde frō thence with feare. He shall hewe downe the pryde and tall the hye myndes. The thornes of the wod shalbe rotted out with yron, and Libanus shall haue a myghty fall.

¶ The prophecyeth of the natyuyte of Christe, and of hys people: of the remnaunt of Israel, and of the fayth of the Gentyles by gentyles.

CAPI. XI.

A Fter this there shall come a rod forthe of the kynrede of Jesse, and a blossome out of his rote. The spirite of the Lord shall lyght vpon it, the spirite of wysdome & vnderstandynge: the spirite of councell, and strength: the spirite of knowledge, and of the feare of God: and shall make hym frequent in the feare of God.

For he shall not geue sentence, after the thynge that shall be brought before his eyes, neyther reproue a mater at the fyrst hearyng: but with tyghtousnesse shall he iudge the poore, and with holynes shall he reforme the sym ple of the worlde.

He shall smyte the worlde with the staf of his mouth, and with the breath of his mouth shall he slaye the wycked. Righteousnesse shal be the gyrdle of his loynes, trouth and faythfulnesse, the gyrdynge vp of his rayues. Then shall the wolfe dwell with the lambe, and the Leoparde shall lye downe by the gote. Bullockes, Lyons, and catell shall kepe com pany together, so that a lytle chylde shal dryue them forth. The cowe and the beer shall feede togethet, and theyr yonge ones shall lye to gether. The lyon shall eate strawe lyke the oxe, or the cowe. The chylde whyle he sucketh, shall haue a delyte to the serpentes nest, and when he is weaned, he shall put his hande in to the Cockatrices denne. No man shall doo euell to another, no man shall destroye ano ther, in all the hyll of my Sanctuary. For the earthe shall be full of the knowledge of the Lorde, euen as thoughe the water of the see flowed ouer the earth.

Then shall the Gentyles enquire after the rote of Jesse (which shalbe set vp for a token vnto the Gentyles) for his dwellynge shalbe glorious. At the same tyme shall the Lorde take in hande agayne, to conquere the remnaunt of his people, (whiche are litle a lyue.) From the Assirians, Egyptes, Arabians, Ethi opians, Elamites, Caldeyes, Amonytians, and Iylanders of the see. And he shall set vp a token amonge them: Gentyles, and gather together the dispersed of Israell, yea and the outcastes of Juda from the foure corners of the worlde. The hatred of Ephraim and the enuye of Ju da shall be cleane rooted oute. Ephraim shall beare no euell wyll to Juda, and Juda shall not hate Ephraim: but they bothe together shall flye vpon the shoulders of the Philistines towarde the West, and spoyle them toge ther that dwell towarde the East. The Idumytes and the Moabites shall lay theyr han des fast, and the Ammonites shalbe obedient vnto them.

The Lorde also shall dreue the tunges of the Egyptyans see, and with a myghty wynd shall he lyfte vp his hande ouer Nilus, and shall smyte his seuen streames and make men go ouer dryc shod. And thus shall be make a way for his people, that remayneth from the Assirians, lyke as it happened to the Israe lites, what tyme they departed oute of the lande of Egypte.

¶ The songe of the churche for the obseruynge of the promyse and ouercommynge of the worlde.

CAPI. XII.

A SO that then thou shalt saye: O Lorde, I thanke the, for thou wast displeased at me, but thou hast restrayned thy wrath, & hast mercy vpon me. Beholde, God is my health, in whom I trust, and am not afrayde. For the Lorde is my strength, and my prayse, he also shall be my refuge. Therfore with ioye shall ye drawe water out of the welles of the Sa-B uioure, and then shall ye saye: Lette vs geue thankes vnto the Lorde, and call vpon his name, and declare his counsailes amonge the people, and kepe them in remembraunce, for his name is excellente. O synge prayses vnto the Lorde, for he doth greate thynges, as it is knowen in all the worlde. Crye oute, and be glad, thou that dwellest in Sion, for great is thy power, the holy one of Israell.

¶ The prophet telleth the destruction of Babilon, the captyuitie, and the comynge agayne of the people.

CAPI. XIII.

A THis is the heuy burthen of Babylon, which Esay the sonne of Amos dyd se.
Make some tokens to the hye hylles, call vnto them, holde vp your handes, that the princes maye go in at the dore. For I wyll sende for my debilles and my graunters (sayth the Lorde) and in my wrathe I wyll call for hym, as triumphe in my glorye.

With that, me thought I hearde in the mountaynes a noyse, lyke as it had bene of a greate people: and a tumynge, as thoughe the kyngdomes of all nacions had come together.
(And the Lorde of hoostes was the Captayne of the hole armye) as they had come not only out of farre countreys, but also from the endes of the heauens. Euen the Lorde hymselfe with the ministers of his wrath, to destroye the hole lande. Mourne therfore, for the daye of the Lorde is at hande, and commeth as a destroyer from the Almyghtye. Then shall all handes be letten downe, and all mens hartes shall melte awaye, they shall stande in feare, carefulnesse and sorowe shall come vpō them, and they shall haue payne, as a woman 20 that trauayleth with chylde. One shall ouer be abashed of another, and their faces shall burne lyke the flamme.

For lo, the daye of the lorde shall come, terrible, full of indignacion and wrath, to make the lande waste, and to roote oute the synne therof. For the starres and planetes of heauē shall not geue their lyght, the sunne shall be quenched in the ryslynge, and the moone shall not shyne with his lyght. And I wyll punyshe the wyckednesse of the worlde, and the synnes of the vngodly, sayeth the Lord. The hye stomaches of the proude wyll I take awaye, and wyll laye downe the boostynge of tyran-C nes. I wyll make a man dearer then fyne gold, and a man to be more worthe, then a golden wedge of Ophir. Wherefore I wyll shake the heauen, that the earthe shall remoue oute of her place.

Thus shal I go with Babylon, in the wrath of the Lorde of hoostes in the daye of his feare full indignacion. And Babylon shall be as an hunted roo, & as a flocke without a shepeherde. Euery man shal turne to his owne people, and flee eyther in to his owne lande.
Who so is founde alone, shalbe thrust thorow.
And who so gather together, shalbe destroyed with the swearde. ✠ Their suckyn shalbe slayne before their eyes, their houses spoyled, ✠ plain and their wyues rauyshed. For lo, I shall textus.
bringe vp the Medes agaynste them, which D shall not regarde syluer, nor be desyrous of golde. Their shall yong mens bowes be knapped asunder. The Medes shall haue no pytie vpon women with chylde, & their faces shall not spare the chyldren. ✠ And Babylon (that ✠ Chal.
glorye of kyngdomes and bewtye of the Caldees honour) shalbe destroyed, euen as God destroyed Sodome and Gomorra. It shal neuer be more inhabited, neyther shall there be any more dwellynge there, from one generacion to generacion.

The Arabians shall make no mo tentes there, neyther shall the shepeherdes make their folde there any more, but wylde beastes shall lye there, and the houses shalbe full of greate Owles. Ostriches shall dwell there, & Apes shall daunce there: the idle Owles shal crye in the palaces, one after another, & Dragons shalbe in the pleasaunte parlours. And as for Babylons tyme it is at hande, and her dayes maye not be longe absent.

¶ The returne of the people from captiuitye. The ouerthrowe of the people of God, and affliction of their enemyes. The ruyne of Babylon.

CAPI. XIIII.

BVt the Lorde wyll be mercyfull vnto A Jacob, & wyll take vp Israell agayne, & set them in their owne lande. Straun-gers shall cleaue vnto them, and get them to the house of Jacob. They shall take the people, and carye them home with them. And the house of Israell shall haue them in possession for seruauntes and maydens in the lande of the Lorde. They shall take their prysoners, B whose captyues they had bene afore, & rule those that habde oppressed them. When the Lorde nowe shall bringe the to rest, from the trauayle, feare, and harde bondage that thou wast laden withall, then shalt thou vse this mocking vpon the kynge of Babylon, & saye:
Howe happeneth it that the oppressour ceaseth of? Is the golde tribute come to an ende?
Doubtelesse the Lorde hath broken the staf of the vngodlye, and the scepter of the lordlye.
Whych when he is wroth, smyteth the people with durable strokes, and in his wonder he persecuteth them, and ouercōmeth them cōti-nually. And therfore the hole worlde is now at reste and quyetnesse, and men synge for ioye.

Yea euen the Fyre trees and Cedres of Li C banus reioyse at thy fall, sayenge: Sowe that thou arte layde downe, there come no mo vp to destroye vs. Hell also trembleth at thy co-mynge, all myghtye men and princes of the earth,

Ecclt. xxxii. Mathy xxiiii & Marck xiii. Luc. xxi.

earthe, steppe forth before the. All kynges of the earthe stande vp from theyr seates, that they maye all (one after another) synge and speake vnto the: Arte thou wounded also as we? arte thou become lyke vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is gone downe to hell. Wormes shalbe layd vnder the, and wormes shalbe thy couerynge.

How art thou fallen from heauen (O Lucifer) thou fayre morynge chylde? hast thou gotten a fall euen to the grounde, thou that (notwithstandyng) dyddest subdue the people? And yet thou thoughtest in thyne herte: I wyll clyme vp into heauē, & make my seate D aboue the starres of God, I wyl syt vpon the glorious mounte towarde the North, I wyll clyme vp aboue the cloudes, and wylbe lyke the hyghest of all. Yet harke I say, that thou shalte be brought downe to the depe of hell. They that se the, shall narowlye loke vpon the, and thynke in them selues, sayenge: Is this the man, that brought all landes in feare, and made the kyngdomes afrayde? Is this he that made the worlde in a maner waste, and layde the cyties to the ground, which let not his prysoners go home?

Howe happeneth it, that the kynges of all people lye, euery one at home in his owne palace, with worshyp, and thou art cast oute of thy graue lyke a wylde braunch, lyke as dead mens rayment that are thrust thorow with the swearde, as they that go downe to the stones of the depe, as a deade coarse that is troden vnder fote, & art not buried with them? Euen E because that thou hast wasted thy lande, and destroyed thy people. For the generacion of the wycked shalbe without honour, for euer. There shal a waye be sought to destroy theyr children, for theyr fathers wyckednes, they shal not come vp agayne to possesse the land, and fyll the worlde full of castels & townes.

I wyll stande vp agaynst them (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) & root out the name and generacion of Babylon (sayeth the Lorde) and F wyll geue it to the Otters, and wyll make water poddels of it. And I wyll swepe them out with the besome of destruccion, sayeth the Lorde of Hostes. The Lorde of hostes hath sworne an othe sayeng: It shall come to passe as I haue determined, and shalbe fulfylled, as I haue deuysed. The Assirians shalbe destroyed in my lande, and vpon my mountaynes wyll I treade them vnder fote. Wher thorowe his yoche shall come frome you, and his burthen shalbe taken frō your shoulders. This deuyse harde God taken thorowe the hole worlde, and thus is his hande stretched out ouer all people. For yf the Lorde of hostes determen a thynge, who wyll disanulle it? And yf he stretch forth his hande, who wyl bowe it in agayne?

The same yere that kynge Achas dyed, God G threatened by Esaye on this maner: Reioyse not (thou hole Palestyna) as though the rod of hym that beateth the were broken, for out of the serpentes rote, there shall ware a cockatrice, and the frute shalbe a fyrie worme. But the poore shall fede of the best kynges, and the symple shall dwell in safetye. Thy rotes wyl I destroye with honger, and it shal slaye thy remnaunt. Mourne ye portes, wepe ye cyties, & feare thou (O hole Palestyna) for there shal com frō the North a smoke, whose power no man maye abyde. Who shall then maynteyne the messages of the Sētyles? But the Lorde stablysheth Sion, and the poore of my people shall put theyr trust in hym.

¶ A prophecye agaynste Moab.

CAPI. XV.

THis is the heuye burthen vpon Moab, A for Ar of Moab was destroyed, (as me thought) in the nyght season. The walles of Moab perysshed in the nyght, and banysshed awaye. They went to Bayth and Dibon in the hye places, for to wepe. Moab bydd mourne frome Nebo to Medba. & All theyr heades were colled, and all theyr beardes shauen. In theyr stretes were they gyrded about Jere. xlviii. & Isa. xv. with sack clothe. In all the toppes of theyr B houses and stretes was there nothynge, but mournynge and weppynge. Heselbon and Eleale cryed, that theyr voyce was hearde vnto Jahaz. The worthyes also of Moab bleated and cryed for verye sorowe of theyr myndes. Wo is my herte for Moabs sake. They fled vnto the cyte of Zoar, whiche is lyke a fayre frutefull bullock, they wente vp to Luhith, C weppynge. The way towarde Horonaim was full of lamentacion for the hurte. The waters of Nimrim were dryed vp, & grasse was wythred, the herbes destroyed, and what necessarye grene thynge there was besyde. In lyke maner the thynge that was left them of theyr substaunce, they carryed it by water to Seady. The crye went ouer the hole lande of D Moab, frome Eglaim vnto Beer, was there nothynge but mournynge. The waters of Dimon were full of bloude, for the enemye hath sent thyther a bonde of men, which as a lyon laye a wayte for the remnaunt of the lande, and for them that were escaped.

¶ The destruction of Moab.

CAPI. XVI.

THen sent the Lordes of the lande a mā A of warre, frome the rocke that lyeth towarde the desert, vnto the hyll of the daughter Syon. (For as for the daughters of Moab, they were as it had bene a trembelyng byrde, that is put oute of her nest, by the ferye of Arnon,) whiche messaunger sayde: gather youre counsell, come together, couer vs with youre shadowe in the myddaye, as the nyght doth hyde the chased, and bewraye not them that are fled, lette the persecuted Moabites B dwell among you, be our open refuge agaynst the destroyer, for the aduersary oppressed vs, the robber vndoithe vs, and the tyraunte dryueth vs oute of oure lande. But the throne of youre kyngdome is full of grace, therfore he that sytteth vpon it with faythfulnesse and mouth

trouthe in the house of Dauid, knowe the tymes, and be his diligence to helpe thestly, accordynge to equite and rygh teousnes. As for Moabs pryde (shall they answere) it is well knowen. And all thoughe they be cruell, proude, arrogant, and pre mynded, yet is their strength nothynge lyke. And therfore Moab complayneth vnto Moab, wher fore one shall all to mourne, and now that they be smytten, they take their sorowe benethe vpon the birchpoall, and make their complaynte.

The inhabitours also of Hesebon were made mad, and the princes of the Sittyns howled lowde vpon the vynegardes of Sibma; whiche were planted with noble grapes, and spred vnto Jazer, and wente vnto the ende of the desert, whose braunches stretched them selues farther beyonde the sea. Therfore I mourned for Jazer, and for the vynegardes of Sibma with greate sorowe, I powred my teares vpon Hesebo and Eleale, for all their songes were layde downe, as their harueste and gatheryng of their grapes. Myrth and cheer was gone out of the felde and vineyardes, in so moche, that no man was glad nor songe. There wolde no treade wyne in the wynepresse, their merye cheere was layde downe. Wherfore my bely rombled (as it had bene a lute) for Moabs sake, & myne inwarde membres, for the brickwalles sake. For it happened thus also, when Moab came that he was turned vpsyde downe, he went vp on hye into her Sanctuarye, to make her prayer there, but he myght not be heard. This is the dewyce, whiche the Lorde toke in hande at that tyme against Moab. But nowe the Lorde sayth thus: In thre yere shal the power of Moab with their pompe (which is greate) be minished, lyke as the burthen of an hyred seruaunt. And as for the remnaunt of them, they shalbe lefte them a fewe, and not esteemed moch worth.

¶ Prophecye against Damascus.

CAPI. XVII.

THis is the heuy burthen vpon Damascus. Beholde, Damascus shall be no more a cyte, but an heape of broken stones. The cytes of Aroer shalbe waste: the cattell shall lye there, & noman shall fraye them away. Ephraim shall no more be strong, and Damascus shall no more be a kyngdom. And as for the glorye of the remnaunt of the Sirians, it shalbe as the glory of the children of Israell, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes. At that tyme also shall the glorye of Jacob be verye poore, and his fatnes leane. It shall happen to them, as when one shereth in haruest, which cutteth his handes full with the sickle, and when one gathereth the eares together in the valleye, of Rayhaim, there remayneth yet some eares ouer. Or as when one shaketh an olyue tree, where fyndeth but two or three olyue berryes aboue in the toppe, and foure or fyue in the braunches. Thus the Lorde God of Israell hath spoken.

Then shall man conuerte agayne vnto his maker, and turne his eyes to the holy one of Israell. And shall not turne to the aulters that are the worke of his owne handes, neyther shall he loke vpon groues and ymages, which his fyngers haue wrought. At the same tyme shall their stronge cytes be desolate, lyke as were once the forsaken plowes & corne, which they forsoke, for feare of the host of Israell.

Woo be vnto (O Damascus) be desolate, because thou hast forgotten God thy Sauyour, and hast not called to remembraunce the rocke of thy strength. Wherfore thou hast sette a fayre plat, & graffed a straunge braunch. In the daye when thou tookest plantes it, it was great, & gaue loone the fruite of thy lande. But in the daye of harueste, thou shalt reape an heape of sorowes and mysteryes.

Woo be to the multitude of moche people, that rushe in lyke the sea, & to the heape of folke, that renne ouer all lyke greate waters. For though so many people inuade as the flowing waters, & though they be armed, yet they flee farre of, and vanysh away lyke the dust with the wynde vpon an hyll, and as the whyrle wynd thorow a flame. Though they be fear full at nyght, yet in the morninge it is gone with them. This is their portion, that do vs harme, and heritage of them, that robbe vs.

¶ Prophecye against Egypte.

CAPI. XVIII.

WOo be to the lande of stirynge wynges, which is of this syde the floude of Chus pia, which sendeth her message ouer the sea in shippes of rodes vpon the waters, and sayeth: goo lorne, and goo youre message vnto a straunge and harde folke, to a fearful people, and to a people that is further then this, to a desperate and pylled folke, whose lande is deuided from vs with ryuers of water. Yea all ye that sye in the compasse of the worlde, and dwell vpon the earth, when the token shalbe geuen vpon the mountaynes, then lyke vp, & when the horne bloweth, then herken to, for thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me. I layde me downe, & pondred the matter in my house, at the noone daye when it was hote. And there fell a myst synge shower, lyke a dewe, as it happeneth in Haruest. But the frutes were not yet rype cut of, and the grapes were but yonge and grene. Then one smote of the grapes with an hoke, yea he hewed downe also the boughes and the braunches, and dyd caste them awaye. And thus they were layd waste, for the foules of the mountaynes, and for the beastes of the earthe together. So that the foules sat therupon, and the beastes of the earthe wintered there. Then shall there be a present brought vnto the Lorde of hoostes: out of that harde folke, that fearful folke and that further is then this: that desperate and pilled folke (whose lande is deuyded and ouerflowen with floudes of water) vnto the place of the name of the Lorde of hoostes: euen vnto the hill of Syon.

The prophecyeth ayll agaynste Egypte.

CAPI. XIX.

A THis is the heuye burthen vpon Egypt. Beholde, the Lorde wyll ryde vpon a swyfte cloude, & come into Egypt. And the goddes of Egypte shall tremble at his comming, & the herte of Egypt shal quake within her. For thus sayth the Lorde: I wyll stere vp the Egyptians one agaynst another among them selues, so that one shalbe ruer agaynste his brother & neyghboure, yea one cyte against another, & one kyngdo agaynst another. And Egypt shalbe choked in her selfe. When they aske counceill at theyr goddes, at theyr prophetes, at theyr coniplayers and wytches, then wyll I bringe theyr counceill to naught.

I wyll deliuer Egypte also in to the handes of greuous rulers, and a cruell kyng shall haue the rule of them. The waters of the see shalbe drawen out. Ryuers shall ryse awaye, and be dronken vp. The ryuers also shall be drawen oute, the welles shall decrease & dry awaye. Reede and rushe shall sayle, the grasse by the waters syde, or vpō the ryuers banke, yea and whatsoeuer is sowen by the waters, shalbe withered, destroyed, and brought to naught. The fyshers shall mourne, all suche as cast angles in the water, shall complayne, & they that spreade theyr nettes in the water, shalbe saynte hearted. Suche as labour vpon flax and lyche, shall come to penurie, and they also that weeue fyne worcke. All ye pounders of Egypte, all the pollycye of theyr artes and dyches shall come to naught.

Yea the vnsensible Princes of Zoan, the counceill of the wyse Senatours of Pharao, shall turne to foolyshnesse. Howe dare ye say vnto Pharao behalf, I am come of wyse people, I am come of the olde regall progenye. But where are now thy wyse men? Let them tell the & shewe the, what the Lord of hostes hath taken in hande agaynst Egypt. Fooles are thole Princes of Zoan, & proude are the princes of Noph, yea they deceyue Egypte with the nobilite of theyr stocke. For the Lorde hath made Egypte dronken with the spirite of errour, & they shall erre in all matters, euen lyke as a dronken man goeth spuynge about. For Egypte shall lacke good counceill, so that they shall not knowe what to do, neyther begynnyng nor ende, neyther vpon the lande ne water. Then shal the Egyptians be lyke vnto women, afrayde and abonped, at the lyfting vp of the hand, which the Lorde of hostes shall lyft vp ouer them. The land of Iuda also shall make the Egyptians afrayde, who so euer but speake vpon it, shall put them in feare. And that because of the counceill, which the Lord of hostes hath deuysed agaynste them. Then shall the fyue cyties of Egypte speake with the Canaanytes tunge, and sweare by the Lorde of hostes, & Hetiopolis shall be one of them. At the same tyme shall the Lorde of hostes haue an aulter in the middest of the lande of Egypt, with this cytie thereby: Vnto the Lorde. This shal be a token or testimony vnto the Lorde of hostes in the lande of Egypte, when they shall crye vnto hym, because of those that oppresse them, that he shall sende them a sauyaynt & a Sauyour to deliuer them.

Moreouer, Egypte shall be brought vnto the Lorde, & the Egyptians also shall knowe the Lorde at the same tyme, they shal do him seruice with peace offrynges, & with meate offrynges, they shall promyse hym offrynges, yea & paye hym also. Thus the Lorde shall smite Egypt, & heale it againe, & so shal they turne to the Lorde, & he also shall haue mercy vpō them, & saue them. Then shall there be a comen waye out of Egypte into Assyria. The Assyrii & shall come into Egypte, & the Egyptians into Assyria. The Egyptians also and the Assyrians shall both haue one Gods seruice. Then shall Israell with honoure be the thyrde to Egypte & Assur. And ye Lorde of hostes shall bielle them, sayenge: Bielled is my people of the Egyptians, Assur is the worke of my handes, but Israell is myne enheritaunce.

Against Egypt and Ethiopia.

CAPI. XX.

IN the same yere that Tharthan came to Asdod, where Sargon the kyng of the Assyrians sent hym, what tyme as he also besieged Asdod, & wanne it the same season. Then spake the Lorde vnto Esaye the sonne of Amoz, sayenge: go & lose of that sack from thy loynes, & put of thy shoes frō thy fete. And so he dyd, goyngе naked & barefote. Then sayde the Lorde: where as my seruaūt Esaye goeth naked & barefote, it is a token & signifyeng of the thyng, that after the yere shall come vpō Egypte and Ethiopia. For euen thus shal the kynge of the Assyrians dryue both yonge and olde, as prisoners naked and barefote, out of Egypte and Ethiopia. And shall discouer the shame of Egypte. They shalbe also at theyr wittes ende, and ashamed one of another, the Egyptians of the Hostens, and the Hostens of the Egyptians, at the lyghte of theyr glory. Moreouer they that dwell in the Iles shall se euen the same daye: beholde, thus is our hope, to whom we fled to seke helpe, that we myght be deliuered from the kyng of the Assirians. Howe wyll we escape?

Against Babylon, Idumea, and Arabia.

CAPI. XXI.

THis is the heuy burthē of the waste see. A greuous vysiō was shewed vnto me, lyke as when a storme of wynde and rayne ruslieth in from the wyldernesse, that terrible lande. Who so maye deceyue (sayde the voyce) let hym deceyue. Who so may destroye, let hym destroye. Up Elam, besege it O Madai, for I wyll stylle all theyr groueynges. With this, the ryuers of my backe were full of payne. Pangues came vpon me, as vpon a woman in her trauayle. When I heard it I was

I was abashed: and whē I loked vp, I was afrayde. My hert panted, I trembled for feare. The darkenesse made me feareful in my mynde.

Yea soone make ready the table, watche this house, kepe the watche, eate and drynke. Vp ye captaynes, take your shylde, for thus the Lorde hath charged me, go thy way, and set a watchman, that he may tell what he seeth. And whē he had watched diligently, he sawe two horsemen, the one rydynge vpon an asse, the other vpon a Camel. And he cryed: Lorde, I haue stande waytynge all the daye, and haue kepte my watche all the nyght. With that came there one rydyng vpō a charet, which answered, and sayde: Babylon is fallen, she is turned vpsyde downe, and all the ymages of her goddes are smytten to the grounde. This (O my felowe thresshers and fannes) haue I heard of the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell, to shewe it vnto you.

¶ The seuy burthen of Duma.

One of Seir cryed vnto me: Watche man, what halt thou espyed by nyght, watche man, what hast thou espyed by nyght? The watchmen answered: The day breaketh on, and the nyght is commynge. If youre requeste be earnest, then aske and come agayne.

¶ The seuy burthen of Arabia.

At euen ye shal abyde in the wod, in the way toward Dedanim. Meete the thirsty with water (O ye tythyns of Thema) meete them with breade that are fled. For they shal runne away from the weapen, from the drawen swearde, from the bent bowe, and from the greate battell. For thus hath the Lorde spoke vnto me, ouer a yere shall all the power of Cedar be gone, lyke as when the office of an hyred seruaunte goeth oute. And the remnaunte of the good archers of Cedar, shalbe very fewe. For the Lorde God of Israell hath spoken it.

¶ A prophecye agaynst Jerusalem.

CAPI. XXII.

The heye burthen vpon the valleye of visions. What hast thou there to doo, that thou clymmest vp into the house toppe, O thou cyte of myght, replenysshed & ioyfull? Seinge thy slayne men are neyther slayne with swearde, nor dead in battell? For all thy Captaynes gat them to theyr horse from the ordynaunce, yea they are all together ryden awaye, and fled farre of. When I perceyued that, I sayde: Awaye fro me, that I maye wepe bytterly. Take no labour for to comforte me, as touchynge the destruccion of my people. For this is the daye of the Lord of hostes, wherin he wil plage, treade downe, and make out the valley of visions, & breake downe the walles, with sucke a crach, that it shall greue a stoude in the mountaynes.

I sawe the Olampes take the quyuers to caste and to horse, and that the walles were bare from harnesse. The goodly valleys were full of charettes, the horse men made them lowe to bridge the gates. Then was the couering of Juda put from thence, & then was sene the sege of the vyndre house. There shall ye se the cyttes in the walles of the cyte of Dauid, wherof there shall be many. Ye shall gather together the waters of the lower pole, and tell the houses of Jerusalem, and breake of some of them to kepe the walles. And ye shall make a pyt betwyxt the two walles of the water of the olde pole, & nothyng regard hym, that toke it in hande, and made it. And at the same tyme shall the Lord of hostes call men to wepynge, mournyng, to baldnesse and puttyng on of sack cloth. But they to fulfyll theyr lustes & wyckednes, slaughter oxen, they kyll sheepe, they eate costly meate, and drynke wyne, & let vs eate & drinke, for to morow we shall dye. Neuertheles when the Lorde of hostes heareth of it, he sayd: yea, yf this wyckednes of yours shalbe remitted, ye must dye for it. Thus hath the Lorde God of hostes spoken.

Thus sayth the Lorde God of hostes: Go in to the treasury vnto Sobna the gouernour and saye vnto hym: What haste thou here to do? and from whence comest thou? that thou hast made the a graue here? For he had caused a costly tombe of stone to be made for him selfe, and a place to lye in to be hewen oute of a rock. Beholde, the Lorde shall caste the oute by violence, he wyll decke the of another fashyon, and put vpon the a straunge cloth. He shall cary the into a farre countre, lyke a ball with his handes. There shalt thou dye, there shal the pompe of thy charettes haue an ende, thou vylayne of the house of the Lorde. I wyll shutte the oute of thyne office, and put the from thyne state.

After this wyll I call my seruaunte Eliakim, the sonne of Helkias, & araye hym with thy cote, and gyrde hym with thy gyrdle, and I wyll geue thy power in to his hande. He shalbe a father of the cytezyns of Jerusalem, and of the kynred of Juda. I wyll also laye the keye of Dauids house vpon his shoulders, and yf he open, no man shall shut, & yf he shut, no man shall open. I wyll fasten him to a nayle in the place of the moste myghty sayth Esaie, & he shalbe vpon the glorious throne of his fathers house. They shall hange vpon hym all the glory of his fathers house, of the children & children children, all vessels small and great, all instrumentes of measure & mayshe. This shall come to passe (sayth the Lorde of hostes,) when the nayle that is fastened to the place of the myghty sayth Esaie, shalbe plucked of. And when the weyght that hanged vpon it, shall fall, be broken, and hewen in peces. For the Lorde hym selfe hath spoken it.

¶ A prophecye agaynst Tyrus, and appoynt to resiste it agayne.

CAPI. XXIII.

An heuy burthen vpō Tyrus. Mourne ye shippes of Tharsis, for it is thus wen downe to the grounde, & conquered of them that are come from Cethim.

The

The inhabiters of the Ilandes, the marchaũtes of Sidon, and they that occupye the see, (of whome thou wast full somtyme) are at a poynte. For by see were theye fruites brought vnto the, and all maner of coyne by water. Thou wast the comen market of all people. Sidon is sory for it, yea and all the power of the see complayneth, and sayth: O that I had neuer trauayled with chylde, that I had neuer borne any, that I had neyther nourished X boye, nor brought vp daughter. As soone as Egypte perceyueth it, she wyll be as sorye as Tirus it self. Go ouer the see, mourne ye that dwell in the Iles. Is not that the glorious cyte, whiche hath bene of longe antiquite? whose natiues dwellynge farre of, commended her so greatly? Who hath deuised such thynges vpon Tirus the crowne of all cytes, whose marchauntes and captaynes were the hyghest and principall of the worlde? Euen the Lorde of hostes hath ordeyned it, that he maye put downe all pompe, and myniſhe all the glory of the worlde. Go thorow thy land (O thou daughter of the see) as men go ouer the water, and there is not a girdle more.

Thus the Lorde that remoueth the kyngdomes, and hath taken in hande agaynſt that mighty Canaan to rote it out, hath stretched out his hande ouer the see, and sayde: From hence forth shalte thou make no more myrth (O thou daughter of Sidon,) for thou shalt be put downe of the Cethens. Stand vp then for, and go where the enemye wyll cary the, where thou shalt also haue no rest. Beholde, (for thyne ensample.) The Chaldees were suche a people, that no man was ryke them, Tirus deuyded them, he set vp his castels and palaces, and broke them downe agayne. And therfore mourne (ye shyppes of the see,) for your power shalbe throwen downe.

D After that, shall the. lxx. yeres of Tirus (euen as longe as theyr kynges ryse was) be forgotten. And after. lxx. yeres, it shall happe to Tirus as with an harlot that playeth vpō a lute. Take thy lute (saye men to her) & go about the cyte, thou olde yet an vnknowen wenche, make pastyme with diuerse balettes, whereby thou mayst come in to acquyntaũce. Thus shall it happen after. lxx. yeres. The Lorde shall visite the cyte of Tirus, & it shal come agayne to her marchaundyse, & shal occupye with all the kyngdomes that be in the worlde. But all her occupyeng and wynnyng shalbe halowed vnto the Lorde. For then shal they laye vp nothynge behynde them nor vpō heapes, but the marchaundyse of Tirus shall belonge vnto the cytezyns of the Lord, to the sobrynge and sufferynge of the hongrye, and to the clothynge of the aged.

¶ A prophecye vpon the tribulacion that shall fall vpon the worlde, because of synne.

CAPI. XXIIII.

A Beholde, the Lorde shall waste & plage the worlde, he shall make the face of the earth desolate, and scatter abrode the in habitours therof. Then shall the preste be as the people, the maister as the seruaunte, the dame lyke the mayde, the sellar lyke the byer, the that lendeth vpon vsurye, lyke vnto them that boroweth vpon vsury, the creditoure, as the debtor. Yea vnspeakably shall the worlde be wasted & clene destroyed. For the Lorde hath so determined in hym selfe. The earth shalbe broke and decaye. The face of the earth shall perysh and fall awaye, the proude people of the worlde shal come to naught. For the earth is corrupte of her inhabiters.

For why they haue offended the lawe chaũged the ordinaunces, and made the euerlastynge testamente of none effecte. And therfore shall the curse deuoure the earth, for they that dwel theron haue synned, wherfore they shalbe brent also, and thole that remayne shal be very fewe. The swete wyne shall mourne, the grapes shall be weake, and all that haue bene merry in herte, shall syghe. The myrth of tabrettes shalbe layd downe, the cheere of the ioyfull shall ceasse, and the pleasaunt of lutes shall haue an ende, there shall no more wyne be dronke with myrth, the beere shalbe bytter to them that dronke it, the wycked cytes shalbe broken downe, all houses shalbe shut, that no man maye come in.

In the stretes shall there be lyke vp a crye because of wyne, all mens cheere shall vanyssh awaye, and all ioye of the earthe shall passe. Desolacion shall remayne in the cytes, and the gates shalbe smytten with wasteile. For it shall happē vnto all landes and to all peo- C people, lyke as when a man smyteth downe the olyues, that are lefte vpon the tree, or seketh after grapes, when the wyne gatherynge is oure. And thole same (that remayne) shall lyfte vp theyr voyce, and be gladde, and shall magnifye the glorye of the Lorde, euen from the see, and prayse the name of the Lord God of Israell, in the valeys and Ilandes. We heare songes longe to the prayse of the righteous, from all the endes of the worlde. Therfore I muste speake: O myne vnfruitefulnesse, O my pouerte. Woe is me, all is full of synnes, whiche offende of purpose and malyce. And therfore (O thou that dwellest vpon the earth) there is at hande for the, feare, pyt, and snare. Who so escapeth the terrible crye, shall fall into the pyt. and yf he come oute of the pyt, he shall be taken with the snare. For the Jere. xlviii. g wyndowes aboue shalbe opened, and the foũdacion of the earthe shall moue. The earthe shall geue a greate creach, it shall haue a sore ruyne, and take an horrible fall. The earthe D shall shacher lyke a dronken man, and be taken awaye lyke a tente. Her wyckednes shall lye so heuye vpon her, that she muste fall, and neuer ryse vp agayne. At the same tyme shall the Lorde muster together the hye hoost aboue, and the kynges of the worlde vpon the earth. These shalbe coupled together as prysoners be, and shall be shut in one warde and punyshed innumerable dayes. The Moone & the Sunne shalbe ashamed, wyt the Lord of hostes shall raise the at Jerusalē vpō ? mount Sion, before ? wyth his excellent counsell.

¶ Thankesgyuynge to god for his workes.

CAPI. XXV.

A O Lorde, thou arte my God, I wyll prayse the, and magnify thy name. For thou hast brought marueilous thynges to passe, according to thyne olde counsels, truelye and stedfastlye. Thou hast of townes, heapes of stone, and of stronge cytes, broken walles. The palaces of the wycked destroyest thou out of the cyte, that they shall neuer be buylded agayne. Therfore the very rude people shall magnifye the, and the cytes of the cruell Hethen muste feare the. For thou arte the poore mans helpe, a strength for the nedefull in his necessite.

Thou art a defence agaynste cruell weather, B a shadowe agaynst the hete. But vnto the pui sumptuous, thou arte lyke a stronge wynde, that calleth downe the boastynge of the vngodly, thou kepest men frō heate, with the shadowe of the cloudes, thou cuttest of the braunches of tyraunts.

Moreouer the Lorde of hostes shall ones prepare a feast for all people vpon the hyll. A C plentyous, costly, pleasaunte feast, of fat and well fed beastes, of swete & moost pure thynges. Vpon the hyll shall he take awaye the hyde vaile that hangeth before the face of all people, and the couerynge wherwith all Gentyles are couered. As for death, he shall vtterly consume it. The Lorde God shall wype awaye the teares frō all faces, & take awaye the confusion of his people thorowe the hole worlde. For the Lord hym selfe hath layd it.

Apoca. vlt. and Esa. 65

And the same tyme shall it be sayde: lo, this D is our God in whome we put oure trust, and he hath healed vs. This is the Lord that we haue waited for. Let vs reioyce and delite in his health. For the hande of the Lord reasteth vpon this hyll. But Moab shall be threshen downe vnder hym, lyke as the straw is trode vnder fete in a donge hyll. For he shall stretch oute his handes vpon hym, lyke as a swymmer doth to swymme. And with the power of his handes shall he caste downe hys hye pompe. As for his strong holdes and hye walles, he shall bowe them, caste them downe, & fell them to the grounde in to dust.

¶ Esaias forsaketh the helpe of the people.

CAPI. XXVI.

A THen shall this songe be songe in the lande of Iuda: We haue a stronge cyte, the walles and the ordinaunce shall kepe vs. Open the gates, that the good people may go in, which laboureth for þ truth. And thou, which art the doer, & hast the matter in hande, shalt prouyde for peace, euen the peace that men hope for in the. Hope styll in the Lord, for in the Lorde God is euerlastinge strength. For why, it is he, that bringeth low the hye myndes of cytezyns, & casteth downe the proude cytes. He casteth them to the ground, yea euen into the myre, that they may be troden vnder the fete of the symple, & with the steppes of the poore. Thou (Lorde) conseyuest B the path of þ righteous, whether it be right, whether þ way of þ righteous be right. Therfore (Lorde) we haue a respecte vnto the way of thy iudgemētes, thy name and thy remembraunce reioyce the soule. My soule lusteth after the all the nyght longe, and my mynde desireth after the. For as soone as thy iudgement is knowen to the worlde, then the inhabitours of the earthe learne righteousnesse. But the vngodly (thoughe he haue receaued grace) yet learneth he not righteousnesse, but in that place where he is punyshed, he offendeth, and feareth not the glory of the Lorde. Lorde, they wyll not se thyne hye hand, but they shall se it, & be confounded, when thou shalt deuoure them with þ wrath of thy people, & with the fyre of thyne enemyes. But vnto vs, O Lorde, prouyde for peace, for thou workest in vs all our workes. O Lorde oure God, though suche lordes haue dominacion C vpō vs as knowe not the, yet graunt that we may hope onely in the, & kepe thy name in remembraunce. The malicious Tyraunte when they dye, are neyther in lyfe nor in the resurrection, for thou vysytest them & rootest them oute, & destroyest all the memoriall of them. Agayne, thou increasest the people, (O Lorde) thou encreasest the people, thou shalte be praysed and magnified in all the endes of the worlde. The people that sithe vnto the in trouble, that came a buresse whiche they cōplayne of is vnto them a chastening before the. Lyke as a wyfe with chylde (when her trauayle cōmeth vpō her) is ashamed, cryeth, & sufferth the payne. Euen so are we, O Lorde, in thy syghte. We are with chylde, we trauayle, and D beare, & with the spirite we bring forth health where thorowe the earth is vndestroyed, and the inhabitours of the worlde perysshe not.

But as for thy dead men & oures, that be departed, they are in lyfe & resurrection. They lye in the earthe, they wake, & haue ioye, for thy dew is a dew of lyfe and syghte. But the place of the malicious tyraunte is fallen away. Go to nowe my people into thy chambre, and shut the doze to the, & suffer nowe the twynchinge of an eye, tyll the wrath be ouerpast. For beholde, the Lord wyll go out of his habitacle, and vysyt the wyckednesse of them Micheas that dwell vpon earth. He wyll discouer the bloude that he hath couered, he shall neuer hyde them, that he hath murthered.

¶ He prophecyeth that all enemyes shal be destroyed at the commynge of Christe.

CAPI. XXVII.

A THen the Lorde with his heuy, greate, & long swearde shall visite Leuiathā that inuincible serpēt, euen Leuiathan that crabed serpente, and shall slaye the whalfysh in the see. At the same tyme shall men synge of the vyneyerde of Rubarell. I the Lorde kepe it, and water it in due season. I watche daye and nyght, that no man breake into it. I beare no cruell wyll in my mynde. Who wyll compell me, that I greatly forgettynge all all fayethfulnesse, shulde burne it vp at ones with thornes and bushes? Or who will enforce me to kepe or make peace? It will come to this poynt, that Jacob shalbe rooted agayn and Israell shalbe grene, and beare flowres, and they shall fyll ye wole worlde with their fruite. Smyteth he not his smyter, as cruell as he is smyten hymselfe. Destroyeth he not the murtherers, as he is murthered? Cuerye man recompenseth with the measure that he receaueth: he mocketh vpon his sore wynde, as vpō the dayes of extreme heate. And therfore shal the iniquitie of Jacob be thus reconcyled. And so shall he take away all the fruite of his synnes.

As for auhter stones, he shall make them al as stones beaten to pouldr, the groues and Idols shall not stande. The stronge cytees shalbe desolate, and the fayre cytees shall be lefte lyke a wylderues. The calfe shall fede and lye there, and the herde shall eate it vp. Their harnesh shall be broke, their wyues whiche were their bewtie when they came forth, shalbe defyled. For it is a people without vnderstandyng, & therfore he that created them, shall not fauoure them & he that made them shall not be mercyfull to them. In that tyme shall the Lorde shute frō the swyft water of Euphrates, vnto the ryuer of Egypte. And there shal the chyldren be chosen out one by one. Then shal ye great trompet be blowē, so that those which haue ben destroyed in the Assirians lande, and those that be scatred a brode in Egypt, shall come & worshyp ye Lord at Jerusalem, vpon the holy mounte.

Agaynste the pryde of Ephraim, and agaynste false Prophetes and preachers.

CAPI. XXVIII.

Wo be to the crowne of pryde, to the dronken Ephraymites, and to the fadyng flowre, to the glory of his pompe, that is vpon the toppe of the plenteous valeye, whiche men be ouerladen with wyne. Behold, the strength and power of the Lord shall breake into the lande on euery syde, lyke a tempest of hayle, that beateth downe stronge holdes, and lyke an horrible, myghtye, & ouerflowynge water. And the proude crowne of the dronken Ephraimites, shall be troden vnder fote. And as for the fadynge flowre, the glorye of his pompe, whiche is vpon the toppe of the plenteous valley, it shal happen vnto them, as to an vnkymely frute before the haruest come. Whiche as soone as it is sene, is by and by deuoured, or euer it come well in a mans handē.

And then the Lorde of hoostes shall be a ioyfull crowne, and a glorious garlande vnto the remnaunte of his people. Vnto the lowly, he shalbe a spirite of iudgemente, and vnto them that dryue away the enemyes frō the gates, he shalbe a spirite of strength. But they go wronge by the reason of wyne, they fall and stacker because of strong drynke. Yea euen the priestes and prophetes them selues go amisse, they are dronken with wyne, and weake by reason of strong drynke. They erre in seynge, & in iudgemēt they fayle. For all tables are so full of vomite & fylthynesse, that no place is cleane. What is he amonge them, that can teache, instruct or enfourme the chyldren, which are weaned frō suck or taken frō the brestes, of any other fashion then. Cōmaunde that maye be cōmaunded, byd that may be bydden, forbyd that maye be forbydden, kepe backe that maye be kept backe, here a lytle, there a lytle. And therfore the Lorde also shall speake with lispyng lyppes & with a straung language vnto this people, to whō he spake afore of this maner. This shal bring reste, yt one refreshe the weery, yea this shall bringe reste. But they had no will to heare. And therfore the Lorde shall answere their stubbournes. (Cōmaunde that maye be commaunded, byd that maye be bydden, forbyd that maye be forbydden, kepe backe that maye be kept backe, here a lytle, there a lytle) That they may go forth, fall backward, be broken, snared & taken. Wherfore heare the worde of the Lorde, ye mockers that rule the Lordes people, which is at Jerusalē. For ye comfort your selues thus: Tush, death & we are at a poynt, & as for hell, we haue made a condicio with it, as though there breake oute any sore plage, it shal not come vpon vs. For with deceyte will we escape, & with nymblenes will we defende oure selues. Therfore sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I will laye a stone in Sion, a greate stone, a costly corner stone for a sure foundation, that who so putteth his trust in hym, shall not be confounded. Eyght counsines will I set vp agayne in ye balaunce, and iudgemēt in the weyghtes. The tempest of hayle shall take away your refuge, that ye haue to trust vnto, & the ouerflowynge waters shall breake downe your stronge holdes of dissimulacio. Thus the appoyntmente that ye haue made with death, shalbe done away, & the condition that ye made with hell, shall not stande. When the greate destruction goeth thorowe, it shall all to treade you. It shall take you quyte awaye before it. For it shall go forth early in the mornyng, & cōtynue onely that daye and that nyght. And the very feare onely shall teach you, when ye heare it. For the bed shalbe so narowe that a man can not lye vpō it. And ye couerynge to small, that a man maye not wynde hym selfe therin. For the Lorde shall stirre forthe as he did vpon the mount + Perasim, & shall take on as he did vpō the + dale of Gabaō, that he may bringe forth his deuyse, his straung deuyse, & fulfyll his worke, his wonderfull worke. And therfore make no mockes at it, that your captiuite increase not, for I haue herde the Lorde of Hoostes saye, that there shall come a sodē destructiō & plage vpō ye hole earth. Take hede, & heare my voyce, ponder & marke my wordes well. Goeth not the husbande man euer in one season earnestly to his lande? he moweth & plowēth his grounde to sowe. And when he hath made it playne, he soweth it in fytches or comyn. He soweth the wheate and Bar-lye in their place, Miſlum & Kye alſo in their place. God that he maye do it right, his God teacheth him and ſheweth him. For he threſheth not the fytches out wt a wayne, neither bringeth he the cartt here & there ouer the corne but he threſheth the fytches out with a ſtaffe and the corne with a rod. But the where he grindeth to make breed therof: In as much as he can not bring it to paſſe with threshyng out. For neither the threshing that ꝑ cart wheles make, ne the beaſtes can grynde it. This and ſuche lyke thinges come of the Lorde of hoſtes, whiche is maruelous in counſell, and great in ryghteouſneſſe.

¶ The deſtruction of Jeruſalem. Agaynſte the commaundementes of men.

CAPI. XXIX.

1 WO be vnto the, o Ariel, thou cyte that Dauid wan. Take yet ſome yeres, and let ſome feaſtes yet paſſe ouer: that Ariel be beſieged, ſo that ſhe ſhall be proue & forſowne, and ſhall be vnto me euē as a lyon. For I will laye ſiege to the comon about, & kepe the in with towres, and graue vp bykes agaynſte the. And thou ſhalte be broughte lowe, and ſpeke out of the erth, and thy wordes ſhal go dumbly out of the grounde. Thy voyce ſhall come out of the erth, like ꝑ voyce of a wytche, and thy talkyng ſhall grone out of the myre. For the multitude of thyne enemies ſhalbe like meledust. And the nombre of tyrauntes ſhal be as the duſt that the wynde 2 taketh awaye ſodenly. Then ſhall be viſited of the Lord of hoſtes with thonder, erthquake, and with a great crache, wt vyolete wynde, tempeſt, and with the flame of a conſumynge fyre. But now the multitude of al the people that warr out agaynſt Ariel the holy hoſte, the ſtrong holdes and ſiege is lyke a dreme which appereth in the nyght. It is lyke as when an 3 hungry man dremeth ꝑ he is eatyng, and whē he awaketh, he hath nothyng: lyke as when a thirſty man dremeth that he is drinkinge, & when he awaketh, he is faynt, and his ſoule vnpacient.

So is the multytude of all people that warr ayenſt the hyll of Sion. But ye ſhall be at your wyttes ende, ye ſhall be aſhamed, ye ſhall wacker and erre to & fro. Ye ſhall be dronken, but not of wyne. Ye ſhal fall, but not thorowe dronkennеſſe. For the Lorde ſhall gyue you an harde ſleppynge ſpirite, & holde downe your eyes: namely youre prophetes and heades which holde ſe, them 4 ſhall he couer. And all viſions ſhall be vnto you, as the wordes that ſtande in a ſealed letter, when one offereth it to a man that is lerned, and ſayth: rede vs this letter. Then he anſwereth: I can not rede it, for it is ſhut. But yf it be gyue to one that is not lerned, & ſayd vnto him: rede this letter: Then ſayth he: I can not rede.

Matth. 15. Marc. 7. b

5 Therfore thus ſayth the Lorde: For as moche as the people draweth nye me with theire mouth, and prayſeth me vyghly wt theire lyppes (where as their herte neuertheleſſe is farre fro me, and ꝑ feare which they owe vnto me, that turne they to mens lawes and wtrines) therfore wyll I alſo ſhewe vnto this people a maruelous terrible & great thynge. (Namely this:) I will deſtroye the wyſdome of their wiſe, and the vnderſtanding of their lerned men ſhall peryſſhe. Wo be vnto them 6 that lyke to hyde, to hyde their ymagynacion before the Lorde whiche reherſe their counſels in the darcknеſſe, & ſaye: Who ſeeth vs, or who knoweth vs? Whiche ymagynacyon of yours is euen as whē the potters clay taketh abaſyſement, as though the worke might ſaye to the workmaiſter: make me not, or as when an vnſyen veſſell ſayth of the potter: he vnderſtandeth not. Se ye not that it is harde by, that Libanus ſhalbe turned into Charmell, and that Charmell ſhall be taken as a 7 wod? Then ſhall deaf men vnderſtande the wordes of the boke, and the eyes of the blynd ſhall ſe without any cloude or darkneſs. The oppreſſed ſhal holde a mery feaſt in the Lord, and the poore people ſhall reioyce in the holy one of Iſrael.

Then ſhall the furyous people ceaſſe, and the mockers ſhall be put awaye, and all they that do wronge ſhalbe plucked out, ſuche as laboure to drawe men vnto ſynne, and that diſreaue hym, which reproueth them in the gate and ſuche as turne good perſonnes to vanite. Wherfore the Lorde (euen the defender 8 of Abraham) ſayth thus vnto the houſe of Jacob, Nowe ſhall not Jacob be aſhamed, nor his face confounded, when he ſeeth amonge his chyldren (whome my handes haue made) ſuch as halowe my name amonges them, that they maye ſanctify the holy one of Jacob, and feare the God of Iſrael, & that they whiche afore tyme were of an erroneous ſpirite, haue now vnderſtandyng, and that ſuche as before could not ſpeake, are now lerned in my law.

¶ Curſſe agaynſte them that forſake the counſell of God and ſticke vnto the counſel of men, the ſhyeneth the reſt of the people, whiche after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem went into Egypt.

CAPI. XXX.

1 WO be to thoſe ſtynkynge chyldre (ſayth the Lorde) whiche take counſell, but not at me, which take a wedde in hande, but not after my wyll, that they maye heape one ſynne vpon another. They go downe in to Egypte, (and aſke me no counſell) to ſeke helpe at the power of Pharao, and comforte in the ſhadowe of the Egyptians. But Pharaos helpe ſhall be youre confuſion, and the comforte in the Egyptians ſhadowe ſhalbe youre owne ſhame. Your rulers haue ben at Zoan, and youre meſſaungers came vnto Hanes. But ye ſhall al be aſhamed of the people that maye not helpe you, whiche ſhall not bringe you ſtrength or comforte, but ſhame and confuſion.

2 Youre beaſtes haue borne burthens vpon 3 theyr

theyr backes towarde the south, thorowe the waye that is full of perill and trouble, bycause of the lyon and lyonesse, of the cockatrice and flyenge dragon. Yea the Mules bare youre substaunce, & the Camels brought youre treasure vpon theyr croked backes, vnto a people that can not helpe you. For the Egyptians helpe shall be but vayne and lost. Therfore I calde you also that youre pryde shoulde haue an ende. Wherfore goo hence and wryte them this in their tables, and note it in a boke: that it maye remayne by theyr posteritie, and be styll kepte. For it is an obstinate people, vnfaythfull children, children that wyll not heare the lawe of the Lorde.

They dare say to the prophetes: Medle with nothyng, and vnto the sothsayers, tell vs of nothyng for to come, but speake frendly wordes vnto vs, and preache vs false thinges. Medle out of the waye, go out of ꝑ path, ryme the holy one of Israel rid vp. Therfore thus sayeth the holy one of Israel: forasmoch as ye haue cast of youre beautie, and comforted your selues with power and nimblenesse, and put your confidence therin: therfore shal ye haue this mischefe agayne for your instruction and fall, lyke as an hygh wal that falleth because of some eyll (or blast) whose brekyng commeth sodenly.

And your destruction shall be as an erthen pot, whiche breaketh, no man touchyng it, yea and breaketh so sore, that a man shall not fynd a sheard of it to fetche fyre in, or to take water therwith out of the pyt. For the Lorde God, euen the holy one of Israel hathe promysed thus: Marke styll & synge and rest shall ye be saued, in quietnesse and hope shal your strength be. Yet wolde ye not, but ye wyll saye: Na, for thus are we constrayned to flee vpon horses. And therfore shal ye flee, we must ryde vpon swift beastes, and therfore your persecuters shal yet be swifter. A thousande of you shall flee for one, or at the most for fyue, which be but onely sene you vpon wodes: tyll ye be desolate as a shyp mast vpon an hye mountayne, and as a beakon vpon an hyll.

Yet standeth the Lorde waytynge, that he maye haue mercye vpon you, and ryseth hym selfe vp, that he maye receyue you to grace. For the Lorde God is ryghtous, happye are all they that waite for hym. For thus (o thou people of Syon, and ye cityens of Jerusalem) shall ye neuer be in heauynesse, for doubtlesse he wyll haue mercye vpon the. As soone as he heareth the voyce of thy crye, he wyll helpe the. The Lorde gyueth you the breed of aduersitie, and the water of trouble. But thyne instructer sleeth not fare from the, yf thyne eyes loke vnto thyne instructer, and thyne eares harken to his worde, that cryeth after the, and sayeth: this is the waye, goo this, and ryme neyther to the ryght hand neyther to the lefte.

Moreouer yf ye destroye the syluer workes of your ydolles, and caste awaye the golden clopes that ye dett them with (as fylthynesse) and saye, get you hence: Then wyll he gyue rayne to the sede that ye shall sowe in the earthe, and gyue you breed of the increase of the earthe, so that all shall be plentyous and aboundaunt. Thy catell also shall be fede in the brode medowes. yea thyne oxen and Mules that tyll the grounde shall eate good fodder, whiche is pourged with the fanne. Goodly ryuers shall flowe out of all his mountaynes and hylles. In the daye of the greate slaughter when the towres shall fall, the moone shall shyne as the sunne, and the sunne shyne shall be seuen fold and haue as moche shyne as in seuen dayes beside.

In that daye shall the Lorde bynde vp the brooken sores of the people, and heale theyr wounden. Beholde, the glorye of the Lorde shall come frome farre, his face shall burne that no man shall be able to abyde it, his lyppes shall wagge for verye indignation, and his tonge shall be as a consumynge fyre. His brethe lyke a vehement flowde of water, whiche goeth vp to the chynne. That he maye take awaye the people, whiche haue tourned them selues to banisht, and the hyde of errour, that syteth in other folkes chawes.

But ye shall synge, as the vse is in the nyght of the holy solemnitie. Ye shall reioyse from your hert, as they that come with the pype, when they goo vp to the mounte of the Lorde, vnto the roche of Israell. The Lorde also shall sette vp the power of his voyce, and declare his terrible arme, with his angrye countenaunce, yea and the flame of the consumynge fyre, with earthequake, tempest of wynde and hayle stones. Then shall the Assirians feare also, bycause of the voyce of the Lorde, whiche shall smyte hym with the rodde. And the same rod whiche the Lorde wyll sende vpon hym, shall moue the hole foundacion: with trompet, with nayle of warre and battayle to destroye. For he hath prepared the fyre of payne from the begynning, yea euen for kynges also. This hath he made depe & wyde, the nourishyng therof is fyre and wod innumerable, which ꝑ brethe of the Lorde kyndleth as it were a matche of brymstone.

¶ He rayleth them that forsake God, and seke for the helpe of men.

CAPI. XXXI.

WO be vnto them that goo downe in to Egypte for helpe, and trust in horses, & comforte them selues in chaseretes, bycause they be many, and in horsemen, bycause they be lustye and stronge. But they regarde not the holy one of Israell, and they aske no question at the Lorde. Where as he neuertheles plageth the wycked, and yet goeth not from his worde, when he stepped forthe and taketh the victorye against the houshold of the frewarde, and against the helpe of euil doers

doers. Now the Egyptians are men, and not God, and their horses flesshe, and not spirite. And as soone as the Lorde stretcheth out his hande, then shall the helper fall, and he that sholde have ben holpen, and shall all together be destroyed. For thus hathe the Lorde spoken vnto me: Lyke as the lyon or lyons whelpe rozeth vpon the praye that he hathe gotten, and is not afrayde, thoughe the multitude of shepherdes crye oute vpon him, nether abashed for all the heape of them: So shall the Lorde of hostes come downe fromthe the mounte of Sion, and defende his hyll. Lyke as byrdes flutter about their nestes, so shall the Lorde of hostes kepe, save, defende and delyuer Jerusalem. Therfore, O ye children of Israel, turne againe, lyke as ye have erred in your goynge backe. For in that day euery man shall caste awaye his ydolles of syluer and golde, whiche ye have made with youre synnefull handes. Assur also shall be slayne with the swerde, not with a mannes swerde. A swerde shall deuoure him, but not a mannes swerde. And he shall flee fromethe slaughter, and his stronguers shall be taken prysoners. He shall go for feare to his strong holdes, and his princes shall flee fromthe his badge. This hath the Lorde spoken, whose lyght burneth in Sion, and his fyre in Jerusalem.

¶ The conditions of good rulers and officers.

CAPI. XXXII.

Beholde, the kynge shall governe after the rule of rygh teousnesse, and the prynces shal rule accordyng to the ballance of equitie. He shall be vnto men as a defence for the winde, & as a refuge for the rayne, lyke as a rwer of water in a thirsty place, & the shadow of a great rok in a dry land. The eyes of them that se, shal not be dymme, and the eares of them that heare, shal take diligent hede. The hert of the vnwyse shal attayn to knowlege, and the vnperfyte tong shal speke playnely & trimmely. Then shal the ryggish be no more called gentle, ne the churle lyberall. But the churle wyll be churlysshly mynded, and his hert wyl wo, he evil and playe the hypocrite, and ymagin abhominacions against God, to make the hungrye leane, and to withholde drynke from the thyrstye: These are the perylous weapons of the couetous, these be his shameefull counsels: that he maye begyle the poore with falsefull wordes, yea euen there as he sholde geve sentence vp the poore. But the lyberal plon ymagineth honest thynges, and commeth vp with honestly.

Heare (ye eyche and pole cityes) harken vnto my voyce. Ye careleese cityes, marke my wordes. Ye fre yeres and dayes shall ye be brought in feare. O ye careleese cityes. For harueste shall be oute, and the grape gatheryng shall not come. O ye eyche pole cityes, ye that feare no peryll, ye shall be abashed and remoued: when ye se the barennesse, the nakednesse and prepatynge to warre. Ye shall knocke vpon youre brestes, because of the pleasaunt felde, and because of the fruitfull vineyarde. My peoples felde shall bryngе thornes and thystles, for in euery house is dysquyetnesse, and in the cityes wyldernesse. The palaces also shall be broken, and the greatly occupyed cityes desolate. The towres and bulwarkes, shall become dennes for euermore, the pleasure of mules shall be tourned to pasture for shepe: vnto the tyme that the spirite be powred vpon vs from above.

Then shall the wyldernesse be a fruitefull felde, and the plenteous felde shall be reckened for a wode. Then shall equitie dwell in the desert, and rygh teousnesse in a fruitefull lande. And the rewarde of rygh teousnesse shall be peax, and her fruite, rest, and quyetnesse for euer. And my people shall dwell in the vnyte of peax, in my tabernacle and pleasure where there is prouyde in them all. And when the hayle falleth, it shal fal in the wod and in the cyte. O howe happye shall ye be when ye shal sattly sowe youre seede beside all waters, and dryue thether the fete of your oxe and asse.

¶ The ruyne against the Assyrians. & deliuerance of them that call in the Lorde.

CAPI. XXXIII.

Therfore wo be vnto the, o robber, shalt not thou be robbed also? and vnto the that layest wayte, as who saye, there sholde no wayte be layde for the? Woo vnto the wyche hast hurte, euen so shalte thou be hurte also. And as thou layest wayte, so shall wayte be layde for the also.

Lorde be mercyfull vnto vs, we wayte for the: Thyne arme is at a poynte to helpe vs, but be thou our helth in the tyme of trouble. Chaunt that the people maye flee at the angre of thy voyce, and that at thy vpstanding the Gentyles maye be scattered abroode, and that their spoyle maye be gathered, as the grasshoppers are commenly gathered togyther in to the pyt. Stand vp Lorde, thou that dwellest on hye. Let Sion be filled with equitie and rygh teousnesse. Let truth and faithfulnesse be in her tyme: power, helth, wysdome, knowlege, and the feare of God are her treasure. Beholde, their aungels crye without, the messingers of peax wepe bytterly. The streetes are waste, there walketh no man ther in, the appoyntment is broken, the cityes are despysed, they are not regarded, the desolate earthe is in heavynesse. Libanus taketh it but for a sporte, that it is brwen downe: Saron is lyke a wyldernesse: Basan and Charmel are turned vpsydedowne. And therfore saith the Lorde: I wyll vp, nowe wyll I get vp, now wyll I aryse. Ye shall conceyue stubble and straw, and your spirite shall be the fyre, that it maye consume you: and the people shall be burnte lyke lyme, as dead thornes burne that are brwen of, and caste in the

in the fyre.

Now harken to ye that are farre of, howe I wo with them, and consydre my glorye, ye that be at hande. The synners at Sion are afeayde, a feareful trauelmelle are come vpon the ypocrites. What is he amonge vs, saye they, that wyll dwelle by that consumynge fyre? Whiche of vs maye abyde that euerlastynge heate? He that leadeth a godlye lyfe (saye I) and speaketh the truthe: he that abhorreth to doo violence and bitterye: he that kepeth his hande that he touche no reward: whiche stoppeth his eares ℔ he heare no counsell agaynst the innocent: which holdeth downe his eyes that he se none euyll. He it is that shall dwell on hye, whose saufgarde shall be in the true rocke, to him shall be gyuē the ryght true meat and drynke. His eyes shal se the kynge in his glorye: and in the wyde worlde, and his herte shal delyte in the feare of God. ✠ What shall then become of the Scribe? of the Senatour? What of him that reckeneth chyldren? There shalt thou not se a people of a straunge tonge to haue so difficult a language that it maye not be vnderstande: neyther so straunge a speche, but it shall be perceyued.

There shall Sion be sene, the heed cytye of oure solemne feastes. There shall eyen se Jerusalem, that glorious habytacyon: the tabernacle that neuer shall remoue, whose nayles shall neuer be taken out wolde without ende, whose cordes euerychone shal neuer corrupte: for the glorious maieste of the Lorde shall there be presente amonge vs. In that place where fayre hyghe ryuers and streames are, shall neyther Galey rowe, ne greate shyppe sayle. For the Lorde shall be oure Cappitayne, the Lorde shall be oure lawe gyuer. The Lorde shall be our kynge, and he vpon vs shall be oure ℣ sauyour. There are the cordes so layde abrode, that they can not be better. The maste set vp of suche a facion, that no banner nor sayle hangeth theron: but there is taked great spoyle, yea lame men cunne after the praye. There lyeth no man that sayethe: I am sycke, but all euyll is taken away from the people that dwell there.

¶ The laste destruction of the Synagoge, in which the kyngdome and preesthode of that people was translated to the Churche and congregacyon of Christe.

CAPI. XXXIIII.

COme ye heathen and heare, take hede ye people. Harken thou earth and all that is therin: thou roundē compasse & all that groweth therupon, for the Lorde is angry with all people, and his displeasure is kyndled agaynst all the multytude of them, to curse them, and to slay them. So that there slayne shall be caste oute, and their bodyes stynke: that euen the very hylles shal be wet with the bloud of them. All the starres of heuen shall be consumed, & the heuen shall folde togyther lyke a roll, and all the sterres therof shall fall, lyke as the leaues fall from the vine and rygge tree. For my sworde (sayth he) shall be bathed in heauen, and shall immediatly come downe vpon Idumea, and vpon the people whiche I haue cursed to my vengeaunce.

And the Lordes sworde shall be full of bloude, and be ruddye with the fatnesse and bloud of lambes and goates, with the fatnesse of the kydneys of wethers. For the Lorde shall kyll a great offeryng in Bosra, and in the lande of Idumea. There shall the Vnicornes fall with the Bulles, (that is with the gyauntes) and their land shall be watered with bloude, and their grounde corrupte with fatnesse. Vnto the also (O Sion) shall come the daye of the vengeaunce of God, and the yere when thyne owne iudgement ✠ shall be recompensed. Thy floudes shall be coursed to pytche, and thyne earth to brymstone, and therwith shall the lande be kyndled, so that it shall not be quenched day nor nyght: But smoke euermore, and so forth to lye waste. And no man shall goo thoroowe for lande so, cure: But pellycanes, Bitters, great owles, and Rauens that haue it in possession, and dwell therin.

For God shall spredde out the lyne of confusion vpon it, and weye it with the stones of emptynesse. When kynges are called vpon, there shall be none, and all princes shall be awaye. Thornes shall growe in their palaces, nettles and thistles in their stronge holdes, that the dragons maye haue their pleasure therin, and that they maye be a courte for Ostriches. There shall straunge beastes mete one an other, and the wylde kepe company togyther. There shall the Lamya lye, and haue her lodgyng. There shall the hedgehog bayld, brygge, & there at home, and bringe forthe his yonge ones. There shal the kites come togyther eche one to his fyre.

Seke thoroowe the scripture of the Lorde, and rede it. There shall none of these thynges be defective, they shall not one (forsothe lyke) faile. For what the mouth commaundeth, that the spirite gathereth together (or multiplieth.) Vpon whome so euer the lot falleth, or to whome he dealeth it with a lyne: those shall possesse the enheritaunce from generacyon to generacyon, and dwell therin.

¶ Of the tyme and kyngdome of Christe.

CAPI. XXXV.

BVt the wyldernesse shall reioyse, the waste grounde shall be glad, and florysshe as the lylye. & he shall florysshe pleasauntly, and be ioyfull, and cure be gyuynge of thankes more and more. For the glorye of Libanus, the beautye of Charmel and Saron shall be gyuen her. These shall shall knowe the honoure of the Lorde, and the mightie of our God. And therfore strengthen the weake handes, and comforte the feble knees.

Saye vnto them that are of a feareful herte: be of good chere and feare not. Beholde your God commeth to take vengeaunce and to rewarde. God commeth his owne self, and will delyuer you. Then shall the eyes of the blynde be lyghtened, and the eares of the deafe opened. Then shal the lame man leape as an harte, and the dombe mans tong shall geue thankes.

In the wylderne shall also there shall welles springe, and floudes of water in the desert. The dry grounde shall turne to ryuers, and the thurstie to springes of water. Where as dragons dwelt afore, there shal growe swete flowres and grene rushes. There shal be fore pathes and common stretes, this shall be called the holye ways. No vncleane persone shall goo thorowe it, for the Lorde him self shall goo with them that waye, and the ignoraunte shall not erre. There shall be no lyon, and no rauysshynge beest shall come therin, nor be there, but men shall goo there safe and safe. And the redemed of the Lorde shall returne, and come to Syon with thanksgeuynge. Euerlastynge ioye shall they haue, pleasure and gladnesse shall be among them, and all sorowe and mournynge shall vanysshe away.

¶ Ierusalē is affrayed by Sennacherib in the tyme of kynge Ezechias.

CAPI. XXXVI.

IN the fourtenth yere of kynge Ezechias, came Sennacherib kynge of the Assirians vpon, to lay siege vnto all the stronge cytyes of Iuda. And the kynge of the Assirians sent Rabsaketh from Lachis towarde Jerusalem against kynge Ezechias, with a greuous hoste, whiche set hym by the condyte of the ouerpole, in the waye that goeth thorow the fullers lande. And so there came forth vnto him Eliakim Helkias son, the Psalmist, Sobna the Scribe, and Joah Asaphs sonne the Secretary.

And Rabsaketh sayd vnto them: Tell Ezechias that the greate kynge of Assiria sayth thus vnto him: What presumption is this that thou trustest vnto? Thou thynkest peraduenture, thou hast counsell and power ynough to maynteyn this warre: of whō wilt thou trust thou, that thou rebell thy selfe of fro me? lo, thou puttest thy trust in a broken staffe of reed (I meane Egypte) whiche he that leaneth vpon, it goeth in to his hande, & thoroweth him. Euen so is Pharao the kynge of Egypte, vnto all them that trust in hym. But yf thou wouldest saye to me: we trust in the Lorde our God: A goodly God in deede: whose hye places and aulters Ezechias toke downe, and cō maunded Juda and Jerusalem to worshyp onely before the aulter. Abyde the, thou hast made a condicion with my Lorde the kynge of the Assyrians, that he shoulde gyue the two thousande horses: are thou able to fyt men vpon them? Seynge nowe that thou canste not withstande the power of the smallest pyntce that my Lorde hath, how darest thou trust in the charettes and horse men of Egypte? Moreouer, thynkest thou I am come downe hyther to destroye this lande without the Lordes will? The Lorde sayd vnto me, go downe in to this land, that thou mayste destroye it.

Then sayd Eliakim, Sobna and Joah vnto Rabsaketh: Speake to vs thy seruauntes (we praye the) in the Syriake language, for we vnderstande it well: And speake not to vs in the Jewes tonge, leest the folke heare, whiche syeth vpon the wall. Then answered Rabsaketh: Thynche ye that the kynge sent me to speake this onely vnto you? Hath he not sent me to them also that sytte vpō the wall: that they be not copelled to eate their owne donge, and drynke their owne lake with you?

And Rabsaketh stode fyrste, and cryed with a loude voyce in the Jewes tonge, and sayd. Howe take hede howe the greate kynge of the Assirians gyueth you warnynge. Thus sayth the kynge: Lette not Ezechias deceyue you, for he shall not be able to delyuer you. Moreouer let not Ezechias comfort you in the Lorde, when he sayth: The Lorde wyll doubte shall delyuer vs, and shall not gyue ouer this cyte into the hande of the kynge of the Assirians, by leue hym not. But thus sayth the kynge of Assiria: Obeye my lawe, entre vnto me: so may euery man eniope his vyneyarde and frygtrees, and drynke the water of his cysterne: vnto the tyme that I come my selfe, and bryngе you into a lande that is lyke your owne: wherin is wheate and wyne, whiche is bothe sowen with rede, and planted with vyneyardes. Let not Ezechias deceyue you, when he sayth vnto you: the Lorde shall delyuer vs.

Myght the goddes of the Gentyles kepe euerye manne lande fromthe power of the kynge of the Assirians? Where is the God of Hemath and Arpad? Where is the God of Sepharuaim? And who was able to defende Samaria out of my hande? Of whiche of all the Goddes of the landes, hath myserd their countrey out of my power, so that the Lorde shold delyuer Jerusalem fro my hande? Whan this Ezechias messengers herde their tonges, and answered not one worde: for the kyng had charged them that they shulde geue him none answere. So came Eliakim Helkias sonne the Psalmist, Sobna the Scribe, & Joah Asaphs sonne the Secretary, vnto Ezechias with rent clothes, and told him the wordes of Rabsaketh.

¶ Ezechias humbleth hym selfe before the Lorde. The armye of Sennacherib is slayne at the kynges of the Lorde: and he him selfe is kylled of his owne sonnes.

CAPI

CAPI. XXXVII.

A When Ezechias herde that, he rente his cloothes, and put on a sackecloth, & went in to the temple of the Lorde. But he sent Eliakim the president, Sobna & Herde with the eldest preestes clothed in sack vnto the Prophete Esaye the sonne of Amoz, and they sayd vnto him: Thus sayth Ezechias: This is the day of trouble, of plage, and of wrath:
lyke as when a chylde commeth to the byrth, but the woman hathe no power to bringe it forthe. The Lorde thy God, no doubte, hath well considered the wordes of Rabsakeh, whome his lorde the kynge of Assirians ha-sent, to defye and blaspheme the lyuynge God: with suche wordes as the Lorde thy God hath here ryght well. And therfore lift vp thy prayer for the remnaunte that yet are lefte. So the seruauntes of kynge Ezechias came to Esaye.

B And Esaye gaue them this answere: Say thus vnto your Lorde: thus sayth the Lorde:
Be not afrayde of the wordes that thou hast herde, wherwith the kynge of the Assyrians seruauntes haue blasphemed me. Be-holde, I wyll cause a wynde goo ouer him, as soone as he heareth it, he shall go agayne in to his countrey, there wyll I ouerthrow him with the swerde. Lowe when Rabsakeh retourned, he founde the kynge of Assiria lay-inge siege to Lobnah, for he harde vnderstande, that he was departed from Lachis.
For there came a rummour, that Tharhakah kynge of Ethiopia was come forth to warre agayn him.

C And when the kynge of Assiria herde that,
he sent other messengers to kynge Ezechias, with this commaundement: Saye thus to Ezechias kynge of Juda: Let not thy God deceyue the in whome thou hopest, and sayst:
Jerusalem shall not be gyuen in to the handes of the kynge of Assiria. For thou kno-west well howe the kynges of Assyria haue handled all the landes that they haue subuerted, and hopest thou to escape? Were the people of the Gentyles (whome my proge-nytours conquered) deliuered at anye tyme through owe theyr goddes? As namely, Gozan, Haran, Reseph, and the children of Eden, whiche dwelle at Thalassar. Where is the kynge of Hemah, and the kynge of Arphad, & the kynge of the cyte of Sepharuaim, Ena and Iua?

Nowe when Ezechias hadde receyued the letter of the messengers, and redde it, he wente vp in to the house of the Lorde, and opened the letter before the Lorde. And Ezechi-as prayed before the Lorde, on this maner:
O Lorde of hostes, thou God of Israel, which dwellest vpon Cherubyn. Thou art the God that onely is God of all the kyngdomes of the worlde, for thou onely hast created heuen and erth. Encline thyne eare, Lorde, and cou-sider, open thyne eyes, o Lorde, and se and pon dre all the wordes of Sennacherib, whiche D hath sente his embassage to blaspheme the lyuynge God.

It is true, O Lorde, that the kynges of Assiria haue conquered all kyngdomes & landes, and cast theyr goddes in the fyre. Not-withstandyng those were no goddes, but the workes of mens handes, of wod or stone, ther fore haue they destroyed them. Therfore de then, O Lorde our God, from the handes of Sennacherib, that all kyngdomes of the erth maye knowe that thou onely arte the Lorde.
Then Esaye the sonne of Amoz, sent vnto Ez-echias, saying: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: where as thou hast made thy praye vnto me, as touchynge Sennacherib this is the answere, that the Lorde hathe gyuen concernynge him:

Despysed arte thou and mocked, o dough-ter of Syon, he hath shaken his heed at the, o doughter of Jerusalem. But thou Sennacherib, whom hast thou defyed and blaspemed? and agaynst whome thou hast lyfted vp thy voyce, and exalted thy proude lokes? euē agaynst the holye one of Israell. Thou with thy seruauntes haste blasphemed the Lorde, and thus boldest thou of thy selfe: I coueit
the hye mountaynes and sydes of Libanus with my horsemen.

and there wyll I cutte downe the hygh C Cedre trees, and the fayrest fyrre trees. I wyll vp in to the heygth of it, and in to the thycke of the tymbre woodes. Yf there be no water, I wyll graue and digge. And as for waters of o frende, I shal dryue them vp with the sole of myne foote. Yea (sayest thou) hast thou not herde what I haue taken in hande, and brought to passe of old tyme? That same wyll I doo nowe also: waste, destroye, and dyngge stronge cytyes vnto heapes of stones.
For theyr inhabytoures shall be lyke same stuff, brought in feare and confounded.
They shall be lyke the grasse and grene her-bes in the felde, lyke the hay vpon house toppes, that withereth afore it be growē vp.

I knowe thy wayes, thy goynge forth, and thy comming home, yea and thy madnesse a-gaynst me. Therfore thy furiousnesse agaynst E me, and thy pryde is come before me. I wyll put a rynge in thy nose, and a bytte byt in the chawles of the, and turne the aboute euen the same waye thou camest. I wyll gyue the also this token, O Ezechias, this yere shalte thou eate that is kepte in store, and the nexte yere suche as groweth of him selfe, and in the thyrde yere ye shall sowe and reape, yea ye shall plante vynyardes, and eniope the fru-tes therof.

And suche of the house of Juda as are escha-ped, shall come together, and the remnaunt shall take roote beneth, and dyngge forthe fruite about. For the escaped shall go oute of Jerusalem, and the remnaunt from the mount Syon.

And this shall the gelousye of the Lorde of F hostes dyngge to passe. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde, concernynge the kynge of the Assyrians: He shall not come in to the cyte, and shall shoote no arowe in to it, there shall no shylde hurt it, neither shall they dygge about it. The same waye that he came, shall he re-

turne

tourne, and not come at this cytye, sayth the Lorde. And I will kepe and save the cytye (sayth he) for myne owne, and for my seruaunt Dauids sake.

* Then the aungell went forth, and slewe of the Assirians hoste, an hundred foure score and fyue thousande. And when men arose vp early (at Jerusalem,) beholde all laye full of dead bodyes. So Sennacherib the kynge of the Assirians brake vp and dwelt at Ninive. Afterwarde it chaunced, as he prayed in the temple of Nesrah his God, and Adramelech and Sarasar his owne sonnes, slewe hym with the swerde, and fledde in to the lande of Ararat. And Asarhadon his sonne raygned after hym.

* Ezechias is sycke vnto the death, but is restored by the Lorde, and liueth xv. yeares after: for whiche benefyte he giueth thankes.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

NOt long after this, was Ezechias sycke vnto the deathe: and the Prophete Esaye the sonne of Amos, came vnto hym, and sayde: Thus commaundeth the Lorde: Set thyne houle in ordre, for thou muste dye, and shalte not escape. Then Ezechias tourned his face towarde the wall, and prayed vnto the Lorde, and sayde: Remembre, O Lorde, that I haue walked before the in trouthe, and perfyte herte, and haue doone the thynge that is pleasaunt to the. And Ezechias wepte sore.

Then sayde God vnto Esaye: Goo and speake vnto Ezechias: the Lorde God of Dauid thy father sendeth the this worde: I haue herde thy prayer, and considered thy teares: beholde I will put fyftene yeres mo vnto thy lyfe, and deliuer the and the cytye also, from the hande of the kynge of Assyria, for I will defende the cytye. And take the this token of the Lorde, that he will doo it, as he hathe spoken: Beholde I will returne the shadowe of Achaz dyall, that nowe is sayde out with the sunne, and bring it tenne degrees backwarde. So the sunne tourned tenne degrees backwarde, the whiche he was descended afore.

¶ I thankesgyuinge, whiche Ezechias kyng of Juda wrote, whan he hadde bene sycke and was recouered.

¶ I Thought I shold haue gone to the gates of hell in my best age, and haue wanted the residue of my yeres.

I spake within my selfe: I shall neuer beholde the Lorde God in this lyfe: I shall neuer se man amonge the dwellers of the worlde.

Myne age is folden vp together, and taken away fro me lyke a shepeherdes tente: my lyfe is browen of, lyke as a weuer cutteth of his webbe.

Whyle I was yet talkynge my selfe, he pewed me of, and made an ende of me in one daye.

I thought I wold haue lyued vnto the morowe: but he brake my bones lyke a lyon, & made an ende of me in one daye.

Then chatred I lyke a swalowe: and lyke a crane, and mourned as a doue.

I lyfte vp myne eyes in to the heyght: O Lorde (sayd I) violence is wrong vnto me, be thou surety for me.

What shall I speake or saye, that he maye this do? that I may lyue out all my yeres, yea in the bytternesse of my lyfe?

Verily (Lorde) men shalde lyue in bitternesse: and all my lyfe made I paste ouer therin, for thou tatest me vp, & wakest me.

But loo, I will be well content with this bytternesse.

Neuerthelesse my chastesyng hath so pleased the, that thou wolden not make an ende of my lyfe, so that thou hast cast al my synnes behynde thy backe.

For hell prayeth not the, death dothe not magnifye the.

They that goo downe in to the graue prayse not thy truthe: but the lyuynge, yea the lyuynge knowlege the, lyke as I do this daye.

The father telleth his children of thy layth fulnesse.

Deliuer vs (O Lorde) and we will synge prayses in thy house, all the dayes of oure lyfe.

And Esaye sayde: take a playster of figres, and laye it vpon the soore, so shall it be hole.

Then sayde Ezechias: O what a greate thynge is this, that I shall goo vp in to the house of the Lorde.

* Ezechias is reproued of Esaye, because he shewed his treasure vnto the Embassadours of Babylon.

CAPI. XXXIX.

AT the same tyme Merodach Baladam, Baladames sonne kynge of Babylon, sent letters and presentes to Ezechias. For he vnderstode how he had ben sycke, and was recouered agayne. And Ezechias was glad therof, and shewed them the commodities of his treasure, of syluer, of golde, of spyces and rootes of precyous oyles, al that was in his cupbordes and treasure houses. There was not one thynge in Ezechias house, and so throwe out all his kyngdome, but he let them se it.

Then came Esaye the Prophete to kynge Ezechias, and sayde vnto him: What haue the men sayde, and fromwe whence came they vnto the? Ezechias answered: they came

oute of a farre countrey vnto me, out of Babylon. Esaye sayde: what haue they loked vpon in thyne house? Ezechias answered: All that is in myne house haue they sene: and there is nothyng in my treasure, but I shewed it them.

Then sayd Esaye vnto Ezechias: Vnderstande the worde of the Lorde of hoostes. Beholde the tyme wyll come that euery thynge whiche is in thyne house, and all that thy progenytoures haue layde vp in store vnto this daye, shall be caryed to Babylon, and no thynge lefte behynde. This sayeth the Lorde. Yea, and parte of thy sonnes that shall come of the, and whom thou shalt get, shall be caried hence, and become gelded chamberlaynes in the kyng of Babylons courte: Then sayd Ezechias to Esay: Howe God prospere his owne worde, whiche he hath spoken. He sayd moreouer: so there be peax and sayfte in my tyme.

¶ The commynge of Sayncte Johñ Baptyst. The preparation of the Apostles. The callynge of the Gentyles.

CAPI. XL.

BE of good chere my people, be of good chere (sayth your God) comfort Jerusalem, and tell her that her trauayle is at an ende, that her offence is pardoned, that she hath receyued of the Lordes hande sufficient correction for all her synnes. A voyce cryeth: Prepare the waye for the Lord in the wildernesse, make streyght the paths for our God in the desert. Let all vales be exalted, and euery mountayne and hyll be layde lowe. What so is croked, let it be made streight, and yet the rough places be made playne wayes. For the glory of the Lorde shall appere, and all fleshe shall se it, for why? the mouth of the Lorde hath spoken it.

The same voyce spake: Howe cry. And I sayd: what shall I cry? Then spake it: that all fleshe is grasse, and that all the beautye therof, is as the flowr of the felde. The grasse is withered, the flowr falleth away. Euen so is the people as grasse, when the brethe of the Lord blowyth vpon them. The grasse wyther, & the flowr fade awaye: But the worde of our God endureth for euer. Moreouer the voyce cryed thus: Go vp vnto the hyll (o Sion) thou that bryngest good tydynges, lyft vp thy voyce with power, o thou preacher Jerusalem. Lyft it vp without feare, and say vnto the cityes of Juda: behold your God, behold the Lorde, euen the almighty shall come with power, and beare rule with his arme. Behold he bryngeth his treasure with him, & his workes goo before him. He shall fede his flocke lyke an herdman. He shall gather the lambes together with his arme, and cary them in his bosome, and shall kyndly entreate those that beare yonge.

Who hath holden the waters in his fyste? Who hath measured heuen with his spanne, and hath comprehended all the earthe of the worlde in thre fyngers? Who hathe weyed the mountaynes and hylles? Who hath re- D fourmed the myndes of the Lorde? Or who is of his counsell to teache him? At whom hath he asked counsell, to make him vnderstande, and to lerne him the waye of iudgement: to teache him science: and to instruct him in the waye of vnderstandyng? Beholde, all people are in comparison of him, as a drop to a bucket full, and are counted as the lesse thynge that the balaunce weyeth. Beholde, the Iles are in comparison of him, as the shadowe of the sunne beame. Libanus is not sufficient to mynister fyre for his offrynge, and all the beastes therof are not ynoughe to one sacrifice. All people in comparison of him, are reckened as nothynge, yea vayne vanitie and emptynesse.

To whom then wil ye liken God? or what similitude will ye set vp vnto him? Shal I cur- Jer.x.b.Wis.xiii.b

uer make him a carued ymage? and shall the goldsmyth couer him with golde, or caste hym in to a forme of syluer plates? Moreouer shall the ymage maker (that the poore man wit- che is vnfolded maye haue some thynge to set vp alle) seke out and coole a tree, that is not rotten, and carue of it an ymage that mouerth not? Know ye not this? herde ye neuer of it? Hathe it not ben preached vnto you from the begynning? Haue ye not ben informed of this sithens the foundation of the erth was layde: that he sitteth vpon the circle of the worlde, and that all the inhabitaunces of the worlde are in comparison of him but as grashoppers: That he spreadeth oute the heauens as a couering: that he stretcheth them out, as a tent to dwell in: that he bryngeth Princes to nothyng, and the iudges of the erth to vanite: so that they be not planted nor sowen agayne, neither their stocke rooted agayne in the erth? For as soone as he blowyth vpon them, they wither and fade awaye, lyke the strawe in a whyrlwynde. F

To whom now wil ye lyken me, and who shal I be like, sayth the holy one? Lift vp your eyes on hye, and consider. Who hath made those thinges, whiche come out by so greate heapes? and he can call them all by their names. For there is nothyng hyd vnto the greatnesse of his power, strengthe, and myghte. How G maye then Jacob thynke, & howe maye Israell saye: My wayes are hyde fro me the Lorde, and my God knoweth not of my iudgementes. Knowest thou not, & hast thou not herd, that the euerlastyng God, the Lorde whiche made all the corners of the earth, is neyther weryed nor fayntt: and that his wysdome can not be comprehended: but that he giueth strength vnto the weryed, and power vnto the fayntt? Children are weryed and fayne and the strongest men fall: But vnto them that haue the Lorde before their eyes, shall strengthe be encreased. Eagles wynges shall growe vpon them: When they runne, they shall not fall: and when they goo, they shall not be weryed.

¶ Of the goodnesse and mercy of God toward the people.

CAPI. XLI.

A BE stil I (ye Ilandes) and harken vnto me. Be stronge ye people: Come I (ther) and shewe your cause, we will goo to the lawe togyther. Who rayseth vp the iuste from the sprynge of the sunne, and calleth him to goo forthe? Who casteth downe the people, and subdueth the kynges before him: that he maye throwe them all to the grounde with his swearde, and scatter them lyke stubble with his bowe? He followeth vpon them, and goeth safely him selfe, and commeth in no foote pathe with his feete. Who hathe made, created, and called the generations from the begynnynge? Euen I the Lorde, whiche am the fyrst, and with the last.

B Beholde ye Iles, that ye maye feare, and ye coastes of the erth, that ye maye be afrayed, & drawe nye, and come hyther. Euery man helpeth his neighboure, and brother, and byddeth him be stronge. The imply cometh for moulder, and the ryche imply the hammer man, saying: It shall be good that we fasten this caule wythe: & then they fasteneth it with nayles, that it shall not be moued. And thou Israel my seruaunte: Iacob my chosen seed of Abraham my beloued, whom I haue taken from the endes of the earthe by the hande: For I called the fromme farre, and sayde vnto the: Thou shalte be my seruaunte, I haue chosen the, and will not caste the away: be not afrayde, for I will be with the. Looke not beyonde the, for I will be thy God to strengthe the, helpe the, and to holde the with the right hande of myne.

Beholde, all they that withstande the, shal come to confusion and shame: and they that are rebellious shall be destroyed and brought to nought. He that wyll seke after them, shal not fynde them. Yee disobedyent shal ye be, and to shall they that vnrighteous to make battayle against the. For I thy Lord and God will strengthen thy right hande. Euen I that saye vnto the, feare not. I will helpe the. Be not afrayde thou spitle worme Iacob, & thou despysed Israel, for I will helpe the, sayeth the Lorde and the holy one of Israel thyne auengar. Beholde, I wil make the a treading carte, and a newe sayle, that thou mayst thresh and grynde the mountaynes, and bryng the hylles to powder. Thou shalt fan them, & the wynde shall cary them away, and the whyrlwynde shall scatter them. But thou shalte reioyce in the Lorde, and shalt glorie in praysing the holy one of Israel.

When the thyrstye and poore seke water and there none, and their tonge is dryed vp for thyrste: I geue it them, sayeth the Lorde. I the God of Israell forsake them not. I bryng forth fountes in the hylles, and welles in the playne fieldes. I turne the wyldernesse to waters, and the dryed lande to fountes of water. I plante in the wilde grounde trees of Cedre, Borr, Myrte, and Oliues. And in the bare, I set fyrre trees, Elmes and Buxbomes togyther. All this do I, that they all togyther may se and marke, perceyue with their heries and consider, that the hande of the Lorde hathe made these thynges, and that the holy one of Israel bringeth them to passe. C Come at your cause, sayeth the Lorde, & bring forth your strongest grounde, counselleth the king of Iacob. Let the goddes come forth and tell vs, and shew vs the thynges that are past what they be: let them declare them vnto vs that we maye take them to herte, and knowe them hereafter. Or ther tell them shewe vs thynges for to come, and tell vs what shal be done hereafter: so shall we know that they be goddes. Shewe some thynge, either good or bad: so wyll we bothe knowlege the same and tell it out.

Beholde, ye goddes are of nought, and your makynge is of nought, but abhominacion hathe chosen you. Streyght be tolde, I haue waked vp one from the north, & he shal come. And an other from the East, which shall call vpon my name, and shal come to the princes, as the potter to his claye, and as a potter treadeth in wont the myre: Who tolde that afore? Do wil we confesse and saye, that he is righteous. Nay there is none that sheweth or declareth any thynge, there is none also that heareth your wordes. Beholde, I wyll fyrst graunte them of Syon and Ierusalem to be euangelistes. But when I coulde: there is not one amonge them that propouncyeth, neither (when I aske him) that answereth one worde. Lo, wycked are they and varne, with their thinges also that they take in hande: yea wynd are they, and emptinesse, with their images togyther.

¶ The commynge of Christe, and his baptisme.

CAPI. XLII.

BEholde, nowe therfore, this is my seruaunte, whome I wyll hepe to my helpe: myne elect. In whome my soule shall be pacified. I wyll geue him my spirite, that he maye shewe forthe iudgement and equite amonge the Gentyles. He shal not be an outcryer, nor an hye mynded person, his voyce shall not be herde in the stretes. A bruised rede shall he not breake, and the smokynge flaxe shall he not quenche: but faythfully and truly shal he geue iudgement. He shal neither be ouercome ne bashed, that he maye stablyshe righteousnes vnto the erth: and the Gentyles also shall hepe his lawes. For thus sayeth God the Lorde vnto him (euen he that made the heuens, and spredde them abroade, and let forth the earthe with her increase: whiche geueth breathe vnto the people that is in it, and to them that dwell therin) I the Lord haue called the in righteousnesse, and holde the by the hande. Therfore wyll I also defende the, and geue the for a couenaunt of the people, and to be the be the lyght of ꝑ Gentyles. That thou mayst open the eyes of the blynde, let out the prisoners, and them that syt in darcknesse, out of the dongeon house. I my selfe, whose name is the Lorde, whiche gyue my power to none other, neyther myne honour to the Goddes: lyeke you these newe tyoynges, and tell you them or they come, for olde thynges also are come to passe.

Synge therfore vnto the Lorde, a newe songe of thankes gyuynge: blowe oute his prayse vnto the ende of the worlde. They that be vpon the see, and all that is therin, prayse him, ye Iles, and they that dwell in them. Let the wyldernesse with her cityes lyfte vp her voyce, the townes also that be in Cedar. Let them be glade that syttе vpon rockes of stone, and let them crye downe from the hygh mountaynes: alleyoyng almightynesse vnto the Lorde, and magnifieng him among ꝑ Gentyles. The Lorde shal come forth as a gyaunt, and cast a stomak to him lyke as a stirly man of warre. He shall roze and crye, & ouercome his enemies.

I haue longe holden my peax (sayethe the Lorde) shoulde I therfore be styll, and kepe silence for euer? I wyll crye lyke a trauelyng woman, and ones wyll I destroye and deuour. I wil make waste both mountaynes and hyll, and drye up euery grene thyng that groweth theron. I wyll drye vp the floodes of water, and drynke vp the ryuers. I will bryng the blynde in to a streete that they knowe not: and lede them in to a foteparh, that they are ignorant in. I shall make darcknesse lyghte before them, and the thyng that is croked to be streyght. These thynges wyll I do, and not forget them. And therfore let them conuerte, and be ashamed earnestly, that hope in dolles, and saye to factioned ymages: ye are our goddes.

Heare, o ye deafe men, and harken ye that be blynde. But who is blynder then my seruaunte? Or so deafe as my messengers whome I sente vnto them? Or who is so blynde as my people, and they that haue the rule of them? They see lyke as ye then vnderstodest moche, and keptest no thing: or ye one herde well, but were not attentyue. The Lorde be merciefull vnto them for his rygh tousnesse sake, and that his worde might be magnified and prayfed. But it is a wilfulnous and wicked people. Their goodes then belong all to the spoyle, and shall be shut in to pryfon houses. They shal be caryed away captyue, & no man shall lose them. They shall be robben vnder foote, and no man shal labour to bring them agayne. But who is he among you that pondreth this in his mynde: that considereth it, and laieth it for a warning in time to come.

Who suffred Iacob to be robbed vnder foote, and Israel to be spoyled? Did not the Lorde? For we haue synned agaynst him, and haue had no delyte to walke in his wayes, neither ben obedient vnto his lawe. Therfore hathe he powred vpon vs his wrathful displeasure, and stronge battayle, whiche maketh vs haue to do on euery syde, yet wyll we not vnderstande: the burneth vs vp, yet sycketh it not in to our hertes.

¶ God promyseth to send his Christ, whiche shal be sayer his people. he forgyueth Israel for his owne sake.

CAPI. XLIII.

But nowe the Lorde that made the, o Iacob, and he that factioned the, o Israel sayth thus: Feare not, for I wyl defend the. I haue called the by name, thou art myne owne. When thou wentest in the water, I was by the, that the stronge floudes shoulde not plucke the away. When thou walkest in the fyre, it shall not burne the, and the flame shal not kyndle vpon the. For I am the Lorde thy God, the holy one of Israel, thy sauioure. I gaue Egypte for thy deliuerance, the Moians and the Sabees for the: bycause thou was mare in my syght, and bycause I set by the, and loued the. I pylled all men for the, and deliuered vp all people for thy sake, that thou shouldest not feare, for I was with the. I wyll bryng thy sede frome the East, and gather the together from the West. I wyll saye to the North, let goo. And to the Southe, kepe not backe: but bryng me my sonnes from farre, and my doughters frome the endes of the worlde: Namely all those that be called after my name: For them haue I created, fayoned, and made for myne honour.

Bryng forthe that people, whether they haue eyes, or be blynde, deafe, or haue eares. All nations shall come in one, and be gathered in one people. But whiche amonge ponder goddes shall declare suche thynges, and tell vs what is to come? Lette them bryng their witnesses, so shall they be sene: for then men shal heare it, and saye it is trouthe. But I bryng you witnesses (sayethe the Lorde) euen those that are my seruauntes, whome I haue chosen: to thintent that ye myghte be instructed, and gyue me faythfull credence: yea and to conclude, that I am he, before whom there was neuer anye God, and that there shal be none after me. I am only the Lorde, and [illegible] me is there no sauioure. I gaue warnyng, I shewed it, I preached you that there was [illegible] among you. Ye are my witnesses, sayth the Lorde, that I am God. And euen he am I from the begynnynge, and there is none that can take anye thynge oute of my handes. and what I do, can no man chaunge.

Thus sayethe the Lorde, the holye one of Israell youre redemer: For youre sake I wyll sende to Babylon, and bryngе all the strongest of them frome thence: Namely the Chaldees that boste them of their shippes: Euen I the Lorde youre holye one whiche haue made Israell, and am youre kynge. Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde, euen he that maketh) alwaye in the see, and a foote pathe

Ut who geueth credence vnto oure preachynge? Or to whome is the arme of the Lorde knowen? He shall growe before the Lorde lyke as a braunch, & as a rote in a dire ground, he shall haue neyther beawte nor fauoure. When we loke vpon hym, there shalbe no fayrnesse, we shall haue no lust vnto hym. He shalbe the moll symple, and dispysed of all, whiche yet hath good experience of sorowes and infirmities. We shall reken hym so symple and so vyle, that we shall hyde oure faces from hym. Now be it (of a trouth) he only taketh away oure infirmite, and beareth oure payne. Yet we shall iudge hym, as though he were plaged & smytten of God, where as he (not withstandyng) shalbe wounded for oure offences, and smytten for oure wyckednes. For the payne of oure punyshment shalbe layde vpon hym, and with his stripes shall we be healed.

As for vs, we go all astraye (lyke sheepe) euery one turnyth his owne waye. But the Lorde we hym, the Lorde pardoneth all oure synnes. He shalbe payned and troubled, and shall not open his mouth. He shalbe led as a sheepe to be slayne, yet shal he be as styll as a lambe before the shearer, and not open his mouthe. He shall be had awaye, his cause not herde, and without any iudgement. Whose generacion yet no man may noumbre, when he shalbe cut of from the ground of the liuyng. Which punyshment shall go vpon hym, for the transgression of my people. His graue shalbe geuen hym with the condemned, and his crucifyenge with the theues. Where as he dyd no vyolence nor beyrght, neyther hath there bene any disceytfulnesse in his mouth.

Yet hath it pleased the Lorde to smyte hym with infirmite, that when he had made his soule an offeryng for synne, he myght se long lastynge seed. And this deuyce of the Lorde shall prospere in his handes. With trauayle & labours of his soule, shall he obtayne greate ryches. My ryghteous seruaunt shall with his wysedome iustifye and deliuer the multitude, for he shall beare awaye their synnes. Therfore wyll I geue hym the multitude for his parte, and he shall deuyde the stronge spoyle, because he shall geue ouer his soule to deathe, & shalbe reckened amonge the transgressours, whiche neuertheles shall take awaye the synnes of the multitude, and make intercession for the mysdoers.

¶ Of the great dominyon of Christ. The indignacion of God endureth but a shorte space, but his mercye is euerlastynge.

CAPI. LIIII.

REioyce therfore be glad now, thou barren that bearest not. Reioyce, synge and be merry, thou that art not with chylde. For the desolate hath moo chyldren, then the maryed wyfe, sayth the Lorde. Make thy tente wyder, and stretche out the hangynges of thyne habitacion, spare not, laye forth the cordes, & make fast thy stakes, for thou shalt breake out on the ryght hyde and on the lefte, & thy seede shall haue the Gentyles in possession, & dwell in the desolate cyties. Feare not, for thou shalt not be confounded. Be not ashamed, for thou shalte not come to confusion. Yea thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth and shalt not remembre the vnhonest of thy wedowehead. For he that made the, shalbe thy Lorde and husbande, (whose name is the Lorde of hoostes,) and thyne auengers shall be euen the holy one of Israell, the Lorde of the hole worlde. For the Lorde shall call the, beynge as a desolate sorowfull woman, and as a ponge wyfe that hathe broken her wedlocke, sayth thy God.

A litle whyle haue I forsake the, but with greate mercyfulnes shall I take the vp vnto me. When I was angry, I hyd my face from the for a litle season, but therow euerlastyng goodnes shall I pardon the, sayth the Lorde thyne auenger. And this muste be vnto me, as the waters of Noe, for lyke as I haue swore that I wyll not bringe the waters of Noe any more vpon the worlde, so haue I swome that I wyll neuer be angry with the, nor reproue the. The mountaynes shall remoue, and the hylles shall fall downe, but my louyng kyndnesse shall not moue, & the bonde of my peace shal not fall downe from the, sayth the Lorde thy mercyfull sauer. Beholde thou poore, beten, and dispysed. I wyll make thy walles of precyous stones, and thy foundacion of Saphires, thy wyndowes of Christall, thy gates of fyne cleare stone, and thy borders of pleasaunt stones. And thy cyldren shall all be taught of God, and I wyll geue them plentefulnes of peace. In ryghteousnes shalte thou be grounded, & be farre from oppression, for the whiche thou needest not be afeared, neyther for brymstonne, for it shall not come nye the. Beholde, the almayne that was farre from the, shall dwell with the, and he that was somtyme a straunger vnto the, shalbe ioyned with the. Beholde, I make the smyth that blowyth the coles in the fyre, and he maketh a weapen after his handy worke. I make also the waster to destroye, but all the weapons that are made agaynste the, shall not prospere. And as for all tunges, that shall resiste the in iudgement, thou shalte ouercome them and condemne them. This is the herytage of the Lordes seruauntes, & the ryghteousnes that they shall haue of me, sayth the Lorde.

¶ Consolacion and comforte to the people. The fruite and profyte of the worde of God.

CAPI. LV.

COme to the waters all ye that be thurfy, and ye that haue no money. Come bye, that ye maye beate to eate. Come, bye wyne and mylke, without any money, or money worth. Wherfore do ye laye out youre money, for the thynge that feedeth not, and spende youre labour about the thynge that satisfyeth you not? But herken rather vnto me, and ye shall eate of the beste, and youre soule soule shall haue her pleasure in plentousnes. Encline your eares, and come vnto me, take hede, and your soule shall lyue. For I will make an euerlastynge couenaunte with you, euen the sure mercyes of Dauid.

Beholde, I shall geue hym for a wytnesse among the folke, for a Prynce and Captayne vnto the people. Lo, thou shalte call an vnknowen people, and a people that hadde no knowledge of the, shall runne vnto the, because of the Lorde thy God, the holy one of Israel, which glorifyeth the. Seke the Lord, whyle he maye be founde, and call vpon hym whyle he is nye. Let the vngodlye man forsake his wayes, and the vnrighteous his ymaginations, and turne againe vnto the Lorde, so shall he be mercyfull vnto hym and to our God, for he is ready to forgeue. For thus sayeth the Lorde: my thoughtes are not youre thoughtes, & your wayes are not my wayes, but as farre as the heauens are hyer then the earth, so farre be my wayes exalted aboue your wayes, & my thoughtes your thoughtes. And lyke as the rayne and snow commeth downe from heauen, and returneth not thyther agayne, but watereth the earth, maketh it frutefull, and grene, that it maye geue corne and breade vnto the sower. So the worde also that commeth oute of my mouth shal not turne againe voyde vnto me, but shall accomplyth my wyll and prospere in the thynge, wherto I sente it. And so shall ye goo forthe with ioye, and be led with peace. The mountaynes and hylles shall synge with you for ioye, and all the trees of the felde shall clappe theyr handes. For thornes, there shall growe. fyre trees, and the myrte tree in the steade of briers. And this shall be done to the prayse of the Lorde, and for an euerlastynge token, that shall not be taken awaye.

¶ An exhortacion to iudgement and righteousnesse, and to the spirituall keping of the Sabboth. Against Idolatrie & that he rebuketh theyr sinnes.

CAPI. LVI.

THus sayth the Lorde: Kepe equite, and do right, for my sauynge healthe shall come shortly, and my righteousnes shalbe opened. Blessed is the man that doth this, and the mans childe which keepeth the same. He that taketh hede, that he vnhalowe not the Sabboth, (that is) he that keepeth hym selfe that he do no euell. Then shall not the straunger, which cleaueth to the Lorde, speake saying, The Lord hath vtterly cleane put me from his people. Neyther shall the gelded say: lo, I am a dry tre. For thus sayeth the Lorde, vnto the gelded that keepeth my Sabboth: Namely, that haldeth greatly of the thynge that pleaseth me, and keepeth my couenaunt. Vnto them will I geue in my housholde and within my walles, a better heritage & name then of they had bene called sonnes & doughters. I will geue them an euerlastynge name, that shall not perysshe. Agayne, he sayeth vnto the straungers that are disposed to ryse to the Lorde, to serue hym, and to loue his name. That they shalbe vnder men. And all they, which kepe themselues that they do not prophane the Sabboth, namely, that they fulfyll my couenaunte. Them will I bringe to my holy mountayne, and make them ioyfull in my house of prayer. Their burnte offeringes and sacrifices shall be accepted vpon myne aulter, for my house shalbe an house of prayer for all people. Matth. 21. b Mark. 11. c Luke 19. d

Thus sayeth the Lorde God which gathereth together the scattered of Israell. I will bringe yet another congregacion to hym. All the beastes of the felde, and all the beastes of the wod, shall come to deuoure hym. For his watche men are all blynde, they haue all together no vnderstandynge, they are all domme dogges, not beynge able to barcke, they are slepeyre, slogyth are they, and lye snorynge, they are shamefull dogges, that be neuer satisfyed. The shepherdes also in lyke maner haue no vnderstandynge, but euery man turneth his owne way, euery one after his owne couetousnes with all his power. Come (saye they) I will fetch wyne, so shall we fyll our selues, that we maye be dronken. And so to morowe, lyke as to daye, yea & much more. D Jerem. 6. a Esaiæ 22. b

¶ The Iewes are rebuked for they; turnyng from the seruice of Christe.

CAPI. LVII.

BVt in the meane season the righteous perysheth, and no man regardeth it in his herte. Good godly people are taken away, and no man considereth it. Namelye, that the righteous is couered awaye from the wyched, that he hym selfe maye be in rest, lye quietly vpon his bed, and lyue after his owne pleasure. Come hyther therfore ye charmers children, ye sonnes of the aduoutrer and the hore. Wherin take ye your pleasure? Vpon whom gape ye with your mouth, and bleare out youre tonge? Are ye not children of aduoutry, and a sede of dissimulacion? Ye take your pleasure vnder the okes, and vnder all grene trees, the childe beynge slayne in the valleys and dennes of stone. Thy part shalbe with the stony rockes by the ryuer. Yea euen these shall be thy parte. For these thou hast powred meate and drynkofferynges vnto them. Shulde I suffre that? Thou hast made thy bed vpon hye mountaynes, thou wentest vp thyther, and there hast thou slayne sacrifices. Beyond the doore and poste, hast thou set vp thy remembraunce. E Psal. 14. a Psal. 53. a Matth. 11. b

When thou haddest discouered thy selfe to another then me, when thou wentest downe and made thy bed wyder (that is) when thou hyddest carue the certayne of powder Idola, and lourdest them couched, where thou sawest them. Thou wentest strayght to kynges with oyle and dyuerse ointmentes, (that is) thou hast sente thy messengers farre of, and yet art thou fallen into the pyt thereby. Thou hast had trouble for the multitude of thyne owne wayes, yet saydest thou neuer: I will leaue of. Thou thynkest to haue lyfe (or health) health) of thy selfe, and therfore thou beleuest not that thou arte syche. For when wylt thou be abasshed at teare, seyng thou hast vsed them thy prouyle, and remembrest not me, neyther hast me in thyne herte? Doyneth thou, that I also wyll holde my peace, (as alone tyme) that thou feareste me not? Yea verely I wyll declare thy goodnes and thy workes, but they shall not profyte the when thou cryest, let thy chosen heape delyuer the. But the wynd shall take them all awaye, and carye them in to the ayre. Neuertheles, they that put their trust in me, shall inherete the lande, and haue my holy hyll in possession.

Jeremye.xl. Psalme.xxxiii.

And therfore thus he sayethe: Make ready, make ready, and caste the stretes, take vp what so can oute of the waye that leadeth to my people. For thus sayeth the hye and excellent, euen he that dwelleth in euerlastyngnesse, whose name is the holye one. I dwell hye aboue and in the Sanctuary, and with hym also, that is of a contrite and humble spirite, that I maye healte a troubled mynde, and a contrite herte. For I chyde not euer, and am not wroth without ende. But the blastynge goeth fro me, though I make the breath. I am wroth with hym for his couetousnes and lust, I smyte hym, I hyde me, and am angry, when he turneth him selfe, and folowyth the by waye of his owne herte. Except I maye se his ryght waye agayne. I make hym hole, I lede hym and restore hym vnto them whome he maketh ioyfull, & that were sory for hym. I make the frutes of thankesgeuynge. I geue peace vnto them that are farre of, & to them that are nye, saye I the Lord, that make him hole. But the wycked are lyke the ragyng see, that can not rest, whose waters somety with the myre & grauell. Euen so the wycked haue no peace, sayeth my God.

Esay.xl.viii. b

¶ The Lorde by the mouth of the Prophete reproueth the people, for theyr fastynges, which were full of hypocrisye.

CAPI. LVIII.

A Nd therfore crye nowe, as loude as thou canst. Leaue not of, lyfte vp thy voyce lyke a trumpet, and shewe my people theyr offences, and the house of Jacob theyr synnes. For they seke me dayly & wyll knowe my wayes, euen as it were a people that dyd ryght, and had not forsaken the statutes of theyr God. They argue with me the ceremonyes of ryght iudgement, and wyll please at the lawe with theyr God. Wherfore saye we (saye they) and thou seest it not? we put our lyues to straytenesse, and thou regardest it not.

Beholde, when ye faste, youre lust remayneth styll, for ye do no lesse violence to youre debtors. Lo, ye fall to stryfe and debate, and to smyte hym with youre fyst that speaketh vnto you. Ye fall not (as some tyme) that youre voyce myght be heard aboue. Thynk ye this fast pleaseth me, that a man shulde chasten hym selfe for a daye, and to wrythe his heade aboute lyke an hoke in an hearry clothe, and to lye vpon the earth? Muste that be called fastynge, or a daye that pleaseth the Lorde? But this fastynge pleaseth not me, tyll the tyme be thou lose hym out of bondage, that is in thy daunger, that thou breake the othe of wycked bargaynes, that thou let the oppressed go fre, and take from them all maner of burthens. It pleaseth not me, tyll thou deale thy bread to the hongry, and bringe the poore fatherlesse home into thy house, when thou seest the naked that thou couer hym, and hyde not thy face from thyne owne flesh.

Then shall thy lyght breake forth as the morninge, and thy healthe florysh ryght hastely, thy ryghteousnesse shall go before the, and the glory of the Lorde shall embrace the.

Then yf thou calleste, the Lorde shall answere the: yf thou cryest, he shall saye: here I am. Yea yf thou layest awaye thy burthens, and holdest thy fyngers, and ceasest from blasphemous talkynge, yf thou hast compassion vpon the hongry, and refreshest the troubled soule. Then shall thy lyght springe oute in the darknesse, and thy darknesse shalbe as the noone daye. The Lorde shal euer be thy gyde, and satisfye the desyre of thyne herte, & fyl thy bones with mary. Thou shalt be lyke a fresh watred garde, and lyke the fountayne of water, that neuer ceaseth runnynge. Then the places that haue ben longe waste, shalbe buylded of the, then shalt thou laye a foundacion for many kynredes. Thou shalt be called the maker vp of hedges, and the buylder agayne of the waye of the Sabboth.

Yea yf thou turne thy fote fro the Sabboth, so that thou do not the thynge which pleaseth thy self in my holy daye, then shalt thou be called vnto the pleasaunt, holy, and glorious Sabboth of the Lorde, where thou shalt be in honoure, so that thou do not after thyne owne ymagination, neyther seke thyne owne wyll, nor speake thyne owne wordes. Then shalt thou haue thy pleasure in the Lord which shall cary the hye aboue the earth, and fede the with the heritage of Jacob thy father, for the Lordes owne mouth hath so pronounced.

¶ The Lorde is myghtye to saue, and redy to here oure requestes.

CAPI. LIX.

BEholde, the Lordes hande is not so shortened that it can not helpe, neyther is his eare so stopped that it maye not heare. But youre mysordes haue separated you fro youre God, and youre synnes hyde his face fro me you, that he heareth you not. For youre handes are defyled with bloude, & youre fyngers with vnryghteousnesse. Your lyppes speake leasynges, and youre tonge letteth oute wyckednes. No man regardeth ryghteousnes, and no man iudgeth truely. Euery man hopeth in vayne thynges, and ymagyneth deceyte, conceyueth wretchednesse, and bringeth forth euell. They hyde cockatrise egges, and weue brue the spyders webbe. Who so eateth of their egges, dyeth. But yf one treade vpon them, ther cōmeth vp a serpent. Their web maketh no clothe and they maye not couer them w their labours. Their bedes are the bedes of wyckednesse, and the woorke of robbery is in their handes. Their fete runne to euil, and thy make hast to shed innocēt blood. Their counsels are wycked counsels, harme and destruction are in their wayes. But the waye of peace they knowe not. In their goinges is no equyte, their wayes are so croked that whosoeuer goeth therin, knoweth no thinge of peace.

And this is the cause that equite is so farre from vs, and that the righteousnesse cōmeth not nygh vs. We loke for lyght, lo, it is darknesse: for the morninge shyne, lo, we walke in the darcke. We grope like the blynde vpon ꝑ wall, we grope euen as one that hath he none eyes. We stomble at the none day, as though it were towarde night: in the fallynge places, lyke men that are halfe dead. We roze all lyke Beares, & mourne styll lyke doues. We loke for equite, but there is none: for healpe, but it is farre frō vs. For our offences are many before the, and our sinnes testify agaynste vs. Yea we muste confesse ꝑ we offende & knowledge ꝑ we w amysse: Namely transgresse & dissemble agaynste the Lorde, & fall away from our God: vttynge presumptuous and craftye imaginacions, & talking false matters in our hertes. And therfore is equite gone alyde, & righteousnesse standeth farre off: truth is falle downe in the streete, & the thing that is playne and open may not be shewed. Yea the truth is layde in pryson, & he ꝑ departeth him selfe from euil muste be spoyled.

When ꝑ Lorde saw this, it displeased him sore, that there was no where anye equyte. He sawe also that there was no man, which had pitie therof, or was greued at it. And he helde him by his owne power, and cleuede to his owne righteousnesse. ✠ He put righteousnes vpon him for a brest plate, & set ꝑ helmete of healthe vpon his heade. He put on wrath in stede of clothing, & tooke grelousye about him for a cloke (lyke as when a man goeth for the wyse dilly to recompence his enemyes, & to be auenged of his aduersaryes) Namely, that he myght recompence & reward the Ilandes where thorow the name of the Lorde myght be feared, from the vttinge of the Sunne, and his rising vpe, vnto the goynge downe of the same.

For he shall come as a violent water-streame, which the wynde of the Lorde hath moued. But vnto Sion there shall come a redemer, & vnto them in Jacob that turne from wickednes, saythe the Lorde, I will make this couenaunte with them (saythe the Lorde) My spirite that is come vpon the, and the woordes whiche I haue put in thy mouthe, shall neuer go out of thy mouthe, nor out of the mouth of thy children, from thys tyme forth for euermore.

¶ A consolacion and comforte to Jerusalem.

CAPI. LX.

AND therfore gette the vp betymes, for thy lyght commeth, and the glorye of the Lorde shall ryse vp vpon the. For lo, whyle the darcknesse and cloude couereth the earthe and the people, the Lorde shall shewe the lyght, and his glory shal be seene in the. The Gentyles shal come to thy lyght, & kynges to the brightnes ꝑ springeth forthe vpon the. Lyft vp thyne eyes, & loke rounde about the. All these gather them selues, & come to the. Sonnes shall come vnto ꝑ from farre, and doughters shall gather them selues to ꝑ on euery syde. Whē thou seist this thou shalt meruayle exceedyngly, and thyne herte shalbe opened: when the power of the see shalbe conuerted vnto the (that is) when the strength of ꝑ Gentyles shal come vnto the. The multitude of Camels shal couer the, the dromedaries of Madian and Epha: All they of Saba shall come, bringyng golde & incēse, & shewing the prayse of the Lorde. All the catel of Cedar shalbe gathered vnto the, the rammes of Nabaioth shall serue the, to be offred vpon mine auiter, which I haue chosen, and in the house of my glorye whiche I haue garnyshed. But what are these that he here lyke the cloudes and as the Doues flyenge to their wyndowes?

The Iles also shall gather them vnto me, and specially the shyppes of the see: that they maye bringe the sonnes from farre, and their siluer and their golde with them, vnto the name of the Lorde thy God, vnto the holye one of Israel, that hath glorifyed the. Strāgers shall buylde vp thy walles, and their kynges shall do the seruice. For when I am angrye, I smyte the: when it pleaseth me, I pardon the. Thy gates shall stande open styll both daye and nyght, and neuer be shut: that the host of the Gentyles may come, and that their kynges may be brought vnto the. For euerye people and kingdome that serueth not the, shall perysshe, & be destroyed with the swerde. The glorye of Lybanus shall come vnto the: The fyrre trees Boxes & Cedres togyther to garnyshe the place of my Sanctuary, for I will glorify the place of my fete.

Moreouer those shall come knelynge vnto the, that haue vexed the: & all they ꝑ reuiled the, shall fall downe at thy fete. Thou shalt be called the cytie of the Lorde, the holy Sion of Israel. Because thou hast ben forsaken and hated, so that no man wēt thorow the: I will make the glorious for euer and euer, and ioyful thorow out all posterities. Thou shalt suck the mylke of the Gentyles, and kynges breastes shal fede the. And thou shalt knowe that I the Lorde am thy sauiour and defender, the mighty one of Jacob. For brasse, will I bringe the golde, and for yron siluer: for wod brasse, and for stones yron. I will make peace thy ruler, and righteousnesse thyne officer. Violence and robberye shall neuer be herde of in thy lande, neyther harme and destruction within thy borders. Thy walles shall be called helthe, and thy gates the prayse of God.

Apoca.xxi.g. ✠ The sonne shall neuer be thy daye lyght, & the lyght of the Moone shall neuer shyne vnto the: but the Lord him self shal be thine euerlastynge lyght, and thy God shall be thy glorye.

Apoca.xxii.b. ✠ Thy sonne shal neuer go downe, and thy Moone shall not be taken awaye, for the Lorde him selfe shal be thy euerlastyng light and thy sorowfull dayes shall be erwarded the. Thy people shall be all godly, and possesse the lande for euer: the flowre of my plantyng, the worke of my handes, wherof I shal reioyce. The youngest and leest shall growe into a thousand, and the symplest into a mighty people. I the Lorde shall shortly bringe this thynge to passe in his tyme.

¶ The Prophet teth that Christe shalbe annoynted and sent to preach.

CAPI. LXI.

Luke.iiii.c. ✠ THe spirite of the Lorde God is with me, for the Lorde hath anoynted me, & sent me, to preache good tydynges vnto the poore, that I myght bynde vp the wounded hertes, that I myght preach deliuerance to the captyue, and open the prison to them that are bounde: that I myght declare the acceptable yere of the Lord, and the day of ꝑ vengeaunce of oure God: that I myght comforte all them that are in heuynesse, that I myght geue vnto them that mourne in Sion beautye in the stede of asshes, ioyfull oyntment for sorowe, pleasaunt rayment for an heuye mynde: That they myghte be called excellent in rygh teousnesse, a plantynge of the Lorde for him to reioyse in.

B They shall buylde the long roughe wyldernesse, and set vp the olde wast. They shal repayre the waste places, and suche as haue bene voyde thorowoute many generacions. Straungers shall stande and feede youre cattell, and the Alyenntes shall be youre plowmen and reapers. But ye shall be named the preistes of the Lorde, and men shall call you the seruauntes of oure God. Ye shall enioye C the goodes of the Gentyles, and reyumphe in theyr substaunce. For your great reproffe & shame, shal they haue ioye that ye may haue parte with theym. For they shall haue double possessio in theyr land, and euerlastynge ioye shal be with them. For I the Lord, whiche loue ryght and hate robberye (though it were offered me) shall make theyr workes full of faythfulnes, and make an euerlastynge couenaunte with them.

Theyr sede also and theyr generacion shalbe knowen among the Gentyles, and amoge the people. All they that se the, shall knowe ꝑ they are the ꝑpo siedes seed of the Lorde. And therfore I am ioyfull in the Lorde, and my soule reioyseth in my God. For he hath put vpon me the garment of helth, and couered me with the mantel of rygh teousnesse. He hath decked me lyke a brydgrome, and as a bryde ꝑ hath her apparell vpon her. For lyke as the grounde bringeth forth frute, and as the garden causeth forth sede: So shall the Lorde God cause righteousnes, & the feare of God to flowrysshe forthe ocforr al the heathen.

¶ The Prophecye of the commynge of Christ.

CAPI. LXII.

FOr Syons sake therfore wyll I not holde my tongue, and for Jerusalems sake I wyll not ceasse: vntyl theyr righteousnes breake forth as the shynynge lyght, and their helthe as a burnynge lampe. Then shall the Gentyles se thy righteousnesse and all kinges thy glorye. Thou shalt be named with a new name, which the mouth of ꝑ Lord shal shew. Thou shalte be a crowne in the hande of the Lorde, and a glorious garlande in the hande of thy God. From this time forth thou shalt neuer be called ꝑ forsaken, and thy lande shal no more be called ꝑ wylderneste. But ꝑ shalte be called Hephzibah, & thy lande Beula: for the Lorde loueth the, & thy lande shalbe inhabited. And lyke as a yong mā taketh a daughter to maryage, so shall God marry him selfe vnto thy sonnes. And as a brydgrome is glad of his bryde, so shall God reioyse ouer the.

C I wil set watchmē vpon thy walles (O Jerusalem) whiche shall neither ceasse daye nor nyght to preache the Lorde. And ye also shall not kepe him close, nor leue to speake of him vntyll Jerusalem be set vp, & made the prayse of the worlde. The Lorde hath swoorne by his right hande & by his strong arme, that from hēce forthe he wyll not gyue thy corne to be meate for thine enemyes, ne thy wyne (wherin thou hast laboured) to be dronke for the straūgers. But they that haue gathered in ꝑ corne, shal eate it, & geue thankes to the Lord and they that haue borne in the wyne, shall drynke it in the court of my Sanctuarye.

D Stande backe, and departe a sunder, ye ꝑ stande vnder the gate: make rowme ye people repayre the strete, and take awaye the stones, & set out a token for the people. Beholde, the Lord proclaymeth in the endes of the worlde: tell the daughter Sion: lo, thy saluacion commeth: beholde, he bringeth his rewarde with him, and his workes go before him. For they whom ꝑ Lord redeemeth, shalbe called ꝑ holy people: and as for the, thou shalt be named ꝑ greatlye occupyed, and not the forsaken.

¶ Of the redemption promysed to the people.

CAPI. LXIII.

WHat is he this, that commeth from Edom, in stayned reade clothes of Bosra: (which is so costly clothed & commeth in so mynchly & al his strength: I am he ꝑ teacheth rygh teousnes & am of power to helpe. Wherfore the is thy clothing red, & thy rayment like his ꝑ treadeth in ꝑ wine presse? I haue trodden downe myne enemyes in my wrathe, and set my fete vpon them in my indignacio: And their bloude sprange vpon my clothes, and so haue I stayned al my rayment. For the day of vengeaunce that I haue taken in hande, and the yeare of my deliuerauncе is come. I loked about me, and there was no man to shewe me any helpe, I fell downe, and no mā holpe me vp. Then I helde me by myne owne arme, and my terrible wrathe susteyned me. And thus haue I troden downe the people in my wrathe, and bathed them in my displeasure: In so moche that I haue shedde their bloude vpon the earthe.

I will declare the goodnesse of the Lorde, yea and the prayse of the Lorde for all that he hath geuen vs, for the greate good that he hathe done for Israel: whiche he hath geuen them of his owne fauour, and according to the multytude of his louynge kyndnesses. For he sayde: These no doubte wyll be my people, and no vnkynde children, and so he was their sauyour. In their troubles he not forsoke them not, but the angell that went before from his presence deliuered them: Of very loue & kyndenesse that he had vnto the, redemed he them. He hathe borne them, & caryed them vp euer sence the worlde began. But after they prouoked hym to wrathe and vexed his holy mind, he was their enemy, & fought agaynste them him selfe. Yet remembred he the olde tyme of Moses and his people: how he brought them fromre the waues of the see, as a shepherde doth with his shepe: how he had geuen his holy spirite amonge them: how he had led Moses by the right hande with his glorious arme: how he had deuyded the water before them, whereby he gate him selfe an euerlastynge name: how he led them in the deepe, as an horse is led in the playne, y they shulde not stumble. The spirite of the Lorde led them, as a tame beaste goeth in the vale.

Thou (O God) hast thou led my people, to make thy selfe a glorious name with all. Loke downe then fromre heauen, and behold the dwellynge place of thy sanctuarye and thy glorye. How is it, that thy gelousye, thy strength, the multytude of thy mercyes and thy louynge kyndnesse, wyl not be intreated of vs. Yet arte thou oure father: For Abraha knoweth vs not, neither is Israel acquaynted with vs. But thou Lorde art our father and redemer, & thy name is euerlastynge. O Lorde wherfore hast thou led vs out of thy waye? wherfore hast thou hardened our hertes, that we feare the not? Be at one with vs agayne, for thy seruaunts sake that are of the generacion of thyne heritage. Thy people hathe had but lytle of thy Sanctuarye in possessiō, for oure enemyes haue taken it in. And we are become euen as we were from the begynnynge: but thou arte not their Lorde, for they haue not called vpon thy name.

¶ The Prophete (vnder the person of the Jewes) bewayleth their euyll and damnable chaunge. Whereby ryghteousnesse is tyde a slothfull with the slowe of a woman.

CAPI. LXIIII.

O That thou wouldest cleue the heuen in sonder, and come downe: that the mountaynes myght melte awaye at thy presence, lyke as at an hote fyre, & that the malicious myght boyle, as the water doth vpon ꝑ fyre: Wherby thy name myght be knowen amonge thyne enemyes, and that the Gentyles myght tremble before the. That y myght come downe & thy wodderous straunge workes, then shulde thy hylles melte at thy presence. For sence the begynnynge of the world there was none (excepte thou O God) that herde of perceyued, neither hathe any eye seene what thou doest for them, that put their trust in the. a Esay. li. b

Thou helpest hym that doth ryghte with ioyefulnesse, and them that thynke vpon thy wayes. But lo, thou arte angrye, for we offende and haue bene euer in synne, & shall we be saued? We are all as an vncleane thynge, and all oure ryghteousnesses are as ꝑ clothes stayned with the floures of a woman: we fall euerychone as the leafe, for oure synnes cary vs awaye lyke the wynde. There is no man that calleth vpon thy name, that ryseth vp to take holde by the. Therfore hydest thou thy face fromre vs, and consumest vs, by cause of oure synnes. b Rom. iii. b Psal. xiv. c

But nowe O Lorde, thou father of oures: we are the claye, and thou arte oure potter & we all are the worke of thy handes. Be not so sore displeased (O Lord) and kepe not our offences to longe in thy remembraunce, but consyder that we al are thy people. The cities of thy Sanctuary lye waste, Sion is a wyldernesse, and Jerusalem a desert. Our holy house whiche is oure beautye, where oure fathers prayed the, is brent vp: yea all our commodities and pleasures are wasted away. Wylt thou not be intreated (Lorde) for all this? Wylt thou hold thy peace, and scourge vs so sore? d Rom. ix. e Ecclesi. xxxvi. b Psal. lxxix. b d

CAPI. LXV.

They shal seke me, that hytherto haue not asked for me: they shall fynde me, that hitherto haue not sought me. The shall I say immediatly to the people that were not called vpon my name: I am here, I am here. For thus long haue I euer holden oute my handes to an vnkynde people, that go not the right way, but after their owne imaginations: To a people that is euer defying me to my face. They make their oblations in gardens, and their smoke vpon altares of bryche, they lurke among the graues and lye in the dennes all nyght. They eate swynes flesh & vncleane broth in their vessels. If thou commest nye them, they say: touch me not, for I am holyer then thou. a Esay. lxv. a Rom. x. b Deut. xii. & Deut. xxiii. b Deut. xii. & Leuit. xi. c

All these men when I am angrye shall be turned to smoke and fyre, that shal burne for euer. Beholde it is wrytten before my face, & shal not be forgotten, but recompted. I shal

Ezechiel.20.d. reward it them in to they⁹ bosome: I mean youre myssededes, and the mysdedes of youre father together (sayth the Lord) which have made they⁹ smoke vpon the mountaynes, and dishonored me vpō the hylles: therfore will I measure they⁹ olde dedes in to they⁹ bosome agayne. Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde: Lyke as when one wold gether holy grapes, men saye vnto him: breake it not of,
for it is holy: euen so will I do also for my seruaunttes sakes, that I will not destroy the all: But I will take a sede out of Jacob, and out of Juda one, to take possession of my hil.
My chosen shall possesse these thynges, and my seruaunttes shall dwell there. Saron shal be a shepefolde, and the valleye of Achor shal serue the shallynge for the catell of my people that seare me. ✠ But as for you ye are they, that haue forsaken the Lorde, & forgotten my holy hyll. Ye haue set vp an aulcare vnto fortune, and geuen vnto dyrnchoftreynges vnto treasure. Therfore will I nombre you with the sweorde, that ye shall be destroyed all together. For when I called, no man gaue me answere: when I spake ye harkened not vnto me, but dyd wyckednesse before myne eyes, & chose the thynge that pleased me not.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Be-holde my seruaunttes shall eate, but ye shall haue honger. Beholde, my seruaunttes shall drincke but ye shall suffre thurste. Beholde, my seruaunttes shal be merye, but ye shal be confounded. Beholde, my seruaunttes shall reioyce for verye ouermuche of herte: But ye shal crye for sorowe of herte, and complayne for vexation of mynde. Youre name shall not be sworne by amonge my chosen, for God the Lorde shall slaye you, and call his seruaunttes by an other name. Who so reioyceth vpon earthe, shall reioyce in the true God.
And who so sweareth vpon earth, shall sweare in the true God. For the olde enmyte shal be forgotten, and taken away oute of my syght.
For lo, I shall make a newe heauen, & a newe earthe. And as for the olde, they shall neuer be thought vpon, ne kepte in mynde: but men shall be glad and euermore reioyce, for the thynges that I shall do.

Apocal.21.a. For why: Beholde, I shall make a ioyful Jerusalem, yea I my selfe will reioyce with Jerusalem, and be glad with my people: And the voyce of weepynge and waylynge shal not be herde in her from thence forth. There shal neuer be chylde ne olde man, that haue not they⁹ full dayes. But when the chylde commeth to an hundreth yeare olde, it shall dye.
And yf he that is an hundreth yere of age be wronge, he shall be cursed. They shall buylde houses, and dwell in them: they shall plante vineyardes, and eate the frute of them. They shall not buylde, & another possesse. They shal not plāt & other eate: But lyke as my people shalbe lyke a tree, & so shall the worke of they⁹ handes.

My chosen shall lyue longe, they shall not labour in vayne, nor begette with trouble:
for they are the yre blessed sede of the Lord, and they⁹ frutes with them. And it shall be, & or euer they call, I shall answere them. While they are yet but chynchynge howe to speake, I shal heare them. The Wolfe and the Lābe shall fede to gether, and the Lyon shall eate haye lyke the bullocke. But earthe shall be serpentes meate. There shall no man hurt ne slaye an other, in all my holy hylle, sayth the Lorde.

¶ God dwelleth not in temples, made by mannes handes he despyseth sacrifyces done without mercy and fayth. God comforteth them that are troubled for his sake. Amonge the Christen, the Sabboth is continuall.

CAPI. LXVI.

THus sayth the Lorde: Heauen is my seate, and the earthe is my fote stole. Where shall nowe the house stande that ye wyll buylde vnto me? And where shall be the place, that I will dwell in? for all thinges, my hande hath made them all, and they are all created, sayth the Lorde. Which of them shal I then regarde? Euen him that is of a lowly troubled spirite, and standeth in awe of my wordes. For who so slayeth an ox for me, bothe me so greate dishonoure, as he that killeth a man. He that offereth a shepe for me choketh a dogge. He that bryngeth me meate offeringes, offereth swynes bloude: Who so maketh me a memoriall of incense, prayseth the thynge that is vnryghte. Yet take they such wayes in hande, and they⁹ soule delyteth in their abhominacions.

Therfore wyll I also haue pleasure I laughynge them to scorne, and the thynge that they feare, wyl I bryng vpon them. For whē I called, no man gaue answere: whē I spake they wolde not heare: But dyd wyckednesse before myne eyes, and chose the thynges that displeased me. Heare the worde of God all ye that feare the thing which he speaketh. Your brethren that hate you, and caste you oute for my names sake, saye Let the Lorde magnyfye him selfe, that we maye se youre gladnesse: & yet they shall be confounded.

For as touchynge the cyete and the temple I heare the voyce of the Lorde, that wyll rewarde, and recompense his enemyes: like as when a wyfe bryngeth forth a man chylde, so euer the suffre the payne of the byrth and anguyshe of the trauayle. Who euer herde of sawe suche thynges? doth the grounde beare in one daye? Or are the people borne all at ones, as syon beareth her sonnes? For thus sayth the Lorde: Am I he that maketh other to beare, and bare not my selfe? Am not I he that beareth, and maketh baren? sayth thy God. Reioyce with Jerusalem, and be gladde with her, all ye that loue her. Be ioyfull with her, all ye that mourned for her. For ye shall suche comforte oute of her breastes, and be satisfied. Ye shall taste, & haue delyte in the pleuteousnesse of her power. For thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, I will let peace in to her, like a water floude, and the myght of the Heathen like a flowyng streme.

Then

Then shall ye sucke, ye shall be borne vpon her sydes, and be layd all vpon her knees. For lyke as a chylde is comforted of his mother, so shall I comforte you, and ye shalbe comforted in Jerusalem. And when ye se this, your herte shall reioyse, and your bones shall florysh lyke an herbe.

E Thus shal the hand of the Lord be knowē amonge his seruauntes, and his indignacion amonge his enemyes. For beholde, the Lorde shall come with fyre, and his charet shall be lyke a whyrle wynde, that he maye recompence his vengeaunce in his wrathe, and his indignacion with the flame of fyre. For the Lorde shall iudge all flesh with the fyre, and with his swearde, and there shall be a greate nombre slayne of the Lorde. Suche as haue made them selues holy and cleane in the gardens, and chose that haue eaten swyne flesh, myce, and other abominacions, shalbe taken awaye together, sayth the Lorde. For I will come to gather all people and tunges with theyr workes and imaginacyons, theye shall come, and se my glorye. Vnto them shall I geue a token, and sende certayne of them (that be delyuered) amonge the Gentyles, in to Celycia, Affrica and Lidya (where men can handle bowes) in to Italye also and Grecia lande:

F The Iles farre of, that haue not heard speake of me, and haue not sene my glorye, shal preache my power amonge the Gentyles, and shall bringe all youre brethren for an offeringe vnto the Lorde, out of all people, vpō horses, charettes and horse lytters, vpō Mules and camels to Jerusalem my holye hyll (sayth the Lorde) lyke as the chyldren of Israell bringe the offeringe in cleane vessels, to the house of the Lorde.

And I shall take vnto certayne of them for to be Priestes and Leuytes, sayth the Lorde. For lyke as the newe heauen and the newe earth which I will make, shalbe fast stablysshed by me, (sayth the Lorde.) So shall youre seede and your name contynue, and euery sabboth day and euery newe Moone for the other, and a newe Sabboth for the other, all flesh shall come to worshyppe before me, (sayth the Lorde.) And they shall goo forthe and loke vpon the carrions of them that haue transgressed against me. For theyr wormes shall not dye, neyther shall theyr fyre be quenched, and all flesh shall abhorre them.

Apoc. xxi. d

Esay. lx. d

¶ The ende of the boke of the Prophete Esaye.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE IEREMYE.

¶ The doctrine of Jeremy, and in what tyme he prophecyed. He excuseth himselfe and wolde refuse the office of a prophete, because he is younge and vnexpert. He is taught of the Lorde, and becommeth bolde. God openeth vnto him, that the destruction of the Jewes, by the Babilonians, is at hande. Jeremy is commaunded to speake the worde of God vnto the Jewes, without feare.

CAPI. I.

THese are the Sermons of Jeremye the sonne of Helkiah the preest, one of them that dwelte at Anathoth in the lande of Beniamin, whom the Lorde had first spoken with hym, in the tyme of Josiah the sonne of Amon kyng of Juda, in the xiij. yere of his kyngdome, and so ouerlyng vnto the tyme of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, and vntyl the.xi. yeres of Zedekiah the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda were ended, when Jerusalem was take, euen in the fyfth moneth. The worde of the Lorde spake thus vnto me: Before I fashioned the in thy mothers wombe, I dyd know the. And or euer thou wast borne, I sanctified the, and ordeined the, to be a Prophete vnto the people. Then sayde I: Oh Lorde God, I am vnmete, for I am yet but yonge. And the Lorde answered me thus: Saye not so, I am to yonge. For thou shalt goo to all that I shall sende the vnto, and whatsoeuer I commaunde the, that shalt thou speake. Be not afrayed of their faces, for I wylde with the, to deliuer the, sayeth the Lorde.

And with that, the Lorde stretched out his hande, and touched my mouth, & sayd moreouer vnto me: Behold, I put my wordes in thy mouthe, and this daye do I set the ouer the people and kyngdomes, that thou mayst rote oute, breake of, destroye, and make waste, and that thou mayest buylde vp and plante. After this, the Lorde spake vnto me, sayenge: Jeremy, what seest thou? And I sayde: I se a watchyng rodde. Then sayde the Lorde: Thou hast wele seene, for I wyll watch diligently vpon my worde, to performe it.

Jere. xlviij.

Jeremy. xlvi. a

It happened afterwarde, that the Lorde spake to me agayne, and sayde: What seest thou? and I sayde: I se a seething pot, lokyng from out of the North vpther warde. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Out of the North shall come a plage vpon all the dwellers of the lande. For lo, I wyll call all the offices of the kyngdomes of the North (sayeth the Lorde.) And they shall come, & euery one shall set his seate in the gates of Jerusalem, & in all their walles rounde about, & thorowe all the cyties of Juda. And thorowe them shal I declare my iudgement, vpon all the wycked dede of those men that haue forsake me, that haue offred vnto straunge goddes and worshipped the workes of their owne handes.

Gird therfore gyrde vp thy loynes, aryse, and tell them all, that I geue the in commaundement. Feare them not, I wyll not haue the to be afrayed of them. For beholde, this daye do I make the a stronge fenced towne, an yron pyller, & a wal of brase agaynst the hole lande, agaynst the kynges and mighty men of Juda, agaynst the preestes & people of the lande. They shall fyght agaynst the, but they shall not be able to ouercome the, for I am with the, to deliuer the, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ God reherseth his benefytes done vnto the Jewes. Agaynste Princes and Prophetes, & preachers that contemne and despyse God. The Jewes are vpbraided, because they forsake God, and because they renne a whoe hunteynge after Idoles.

CAPI. II.

MOreouer, the worde of the Lorde commaunded me thus: Go thy waye, crye in the eares of Jerusalem, and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde: I remebre the for the kyndnesse of thy youth, & because of thy feithfull loue, in that thou folowedst me thorowe the wyldernesse, in an vntylled lande. Thou Israell wast halowed vnto the Lorde, and so was his fyrste frutes. All they that deuoured Israell, offended: myschefe fell vpon them, sayeth the Lorde. Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, O thou house of Jacob, and all the generacion of the house of Israell. Thus sayth the Lorde vnto you.

What vnrighteousnesse found your fathers in me, that they went so farre awaye fro me, sailyng to lyghtnesse, & beyng so vayne? They thought not in their hertes: Where haue we lefte the Lorde, that brought vs oute of the lande of Egypte, that led vs thorow the wyldernesse, thorow a desert & rough lande, thorow a dyrt & a deadly lande, yea a lande that no man had gone thorowe, & wherin no man had dwelt? And when I had brought you into a pleasaunt welbuylded land, that ye might enioye the frutes & all the commodities of the same, ye went forthe & defyled my lande, and brought myne heritage to abominacion.

The preestes them selues sayde not ones: Where is the Lord? They that haue the lawe in their handes, knowe me not. The shepheardes offende agaynste me. The Prophetes do seruice vnto Baal, and folowe suche thynges as shall brynge them no profyt.

Wherfore I am constrayned (sayeth the Lorde) to make my chyaynge vpon you, and vpon your chyldren. Go in to the Iles of Cethim, and loke well, sende vnto Cedar, take diligent hede, and se, whether suche thynges be done there, whether the Gentyles them selues deale so falsly & vntrewly with their goddes, (whiche yet are no goddes in dede.) But my people hath geuē ouer their honoure, for a thynge that maye not helpe them.

By

Be astonished, o ye heuens, be afrayde and abashed at suche a thynge, sayth the Lorde. For my people hath wonne two cuyls. They haue forsaken me the well of water of lyfe, and digged them pittes, yea vile and broken pittes that holde no water. Is Israel a bonde seruaunt, or one of the houshold? Why is he thus spoyled? Why do they roze and crye ouer him as a lyon? They haue made his land waste, his cityes are so brent vp, that there is no man dwellynge in them. Yea the children of Noph and Taphnes haue vexed thy necke.

Commeth not this vnto the, because thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, euer sence he ledde the by the waye? And what haste thou nowe to do in the steete of Egypte? to drynke foule water? Eyther what makest thou in the waye of Assiria? To drynke water of the floude? Thyne owne wickednesse shal reproue the, and thy turnyng away shall condemne the: that thou mayste knowe and vnderstande how cuyll and bytter a thynge it is, that thou haste forsaken the Lorde thy God, and not feared him sayth the Lorde God of hoostes.

I haue euer broken thy yoke of olde, and burste thy bondes: yet sayste thou, I will no moze serue, but (lyke an harlot) thou runnest about vpon all hye hylles, and amonge all grene trees, where as I planted the ouer of noble grapes, and good seede. How art thou tourned then in to a bitter, vnfruteful, and and straunge vyne? Yea, and that so sooze: that though thou washe the with Nitrum, & make thy self to lauour with that sweete fine lynge herbe or Borith: yet in my syght thou art stayned with thy wickednesse, sayth the Lorde thy God.

Saye not nowe: I am not vncleane, and I haue not folowed the Goddes. Loke vpon thyne owne wayes in the valleys, & dennes: so shalt thou knowe what thou hast wonne. Thou arte lyke a swyfte Dromadary that goeth easely his way: and thy wantonnesse is lyke a wylde asse that vseth the wildernesse, and that snuffeth and bloweth at his wyll. Who can tame the? All they that seke the, shal not faple, but fynde it in eny ouer vncleannes. Thou kepest thy fote from nakednesse, and thy throte from thyrst, and thinkest thou in thy selfe: nush, I will take no sozowe, I will loue the straunge goddes, and hange vpon them.

Lyke as a theefe that is taken with the dede commeth to shame, euen so is the house of Israel come to confusion: the commen people, their kynges and rulers, their prestes and prophetes. For they saye to a stocke: thou art my father, and to a stone: thou hast begotte me: yea they haue turned their backe vpon me, & not their face.

But in the tyme of their trouble, whe they saye: stande vp and helpe vs, I shal answere them: Where are nowe thy goddes, that thou hast made the? vpp them stande vp and helpe the in the tyme of nede. For loke how many cities thou hast (O Juda) so many goddes hast thou also.

Wherfore then wyll ye goo to lawe with me, seinge ye all are synners agaynste me sayethe the Lorde? It is but lost laboure, that I smyte youre chyldren, for they receyue not my correction. Youre owne swerde deuoureth youre Prophetes, lyke a deuouringe lyon. Yf ye be the people of the Lorde, then harken vnto his worde: Am I then become a wildernesse vnto the people of Israel? or a lande that hathe no lyghte? Wherfore sayethe my people then: we are fallen of, and we wyll come no moze vnto the? Dothe a mayden forget her ryments, or a bryde her stomacher? And dothe my people forget me so longe? Why boostest thou thy wayes so brydly (to obtayne fauour there thorowe) when thou hast yet stayned them with blasphemyes? Jeremy.2.b

Vpon thy wynges is founde the bloude of poore and innocent people, and that not in corners and holes onely, but openly in all places. Yet darest thou saye I am gyltelesse: Truthe, his wrathe can not come vpon me. Beholde, I wyll reason with the, because thou darest saye: I haue not offended. O howe cuyll wyll it be for the to abyde it: when it shall be knowen how ofte thou hast gone backwarde? Deute.21.b Jeremy.2.a Ezech.12.a

For thou shalte be confounded as well of Egypte, as of the Assirians: Yea, thou shalte goo thy waye frome them, and smyte thyne handes togyther vpon thy heed: Because the Lorde shall bringe that confyrmace and hope of thyne to nought, and thou shalt not prospere withall.

¶ God bringe merryfull, calleth vnto repentaunce his people, whiche he hadde forsaken for their hoordome with goddes. He exhorteth Israel vnto repentaunce, promysynge them shepeherdes that shulde haue the true knowledge of God. The returne of Israel vnto God, confessynge their offence.

CAPI. III.

COmmenly when a man putteth awaye his wyfe, and she goeth frome him and marryeth with an other, then the question is: Shulde he resorte vnto her any moze after that? Is not this bride then defiled and vncleane? But as for the, thou hast played the harlot with many louers, yet tourne againe to me sayth the Lorde. Lyft vp thyne eyes on euerye syde, and loke yf thou be not defiled. Thou hast wayted for them in the streetes, & as a murtherer in the wildernesse. Thorowe thy hoordome and shameful blasphemies is the lande defiled. A

This is the cause, that the rayne and dewmynge dewe hathe ceased. Thou haste gotten an hooores forehed, and canste not be ashamed. Euen wouldest thou saye vnto me: O my father, thou arte he that hast brought me vp, and ledde me fro my youthe: Wylte thou then put me awaye, and caste me of for ever? B erue? O; wylte thou withdrawe thy fylthe cleane from me? Neuertheleſſe thou ſpeakeſt ſuche wordes, but thou art euer doyng woyſt and worſe.

¶ Jeremy.3.a. Jeremy.2.b. Ezechie.16.b.

¶ The Lorde ſayde alſo vnto me: In the tyme of Joſiah the kynge: haſte thou ſene what that wyzynchynge Iſraell hathe doone? howe ſhe hathe runne vp vpon all the hylles and amonge all ſuche trees, and there playes the harlot? Whan thou ſene alſo (when ſhe hadde doone all this) howe I ſayde vnto her: that ſhe ſhoulde turne agayne vnto me, and yet ſhe is not reloumed? Juda that vnfaythfull ſyſter of hers alſo ſawe this: Namely that after I hadde well ſene the abhomyne of the wyzynchynge harlotte Iſraell, I put her awaye, and gaue her a bylle of deuorcement.

For all this her vnfaythfull ſyſter Juda was not aſhamed, but went bacheand playe ſhe the hoore alſo. Yea, and the noyſe of her hoorehode hathe defyled the hole lande. For ſhe hath committed her abhomyne with ſtones and ſtockes.

Neuertheleſſe her vnfaythfull ſyſter Juda is not tourned agayne vnto me with her hole hert, but fayndely: ſayth the Lorde. And the Lorde ſayd vnto me. The backſlyder Iſraell is more ryghteous then her vnfaythfull Juda: and therfore goo preache these wordes towarde the North, and ſaye: Thou Wyzynchynge Iſraell, tourne agayne (ſayeth the Lorde) and I wyll not tourne my face from you: for I am merciful, ſayth the Lorde, and I wyll not alwaye beare diſpleaſure agaynſt the: but on this condicion, that thou knowe thy greate blaſphemye: Namely, that thou haſte vnfaythfully forſaken the Lorde thy God, and haſte made thy ſelfe paſſe vnder all grene trees, but haſt harde no wyll to heare my voyce, ſayth the Lorde.

Ezechiel.16.c. Oſee.2.c.

¶ O ye wyzynchynge children, tourne agayne ſayeth the Lorde: and I wyll be maryed with you. For I wyll take one oute of the cyte, and two out of one generacion from amonge you, and bryng you out to Syon: and wyll gyue you herdemen after myne owne mynde, whiche ſhall feede you with lernynge and wyſdome.

Moreouer, when ye be encreaſed and multyplyed in the lande, then (ſayeth the Lorde) there ſhall no more be ſpoke of the Arke of the Lordes Teſtamente: No man ſhall thynke vpon it, neyther ſhall any man make mencion of it: for from thence forthe it ſhall neyther be viſited, ne honoured with giftes.

Then ſhall Jeruſalem be called the Lordes ſeate, and all Heathen ſhall be gathered vnto it, for the Lordes names ſake, whiche ſhall be ſet forthe, they ſhall folowe no more the ymagination of their owne frowarde herte.

¶ Then thoſe that be of the houſe of Juda, ſhall goo vnto the houſe of Iſraell: and they ſhall come togyther oute of the Northe to the ſame lande that I haue gyue your fathers. I haue ſhewed alſo howe I toke the vp, being but a chylde, and gaue the a pleaſaunt lande to: thyne heritage: yea, and a goodly hoſt of the heathen: and howe I commaunded the that thou ſhoulde call me father onely, and not to withdrawe fro me.

But lyke as a woman fayleth her louer, ſo are ye vnfaythfull vnto me (O ye houſe of Iſraell) ſayth the Lorde. And therfore the voyce of the chyldren of Iſrael was herde on euerye hye, weepinge and waylinge: for they haue behelde their waye, and forgotten God their Lorde.

¶ O ye wyzynchynge chyldren, tourne agayne (ſayinge ye, we are thyne, for thou arte the Lorde our God) And ſo that I breake youre backeſlydynges. The hylles fall, and all the hye pyles of the mountaynes, but the helpe of Iſraell ſtandeth onely vpon God our Lorde.

Confuſion hathe deuoured oure fathers labloure ſyth oure youthe vp: yea, their ſheepe and bullockes, their ſonnes and doughters. So we alſo ſlepe in oure confuſion, and ſhame couereth vs: for we and oure fathers from our youthe vp vnto this daye, haue ſynned agaynſt the Lorde oure God, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lorde our God.

¶ The true repentaunce or returnynge to God. He exhorteth to the circumciſion of the herte. The deſtruccion of Jewrye is propheſyed, for the malyce of their hertes.

CAPI. IIII.

¶ If Iſraell, yf thou wylte tulne the, then tulne vnto me, ſayth the Lorde. And yf thou wilt put awaye thyne abhominacions out of my ſyght, thou ſhalte not be moued: And ſhalte ſwere. The Lorde lyueth: in truth, in equitie and ryghteouſneſſe: and all people ſhall be fortunable and ioyfull in him. For thus ſayth the Lorde, to all Juda and Jeruſalem: plowe your lande, and ſowe not among the thornes.

Be circumciſed in the Lorde, and putte awaye the foreſkynne of youre hertes, all ye of Juda, and all the indwellers of Jeruſalem: that my indignacion breke not out lyke fyre, and kyndle, ſo that no man maye quenche it, becauſe of the wickedneſſe of your ymaginations.

Preache in Juda and Jeruſalem: crye oute and ſpeke: blowe the trompettes in the lande: crye that euery man ſhall gether, and ſaye: Gather you togither, and we wyll goo in to ſtrong cities. Set vp the token in Syon, ſpede you, and make no tarying: for I will bryng a great plage, a greate deſtruction from the Northe. For the ſpoyler of the Gentyles is broken vp from his place, as a lyon oute of his denne, that he maye make the lande waſte, and deſtroye the cities, ſo that no man maye dwell therin. Wherfore gyrde youre leines aboute with ſacke clothe, mourne and wepe, for the fearful wrath of the Lord shal not be withdrawen from you.

E At the same tyme (sayth the Lorde) the herte of the kynge and of the Prynces shall be gone, the preestes shal be astonished, and the prophetes shall ye sooze afrayde. Then sayde I: O Lorde God, hast thou then deceyued this people, and Jerusalem, sayinge: ye shall haue peax, and nowe the swerde goeth thorowe theyr lyues? Then shall it be sayd to the people, and to Jerusalem: there commeth a warme wynde home the Lorde thorow the way of my people, but neither to fan, ne to clense.

D After that there shall come vnto me a stronge wynde, and then will I also gyue sentence vpon them. For loo, he commeth downe lyke as a cloude, and his charettes are lyke a stormy wynde: his horsemen are swifter then the Egle. Wo vnto vs, for we are destroyed. O Jerusalem, wash thyne herte from wickednesse, that thou mayst be holped. How longe shall thy noysome thoughtes remayne with the?

For a voyce fromte Dan, and from the hyll of Ephraim speaketh oute, and telleth of a destruction. Beholde the heathen gyue Jerusalem warnyng, and preache vnto her, that her destroyers are commynge fromte farre countreys. They tell the cities of Juda the same also, they shall gyue them warnynge in euery place, lyke as the watche men vp the felde. For they haue prouoked me to wrathe, sayth the Lorde.

E Thy wayes and thy thoughtes, haue brought the vnto this: this is thyne owne wickednesse and disobedience that hath possessed thyne herte: Ah my belly, ah my belly, (shalte thou crye) howe is my herte so sore? my herte panteth within me, I can not be still, for I haue herd the cryinge of the trompettes and peales of warre.

They crye murther vpon murther, the hole lande shal perysshe. Immediatly my tentes were destroyed, and my hangynges in the twinklynge of an eye. How longe shall I se the tokens of warre, and heare the noyse of the trompetters.

Neuertheles, this shall come vpon them, F because my people is become foolysshe, and haue vtterly no vnderstandynge. They are the chyldren of folysshenesse, and without any discretion. To do euil, they haue wit ynough: but to do wel, they haue no wysdome. I haue loked vpon the earthe: and se, it is waste and voyde. I loked towarde heuen, and it had no shyne.

I beheld the mountaynes and they trembled, and all the hylles were in a feare. I loked aboute me, and there was no bodye, and all the byrdes of the ayre were awaye. I marked well, and the plowed felde was become waste: yea al their cities were broken downe at the presence of the Lorde, and indignacion of his wrathe.

For thus hath the Lorde sayde: The hole lande shal be desolate, yet wil I not then haue ende. And therfore let the erth mourne, and let the heuen be sorye aboue: for the thynge that I haue purposed and taken vpon me to do, shal not repent me, and I will not go fro it. The hole lande shal flee for the noyse of horsemen and bowmen: they shal run in to knottes in to wodes, and clyme vp the stony rockes. All the cityes shal be voyde, & no man dwellynge therin.

What wylt thou now do, thou beinge destroyed? For though thou clothest thy selfe in Jerem.4.d
skarlet, & weckest the with golde: though thou paintest thy self with colours, yet shalt thou tyre thy self in vayne.

For those that hitherto haue ben thy great louers shall abhorre the, and goo about to slee the. For (me thynke) I heare a noyse, lyke as it were a woman trauaylynge, or one labouryng of her fyrst chylde: Quen) voyce of the doughter Sion, that calleth out her armes, and lamenteth, sayinge: Ah, wo is me, how sore vexed and saynt is my herte, for the that are slayne?

¶ In Jewrye is there no ryghteous or faythfull man founde, eyther amongest the people, or the rulers, for whose sake the Lorde shoulde spare the cyte: wherfore Jewrye is destroyed of the Assyrians.

CAP I.

LOke thorowe Jerusalem: beholde and A se: Serche thorowe her stretes also wythin, yf ye can fynde one man that doth equall and ryght, or that labourreth to be faythfull: and I shall spare him (sayth the Lorde.) For though they can saye: the Lorde lyueth, yet do they sweare to disceyue: Where as thou (o Lorde) lokest onely vpon fayth and truthe.

Thou hast scourged them, but they toke no repentaunce: thou hast correct the for amendment, but they refused thy correction. They made theyr faces harder then a stone, & wolde not amende.

Therfore I thoughte in my selfe: peraduenture they are so symple and foolysh, that they vnderstande nothynge of the Lordes waye, and iudgementes of our God. Therfore wyll I goo vnto their heedes and rulers, and talke with them: yf they knowe the waye of the Lorde, and the iudgementes of oure God. But these (in lyke maner) haue broken the yoke, and burste the bandes in sonder.

Wherfore a lyon out of the wod shal hurt them, and a wolfe in the euenynge shall destroye them. The cat of the mountayne shall lye lurkynge by their cities, to teare in peces all them that come therout. For theyr offences are manye, and theyr departynge awaye is greate. Shoulde I then for all this haue mercye vpon the? Thy chyldren haue forsaken me, and sweare by them that are no goddes. And albeit they were bounde to me in mariage, yet they fell to aduoutrye, and hanted harlottes houses.

In

In ꝑ dedes of vnclenly lust they are become like the stoned horse, euery man neyeth at his neyghbours wyfe: shulde I not correct this sayeth the Lorde?

Shulde I not be auenged of suche people, Ezech.xxxvi.c. that is lyke vnto this? Clyme vp vpon yr stil walles breake them downe, but destroye them not vtterly: cut of their braunches, because they are not the Lordes. For vnfaythfully hathe the house of Israel and Juda forsaken me, sayethe the Lorde. They haue denied the Lorde, and sayde: It is not he. Neyther shall no misfortune come vpon vs: we shall se neyther swerde nor honger. So for the warnyng of the Prophetes, they take it but for wynde: yea there is none of these, which wil tell them, that suche thynges shall happen vnto them.

D Wherfore thus sayethe the Lorde God of hostes: because ye speake suche wordes: beholde: The wordes that are in thy mouthe wil I turne to fire, and make the people to be wode, that I may consume them.

Lo, I will brynge a people vpon you from farre, O house of Israel (sayethe the Lorde) a mygthye people, an olde people, a people whose speche thou knowest not, neyther vnderstandest what they saye. Their throwes are lyke vnto graues: yea they them selues be myghtye gyauntes. This people shall eate vp thy frute and thy meate: yea they shall deuour thy sonnes and thy doughters, thy shepe and thy bullockes.

They shall eate vp thy grapes and fygges. Yea for thy stronge and well fenced cyties wherin thou dyddest trust, they shall destroye them with the swearde. Neuertheles I will not haue doone with you, sayethe the Lorde. But yf they saye: Wherfore dothe the Lorde oure God all this vnto vs?

E Then answere them: because that lyke as ye haue forsaken me, and serued strange Jerem.v.b godden in youre owne lande: euen so shall ye serue other godden also in a strange land. Preache this vnto the house of Jacob, and cype it out in Juda, and saye thus: Here this (thou foolyshe and vnderstande people) Esay.vi.b. Jerem.v.b. ye haue eyes, but ye se not: eares haue ye, but ye heare not.

Feare ye not me, sayethe the Lorde? Are ye not ashamed to loke me in the face? which haue bonde the see with the sande, so that it can not passe his boundes: For though it rage, yet can it do nothynge, and though the wawes therof do swell, yet may they not go ouer.

But this people hathe a false and obstynate herte, they are departed and gone awaye fro me. They thynke not in their hertes: O let vs feare the Lorde oure God that gyueth vs rayne early and late, when nede is: whiche keepeth euen sly the harueste for vs surely.

Neuertheles youre wyckednes haue fourmed these thynges you, and youre synnes haue gotten you herof. For amonge my people are founde wycked personnes, that pitefully laye snares, and wayte for men, to take them and destroye them. And lyke as a nette is full of byrdes, so are their houses full of that whiche they haue gotten with falsehed and dysceyte.

Therof commeth their greate substaunce G and ryches: therof are they fatte and welfaye, and are run alwaye fro me with shamefull blasphemyes. They inquire not the lawe, they make no ende of the fatherlesses cause, they iudge not the poore accordynge to equite.

Shulde I not punish these thynges, sayeth ꝑ Ezech. Zach. Lorde? Shulde I be auenged of all suche people as these be? horrible and grieuous thynges are done in the lande.

The Prophetes teache falsely, and the preestes folowe them, and my people hathe pleasure therin. What wyll come therof at the last?

¶ The synnes for whiche Jerusalem is afflicte. Vncircumcysed eares. Couetousnesse. Disceyte. The Lorde reiecteth the false fayres of the Jewes. The commynge of the Babylonyans is prophecyed agayne.

CAPI. VI.

COme forth of Jerusalem, ye strong chil A dren of Ben Jamin: blow vp the trompettes ye Recuites, set vp a token vnto Bethcarem, for a plage and a greate misery bursteth out from the North.

I wyll lyken the doughter of Syon to a faire and tender woman, to her shall come the shepeherdes with their flockes. Their tentes shall they pytche rounde about her, and euery one shall fede them that are vnder his hande. Make battayle agaynste her (shall they saye.) Aryse, let vs go vp, wyple it is yet daye.

Alas, the daye goeth awaye, and the B nyght shadowes fall downe: Aryse, let vs go vp by nyght, and destroye her stronge holdes: for thus hath the Lorde of hostes commaunded.

Hewe downe her trees, and set vp bulwarkes agaynste Jerusalem. This is the cytye that muste be punished, for in her is all vnrighteousnesse. Lyke as a Condyte abounded in water, euen so this cytye abounded in wyckednesse. Robberye and vnrighteousnes is herde in her, sores and woundes are euer there in my syght. Amende the, O Jerusalem, lest I withdraw my hert from the, and make the desolate: and thy lande also, that no man dwel in it. For thus sayeth the Lord of hostes: C The remnaunt of Israel shal be gathered as the remnaunt of grapes.

And therfore tourne thyne hande agayne in to the basket, lyke the grape gatherer. But vnto whom shall I speake, whom shal I warne, that he maye take hede? Their eares are so vncircumcysed, that they maye not heare.

Beholde, they take ꝑ word of God but for a scorne, a stronge, and haue no lust therto. And therfore I am so ful of indignacio, o Lord, that I may suffre no longer. Powre out thy wrathe vpon the children that are without, and vpon all yonge men.

Yea the man muste be taken prysoner with the wyfe, and the aged with the creple. Their houses with their landes and wyues shall be turned vnto straungers, when I stretche oute myne hande vpon the inhabitauntes of this lande, sayethe the Lorde. For frome the least, vnto the moste, they hange all vpon couetousnesse: and frome the Prophete vnto the Preest, they goo all aboute with falsehed and lyes.

And beside that, they heale the hurte of my people with swete wordes, sayinge: peax peax, when there is no peax at all. Therfore they muste be ashamed, for they haue committed abhominacion. But howe shoulde they be ashamed, when they knowe nothing, neyther of shame, nor of good nourture? And therfore they shall fall amonge the slayne: and in the houre when I shall vysyte them, they shall be brought downe, sayth the Lorde.

Thus sayethe the Lorde: goo in to the stretes, consyder and make inquisicion for the olde way, and yf it be the good and right waye: then goo therin, that ye maye fynde rest for your soules. But they saye: we will not walke therin; and I wyll set watche men ouer you, and therfore take heed vnto the voyce of the trompet: But they saye we wil not take hede. Heare therfore ye Gentyles, and thou congregacion shalte knowe, what I haue decreed for them. Heare thou earth also: beholde, I wyll cause a plage come vpon this people, euen the fruite of their own ymaginacions.

For they haue not bene obedient vnto my wordes, and to my lawe, but abhorred them. Wherfore bringe ye me incense frome Saba, and swete smellynge Calamus frome farre countreyes? Youre burnte offerynges displease me, and I reioyse not in youre sacrifices.

And therfore thus sayethe the Lorde: beholde, I wyl make this people fal, and there shal fall from amonge them the father with the children, one neyghboure shall perysshe with an other.

Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde there shal come a people from the North, and a great people shall aryse frome the endes of the earth, with bowes and with dartes shall they be weapened: It is a coughe and fearce people, an vnmercyfull people: their voyce roreth lyke the see, they ryde vpon horses well apparelled to the battayle against the, o doughter Sion.

Then shall this crye be hearde: Oure armes are feble, heuynesse and sorowe is come vpon vs, as vpon a woman trauaylynge with childe. No man goo forthe in to the feld, no man come vpon the hye strete: for the swerde and feare of the enemye shall be on euery syde.

Wherfore gyrde a sacke clothe aboute the (O thou doughter of my people) sprynckle thy selfe with asshes, mourne and wepe bytterly, as vpon thy onely beloued sonne: For the destroyer shall sodenly fall vpon vs. The haue I set for a prouer of my hard people, to seke out, and to trye their wayes. For they are all vnfaythfull and fallen awaye, they hange vpon frythy lucre, they are clene brasse and yron, for they hurte and destroye euery man. The bellous are brente in the fire, the lead is consumed, the melter melteth in vayne, for the cupill is not taken awaye from them. Therfore shall they be called noughtye syluer, because the Lorde hathe caste them oute.

The ruyne that shall happen to the Iewes for the despysynge of their prophetes. Martyres doth not the Lorde therfor requyre of the Iewes, but that they shoulde obey his worde. Tophet.

CAPI. VII.

A These are the wordes that God spake vnto Ieremye: Stande vnder the gates of the Lordes house, and crye out these wordes there with a loude voyce, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde all ye of Juda that go in at this doore, to honour the Lorde. Thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel. Amende youre wayes and youre counselles, and I wyll lette you dwelle in this place. Trust not in false lyenge wordes, sayinge: here is the temple of the Lorde, here is the temple of the Lorde, here is the temple of the Lorde.

But take hede, ye truste in counselles that begyle you, and do ye no good. D Therfore thou ſhalte not praye for this nor bydde prayer for them: thou ſhalte make no interceſſio to me for them: for in no wyſe doo in the cityes of Juda, and without Jeruſalem? The chyldren gather ſtycks, the fathers bynde the fire, the mothers knede

They poure oute drynckeofferynges vnto ſtraunge Goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrathe: Dowbt ye if they hurte not me (ſayth

And therfore thus ſayth the Lorde God:
beholde, my wrath and my indignacion ſhall be poured out vpon this place, vpon me and cattell, vpon the trees of the felde, & all frute of the land, & it ſhal burne ſo that no mā may quenche it.

E Thus ſayth the Lorde of hoſtes, the God of Iſrael: Ye heape vp youre burnte offeryngs with youre ſacrifyces, and eate the fleſhe.
But when I brought youre fathers oute of Egypt, I ſpake no worde vnto them of burnt offeryngs and ſacrifyces: but this I commaunded them, ſaying: Harken and obey my voyce, and I ſhall be your God, and ye ſhal be my people: ſo ꝙ ye walke in all the wayes which I haue commaunded you, that ye may proſpere.

cions of their owne wycked hert, and ſo tour ned them ſelues awaye, and conuerted not vnto me. And this haue they doone, from the tyme that youre fathers came out of Egypt vnto this daye.

F Neuertheleſſe I ſent vnto them my ſer-uaunte all the Prophetes: I roſe vp erlye & ſente them worde, yet wolde they not harken ne offer me their eares, but were obſtinate and worſe then their fathers. And thou ſhalt now ſpeake all theſe wordes vnto them, but they ſhall not heare the: thou ſhalte cry vpon them, but they ſhall not anſwere the. Therefore ſhalte thou ſaye vnto them: this is the people, that neyther heareth the voyce of the Lorde their God, ne receyueth his correction.
Faythfulneſſe and truthe is clene rooted out

G Wherfore cut of thyne heere, and caſte it for the Lorde ſhall caſt awaye and ſtatter the chyldren of Juda haue doone euyll in my ſo buylded an aulter at Topheth, whiche is in the valleye of the chyldren of Hennon:

that they myghte burne their ſonnes and doughters, whiche I neuer commaunded them, neyther came it euer in my thoughte.
and therfore beholde, the dayes ſhall come (ſayth the Lorde) that it ſhall no more be called Topheth, or the valeye of the chyldren of Hennon, but the valey of the ſlayne, for in Topheth they ſhall be buryed, becauſe they ſhall elles where haue no rowme. Yea, the dede bodyes of this people ſhall be eaten of the foules of the ayre, and wylde beaſtes of the earthe, and man ſhall fraye them a-that they tourne not agayne. They are euer dare ye saye them: we are wyse, we haue the lawe of the Lorde amonge vs?

Beholde, the disceytfull penne of the scribes, setteth forth lyes: therfore shall the wise be confounded, they shall be afrayde and taken: for lo, they haue cast oute the worde of the Lorde: what wysdome can then be among them? Wherfore I wyl gyue their wiues vnto straungers, and theyr fieldes to destroyers.

For from the lowest vnto the hyest, they folow all lyghtly lucre: and from the prophet vnto the preest, they vse all with lyes. Neuer the lesse, they heale the hurte of my people vi swete wordes, saying: peax peax, where there is no peax at all.

Fye for shame, how abhominable thynges do they? yet they be not ashamed, yea they knowe of no shame.

Wherfore in the tyme of their visitacion, they shall fall amonge the dead bodyes saith the Lorde.

Moreouer I wil gather them in, sayth the Lorde, so that there shal not be one grape vpo the vine, ne one fyg vpon the fyg tree, & the leaues shall be pluckt of.

Then wil I cause them to departe and saye: why prolong we the time? Let vs gather our selues togither, and go in to the stronge cities, there shall we be in rest: For the Lorde oure God hathe put vs to silence, and gyuen vs water mixte with gall, to drynke, because we haue synned against him.

We loked for peax, and we fare not ꝑ better, we wayted for the tyme of helth, and lo, here is nothing but trouble.

From Dan shall the noyse of his horses be herde, the hole lande shall be afrayde at the neying of his stronge horses: for they shall goo in and deuoure the lande, with all that is in it: the cityes, and those that dwell therin. Moreouer, I wyll sende Cockatrices and serpentes amonge you (whiche wyl not be charmed) and they shal bite you, sayth the Lorde.

Sorowe is come vpon me, and heuynesse vexeth my herte: for loo, the voyce of the crienge of my people, is herde from a farre countreye: Is not the Lorde in Syon? Is not the kynge in her? Wherfore then haue they greued me (shall the Lorde saye) with their ymages, and foolyshe straunge fashions?

The harueste is gone, the sommer hathe an ende, and we are not holpen. I am sore vexed, because of the hurte of my people: I am heuye, and abashed: for there is no more Tryacle at Galaad, and there is no Physicyan that can heale the hurte of my people.

¶ The complaint and bewayling of the Prophete for the welfare of the people. In the knowlege of God ought we only to reioyce. The circumcision of the hert.

CAP. IX.

O Who wyll gyue my head water ynough, and a well of teares for myne eyes: that I may wepe night and day, for the slaughter of my people? Wolde God that I hadde a cotage some where farre from home, that I myghte leaue my people, and goo from them: for they be all aduouterers and a thronginge sorte. They bende their tunges lyke bowes, to shote out lyes. As for the truthe, they may nothyng away withall in the worlde. For they go from one wickednesse to an other, and holde not thynge of me, sayth the Lorde.

Yea, one muste kepe him selfe from an other, no man maye safely trust his owne brother: for one brother vndermyneth an other, and one neyghboure begyleth an other. Yea, one dissembleth with an other, and they walke with no truthe. They haue practised their tonges to lye, and taken great payne to do myschiefe. They haue set their dwelle in ꝑ middest of disceyte, and for very disseueraunce refused they wyll not knowe me, sayth the Lorde.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: beholde, I wyll melte them and trye them, for what should I els do to my people? Their tunges are lyke sharpe arowes to speake disceyt. With their mouth they speake peaceably to their neighboure, but priuily they laye wayte for him.

Beholde I not punish them for these thinges, sayth the Lorde? Or holde I not be auenged of anye suche people as this? Vpon the mountaynes wyll I take vp a lamentation & sorowfulnesse, and a mournyng vpon the fayre playnes of the wildernesse: Namely, bicause they are so brent vp, that no man goeth there any more: yea a man shal not heare one beest there.

Byrdes and cattell are all gone from thence. Yea I will make Jerusalem also an heape of stones, and a denne of dragons wormes. And I wil make the cityes of Juda so waste, that no man shall dwel therin. What man is so wyse, as to vnderstande this? Or to whom hath the Lord spoken by mouth, that he may shewe this and saye: O thou lande why perishest thou so? Wherfore arte thou so brent vp, and lyke a wyldernesse, that no man goeth thorowe?

Yea the Lorde him selfe tolde the same vnto them that forsoke his lawe, and kepte not the thynge that he gaue them in commaundement, neither lyued therafter: but folowed the wickednesse of their owne hertes, and serued straunge goddes, as their fathers taught them.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes, the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyll feede this people with wormewod, and gyue them gall to drynke. I wil scatter them also among the heathen, whom neither they ne their fathers haue knowen: and I wyll sende a sworde amonge them, to persecute them, tyl I dyspatche them to noughte. Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: loke ye call for mourning wyues, and send for wyse women: that they come hoztly, and synge a mournyng songe of you: that the teares maye fall out of our eyes, and that oure eye lydes maye gushe out of water.

For there is a lamentable noyse herde of Syon: O how are we so sore destroyed! O howe are we so pitteously confounded! We muste forsake oure owne naturall countrey, and we are shut oute of oure owne lodgyn-ges. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde (O ye women, and lette youre eares regarde the wordes of his mouthe: that ye maye lerne youre doughters to mourne, and that euerye one maye teache her neyghboure to make lamentacyon. Namely thus: Deathe is clymmynge vp in at oure wyndowes, he is come in to oure houses, to destroye the children before the doore, and the younge men in the strete.

But tell thou playnly, thus sayth the Lorde:
The dede bodyes of men shall lye vpon the grounde, as the donge vpon the felde, and as the heye after the mower, and there shall be no man to take them vp.

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde: Let not the wyse man reioyse in his wysedome, ne the stronge man in his strength, neyther the riche man in his ryches: But who so wyll reioyse let him reioyse in this, that he vnderstandeth and knoweth me: for I am the Lorde, which do mercy, equitie and righteousnesse vpon the earth. Therfore haue I pleasure in suche thin-ges, sayth the Lorde. Beholde, the tyme com meth (sayth the Lorde) that I wyll vysyt all them, whose foreskyn is vncircumcised. The Egyptians, the Iewes, the Edomites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, and the thurn Arabianes that dwel in the wylderne. For all the Gentyles are vncircumcised in the flesh, but all the house of Israel are vncircumcised in the herte.

¶ The vanitees and ydolatryes of the Gentyles are not to be feared. Of the mightynesse of Gods, and of the power of God. Of sayll curates.

CAPI. X.

HEare the worde of the Lorde, that he speaketh vnto you, O thou house of Israel: Thus sayth the Lorde: Ye shall not lerne after the maner of the Heathen, & ye shall not be afrayde for the tokens of heauen: for the Heathen are afrayde of suche:
yea all the customes and lawes of the Gentyles are nothynge but vanitie. They hewe downe a tree in the wod with the handes of the workeman, & facyon it with the axe: they couer it ouer with golde or syluer, they fasten it with nayles and hammers, that it moue not. It standeth as vpryght as the palme tree, it can neither speake ne goo, but must be borne.
Be not ye afrayde of suche, for they can doo neyther good ne euyll. But there is none like vnto the, O Lorde, and great is the name of thy power. Who wolde not feare the?
For what kynge of the Panymes wolde not obey the?

For amonge all the wyse men of the Pa- B nymes, and in all theyr kyngdomes, there is none that maye be lykened vnto the. They are all togyther vnlerned & vnwyse. All their conning is but vanitie: namely wod, syluer, whiche is brought out of Tharsis, and beaten to plates: and golde from Ophir, a worke that is made with the handes of the crafty man and the caster, clothed with pe-lowe lyke and skarlet: euen so is the worke of their wyse men all togyther. But the Lorde is a true God, a lyuynge God, and an euerlastynge kynge. If he be wroth, the earthe shaketh: all the Gentyles maye not abyde his indignacion.

As for their goddes, it may well be sayd of them: they are goddes that neither made he-uen ne earthe: therfore shall they perysshe from the earthe, and from all thynges vnder heuen. But (as for oure God) he made the earth with his power, and with his wis- Iere. 51 dome hathe he stablysshed the pole compasse of the worlde, with his discretion hath he spred out the heuens.

At his voyce the waters gather togither in C the ayre, he drawyth vp the cloudes from the vttermost partes of the erth: he turneth ligh tenynge to rayne, and bryngeth forthe the wyndes out of their treasures. His wisdome Psal. 135 maketh all men foles. And confounded be al caruers of ymages, for that they call, is but a bayne thynge, and hathe no lyfe. The bayne craftesmen with their workes, that they in their vanitie haue made, shall perysshe one with an other in the tyme of visitacion. Ne-uertheles le Iacobs portion is not suche: but it is he that hath made al thynges, and Israel is the rod of his enheritaunce: The Lorde of hostes is his name. Put away thyne vncleunesse oute of the lande, thou that arte in the strong cityes. For thus sayth the Lorde: Be-holde, I wyll now throwe oute the inhabitaunces of this lande a great waye of, and trouble them in suche laste, as they shall no more be founde.

Alas how am I hurt? Alas how payneful D are my stroukes vnto me! For I confesse this to you by my selfe, and I muste suffer it. My tabernacle is destroyed, and all my cordes are broken. My chyldren are gone fro me, and can no where be founde. Nowe haue I none to spreade oute my tente, or to set vp my han-gynges. For the herdemen haue done foolyshly, that they haue not sought the Lorde.
Therfore haue they dealt vnwyttely with them selfe, and all are scattered abrode. Be-holde, the noyse is harde at hande, and great feblenesse out of the North: to make the cities of Iuda a wildernesse, and a dwellynge place for dragons.

Nowe I knowe, O Lorde, that it is not in E mans power to ordre his owne wayes, or to Psalm.
rule his owne steppes and goinges. Therfore chasten thou vs, O Lorde, but with fauour and not in thy wrathe, bringe vs not vtterly to nought. Powre out thyne indignacion rather vpon the Heathen that know the not, & Psalm.
vpon the people that call not on thy name:

And

And that because they have consumed, wasted and destroyed Jacob, and have rooted out his glorye.

¶ A curse of them that obeye not the wordes of Goddes promise. The people of Juda following the steppes of theyr fathers, worshipped straunge goddes. The Lorde sayeth he will not heare the Iewes, and forbiddeth also Jeremye to praye for them.

CAPI. XI.

1 THis is an other sermon, which ✠ Lorde commaunded Jeremye to preache, saying: Heare the wordes of the covenaunt and speake vnto all Juda, and to all them that dwell at Jerusalem, and saye vnto them Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israell: Cursed be euery one that is not obedient vnto the wordes of this covenaunt: which I commaunded vnto your fathers, what tyme as I brought them out of Egypte, from the yron furnace, saying: Be obedient vnto my voice and do according to all that I commaunde you: so shall ye be my people, and I will be your God, and will kepe my promeise that I gaue sworne vnto your fathers: Namely that I would giue them a lande wherein floweth milke and honye, as ye se, is come to passe this daye. Then answered I, and sayde. Amen. It is euen so, Lorde, as thou sayest.

2 Then the Lorde sayde vnto me againe: preache these in the cities of Juda, and rounde about Jerusalem, and saye: Heare the wordes of this covenaunt, that ye maye kepe them. For I haue diligently exhorted your fathers, euer synce the tyme I brought them out of the lande of Egypte, vnto this daye. I gaue them warninge betymes, saying: Hearken vnto my voyce: Neuertheles they would not obeye me, nor encline theyr eares vnto me, but followed the wyckednesse of theyr owne hertes.

And therfore haue I stirred them as transgressours of all the wordes of this covenaunte that I gaue them to kepe, which they (not withstanding) haue not kepte.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: It is found out, that both Israel, and all their citezyns of Jerusalem are gone backe. They haue turned them selues to the blasphemyes of theyr first fathers, which had no lust to heare my wordes. Euen lykewyse haue these also followed straunge goddes, and worshipped the. The house of Israell and Juda haue broken my covenaunte, which I made with theyr fathers.

3 Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I will sende a plage amonge you, which ye shall not be able to escape: and though ye crye vnto me, I will not heare you. Then shall the townes of Juda, and the citezyns of Jerusalem go and call vpon theyr goddes vnto whom they make their oblacions, but they are not able to helpe them in tyme of theyr trouble. For as many cityes as thou hast, O Juda, so many goddes hast thou also. And lyke how many stretes there be in the, O Jerusalem, so many shamefull aulters haue ye set vp, to offer vnto them vnto Baal. But Jerem. xiii. B. praye not thou for this people: bye nether praise ne prayer for them, for though they cry vnto me in their trouble, yet will I not heare them.

4 O thou beloued, why wilt thou so shamefully greate blasphemyes in my house? Euen as though that holye flesshe myght abolishe the, specially when thou hast made thy boste of thy wyckednesse. The Lorde called the a greene olyue tree, a fayre one, a fruitefull one, a goodly one: but nowe that there is a conflagracyon ouer the house, he will burne the vp, and destroye thy braunches. For the Lorde of hostes that planted the, hath wyssed a plage for the (O thou house of Israell and Juda) for the euyll that ye haue wrought to prouoke him to wrathe, in that ye haue serued vnto Baal.

5 Thus, O Lorde, haue I learned of the, and vnderstande it: for thou hast shewed me their ymaginations. But I (as a milde lambe) was caried awaye to be slayne: not knowing that they had deuised matter a counsell against me, saying: We will destroye his meate with wodde, and dryue him out of the lande of the lyuynge, that his name shall neuer be thought vpon.

6 Therfore I will beseche the nowe, O Lorde of hostes, thou ryghteous iudge, thou that tryest the reynes and the hertes: let me se the auenged of them, for vnto the haue I committed my cause. Gen. xlix. c.

7 For Lorde therfore thus of the citezyns of Anathoth, that sought to slee me, saying: Preache not vnto vs in the name of the Lorde, or elles thou shalt dye of our handes. Thus (I say) shake the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I will visyte you. Yonge younge men shall perysshe with the swerde, your sonnes and your daughters shall vtterly dye of honger, so that none shall remayne. For vpon the citezyns of Anathoth will I bringe a plage, the yere of their visitacion. Deuteron. xi. B. Jeremy. xi. c.

¶ The Prophete marueyleth at the prosperitye of the wicked, although he confesse God to be ryghteous. The Iewes are forsaken of the Lorde. He speaketh against Curates and preachers that seduce the people. The Lorde threateneth destruccyon vnto the nacyons that bordered Jewrye, which troubled and vexed it.

CAPI. XII.

1 O Lorde, thou arte more ryghteous, then that I should dispute with the: Neuertheles, lette me talke with the in thinges reasonable. How happeneth it that the way of the vngodly is so prosperous? and that it goeth so wel with them which (without any shame) offend and lyue in wickednes? Thou plantest them, they take roote, they Job. xxi. c. Ecclesiast. ix. b.

growe, and bringe forthe frute. They boaste moche of the, yet doest thou not punish them. But thou Lord (to whom I am wel knowe) thou that hast sene, and proued my hert, take them awaye, lyke as a flocke is caried to the slaughter house, and appoynt them for ye daye of slaughter.

How long shall the lande mourne, and all the herbes of the felde perish, for the wickednesse of them that dwell therin? The catell and the byrdes are gone, yet they saye: truste, God will not destroye us vtterly.

Seinge thou arte weery in runnynge with the foote men, how wylte thou then run with horses? In a peaceable sure lande thou maist be safe, but how wylt thou do in the furious pryde of Iordane? for thy brethren and thy kynred haue all togyther betrayed the, and cryed oute vpon the in thyne absence. Beleue them not, thoughe they speake fayre wordes to the. He for me (saye I) I haue forsaken myne owne dwellynge place, and lefte myne heritage. My lyfe also that I loued so well, haue I geuen in to the handes of myne enemyes. Myne heritage is become vnto me, as a lyon in the wod. It cried out vpon me, ther for haue I forsaken it. Myne heritage is vnto me, as a speckled byrde, a byrde of diuers colours is vpon it. Go hence and gather all ye beestes of the felde togyther, that they maye eate it vp.

Diuers herdemen haue broken downe my vineyarde, and troden vpon my portion. Of my pleasaunt portion, they haue made a wylderneffe. They haue layde it waste: and nowe that it is waste, it lyeth vnto me. Yea, the hole lande lyeth waste, and no man regardeth it.

The destroyers come ouer the heith euery waye, for the swerde of the Lorde shall consume from the one ende of the land to the other, and no fleshe shall haue rest. They shall sow wheate, and reape thornes. They shal take heritage in possession, but it shall be them no good. And ye shal be confounded of your owne wynnynges, bicause of the greate wrathe of the Lorde.

Thus saythe the Lorde vpon all myne euyll neyghboures, that laye handes on myne heritage, whiche I haue geuen my people of Israel: Beholde, I wyll pluche them (namely Israell) oute of theyr lande, and put out the house of Iuda from them. And when I haue rooted them oute, I wyll be at one with them agayne, and wyll haue mercye vpon them: and bringe them agayne (euery man to his owne heritage, and in to his lande.

And yf they (namely that trouble my people) wyll learne the wayes of them to swere by my name: The Lord liueth (lyke as they learned my people to swere by Baal) then shall they be reckened among my people. But yf they wyll not obeye, then wyll I rote out thesame folke, and destroye them (saythe the Lorde.

¶ The destruccyon of the Iewes is prefigured, and theyr sparpynge abrode. Why Israel was accounted to be the people of God, and why they were forsaken.

CAPL. XIII.

MOreouer, thus said the Lord vnto me: go thy way and get the a lynen girdle, and gyrde it aboute thy loynes, and let it not be wet. Then I got me a girdle, according to the commaundement of the Lorde, and put it aboute my loynes. After this the Lorde spake vnto me agayne: Take ye girdle that thou hast prepared, aboute the, and get the vp, and goo vnto Euphrates, and hyde it in a hole of the roche. So wente I, and hyd it, as the Lorde commaunded me. And it happened longe after this, that the Lorde spake vnto me: Aryse, and get the to Euphrates, and fet the girdle thence, whiche I commaunded the to hyde there. Then wente I to Euphrates, and digged vp, and toke ye girdle from the place where I had hyd it: & beholde the girdle was corrupte, so that it was profytable for nothynge.

Then sayd the Lorde vnto me: thus saythe the Lorde: euen so wyll I corrupt the pryde of Iuda, and the haulte myndе of Ierusalem. This people is a wycked people, they will not heare my worde, they folowe the wicked ymaginations of theyr owne hert, and hange vpon straunge goddes, them haue they serued and worshipped: and therfore they shall be as this girdle that serueth for nothynge.

For as fraytly as a girdle lyeth vpon a mans loynes, so fraytly dyd I bynde the hole house of Israell, and the hole house of Iuda vnto me, saith the Lord: that they might be my people: that they might haue a glorious name: that they myghte be in honoure: but they would not obeye me. Therfore laye this ryddle before them, and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: Euery pot shall be filled with wyne. And they shall saye: thynkest thou we knowe not that euerye pot shall be fylled with wyne? Then shalte thou saye vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, I shall fyll all the inhabitauntes of this lande with dronkennesse, the kynges that sytt vpon Dauids stole, the preestes and prophetes, yea all that dwell at Ierusalem. And I wyl smyte them one against an other, yea the fathers against the sonnes, sayth the Lorde.

I wyll not pardon them, I wyll not spare them: ne haue pitye vpon them: but destroye them. Be obedient, gyue eare, take no disdayne at it, for it is the Lorde him self that speaketh: Honoure the Lorde youre God herein, or he take his lyght from you, and or euer youre feete stomble in darcknesse at the hyll: lest when ye loke for the lyght, he couerne it in to the shadowe and darcknesse of deathe. But yf ye wyll not heare me, that gyue you secrete warnynge, I wyll mourne from my hole herte, for youre stubbornesse.

Pitenly

Pyteously wept I wept, and the teares dyd gushe oute of myne eyes. For the Lordes flocke shall be carped awaye prysoners.

Tell the kynge, and the rulers: Humble youre selues, sette you downe lowe: for the crowne of youre glorye shall fall from youre heed. The cityes towarde the south shall be shut vp, & no mã shal ope the. All Juda shal be carped awaye prysoners, so that none shall remayne.

Lyft vp youre eyes and beholde them that come from the North: Lyke a fat flocke shal they fall vpon the. To whome wylte thou make thy mone, when they come vpon the? for thou hast taughte them thy felte, & made them maysters ouer the. Shall not sorowe come vpon the, as on a woman trauelynge with chylde? And yet thou woldest saye them in thyne herte. Wherfore come these thynges vpon me? Euen for the multitude of thy blasphemies, dyd thy hynder partes and thy feete be vncouered.

For like as the man of Inde may chaunge his skynne, and the cat of the mountayne his spottes: so maye ye that be exercised in euyl, doo good. Therfore wyll I skatter you, lyke as the stubble that is taken awaye with the south wynde. This shall be youre portion, and the portion of youre measure, wherwith ye shall be rewarded of me, sayth the Lorde: bycause ye haue forgotten me, and put youre trust in vnprofytfull thynges. Therfore shall I rourne thy clothes ouer thy heed, and discoure thy thyghes, that thy pruytyes maye be sene, thy aduoutry, thy neyghe maiyes, thy horrible whorysh countenaunce. For vpon the feldes and hylles I haue sene thy abhominacions. Woo be vnto the (O Jerusalem) when wylte thou euer be clensed any more?

¶ Of the derth that shulde come in Jewrye. The prayer of the people, wherynge mercye of the Lorde. The vnprofytfull people are not hearde. Of prayer, fastynge, and of false Prophetes that deceyue the people.

CAPI. XIIII.

The worde of the Lorde dyd vnto Jeremye, concernynge the derth of the frutes. Juda shall mourne: men shall not goo moche more thorowe his gates: the lande shall be no more had in regarde, & the crye of Jerusalem shall breake out. The lordes shall sende theyr seruaunttes to fetche water, and when they come to the welles, they shall fynde no water, but shall caryc theyr vessels home empty. They shall be ashamed and confounded, and shall couer theyr heedes. For the ground shal be dried vp, bycause there commeth no rayne vpon it. The plowmen also shall be ashamed, and shall couer them heedes. The hynde shal forsake the yong fawne that he bryngeth forthe in the felde, bycause there shall be no grasse. The wylde asses shal stande in the mosse, and drawe in theyr wynde lyke the dragons, theyr eyes shall fayle for want of grasse.

Doubtlesse our owne wickednesse rewarde vs: But Lorde do thou accordyng to thy name, though our transgressions and synnes be many. For thou art the comfort and helpe of Israel in the tyme of trouble. Why wylte thou be as a straunger in the land, and as one that goeth ouer the felde, and commeth in onely to remayne for a nyght? Why, wilt thou make thy selfe a towarde, and as it were a graunte that yet may not helpe? For thou art ours (o Lorde) and we bcare thy name, therfore forsake vs not.

Then spake the Lorde, concernyng this people, that haue pleasure to go so nymbly with their fete, and leaue not of, and therfore displeasde the Lord: in so moch that he wil now bryng agayne to remembraunce all their mysdeedes, and punish all their synnes. Yea, euen thus sayd the Lorde vnto me: Thou shalte not pray to do this people good. For though they fast, I wyll not heare their prayers. And though they offer burnt offeringes and sacrifice, yet will not I accepte them. For I will destroye them with the swerde, hunger and pestilence. Then answered I: O Lorde God, the Prophetes saye vnto them: Loo, ye shall se no swerde, and no hunger shal come vpo you, but the Lorde shal gyue you continuall welth in this place.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: The Prophetes preache lyes vnto them in my name. I haue not spoken with them, neither gaue I them any charge, neither dyd I send them: yet they preache vnto you false visions, charmynge, vanitie, and deceyptfulnesse of theyr owne herte: Therfore thus sayth the Lorde as for them Prophetes that preache in my name, whom I neuer dyd sende, haue not sent) and that saye: Tushe there shal neither dartyle ne hunger be in this land: With swerde and with hunger shall these Prophetes perysh, and the people to whom they haue preached, shal be cast out of Jerusalem, dye of hunger, and be slayne with the swerde (and there shall be no man to burye them) both they and theyr wyues, theyr sonnes and theyr doughters. For thus wyll I poure their wickednesse vpon them. Thou shalt thou saye also vnto them: Myne eyes shall weepe without ceasynge, daye and nyght. For my people shall be destroyed with great harme, and shal perysshe with a great plage, for if I goo in to the felde: lo, it lyeth all full of slayne men: If I come in to the citye: lo, they be all famished of hongre.

Yea, them Prophetes also and preistes shall be led in to an vnknowen lande.

Hast thou then vtterly forsaken Juda? (sayd I) Doth thy soule abhorre Sion? Or hast thou so plagued vs, that we can be healed no more? We looked for peace, and there commeth no good, for the tyme of helthe: and lo, there is nothynge but trouble. We knowlege (O Lorde) all our mysdedes, and the synnes of our fathers, that we haue offended the. Be not displeased (O Lorde) for thy names sake, forget not thy louynge kyndnesse: Remembre the trouth of thyne honour, breake not the couenaunt that thou hast made with vs. Are there anye amonge the Goddes of the Paynims, that sende rayne, or gyue the shewers of heauen? Doste not thou it, O Lorde oure God, in whom we truste? Yea Lorde, thou wilt all these thynges.

¶ The Lorde wyll not heare Moses or Aaron, yf they praye for the people: but wyll wrappe them in many myseryes. The cause of suche greate myseryes.

CAPI. XV.

Jerem. vnder. Ezech. xxxiii.

THen spake the Lorde vnto me, and saide: Though Moses and Samuel stode before me, yet haue I no herte to this people. Dryue them awaye, that they maye goo out of my syghte. And yf they saye vnto the: Whyther shall we go, then tell them: The Lorde speaketh thus answere: Some vnto deathe, some to the swerde, some to honger, some into captiuite. For I wyll dyuyde foure plages vpon the, sayeth the Lorde. The swerde shall strangle them, the doggis shall deuoure them, the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the earthe shall eate them vp, and destroye them. I wyll skatter them abrode amo[n]ge all kyngdomes and landes to be plaged, bycause of Manasses the sonne of Ezechias kynge of Juda, for the thynges that he dyd in Jerusalem.

Who shall then haue pitie vpon the, O Jerusalem? Who shall be sorye for the? Or, who shall make intercession to pray for the: seing thou goest fro me, and turnest backewarde, sayethe the Lorde? Therfore I wyll stretche out myne handes agaynst the, to destroye the, and I wil not be entreated. I will skatter the abrode with the fanne on euerye syde of the lande, I wyl waste my people and destroye them, for they haue had no lust to turne from their owne wayes. I wyll make their widowes mo in nombre then the sandes of the see.

Vpon the mothers of they[r] children, I shall bringe a destroyer in the noone daye. Sodenly and vnwares shal I sende a feare vpon their cytes. So that hath borne fiue children shall haue none, her hert shal be ful of sorowe.

Amos. viii. c.

The sunne shall fayle her in the clere daye, when she shall be confounded and sayncte for very heuynesse. As for those that remayne, I wil deliuer them vnto the swerde of their enemyes, sayth the Lorde. O mother, alas that euer thou bidst beare me, an enemy & hated of the hole lande: Thoughe I neuer lente me creepyd vpon vsury, yet all men speake euill vpon me.

And the Lorde answered me: Lete not I the then vnto good? Come not I to the when thou art in trouble, and helpe the whe thyne enemyes oppresse the? Doth one yron hurt an other, or one metall that commeth fro[m]e the North the another? As for youre riches and treasure, I wyll gyue them oute in to a pray, not for anye money, but bycause of all youre synnes that ye haue wone in all youre coastes. And I wyll bringe you with your enemyes in to a lande that ye knowe not: for the fyre that is kindled in my indignation, shal burne you vp.

O Lorde (sayde I then) thou knowest all thynges, therfore remembre me, and visit me, deliuer me fro my persecuters: Reteyne not my cause in thy longe wrathe, yet thou knowest that for thy sake I suffre rebuke. When I had founde thy wordes, I ate them vp gredily: they haue made my herte ioyfull & glad. For I cal vpon thy name, o Lorde God of hostes. I dwell not amonge the scorners, neither is my delite therin: but I dwell onely in the feare of thy hand, for thou hast filled me with bytternes. Shal my bruises endure for euer? Are my plages then so great, that they maye neuer be healed? Wilt thou be as a water yͤ faileth, and can not contenue?

Upon these wordes, thus sayde the Lorde vnto me: If thou wylt turne agayne, I shall set the in my seruyce: and yf thou wylte take oute the chynge that is precious fro[m]e the vile, thou shalte be euen as myne owne mouthe. They shall conuerte vnto the, but turne not thou vnto them: & so shall I make the a stronge wall of stele agaynst this people. They shall fyght agaynste the, but they shall not preuayle. For I my selfe wyl be with the to helpe the, and deliuere the sayth the Lorde. And I wyll rydde the oute of the handes of the wycked, and deliuere the out of the handes of tyraunnes.

¶ The prophecyeth the misery of the Jewes. He theweth that the worshyppinges of Idoles and theirstempes of Gode lawe, is the cause of their myserie. He prophecyeth the captiuitie of Babilon, and their deliuerounce from thence agayne. The callinge of the Gentiles.

CAPI. XVI.

MOreouer thus sayd the Lorde vnto me: Thou shalte take the no wyfe, ne begette chyldren in this place: For of the chyldren that are borne in this place, & of they[r] mothers that haue borne them, and of they[r] fathers that haue begotten them in this lande, thus sayethe the Lorde: They shall dye an horrible deathe, no man shall mourne for them, ne burye them: but they shall lye as donge vpon the earthe. They shall perysshe thorowe the swerde and honger, and they[r] bodyes shall be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beestes of the earthe. Agayne, thus sayth the Lorde: Se not vnto them, that come together for to mourne and wepe: for I haue taken my peace fro[m]e this people (sayth the Lorde) yea my fauour and my mercy. And in this lande shal they dye, olde and yonge, and shall not be buryed: no man shall bewayle, no man shall cipp & shout him selfe for them.

Ezech. xxiiii. Jere. xxii.

Ther[e]

There shall not one wyshte an other, to mourne with them for their dead, or to comforte them. One shall not offre an other the cuppe of consolacion, to forget theyr heuines for father and mother. Thou shalt not go in to their feaste house, to syt downe, moch lesse to eate or drynke with them. For thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I shall take awaye oute of this place, the voyce of myrthe and gladnesse, the voyce of the bryde grome and of the bryde: yea and that in youre dayes, that ye may se it.

Now when thou shewest this people all these wordes, and they say vnto the: Wherfore hath the Lorde decreed all this greate plage for vs? Or what is the offence and syn that we have done agaynste the Lorde oure God? Then make thou them this answere: Because youre fathers have forsaken me (sayeth the Lorde) & have cleued vnto straunge goddes, whom they have honoured and worshypped but me have they forsaken, and have not kepte my lawe. And ye with youre shamefull blasphemyes, have exceded the wyckednesse of youre fathers. For euerye one of you followeth the frowarde and euyll ymagination of his hert, and is not obedient vnto me.

Therfore wyll I caste you oute of this lande, into a lande that ye and youre fathers knowe not: and there shal ye serue straunge goddes daye and nyght, there wyll I shewe you no fauoure. Beholde therfore (sayeth the Lorde) the dayes are come, that it shall no more be sayde: The Lorde lyueth, whiche brought the children of Israell oute of the lande of Egypte: but, it shall be sayde, the Lorde lyueth, that brought the children of Israel from the North, and from all landes where I had scatered them. For I will bring them agayne in to the lande, that I gaue vnto their fathers.

Beholde (sayethe the Lorde) I will sende oute many fyshers to take them, and after that wyll I sende out many hunters to hunte them oute, from al mountaynes and hylles and out of the caues of stones. For myne eyes beholde all their wayes, and they can not be hyd fro my face, neither can their wicked mys be kepte close oute of my syghte. But fyrste wyll I sufficiently reward them shamefull blasphemyes & synnes, wherwith they have defyled my lande: namely with their fylthy Idols and abhominacions, wherwith they have fylled myne heritage. O Lorde, my strength, my power, and refuge in tyme of trouble. The Gentyles shall come vnto the, from the endes of the worlde, and saye: Verely our fathers have cleued vnto lyes, their Idols are but vayne and vnprofitable. How can a man make vnto his goddes, whiche are not able to be goddes. And therfore I wyll once teache them, sayeth the Lorde. I wyll shewe them my hande and my power, that they maye knowe that my name is the Lorde.

¶ The frowardnesse of the Iewes. Cursed be they that put their confydence in man, and their delyte that trust to God. Mannes hert is wycked. God is the searcher of the hert. The liuyng waters are forsaken. The halowynge of the Sabboth is commanded.

CAPI. XVII.

YOure synne (O ye of the stocke of Iuda) is written in the table of youre hertes, and grauen in vpon the edges of youre altres with a penne of yron and with an Adamant clawe: that youre children also may thinke vpon youre altres, wodes, thicke trees, hygh hylles, mount aynes and feldes. wherfore I wyll make all youre substaunce and treasure be spoyled, for the greate synne that ye haue done vpon youre hygh places throwout all the coostes of youre lande. Ye shall be caste out also from the heritage, that I gaue you. And I wyll subdue you vnder the hand of youre ennemyes, in a lande that ye knowe not. For ye haue myngled fyre to my indignacion, whiche shall burne euermore. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Cursed be the man that putteth his truste in man and that taketh flesh for his armes and he, whose herte departeth from the Lorde. He shalbe lyke the heeth, that groweth in the wyldernesse. So for the good thing that is for to come he shal not se it: but dwell in a dry place of the wyldernes, in a salt and vnoccupied lad. ✠ O blessed is the man, that putteth his truste in the Lorde, and whose hope is the Lorde him selfe. ✠ For he shall be as a tree, that is planted by the water syde: whiche spreadeth oute the rote vnto moysture, whome the heate can not harme, when it commeth, but his leaues are grene. And though there growe but lyte fruite because of drouthe, yet is he not careful but he neuer leaueth of to bring forthe fruite. Amonge all thinges lyuynge, man hath the most deceytfull and vnrecouerable herte.

Who shall then knowe it? Euen I the Lorde searche out the grounde of the hert, and trye the reynes, and rewarde euery man accordynge to his wayes, and accordynge to the fruite of his counsile.

The deceytfull maketh a nest, but hatcheth fewe no young: he commeth by ryches but not ryghtfully. In the myddest of his life muste he leaue them behynde him, and at the last be found a very foole. But thou (O Lorde) whose throne is moste glorious, excellent and of moste antyquite, whiche dwellest in the place of oure holy spirit: Thou arte the comforte of Israell. All they that forsake the, shall be confounded: all they that departe from the, shall be written in earthe, for they have forsaken the Lorde the very conducte of the waters of lyfe.

Heale me, O Lorde, and I shall be holpe: saue thou me, and I shall be saued, for thou arte my prayse. Beholde, these men saye vnto me: Where is the worde of the Lorde? Let it come. Where as I neuertheles lefte not

lebynge the flocke in thy wayes, haue compelled none by violence. For I neuer desyred any mans death, this knowest thou well. My wordes also were right before the. Be not nowe terrible vnto me, O Lorde, for thou art he in whom I hope, when I am in perylL Let my persecuters be confounded, but not me: let them be afrayde, and not me. Thou shalte bringe vpon them the tyme of their plage, and shalte destroy them right sore.

Agayne, thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me: Go and stande vnder the gate, where chyldrow the people and the kynges of Juda go out and in, yea vnder all the gates of Jerusalem, and say vnto them: Heare the worde of the Lorde, ye kynges of Juda, and all thou people of Juda, and all ye cytesens of Jerusalem, that go thorowe this gate: Thus the Lorde commaundeth: Take hede for youre lyues, that ye carye no burthen vpon you in the Sabboth, to bringe it thorow the gates of Jerusalem: ye shall beare no burthen also out of youre houses in the Sabboth. Ye shall do no laboure therin, but halowe the Sabboth, as I commaunded youre fathers. How be it they obeyed me not, neither herkened they vnto me: but were obstinate and stubburne, and neither obeyed me, nor receyued my correction. Notwithstandyng, yf ye will heare me (sayth the Lorde) and beare no burthen in to the cyte thorowe this gate vpon the Sabboth: yf ye will halowe the Sabboth, so that ye do no worke therin: then shall there go thorow ȳ gates of this cyty, kynges and princes, that shall syt vpon the seate of Dauid. They shalbe caryed vpō charettes and ryde vpon horses, bothe they and their princes. Yea whole Juda and all the cytesens of Jerusalem shal go there thorowe, and this cyte shall euer be the more and more inhabyted. There shall come men also from the cyties of Juda, from aboute Jerusalem, and from the land of Benjamin, from the playne fyldes, from the mountaynes and from the wyldernesse: whyche shall bringe burnt offrynges, sacrifices, oblacions, and incense, and other thankesgyuynge in the house of the Lorde. But yf ye will not be obedient vnto me, to halowe the Sabboth, so that ye will beare youre burthens thorowe the gates of Jerusalem vpon the Sabboth: Then shall I set fyre vpon the gates of Jerusalem, and it shall burne vp the the houses of Jerusalē, and no man shalbe able to quenche it.

¶ God shewth by the example of a potter, that it is in his power to destroye the helpers of his worde, and to helpe them again when they amend. The conspiracye of the Jewes against Jeremye. His prayer against the aduersaryes.

CAPL XVIII.

THis is an other communycacion, that God had with Jeremy, sayenge: Aryse, and go downe in to the potters house, and there shall I tell the more of my mynde. Come when I came to the Potters house I sounde him makynge his worke vpon a wheele. The vessell that the potter made of claye, brake amonge his handes: So he began a newe, and made an other vessell, accordynge to his mynde. Then sayde the Lord thus vnto me: Maye not I do with you, as this Potter doth, O ye house of Israel, sayth the Lorde? Beholde, ye house of Israel: ye are in my hand, euen as the claye in the Potters handes.

When I take in hande to roote out, to destroye, or to waste awaye anye people or kingdome: yf that people (agaynste whome I haue thus bended) conuerte from their wickednesse: Immediatly, I repent of the plage that I bended to bryng vpon them. Agayne when I take in hande, to buylde, or to plante a people or a kyngdome: yf the same people do euell before me, and heare not my voyce: Immediatly, I repent of the good, that I bode vpō to do for them.

Speake nowe therfore vnto hole Juda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem: Thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, I am deuysynge a plage for you, and am takynge a thynge in hande agaynst you.

Therfore let euery man turne from his euyll waye, take vpon you the thynge that is good, and do ryght. But they say: There is no hope of this, we will folowe oure owne ymaginacions, and do euery man accordyng to the wylfulnesse of his owne mynde.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: Aske amonge the Heathen, yf any man herde suche horryble thynges, as the daughter of Syon hath done. Shal not the snow (that melteth vpon the stony rockes of Lybanus) moysten the fieldes? Or may the sprynges of waters be so drawen away, that they runne no more gyue moysture, or make frutefull? But my people hath forgotten me, that they haue made sacrifice vnto vayne goddes. And whyle they folowed their owne wayes, they are come out of the hygge highe, and gone in to a foule waye not vsed to be troden. Where thorowe they haue brought their lande into an euerlastynge wylderneſſe and scorne: So that whosoeuer seeyng it, shall be abashed, and wagge their heades. With an Eest wynde will I scatter them, before their enemyes. And when their destruction cometh I will turne my backe vpon them, but not my face. Then sayde they: come, let vs ymagyn some thynge agaynste this Jeremye. Yea this apo euen the prestes, to whome the lawe was committed: the Senatours, that were the wyse: and the Prophetes whiche warned not the waye of God. Come (sayde they) lette vs cut owte his tunge, and let vs not regarde his wordes. Consyder me, O Lorde, & heare the voyce of myne enemyes. Do they not recompence euyll for good, when they bygge a pyt for my soule? Remembre, howe that I stode before the, to speake for them, and to turne awaye thy wrath from them.

Therfore let their children dye of hunger, and let them be oppressed with the swearde. Let their wyues be robbed of their chyldren, and and become wydowes: let theyr husbandes be slayne, let theyr yonge men be kylled with the swearde in the felde. Let theyr noyse be herde out of their houses, when ꝑ murtherer commeth sodenly vpon them: For they have digged a pit to take me, and layed snares for my fete. Yet Lorde, thou knowest all their councell, that they have devysed to slaye me. And therfore forgyue them not their wyckednes, and let not theyr synne be put out of thy syght: but let them be iudged before the at the tyme of thy indignacion.

¶ He prophecyeth the destruccyon of Ierusalem. for contempt and despysynge of the worde of God.

CAPI. XIX.

MOreouer, thus sayde the Lorde vnto Ieremye: Go thy waye, and bye the an erthen pitcher, and bringe forth the Senatours, and cheife prestes into the valley of the chyldren of Hinnom, which lyeth before the port that is made of bryche, and shewe them there the wordes, that I shall tell the, and say thus vnto them: Heare the worde of the Lorde, ye kynges of Iuda, and ye cytezens of Ierusalem: Thus sayth the Lord of hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will bringe suche a plage vpon this place, that the eares of all that heareth, shall glowe. And that because they have forsaken me, and vnhalowed this place, and have offred in it vnto straunge goddes: whome neither they, their fathers, ne the kynges of Iuda have knowen. They have fylled this place also with the bloude of innocentes, for they have set vp an autter vnto Baal, to burne their children for a burnt offeryng vnto Baal, whiche I neither commaunded, ne charged them, neyther thought vpon therupon.

Beholde therfore, the time commeth (sayth the Lorde) that this place shall no more be called Tophet, ne the valley of the chyldren of Hinnom, but the valley of slaughter. For in this place will I slaye the Senatours of Iuda and Ierusalem, and kyll them by the swearde in the syght of theyr ennemyes, and of them that seke their lyues. And their dead carcases will I geue to be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the felde. And I will make this cytye to be solace, and despyred: that who so goeth therby, shall be abashed and hysse vpon her, because of all her plages.

And I will fede them also with the fleshe of their sonnes and their doughters. Yea euery one shall eate vp an other in the besiegynge & straytnesse, wherewith their ennemyes (that seke their lyues) shall kepe them in. And the pytcher shalt thou breake in the syght of the men, that shall be with the, and saye vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: Euen so will I destroye this people and cytye: as a Potter breketh a vessel, that can not be made hole agayne.

In Tophet shall they be buried, for (sayth he) ye shall have none other place. This will I do vnto this place also sayth the Lorde, and to them that dwell therin: Yea I will do to this cytye, as vnto Tophet. For the houses of Ierusalem and the houses of the kynges of Iuda are defiled, like as Tophet, because of all the houses, in whose pasters they bad sacrifice vnto all the hoste of heaven, and poured out dryncke offeryngs vnto straunge goddes. And so Ieremy came from Tophet where the Lorde had sent him to prophecye & stode in the court of the house of the Lorde and spake to all the people: Thus sayth the Lord of hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will bringe vpon this cytye and vpon euery towne about it, al the plages that I have devysed against them: for they have bene obstynate, and wolde not obeye my wordes.

¶ Ieremye is smytten and cast in to prison, for prophesynge of the worde of God. He prophecyeth the captyuite of Babylon. The complaynyng that he is a mockynge stocke, for the worde of God. He is compelled by scripture to preache the worde, wyll he nyll he not.

CAPI. XX.

WHen Phashur the preste, the sonne of Emer, chefe in the house of the Lorde, herde Ieremye preache so frokardly: he smote Ieremye, and put him in the stockes, that are by the vpper gate of Benjamin, in the house of the Lorde. The next daye tolde wynge Phashur brought Ieremye out of the stockes agayne. Then sayde Ieremye vnto him: The Lord hath cal the no more Phashur (that is excellent and interalynge) but Magor (that is frarefull and afrayed) euery where. For thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I will make the afrayed, the thy selfe, and all that fauoure the: whych shall perysshe with the swearde of their ennemyes, euen before thy face.

And I will geue hole Iuda vnder the power of the kynge of Babylon, whiche shall cary some vnto Babylon prisoners, and slaye some with the swearde. Moreouer, all the substaunce of this lande, all their precyous and gorgeous workes, all coslynes, and all the treasure of the kynges of Iuda: will I geue into the handes of theyr ennemyes whiche shall spoyle them, and carye theym vnto Babylon. But as for the (O Phashur) thou shalte be caryed vnto Babylon with al thine houshold, and to Babylon shalte thou come where thou shalte dye, and be buryed: thou and al thy fauoureres, to whom thou hast prophesyed lyes. O Lorde, thou makest me weake, but thou refreshest me, and makest me strong agayne. All the daye longe am I mysused and laughed to scorne of euery man: because I have now preached long agaynste malycious tyranny, and shewed them of wickednes. For the whiche cause they call the worde of the Lorde in my teeth, and take me cure to the

Wherfore, I thought from hence forthe not to speake of him, ne to preache any more in his name. But the worde of the Lord was a very burninge fyre in my herte and in my bones, whiche when I wolde have stopped I myght not. For why, I herde so many lyes and blaspheimyes, yea even of mine owne companyons, and of suche as were conversaunt with me: whiche were aboute, to make me afrayed, sayinge: vpon him, let vs go vpon him, to trayne hym, and make him bolde his tonge: that we may overcom him and be avenged of him.

But the Lorde stode by me, lyke a myghtye gyaunt: therfore my persecuters fell, and could do nothynge. They shalbe sore confounded, for they have not prospered, they shal have an everlastyng shame. And now, O Lorde of hoostes, thou tryedest iustly, (and the knowest the reynes and the very hertes) let me se them punysshed, for vnto the I commytte my cause.

Jere. xvii. b

Jeremy. xii. D

Synge vnto the Lorde and prayse hym, for he hath delyvered the soule of the oppressed, from the handes of the wycked. Cursed be the daye, wherin I was borne: vnhappye be the daye wherin my mother brought me forth. Cursed be the man, that brought my father ioye tydynges, to make him glad, sayinge: thou hast gotten a sonne. Let it happen vnto that man, as to the cities which the Lord turned vpsyde downe (when he had greate synne the wicked rumoure of them) because he slewe me not, as sone as I came oute of my mothers wombe, and because my mother was not my graue her selfe, that the byrthe might not have come out, but remayned styl in her. Wherfore came I forth of my mothers wombe? To have experience of laboure and sorowe? and to lede my lyfe with shame?

Job. iii. a

¶ The prophecyeth that Zedekiah shall be taken, and the cytye burned.

CAPI. XXI.

THese are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy what tyme as king Zedekiah sent vnto him Phashur the sonne of Melchiah, and Sophonias the sonne of Maasiah preaste, sayinge: Aske counsell at the Lorde (we praye the) of oure behalfe, for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon besiegeth vs, if the Lorde (peraduenture) will deale with vs, accordyng to his merueilous power, and take hym from vs.

Then spake Jeremy. Synce Zedekiah this answere. Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel: beholde, I will turne backe the weapons, that ye have in youre handes, wherwith ye fyghte agaynste the kynge of Babylon and the Caldees, which besiege you rounde about the walles, and I will bringe the together into the myddest of this cytye, and I my selfe will fyght agaynst you, with an out stretched hande, and with a myghtye arme, in great displeasure and terryble wrathe, and will smyte them, that dwel in this citie: yea bothe men and catell shall dye of the pestilence.

And after this (sayeth the Lorde) I shall delyver Zedekiah the kyng of Juda and his seruaunts, his people (and suche as are escaped in the cytye, from the pestylence, sweard, and honger) into the power of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon: yea into the handes of their enemyes, in to the handes of them that folowe vpon their lyues, whiche shall smyte them with the swearde: they shal not pyty them, they shall not spare them, they shal have no mercye vpon them.

And vnto this people thou shalte saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde: ✻ beholde, I laye before you the waye of lyfe and death. Whoso abydeth in this cytye, shall perysshe: either with the swearde, with honger, or with pestylence. But who so goeth out to holde on the Caldees parte, that besege it, he shall save his lyfe, and shall wynne his soule for a praye. For I have set my face agaynste this cytye (sayeth the Lorde) to plage it, and to do it no good. It shalbe geuen in to the handes of the kynge of Babylon, and he shall burne it with fyre.

Jere. xxi. b

Crabro. Jer. xxiii. Jere. xxiii. a

And vnto the house of the kynge of Juda, saye thus: Heare the worde of the Lorde (O thou house of Dauid) for thus sayeth ✻ Lorde: minister ryghteousnesse, and take soone, delyuer the oppressed from the power of the violent: lest my terryble wrathe breake oute lyke a fyre, and burne so, that no man maye quenche it, because of the wyckednesse of youre ymaginations. Beholde, (sayeth the Lorde) I will come vpon you, that dwell in the valleyes, rockes and feldes, and say: Tushe! who will make vs afrayed? or who wyll come in to oure houses? For I wyl visite you (sayeth the Lorde) because of the wyckednesse of youre inuentions, and wyll kyndle suche a fyre in youre wod, as shall consume all, that is about you.

¶ The exhorteth the kynge of Juda to iudgement and ryghteousnesse, why Jerusalem is brought to captyuite. The death of Sellum the sonne of Josia is prophecyed.

CAPI. XXII.

THus sayde the Lorde also: Go downe into the house of the kynge of Juda, & speake there these wordes, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde, thou kynge of Juda that sittest in the kyngly seate of Dauid: thou and thy seruaunts and thy people that go in and oute at this gate. Thus the Lorde commaundeth: kepe equite and ryghteousnes, delyuer the oppressed from the power of the violent: do not greue ne oppresse the straunger, the fatherlesse ne the widowe and shede no innocent bloude in this place.

Jerem.

And yf ye kepe these thynges faythfully then shall there come in at the dore of this house kynges to syt vpon Dauids seate: they shall be caryed in charettes and ryde vpon horses, hozses, both they and their seruaunte, and their people. But yf ye wyll not be obedient vnto these commaundmentes, I swere by mine owne selfe (sayth the Lorde) this house shall be waste. For thus hathe the Lorde spoken vpon the kynges house of Juda: Thou arte the heade, as Galaad is in Lybanus: What wylte thou saye of it, yf I make the not so waste (and thy cities also) that no man shall dwell therin? I wyll prepare a destroyer with his weapons for the, to hewe downe thy specyall Cedre trees, and to caste them in the fyre.

And all the people that go by this cytye, shall speake one to another: wherfore hath the Lorde done thus vnto this noble cytye? Then shall it be answered: Because they haue broken the couenaute of the Lord their God, and haue worshypped & serued straunge goddes. Mourne not ouer the dead, and be not wo for them, but be sory for him that departeth awaye: for he commeth not agayne and seeth his native countrey no more. For thus sayth the Lorde, as touchynge Sellum the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, whiche raygned after his father, and is caryed oute of this place: He shall neuer come hyther agayne, for he shal dye in the place, whereunto he is led captyue, & shal se this lande no more. Wo vnto him, that buyldeth his house with vnrighteousnes, and his parlers with the good that he hath gotten by violence: which neuer recompenseth his neyghbours labour ne payeth him his hyre. He thynketh in him selfe: I wyll buylde me a wyde house and gorgyous parlers: He causeth wyndowes to be hewen therin, and the seelynges & gestes maketh he of Cedre, and paynteth the with Zenober. Thynkest thou to raigne nowe that prouokest me to wrath with the Cedre trees?

Dyd not thy father eate and drynke, and prospere well, as longe as he delt with equite and righteoulnes? Yea when he helped the oppressed & poore to their right then prospered he well.

From whence came this, but onely because he had me before his eyes, sayth the Lorde. Neuertheles, as for thyne eyes and thyne hert, they loke vpon couetousnesse, to shed innocent bloude, to do wronge and violence. And therfore thus sayth the Lorde against Jehoakim, the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda: They shall not mourne for him (as they vse to wayle brother, alas sister: neither shal they saye vnto him: Alas syr, alas for that noble prince. But as an asse shall he be buryed, corrupt and be caste without the gates of Jerusalem.

Clymme vp the hyl of Lybanus (O thou doughter Sion) lyfte vp thy voyce vpon Basan, cry from all partes: for all thy louers are ouerpoyed. I gaue the warnynge, whyle thou wast yet in prosperyte. But thou sayedst: I wyll not heare. And this maner haste thou vsed from thy youth, that thou wouldest neuer heare my voyce. All thy brethren shall be hyred with the wynde, and thy dotynges shall be caryed awaye into captyuyte: Then shalte thou be brought to shame and confusyon, because of all thy wyckednesse: thou that dwellest vpon Lybanus, and makest thy nest in the Cedre trees. O how greate shall thy mournynge be, when thy sorowes come vpon the, as a woman trauelyng with chylde!

As truelye as I lyue (sayth the Lorde) Though Conaniah the sonne of Jehoakim kynge of Juda were the signet of my ryghte hande, yet wyll I plucke him of: And I wyll gyue the into the power of them that seke to haue the, and into the power of them that thou feareste: in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, and in to the power of the Caldees. Moreouer, I wyll sende the, and thy mother that bare the, in to a straunge lande, where ye were not borne and there shall ye dye. But as for the lande that ye wyll desyre to returne vnto, ye shall neuer come at it agayne. This man Conaniah shal be lyke an ymage robbed and torne in peces, whiche pleaseth no man, for all his apparell. Wherfore both he and his seed shal be sent awaye, and cast out into a lande, that they knowe not.

O thou earthe, earthe, earthe: heare the worde of the Lorde: Write this man amõg the outlawes, for no prosperyte shall this man haue all his lyfe long. Neither shall any of his seed be so happye, as to syt vpon the seate of Dauid, and to beare rule in Juda.

¶ He speaketh against euyll curates that make hauocke of the flocke of the Lorde. Of the conuersyon of the remnaute of the Jewes to the fayth. The commynge of the true Shepherde Christ is prophesyed. Against false prophetes. when a prophet preacheth the worde of God. God conuerteth the hertes of the hearers. Against prophetes that preache lyes vnder the name of God. The myracles of false prophetes.

CAPI. XXIII.

Wo be vnto the shepherdes, that destroye and scatre my flocke, sayth the Lorde. Wherfore, this is the commaundemẽt of the Lorde God of Israel, vnto the shepherdes that fede my people: Ye scatre and thrust out my flocke, and loke not vpon them. Therfore nowe wyll I vysyt the wickednesse of youre ymaginacyons, sayth the Lorde: And wyl gather to gether the remnaunt of my flocke fromme all landes that I had dryuen them vnto, and wyll bringe them againe to their pastures, that they maye growe and increase. I wyll set shepherdes also ouer them, whiche shall fede them: They shall no more feare and dreade, for there shall none of them be lost, sayth the Lorde. Beholde, the tyme commeth, sayth the Lord, that I wyll rayse vp the ryghteous braunche of Dauid, whiche shal beare rule, and doyng matters with wysdome, and shall set vp equyte and ryghteousnesse agayne in earth.

In his tyme shall Iuda be saued and Israell shall dwell without feare. And this is the name that they shall call hym: euen the Lorde oure righteous maker. And therfore beholde, the tyme commeth, sayth the Lord, that it shall no more be sayde: the Lorde liueth, which brought the childre of Israell out of the lande of Egypte: But the Lorde liueth, which brought forth, and led the seed of the house of Israel, out of the North land, and from all countreyes where I had skattered them and they shall dwell in their owne lande agayne.

My herte breaketh in my bodye, because of the false prophetes, all my bones shake: I am become lyke a dronken man (that by the reason of wyne can take no rest) for very feare of the Lorde, and of his holy wordes: Iere.xxiii.a Because the lande is full of aduouterers, where throwe it is destroyed and mourneth, and the pleasaunt pastures of the wilde are dryed vp. Yea the waye that men take, is wycked, and their gouernaunce is not ryght lyke the holy worde of the Lorde. For the prophetes & the preestes them selues are polluted hypocrites, and their wyckednesse haue I founde in my house, sayth the Lorde. Wherfore, their way shal be slypperye in the darknes, wherin they may stomble and fal. For I wyl bring a plage vpon them, euen the yeare of their visitacion, sayth the Lorde. I haue sene folye amonge the prophetes of Samaria, that they preached for Baal, & deceyued my people of Israell.

I haue sene also among the prophetes of Ierusalem foule aduoutrye, and pestilent wayes. They take the moste shamefull men by the handes, flatteryng them, so that they can not returne from their wyckednes. All these with their ceteyens are vnto me, as Sodome, and as the inhabytaunces of Gomorre. Iaremy.xi.b

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes concernyng the prophetes: Beholde, I wyll fede them with wormwod, and make them drynke the water of gall. For from the prophetes of Ierusalem is the sykenes of prophesye come into all the lande.

D Iaremy.xxiii.b.c.d.e.f.

And therfore the Lorde of hoostes giueth you this warnynge: Heare not the wordes of the prophetes, that preach vnto you, and deceyue you: for they speake the meanyng of their owne herte, and not oute of the mouth of the Lorde. They saye vnto them, that despyse me: The Lorde hath spoken it: Truly, ye shall prosper ryght well. And vnto all them, that walke after the will of their owne herte, they saye: No hurte, there shall no myschefe happen you. For who hath stonden in the counsell of the Lorde, that he hath herde and vnderstande, what he is about to doo: Who hath marked his worke, and herde it? Beholde, the stormy wether of the Lorde (that is, his indignacion) shal go forth, and shal fal downe vpon the heed of the vngodly. And the wrath of the Lorde shall not turne agayne, tyll he performe and fulfyl the thoughte of his herte. And in the latter dayes ye shall knowe his meanynge. Iaremy.xxiii.h Sophon.xvi.a

I haue not sent these Prophetes (sayth the Lorde) and yet they ranne. I haue not spoken to them, and yet they preached. But yf they habde continued in my counsell and herde my wordes: they had turned my people from their cuyll wayes and wycked imaginacions. Am I then God that seeth but the thynge, whiche is nygue at hande, and not that is farre of? sayth the Lorde. Maye any man hyde him selfe so, that I shal not se him? sayth the Lorde. Do not I fulfyl heauen and earthe? sayth the Lorde. I haue herde well ynoughe, what the Prophetes saye, that preache lyes in my name, sayinge: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. How longe wyll this continue in the prophetes herte, to tell lyes, & to preache the craftye subtylte of their owne herte? Whose purpose is (with the dreames that euery one tell) to make my people forgette my name, as their faye fathers dyd, when Baal came vp. The prophet that hathe a dreame, let him tell it: and he that vnderstandeth my worde, let hym shewe it faythfully. E Iere.xxiii.i

For what hath chaffe and wheat to do together? sayth the Lorde. Is not my worde lyke a fyre, sayth the Lord, and lyke an hammer, that breaketh the harde stone? Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll vpon the prophetes, that steale my worde priuyly frome euery man. Beholde, here am I (sayth the Lorde) agaynste the prophetes, that take vpon them tunges to speake: The Lorde hathe sayd. Beholde, here am I (sayth the Lorde) agaynste them, that haue prophesyed lyes, and deceyue my people with their vanitees, & myracles, whome I neuer sent, ne commaunded them. They shall be this people greate harme, sayth the Lorde. F

If this people, eyther any Prophete or preest aske the, and saye: what is the burthe of the Lorde? Then shalte saye vnto them: What burthen? Therfore wyll I caste you frome me (sayth the Lorde) because ye haue sinned are a burthen. And the Prophete, preest or people that vseth this terme the burthen of the Lorde, them wyll I vysyte, and his house also. G

But thus shall ye saye, euery one to an other: What answere hath the Lorde geuen? or, what is the Lordes commaundement? And as for the burthen of the Lorde, ye shal speake no more of it: for euery mans owne worde is his burthen, because ye haue altered the wordes of the lyuynge God the Lorde of hoostes our God.

Thus shall euery man saye to the prophetes: what answere hath the Lorde geuen the? Or what sayth the Lord? And not ones to name the burthen of the Lorde. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: For so moche as ye haue vsed this terme (the burthe of the Lorde) where as I not withstandinge sent vnto you and forbade you to speake of the Lordes burthen.

Beholde therfore I wyll repute you as a burthe burthen, and wil cast you out of my presence: yea and the city also, that I gaue you & your fathers: and wil bring you to an euerlasting contution, and to such a shame as shal neuer be forgotten.

¶ The vysion of the two pannyers of fygges.

The first vpon signifyeth, that parte of the people shoulde be brought agayne from captyuyte. The seconde, that Sedechias and the rest of the people shoulde be destroyed.

CAPI. XXIIII.

The Lorde shewed me a vision: Beholde there stode two maundes of fygges before the temple of the Lorde, after that Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon had led awaye captyue Iechonias the sonne of Joakim kynge of Juda, the wyghtye men also of Juda, with the wozke maysters, and conyng men of Jerusalem vnto Babylon. In the one maunde were very good fygges, euen lyke as thole that be fyrst rype. In the other maunde were verye naughtye fygges, whiche myghte not be eaten, they were so cupll. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: What seest thou Jeremye? I sayde: fygges, wherof some be verye good, and some so cupl, that no man may eate them.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, after this maner: Thus sayth the Lorde the God of Israell: lyke as thou knowest the good fygges, so shall I knowe the men lede awaye, whome I haue sente out of this place in to the lande of the Caldees, for their profyte: and I wyll set myne eyes vpon the for the beste, for I wyll bryngе them agayne in to this lande: I wil buylde them vp, and not breake them downe: I wil plant them, and not roote them oute. And I wyll gyue them an herte, to knowe howe that I am the Lorde. They shall be my people, and I wil be their God, for they shall returne vnto me w̄ their hole herte.

And lyke as thou knowest the naughtye fygges, whiche maye not be eaten, they are so cupll: Euen so wyll I (sayth the Lorde) let Sedechias the kynge of Juda, (ye and all his princes, and the residue of Jerusalem that remayne oute in this lande, and them also that dwell in Egypt) to be vexed and plaged in all kyngdomes and landes. And wyll make them to be a reproffe, a cõmon by worde a laughynge stocke and shame, in all the places where I shall scatter them. I wyll sende the swerde, honger, and pestylence amonge them, vntyll I haue cleane consumed them out of the lande that I gaue vnto them and their fathers.

¶ Jeremye prophecyeth, that they shall be in captyuyte three score and ten yeares, because they contemned and despysed the worde of God. He sheweth that after three score and ten yeares, the Babylonians shoulde be destroyed. The destruction of all nacyons is prophecyed. He meaneth the plaules of the nacyons to worlynge.

CAPI. XXV.

A Sermon that was gyuen vnto Jeremye, vpon all the people of Juda. In the fourthe yere of Joakim the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda, that was in the fyrste yere of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon. Whiche sermon Jeremye the Prophete made vnto all the people of Juda, and to all the inhabitoures of Jerusalem on this maner.

From the thyrteenth yere of Josias the son of Amon kynge of Juda, vnto this presente daye (that is euen three and twenty yere) the worde of the Lorde hath ben committed vnto me. And so I haue spoken to you, I haue risen vp early, I haue gyuen you warnynge in season, but ye wolde not heare me. Though the Lorde hathe sente his seruauntes, all the Prophetes vnto you in season: Yet wolde ye not obeye, ye wolde not enclyne your eares to heare.

Ye sayd: Tourne agayne euery man from his cupll waye, and from your wycked ymagynations, and so shall ye dwelle for euer in the lande, that the Lorde promysed you and your forefathers: and go not vnto straunge goddes, serue them not, worshyp them not, and anger me not with the workes of your handes: then wyll not I punysshe you.

Neuertheles, ye wolde not heare me (sayth the Lorde) but haue kyndled me with the workes of your handes, to your owne greate harme.

Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: Bycause ye haue not harkened vnto my worde: lo, I wyll sende oute and call for all the people that dwell in the North, (sayth the Lorde, and wyll prepare Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon my seruaunte, and wyll bryngе them vpon this lande, and vpon all that dwell therin, and vpon all the people that are about them, and wyll vtterly roote them oute. I wyll make of them a wyldernesse, a mockage, and a contynuall desserte.

Moreouer, I wyll take from them the voyce of gladnesse and solace, the voyce of the bridegroome and the bryde, the voyce of the anoynted, with the swetsherres: and this hole lande shall become a wyldernesse, and they shall serue the sayd people, and the kyng of Babylon three score yeres and ten. Whē the three score and tenne yeres are expyred, I wyll vysyte also the wickednesse of the kyng of Babylon and his people, sayth the Lorde: yea and the lande of the Caldees, and wyll make it a perpetual wyldernesse, and wil fulfyll all my wordes vpon that lande, whiche I haue beuyled agaynste it: yea, all that is wrytten in this boke, whiche Jeremye hathe prophecyed of all people: so that they also shall be subdued vnto diuers nacions & great kynges, for I wyll acquyte them accordyng to their actes and workes of their owne handes.

For thus hathe the Lorde God of Israel spoken vnto me: Take this wyne cup of in-

Psalm 60. ...ignacion fro my hand, that thou maist cause all the people to whome I sende the, for to drynke of it: that when they have dronken therof, they may be mad and out of their wyttes, when the swerde commeth, that I wyll sende amonge them. Then toke I the cuppe from the Lordes hand, and made all the people, drynke therof, vnto whom the Lorde had sent me.

C And fyrste the cuppe of Jerusalem, and all the cuyes of Juda, their kynges and princes: to make them wyldeste, waste, despised and cursed, as it is come to passe this daye. Yea, and Pharao kyng of Egypte, his seruauntes, his princes, and his people all togyther one with an other, and all kynges of the lande of Hus, all kynges of the Philistines lande, Ascalon: Gaza, Accaron and the rest of Azwd, the Edomites, the Moabites, and the Ammonites, all the kynges of Tyrus and Sidon: the kynges of the yles, beyonde the see: Dedan, Thema, Buz, and the shauen Zimaelites: all the kynges of Arabye, and (generallye) all the kynges that dwell in the wyldernesse: all the kynges of Zamri, all the kynges of Elam, all the kynges of Medes, all kynges towarde the Northe, farre or nye, euerye one with his neyghbours: Yea, all the kyngdomes that are vpon the vpte earthe. The kynge of Sesach, sayde he, shall drynke with them also.

I And say thou vnto them: This is the commaundement of the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: Drynke and be dronken, spewe and fall that ye neuer ryse: and that therow the swerde, which I wyll sende amonge you. But yf they wyll not receyue the cuppe of thy hande, and drynche it, then tell them: Thus bydde the Lorde of hostes thretten you: drynche it ye shall, and that surely. Jer. 49. a. Abdias. For, lo, I begin to plage the cuye that my name is called vnto: thynche ye then, that I wyll leaue you vnpunyshed? Ye shall not goo quyte. For why, I call for a swerde vpon all the inhabitauntes of the earth, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

Joel 3. Therfore tell them all these wordes, and saye vnto them: The Lorde shall crye from aboue, and let his voyce be herde frome his holy dwellynge place. With a greate noyse shall he crye fromte his courte regall. He shall gyue a greate voyce (lyke the grape gatherers) and the sounde therof shall be herde vnto the endes of the worlde. For the Lorde hathe a iudgement to gyue vpon all people, and wyll holde his courte of iudgye with all flesshe and punyshe the vngodly, sayth the Lorde.

Jeremy. 16. C For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, a myserable plage shall goo frome one people to an other, and a greate stormye water shall aryse fromte all the endes of the earthe. And the same daye shall the Lorde lye slayne from one ende of the earthe to an other. There shall no lamentacion be made for any of them, nether gathered vp, nether buryed: but shall lye as dung vpon the grounde.

Mourne, ye shepherdes, and crye: fyrthle your selues with ashes, ye rammes of the flocke: for the tyme of your slaughter is fulfilled, and ye shall fall lyke vessels comtagly made for pleasure.

The shepherdes shall haue no waye to flye, and the rammes of the flocke shal not escape. Then shall the shepherdes crye horribly, and the rammes of the flocke shall mourne: for the Lorde shall consume their pasture, and their fayre fieldes shall lye dede, by cause of the horrible wrathe of the Lorde. They shall forsake their folde, lyke as a lyon. For their landes shall be waste, because of the wrathe of the destroyer, and because of his fearefull indignacion.

C Jeremye moueth the people to amendement. He is taken of the Prophetes and Preastes, and brought to iudgement. He beinge acquited before the Princes, auoucheth: that he had preached onely the wordes of God. The rulers and the people defyner Jeremye, against the wyles of the Preastes and Prophetes: after the exemple of Micheas, who the had prophesyed likewise, that had preached the same thinges that Jeremye had preached. Vrias the Prophete is kylled of Joakym, contrary to the wyll of God.

CAPI. XXVI.

IN the begynnynge of the raygne of Joakim the son of Josias kyng of Juda, came this worde from the Lorde, saying: Thus sayth the Lorde: Stande in the courte of the Lordes house, and speake vnto all them whiche (oute of the cuyes of Juda) come to do worshyp in the Lordes house, all the wordes that I commaunde the to saye. Loke thou kepe not one worde backe, yf (peraduenture) they will harken and turne euery man from his wycked waye: that I maye also repente of the plage, whiche I haue determined to bringe vpon them, bycause of their wyckes enuentions.

And after this maner shalt thou speake vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde: yf ye wyll not obeye me, to walke in my lawes, whiche I haue gyuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruauntes the Prophetes, whome I sende vnto you, rysynge vp tymely, and styll sendynge: Yf ye wyll not folowe them (I saye) then wyll I do to this house, as I dyd vnto Silo, and wyll make this cuye to be abhorred of all the people of the earthe. And the preastes, the Prophetes, and all the people herde Jeremye preache their wordes in the house of the Lorde.

Nowe when he hadde spoken oute all the wordes, that the Lorde commaunded him to preache vnto all the people, then the preastes, the Prophetes, and all the people layde holde vpon him, and sayde: thou shalte dye. Howe darest thou be so bolde, as to saye in the name of the Lorde: it shall happen to this house as it dyd to Silo: and this cuye shall be so waste, that no man shall dwell therin?

Gen

And when all the people had gathered about Jeremye in the house of the Lorde, the princes of Juda herde of this rumoure, and they came lightwitly oute of the kynges palace in to the house of the Lorde, and sat them downe before the newe doore of the Lorde. Then spake the preestes and the Prophetes vnto the rulers, and to all the people, these wordes: This man is worthy to dye, for he hath preached against this city, as ye your selues have herd with your eares.

Then sayde Jeremye vnto the rulers and to all the people: The Lord hath sent me to preache agaynst this house, and agaynst this citye all the wordes that ye have herd. Therfore amende youre wayes, and your studies, and be obedyente vnto the voyce of the Lorde youre God: so shall the Lorde repent of the plage, that he hath denuyced agaynst you. Nowe as for me: I am in youre handes, doo with me as ye thynke expedyente and good.

But this shall ye knowe: yf ye put me to deth, ye shall make your selues, this citye and all the inhabitours therof, guilty of innocent bloude. For this is of a truth: that the Lord hath sent me vnto you, to speake all these wordes in your eares.

Then sayd the rulers and the people vnto the preestes and Prophetes: This man may not be condemned to death, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the Lorde oure God. The elders also of the lande stode vp, and sayd thus vnto all the people: Michah the Morasthite, whiche was a Prophete vnder Ezechias kynge of Juda, spake to all the people of Juda: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Syon shall be plowed lyke a felde, Jerusalem shall be an heape of stones, and the hyll of the Lordes house, shall be turned to an hye wodde.

Dyd Ezechias the kynge of Juda and the people of Juda put him to deth for this? No doubt, but rather feared the Lorde, and made their prayer vnto him. For whyche cause also the Lorde repented of the plage that he had denuced against them. Shold we then vnto suche a shamefull dede agaynst our soules? There was a Prophete also, that preached lykewise in the name of the Lord called Uriah the sonne of Semeiah of Cariathiarim: this man preached also agaynst this citye and agaynst this land, according to all as Jeremy sayth. Now when Joakim the kynge with all the rulers and princes had herde his wordes, the kynge went about to slee him. When Uriah perceyued that, he was afrayde, and fled, and departed in to Egypt.

Then Joakim the kyng sent seruauntes in to the lande of Egypt: Namely Elnathan the sonne of Achabor, and certeyn men with him in to Egypte, whiche fetched Uriah oute of Egypte, and brought him vnto kyng Joakim that slewe him with the swerde, and cast his dead body in to the common peoples grane. But Ahikam the son of Saphan helped Jeremye that he came not in to the handes of the people to be slayne.

¶ Jeremye, at the commaundement of the Lorde, sendeth bondes to the kynge of Juda, and to the other kynges that were nygh, whereby they are monyshed to become subiectes vnto Nabuchodonosor. He warneth the people and the kynges and rulers, that they beleue not false Prophetes.

CAPI. XXVII.

IN the begynnynge of the regyne of Joakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, came this worde vnto Jeremye from the Lorde, whiche spake thus vnto me: Make the bondes and cheynes, and put them about thy necke, and sende them to the the kyng of Edom, the kynge of Moab, the kynge of Ammon, the kynge of Tyrus, and to the kynge of Sydon, & that by the messengers which shall come to Jerusalem vnto Sedechias the king of Juda, & byd them saye vnto their maisters: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell, speake thus vnto youre maisters: I am he that made the erth, the men, and the catell that are vpon the grounde, with my greate power and stretched out arme, & haue geuen it vnto whom it pleased me.

And nowe wyll I deliuer all these landes in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, my seruaunt. The beestes also of the felde shall I geue hym to doo hym seruyce. And all people shall serue him, and his sonne, and his childes childen, vntyll the tyme of the same lande be come also: yea many people, and greate kynges shall serue hem.

Moreouer, that people and kyngdome whiche wyll not serue Nabuchodonosor, and that wyll not put their necke vnder the yoke of the kynge of Babylon: the same people wyll I vysyte with the swearde, with honger, with pestylence, vntyl I haue consumed them in his handes, sayth the Lorde. And therfore folowe not youre Prophetes, southesayers, expounders of dreames, charmers and wytches, whiche saye vnto you: ye shall not serue the kynge of Babylon. For they preache you lyes: to bryngе you farre fromme youre lande, and that I myght cast you out, and destroye you. But the people that put their neckes vnder the yoke of the kynge of Babylon and serue him, those I will let remayne styll in their owne lande (sayth the Lorde) and they shal occupy it and dwell therin.

All these thynges tolde I Sedechias kyng of Juda, and sayde: Put youre neckes vnder the yoke of the kynge of Babylon, and serue him and his people, that ye maye lyue. Why, wylt thou and thy people perish with the swerde, with honger, with pestylence: lyke as the Lorde hathe denuyced for all people that wyll not serue the kynge of Babylon? Therfore geue no eare vnto those Prophetes (that tell you: Ye shall not serue the kyng of Babylon) for they preache you lyes, neyther have I sente them, sayth the Lorde: how be it they are bolde, falsely to prophesye in my name: that I might the sooner drive you out, and that ye myght perish with your preachers.

D I spake to the preestes also, and to all the people: Thus sayth the Lorde: Heare the wordes of thyne Prophet, that preaches vnto you, and saye: Beholde the vessels of the Lordes house, shall shortly be brought hyther agayne from Babylon: For they prophecye lyes vnto you. Heare them not but serue the kynge of Babylon, that ye may lyue. Wherfore will ye make this cyte to be destroyed? But yf they be true Prophetes in deede, and yf the worde of the Lorde be commyttyd vnto them, then lette them praye the Lorde of hostes, that the remnaunt of the ornamentes (whiche are in the house of the Lorde, and remayne yet in the house of the kynge of Juda, and at Jerusalem) be not caried to Babylon also.

For thus hath the Lorde of hostes spoken concerning the pyllers, the lauer, the seat and the residue of the ornamentes that yet remayn in this cyte, whiche Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon toke not, when he caryed awaye Jechoniah the sonne of Joakim kyng of Juda, with all the power of Juda and Jerusalem, from Jerusalem vnto Babylon captyue.

Yea, thus hathe the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell spoken, as touchynge the residue of the ornamentes of the Lordes house, of the kynge of Judas house, and of Jerusalem: They shall be caryed vnto Babylon, and there they shall remayne vntyll I vysyte them, sayth the Lorde. Then will I bryngе them hyther agayne. And this was wonne in the same yere: euen in the begynnyng of the raygne of Sedechias kyng of Juda.

¶ The false prophecye of Hananiah the Prophete. Jeremye the with ſ the Prophecye of Hananiah is false, by the exemple of other Prophetes. He being enspyred of the Lorde, reproueth Hananiah, Prophesyinge his death.

CAPI. XXVIII.

A BUt in the fourthe yere of the raygne of Sedechias kynge of Juda, in the fyfth moneth: It happened that Hananiah the sonne of Assur the Prophete of Gabaon spake to me in the house of the Lorde, in the presence of the preestes and of all the people, and sayd: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: I have broken the yoke of the kyng of Babylon: and after two yere will I bryngе agayne in to this place, all the ornamentes of the Lordes house, that Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon caried awaye from this place vnto Babylon.

Yea, I will bryng agayn Jechoniah ſ sonne of Joakim the kynge of Juda him selfe, with all the pryseners of Juda (that are caryed vn to Babylon) euen in to this place, sayth the Lorde, for I wyl breake the yoke of the kyng of Babylon.

Then the Prophet Jeremye gaue answere vnto the Prophet Hananiah, before the preestes, and before all the people that were present in the house of the Lorde. And ſ Prophet Jeremye sayd: Amen. The Lorde do that, and graunt the thynge whiche thou hast Prophecied: that he maye bryngе agayne all the ornamentes of the Lordes house, and restore al the pryseners from Babylon in to the place. Neuertheles harken thou also what I will saye, that thou and al the people may heare: The Prophetes that were before vs in times paste, whiche prophecied of warre or trouble, or pestylence, eyther of peax vpon manye nacions and greate kyngdomes were prone d by this, (yf God had sende them in verye deede) whē the thyng came to passe, which that Prophet tolde before.

And Hananiah the Prophet toke ſ cheyne from the Prophet Jeremyes necke, and brake it, and with that sayd Hananiah that all the people might heare: Thus sayth the Lorde spoken: Euen so will I breake the yoke of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, from the necke of all nacions, yea and that within this two yere. And so the Prophete Jeremye went his waye.

Howe after that Hananiah the Prophete had taken the cheyne from the Prophete Jeremyes necke, and broken it: The worde of the Lorde came vnto the Prophete Jeremye saynge: Go and tell Hananiah these wordes: Thus sayth the Lorde: Thou hast broke the cheyne of wod, but in stede of wod thou shalt make cheynes of yron. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: I will put a yoke of yron vpon the necke of all this people, that they maye serue Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, yea and so shal they do. And I will gyue him the beestes in the felde. Then sayd the Prophet Jeremye vnto that Prophet Hananiah: Heare me (I praye the) Hananiah: The Lorde hathe not sente the, but thou bryngest this people in to false beleefe. And therfore thus sayth the Lorde: beholde, I will send the out of the land, and within a yere thou shalte dye, bicause thou hast falsely spoken agaynst the Lorde. So Hananiah the Prophet died the same yere in the seuenth moneth.

¶ The Epystle of Jeremye, sent vnto them that were in captyuyte in Babylon. He prophecyeth their returne from captyuyte after thyr terme and ten yeares. He prophecyeth the destruction of the kynge and of the people that remayned in Jerusalem. He threatneth two Prophetes that seduced the people. The death of Semeiah the Nehelamyte is prophecyed.

CAPI. XXIX.

THis is the copye of the letter, that Jeremye the Prophet sent from Jerusalem vnto the pryseners: the Senatours preestes, Prophetes, and al the people whom Nabuchodonosor had led in vnto Babylon after after that tyme that kynge Jechoniah, and his quene, his chamberlaynes the prynces of Juda and Jerusalem, the workemaisters of Jerusalem were departed thyther. Whiche letter Elasah the sonne of Saphan and Gemariah the sonne of Helkiah dyd beare, whom Sedechias kyng of Juda sente vnto Babylon to Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon. These were the wordes of Jeremyes letter:

Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell spoken vnto all the prysoners that were leoni frome Jerusalem vnto Babylon: buylde your houses to dwell therin: plante you gardens, that ye maye enioye the frutes therof: take you wyues to beare you sonnes and doughters: prouyde wyues for youre sonnes, and husbandes for your doughters, that they maye geue sonnes and doughters, and that ye maye multiplye there. Laboure not to be fewe, but lyke after peace, and prosperite of the cuye wherin ye be prysoners, & praye vnto God for it. For in the peace therof shall your peace be. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell: Let not thois Prophetes and sothesayers that be amonge you, deceyue you: and beleue not your owne dreames. For why, they preache you lyes in my name, and I haue not sente them, sayth the Lorde.

But thus sayth the Lorde: When ye haue fulfylled thye seuen and tenne yeres at Babylon, I wyll bringe you home, and of myne owne goodnesse I will cause you bythat agayne vnto this place. For I knowe what I haue deuysed for you, sayth the Lorde. My thoughtes are to graue you peace, and not trouble (whiche I geue you all ready) and that ye myghte haue hope agayne. Ye shall crye vnto me, ye shall go and call vpon me, and I shall heare you. Ye shal seke me, and fynde me. Yea yf so be that ye seke me with your hole herte, I wyll be found of you (sayth the Lorde) and will deliuer you out of prison, and gather you together agayne oute of all places wherin I haue scattered you, sayth the Lorde: and wyll bringe you agayne to the same place, from whence I caused you to be caried away captyue.

But where as ye saye, that God haue raysed you vp prophetes at Babylon: thus hath the Lorde spoken (concernyng the kyng that sytteth in the stole of Dauid, and all the people that dwelle in this cite, youre brethren that are not gone with you in to captiuitie.) Thus, I saye, (spoken the Lorde of hostes:) Beholde, I wil sende a sweorde, honger, and pestilence vpon them, and will make them lyke buttymely figges, that maye not be eaten for bitternesse. And I will persecute them with the sweorde, with honger and with.

I wyll deliuer them vp to be vexed of all kyngdomes, to be cursed, abhorred, laughed to scorne, and put to confusion of all the people amonge whome I haue scattered them: and that bicause they haue not ben obedient vnto my commaundementes, sayth the Lorde, whiche I sente vnto them by my seruauntes the prophetes. I rose vp early, and sent vnto them, but they wolde not heare, sayth the Lorde.

Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, all ye prysoners, whom I sente from Jerusalem vnto Babylon: Thus hathe the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken of Achab the sonne of Colaiah, and of Sedechias the sonne of Maaseah, which prophesye lyes vnto you in my name: Beholde, I wyll deliuer them in to the hand of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, that he may slee them before youre eyes. And all the prysoners of Juda that are in Babylon, shall take vpon them this cursse of cursynge, and saye: Now God wo vnto the, as he dyd vnto Sedechias and Achab, whome the kynge of Babylon rosted in the fyre, bycause they synned shamefully in Israell.

For they haue not only defiled their neighbours wyues, but also preached lyenge wordes in my name, which I haue not commaunded them. Thus I testify and affirme, sayth the Lorde. But as for Semeiah the Nehelampte thou shalt speake vnto him: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: Bicause thou hast sealed letters vnder thy name, vnto all the people that is at Jerusalem, and to Sophonias the sonne of Maaseah the preest: yea, and vnto them to all the preestes: wherin thou wrotest thus vnto him: The Lorde hath ordeined the to be preest in stede of Joiada the preest, that thou shuldest be the chefe in the house of the Lorde about all prophetes, and preachers, and that thou myghtest put them in prison, or in the stockes. Howe happeneth it then, that thou hast not reproued Jeremy of Anathoth, which neuer leaueth of his prophesyenge?

And beyde all this, he hath sent vs worde vnto Babylon, and tolde vs playnely, that oure captiuitie shall longe endure: that we we shulde buylde vs houses to dwell therin, and to plante vs gardens that we maye enioye the frutes therof. Whiche letter Sophonias the preest dyd rede, and let Jeremye the Prophete heare it.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye, saynge: Sende worde to all them that are in captiuitie, on this maner: Thus hath the Lorde spoken concernyng Semeiah the Nehelampte: Bycause that Semeiah hath prophecied vnto you without my commission, and broughte you in to a false hope, therfore thus the Lorde bothe certifye you: Beholde, I will visite Semeiah the Nehelampte, and his seed: so that none of his shal remayne amonges this people, and none of them shall se the good that I wil do for this people, sayth the Lorde. For he hath preached falsely of the Lorde.

¶ The returne of the people from Babylon. God by his chalenginge shewth that the people is synfull. The destruction of the enemyes of Israel.

CAPI. xxx.

A THese are the wordes that the Lorde wewed vnto Jeremye, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: Write vp diligentlye all the wordes that I have spoken vnto the, in a boke. For, loo, the tyme commeth (sayth the Lorde) that I wyl bryng agayne the prysoners of my people of Israell and Juda, sayth the Lorde: For I wyll restore them vnto the lande, that I gave to their fathers, and they shall have it in possession.

Agayne, these wordes spake the Lorde concerning Israel and Juda: thus sayth the Lorde: We heare a terrible crye, feare and disquietnesse. For what els doethe this signifie, that I se? Namely that all stronge men smyte euery man his hande vpon his loynes, as a woman in the payne of her trauayle. Who euer sawe a man trauayle with chylde? Enquyre thereafter, and se. Yea, all their faces are maruelous pale.

Alas for this day, which is so dredful that none may be lykened vnto it: and alas for the tyme of Jacobs trouble, from the whiche he shall yet be delyuered. For in that daye, sayth the Lorde, I wyll take his yoke from thy necke, and breake thy bondes. They shall no more serue straunge goddes vnder him, but they shall do seruyce vnto God their Lorde, and to David their kyng, whom I wil rayse vp vnto them. And as for the, o my seruant Jacob, feare not (sayth the Lorde) and be not afrayde, o Israel. For lo, I wil helpe the also from farre, and thy seed from the lande of their captyuitie.

And Jacob shall turne agayne, he shall be in rest, and haue a prosperous lyfe, and no man shall make him afrayde. For I am with the, to helpe the, sayth the Lorde. And though I shall destroye all the people amongest whom I have scattered the, yet wyll I not destroye the, but correcte the, and that with discretion. For I knowe that thou arte in no wyse without faute. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: I am sory for thy hurt and wounde. There is no man to medle with thy cause, to bynde vp thy wounde: there maye no man helpe the.

All thy louers have forgotten the, and care not vpon the. For I have gyuen the a cruell stroke, and chastened the roughly: and that for the multytude of thy mysdedes, for thy synnes have had the ouer hand. Why makest thou mone for thy harme? I my self have put of thy sorowe, but for the multitude of thy mysdedes and synnes, I have done this vnto the.

And therfore all they that deuoure the, shal be deuoured, and all thyne enemyes shall be led in to captyuitie. All they that make the waste shal be waste them selues: and al those that rob the, wil I make also to be robbed. For I wyl gyue the thy helth agayn, and make thy wounde hole, sayth the Lorde: because they scorned the as one cast away and despysed, O Syon.

D For thus sayth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll sette vp Jacobs tentes agayne, and bestowe his dwellynge place. The citye shall be buylded in her olde estate, and the houses shall haue their ryght foundacion. And out of them shal go thankesgyuing, and the voice of ioye.

I wil multiply them, and they shal not minish: I shal endue them with honour, and no man shal subdue them. Their children shal be as afore tyme, and their congregacion shal continue in my sygte. And al those that vexe the wyll I vysyte.

A capitayne also shall come of them, and a prynce shall spryngе out from the myddest of them: hym wyll I chalenge to my selfe, and he shall come vnto me. For what is he, that gueth ouer his herte to come vnto me, sayth the Lorde?

Ye shall be my people also, and I wyll be youre God. Beholde, on the other syde shall the wrathe of the Lorde breake out as a stormye water, as a mygthye whyrle wynde: and shall fall vpon the heeds of the vngodly.

The terrible displeasure of the Lorde shall not leasse of, vntyll he have done and performed the intent of his herte, which in the latter dayes ye shall vnderstande. At the same tyme, sayth the Lorde, shall I be the God of all the generations of Israell, and they shall be my people.

The prophecyeth that the people of Israel shall be restored agayne vnto their prosperytye. To be turned from their synne & the yre of God. The byrth of Christ is prophecyed. All the wycked shall dye in their wyckednes. The newe Testament and sacramente is prophecyed. The Chrysten are taught and instructe of the Lorde. Our synnes shall be remembred, that they shall not once be thought on. God promyseth that he wyll call of the Jewes. The buylyenge agayne of Jerusalem.

CAPI. XXXI.

THus sayth the Lorde: The people of Israell, whiche escaped in the wylderneſſe from the swerde, founde grace to come in to their rest. Euen so shall the Lorde nowe also appeare vnto me from farre, and saye: I loue the with an euerlastynge loue, therfore doo I spreade my mercye before the.

I wyll repayre the agayne (O thou doughter of Israell) that thou mayste be fayre and iure. Thou shalte take thy tabrettes agayne, and goo forth with them that lede the daunce.

Thou shalt plant vynes agayne vpon the hylles of Samaria, and eye grape gatherers shal plant and synge.

And when it is tyme the watchemen vpon the mounte Ephraim shall crye: aryse, let vs goo vnto Syon to oure Lorde God, for thus sayth the Lorde: Reioyce with gladnesse, because of Jacob, crye vnto the hede of the Gentyles: speake out, sing, and say: The Lorde shall deliuer his people, the remnaunt of Israell, and make them hole. Beholde, I wyll bryng them agayne from out of the North lande, and gather them from the endes of the of the worlde, with the blynde and lame that are amonge them, with the women that be greate with chylde, and suche as be also deliuered: and the company of them that come agayne, shall be greate.

They departed frome hence in heuynesse, but with hope will I bringe them vnther agayne. I will leue them by the ryuers of water in a strayght waye, where they shall not stomble: For I will be Israels father and Ephraim shall be my fyrstborne.

Heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye Gentiles, preach in the Iles, that ye farre of, and say: he that hath scattered Israel, shal gather him to gether agayne, and shall kepe him as a shepherde doothe his flocke. For the Lorde shall redeme Jacob, and ryd him frome the hande of the vyolent. And they shall come, & reioyce vpon the hyl of Syon, and shal haue plentuousnes of goodes, whiche the Lorde shal geue them: Wheate, wheat, wyne, oyle, younge sheepe & calues. And their conference shal be as a wel watred garden, for they shal no more be hongry.

Then shal the maide reioyce in the daunce, yea both yonge and olde folkes. For I will turne their sorowe in to gladnes, and will comfort them and make them ioyfull, euen frome their heuines. I will poure plentuousnes vpon the heades of the prestes, and my people shal be satisfied w̄ good thinges, saith the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lorde: The voyce of heuynes, wepynge and lamentacion came into heauen: euen of Rachel mournynge for her children, & wolde not be comforted because they were awaye.

But now sayth the Lorde: leaue of from weppinge and cryinge, withholde thyne eyes from teares, for thy labour shall be rewarded sayth the Lorde. And they shall come agayne oute of the lande of their enemyes: Yea euen thy posterite shall haue consolacion in this (sayth the Lorde) that thy children shall come agayne in to their owne lande.

Moreouer I herde Ephraim, that was led awaye captyue, complayne on this maner: O Lorde, thou hast correct me, and thy chastenynge haue I receyued, as an vntamed calfe.

Conuerte thou me, and I shall be conuerted, for thou arte my Lorde God: Yea as soone as thou turnest me, I shall reiourne my selfe: and when I vnderstande, I shall smyte vpon my thyghe. For bicause I haue committed shamefull thynges: O lette my youthe heare this reproche and confusyon.

Vpon this complaynt, I thoughte thus by my self: is not Ephraim my deare sonne? Is he not the chylde, with whom I haue had all myrth and pastyme? For sence the tyme that I first communed with him, I haue him euer in remembraunce: therfore my bely desyreth me vnto him, gladly and louyngly wil I haue mercye vpon him, saith the Lorde. Set the watchmen, prouyde teachers for the, let thyne herte vpon the rightway, that thou shuldest walke, and turne agayne (O thou doughter of Israel) turne agayne to these cyties of thine. Howe longe wilte thou go aboute, O thou shrinkynge doughter? For the Lorde wyll worke a newe thing vpon earth. A woman shall compasse a man.

For thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: It wyll come thereto, that when I haue brought Juda out of captyuite, there wordes shall be herde in the lande & in his cityes: The Lorde, which is the fayre habytacyon of righteousnesse, make the fruitful, O thou holy hill: And there shall dwell Juda, and all her cities, the shepherdes and husbande men: For I shall fede the sorowfull soule, and refreshe all fayntе hartes. Whan I herd this I came agayne to my self, and waked, lyke as I had bene waked out of a sweete slepe.

Beholde (sayth the Lorde) the dayes come, that I wyl sowe the house of Israel and the house of Juda, with men and w̄ catel. Yea it shall come thereto, that lyke as I haue gone aboute in tymes paste to rote them oute, to scatter them, to breake them downe, to destroye them and crushen them: Euen so will I also go dylygently about, to buylde them vp agayne and to plante them sayth the Lorde.

Then shall it no more be sayde: the fathers haue eaten a sowre grape, and the children teth are set on edge: for euery one shal dye for his owne myssedede, so that who so eateth a sowre grape, his teeth shall be set on edge.

Beholde, the dayes come (sayth the Lorde) that I wyl make a newe couenaunt with the house of Israel and with the house of Juda: not after the couenaunt that I made with their fathers, when I toke them by the hande and led them out of the land of Egypt: which couenaunt they brake, wherfore I punished them sore, sayth the Lorde: But this shall be the couenaunte that I will make with the house of Israell after those dayes, sayth the Lorde: I will plante my lawe in the inwarde partes of them, and write it in their hertes, and will be their God and they shall be my people.

And frome thence forth shall no man teach his neyghboure or his brother, & say: know the Lorde: But they shall all knowe me, frome the lowest vnto the highest, sayth the Lorde. For I will forgyue their wickednes, and will neuer remembre their synnes anye more.

Thus sayth the Lorde which gaue the sunne to be a lyght for the daye, and the moone and sterres to shyne in the nyghte: which moueth the se, so that the floudes therof waxe greate: his name is the Lorde of hoostes. Lyke as this ordynaunce shall neuer be take out of my syght, sayeth the Lord: So shall the seed of Israell neuer ceasse, but alwayes be a people before me.

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde: lyke as the heauen aboue can not be measured, and as the foundacions of the earth beneth may pas

not be lought out: So will I alſo not call oute the hole ſide of Iſraell, for that they haue committed, ſayth the Lorde Beholde, the dayes come ſayth the Lorde, that the cy-tie of the Lorde ſhall be enlarged from the towre of Hananeel, vnto the gate of the corner wall. From thence ſhall the ryght meaſure be taken vnto her vnto the hyll top, of Gareb, and ſhal come about Goath, and the hole valley of the dead kercaſes, and of the aſhes, & all Cedrom vnto the broke of Cedron: and from thence vnto the corner of the horſegate towarde the Eaſt, where as the Sanctuary of the Lorde alſo ſhall be ſette.
And when it is newe buylded and ſet vp of this ſaſſeryē it ſhall neuer be brokē, nor call downe any more,

2. Eſdra. 16. Nehemi. 3. 12. b

¶ Jeremye is caſt in to priſon, becauſe he prophe-cyed that the cyte ſhoulde be taken of the kynge of Babylon. By the felde that Jeremye bought at the commaundement of the Lorde, is ſygnifyed, that the people ſhoulde come againe to theyr owne poſ-ſeſſyon. The people of God are his enheritance: and he is theyr Lorde. To feare God is Godlynes, in whiche feare ſynnes maye be eſchewed.

CAPI. XXXII.

A THeſe wordes ſpake the Lorde vnto Jeremye, in the tenth yere of Sedechias kynge of Juda, whiche was the xviij.
yere of Nabuchodonoſor, what tyme as the kyng of Babilons hoſte layed ſiege vnto Jeruſalem. But Jeremy the prophet lay bounde in the courte of the priſon, which was in the kynge of Judaes houſe: where Sedechias the kynge of Juda caſted him to be layed, becauſe he dadde prophecyed of this maner: Thus ſayth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyl de-liuer this cyte in to the handes of the kyng of Babylon whiche ſhall take it. As for Sede-chias the kyng of Juda, he ſhall not be dable to eſcape the Caldees, but ſurely he ſhal come in to the handes of the kynge of Babylon:
which ſhal ſpeke with him mouth to mouth and eye to eye, and ſhall ſe him face to face.
And Sedechias ſhal be caryed vnto Babell, and there ſhall he be, vntyll the tyme that I viſyte hym, ſayth the Lorde. But yf thou ta-keſt in hande to fyghte againſte the Caldees thou ſhalte not proſpere.

Jere. xxxiiij. a xxxvij. a xxxix. a

B And Jeremye ſayde: Thus hath the Lorde ſpoken vnto me: Beholde, Hananeel the ſon of Sellum thyne vncles ſonne ſhall come vnto the, and requyre the to redeme the land, that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy ſelfe: for by reaſon of kynred it is thy parte to redeme it, and to bye it out.

Leuit. xxv. d. Ruth. iij. vij. a. and. xxxvj. a. Hieremi. xxxij. a.

And ſo Hananeel myne vncles ſon came to me in the courte of the priſon, accordynge to the worde of the Lorde, and ſayde vnto me: Bye my lande (I praye the) that lyeth in Anathoth in the countrey of Benjamin:
for by heritage thou haſt ryghte to looſe it
and put for thy ſelfe, therfore redeme it. Then I perceyued, that this was the commaundement of the Lorde, and ſo I bought the lande of Hananeel of Anathoth, myne vncles ſonne, and weyed him there the money: euen ſeuen ſycles, and ten ſyluer pens.

C I cauſed him alſo to make me a wryting and to ſeale it, and called recorde thereby, and weyed him there the mony vpon the waigh-tes.

So I toke the euydence with the copye
(when it was openlye ſealed and red ouer)
I gaue the euydence vnto Baruch ſ ſonne of Neriah the ſonne of Maaſiah in the ſyghte of Hananeel my coſen, and in the preſence of the wytneſſes, that be named in the euydēce, and before all the Jewes that were thereby in the courte of the priſon.

I charged Baruch alſo before them ſayynge: the Lorde of hoſtes ſ God of Iſrael comaundeth the, to take this ſealed euydēce with the copye, and to lay it in an erthen veſſell, that it maye longe contynue.

For the Lorde of hoſtes the God of Iſrael hath determyned, that houſes, fyldes and vynyardes ſhall be poſſeſſed agayne in this lande.

Now when I had deliuered the euydēce vnto Baruch the ſon of Neriah, I beſought ſ Lorde, ſayeng: O Lorde God: It is thou ſ haſt made heauen and earth with thy greate power and hyghe arme, and there is nothyng to harde for the. Thou ſhewſt mercye vpon D thouſandes, thou recompenſeſt the wickednes of the fathers, into the boſome of ſ children that come after them

Thou arte the great and myghty God, whoſe name is the Lorde of hoſtes: greate in counſell, and infinite in thought: Thyne eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mens children, to rewarde euerye one after his waye and accordynge to the frutes of his inuencions.

Thou haſte done greate tokens and wōders in the lande of Egypte (as we ſe this daye) vpon the people of Iſraell an vpon thoſe men: to make thy name greate, as it is come to paſſe this daye:

Thou haſt brought thy people of Iſrael out of the lande of Egypte, with tokens, with wonders, with a myghtye hande, with a ſtretched oute arme, and with greate terryblenelle: and haſte gyuen them this lande, lyke as thou haddeſt promyſed vnto their fathers: Namelye that thou woldeſt gyue them a lande, that floweth with mylke and honye.

Nowe when they came therin, and poſſeſſed it, they ſo lowed not thy voyce, and walked not in thy lawe: but all that thou commaundedeſt them to do, that haue they not done, and therfore come all theſe plages vpon them.

Beholde, there are bulwerkes made nowe againſt the cyty to take it: and it ſhal be won of the Caldees that beſiege it, with ſwerde, hō-gar and peſtylence, and loke what thou haſt ſpoken, that ſame ſhall come vpon them.

For

For lo, all thinges are present vnto the: Yet sayest thou vnto me (O Lorde God) and commaundest me, that I shall lose a pece of lande vnto my selfe, and take witnesses thereto: and yet in the meane season the citye is delyuered in to the power of the Caldees.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, saynge: Beholde, I am the Lorde God of all flesshe, is there any thyng then to hard for me? Therfore thus sayde the Lorde: beholde, I shall delyuer this cytye in to the power of the Caldees, and in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, they shall take it. For the Caldees shall come, and wynne this cytye, and sette fyre vpon it, and burne it: with the gorgyous houses, in whose parlers they haue made sacrifyce vnto Baal, and poured drynchofferinges vnto straunge goddes to prouoke me vnto wrathe.

For sythge the children of Israel, and the children of Juda haue wrought wyckednes before me euer from theyr youth, what haue they elles done, but prouoked me with the workes of their owne handes? sayethe the Lorde.

Or what hathe this citie bene elis, but a prouokynge of my wrath, euer sence the daye that I buylded it vnto this houre? Wherin I cast it out of my syght, because of the great blasphemyes of the children of Israell and Juda, whiche they haue done to prouoke me: yea they, their kynges, their princes, their preestes, their prophetes, hole Juda, and all the citizins of Jerusalem.

When I rose vp early, and taught them and instructe them, they turned theyr backes to me, and not their faces. They wolde not heare, to be reformed and corrected. They haue sette their goddes in the house, that is halowed vnto my name, to defyle it. They haue buylded hyghe places for Baal in the valley of the children of Hennom, to bowe their sonnes & doughters vnto Moloch: whiche I neuer commaunded them, neither came it euer in my thoughte, to make Juda synne with suche abhomynacion.

Moreouer thus hathe the Lorde God of Israel spoken, concernynge this cytye, which (as ye power selues confesse) shall be delyuered into the hande of the kynge of Babylon, when it is wonne with the swerde, with honger and with pestylence. Beholde, I wyll gather them to gether from all landes, wherin I haue scattered the in my wrath, in my fearfull and greate displeasure: and wyll bryng the agayne vnto this place, where they shall dwel safelye. And they shal be my people, and I wyll be theyr God.

And I will geue them one herte and one waye, that they maye feare me all the dayes of their lyfe, that they and their children after them maye prospere. And I wyll sette vp an euerlastyng couenaunt with them Namelye: that I wyll neuer ceasse to doo theym good, and that I wyll put my feare in their hertes, so that they shal not runn awaye from me.

Yea I wyll haue a ful and pleasure to to them good, and fayethfully to plant them in this lande with my hole herte, and with all my soule.

For thus sayth the Lorde: lyke as I haue brought all this great plage vpon this people: so will I also bryngе vpon them all the good, that haue I promysed them. And men shall haue their possessions in this lande, wherof ye saye nowe, that it shall neither be inhabited of people ne of catell, but be delyuered in to the handes of the Caldees: Yea lande shal be bought for money, and euydences made therof vpon and sealed before witnesses in the countrey of Ben Jamin, and rounde about Jerusalem: in the cities of Juda, in the cities that are vpon the mountaynes, and in them that lye beneth, yea & in the cities that are in the desserte. For I wyl bryngе their prysoners hither agayne, sayth the Lorde.

¶ The Prophete is monyshed of the Lorde, to praye for the delyuerance of the people, whiche the Lorde promyseth. God forgyueth synnes, and doeth great good vnto the people, for his owne renowne. Of the vnyte of Christ. The kyngdome of Christe in the churche shall neuer be ended.

CAPI. XXXIII.

MOreouer the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy on this maner, when he was yet bounde in the courte of the prysone: Thus sayethe the Lorde, which fulfylleth the thyng that he speaketh, the Lord which performeth the thing that he taketh in hande euen he, whose name is the Lorde: thou hast * cryed vnto me, and I haue herde the: I haue shewed greate an hyghe thynges, whiche were vnknowen vnto you.

Jeremy.32.a

* Gene.16.b 1.Reg.vnde.

Thus (I saye) spake the Lorde God of Israel, concernynge the houses of this citie, & the houses of the kynges of Juda: that they shall be broken downe with the ordynaunce and weapens, when the Caldees come to besiege them: and they shall be filled with the dead karcases of men, whome I wyll slaye in my wrathe and displeasure: when I turne my face from this cytye because of all her wyckednesse. Beholde, (sayethe the Lorde) I wyll heale it, yea I wyll heale their wounds and make them hole, I will open them the treasure of peace and truth.

And I wyll returne the captyuyte of Juda and Israel: and wyl set them vp agayne as they were afore. From all myscedes (wherin they haue offended agaynste me) I wyll clense them: And al their blasphemyes whiche they haue done agaynst me, when they regarded me not. I will forgyue them.

And this shall get me a name, a prayse & honoure, amonge all people of the earthe, whiche shall heare all the good, that I wyll shewe vnto them: yea they shall be afrayed and astonyed at all the good dedes and prosperytes, that I wyll do for them. Moreouer thus sayethe the Lorde: in this place, where-of of ye laye that it shall be a wylderneſſe, wher in neither people ne catell shall dwell: in like maner in the cytyes of Juda and without Jerusalem (which also shal be so voyde, that neither people ne catell shall dwell there) shall the voyce of gladneſſe be herde againe, the voyce of the bridgrome and of the bryde the voyce of them that shall synge: Prayse the Lorde of Hoſtes, for he is louynge and his mercye endureth for ever, and the voyce of them that shal offre vp gyftes in the house of the Lorde. For I wyll restore the captyuyte of this lande, as it was afore, sayethe the Lorde. Thus sayethe the Lorde of Hoſtes It shall come yet ther to, that in this lande, whiche is voyde from men and catell, and in all the cytyes of the lande, there shall be set vp shepherdes cotages in the cytyes vpō the mountaynes: and in the cytyes that lye vpō the playne, and in the deſerte.

In the lande of Benjamin, in the feldes of Jerusalem, and in the cytyes of Juda shal the shepe be nombred agayne, vnder the hāde of him, that telleth them, sayethe the Lorde.

Jere. xxiii. a. Jere. xxxiii. a. Behold, the tyme commeth, sayeth the Lord, that I wil performe that good thyng, which I haue promyſed vnto the house of Israel and to the house of Juda. In those dayes, and at the same tyme, I wyll bringe forthe vnto David, the braunche of rygh teouſnes, & he shall do equyte and righteouſnelle in the lande. In those dayes shall Juda be holpen, & Jerusalem shall dwell safe, and he that shall be so cal led, God oure ryghteous maker. For thus the Lorde promyſeth: David shal neuer want one, to syt vpon the stole of the house of Israel: neither shall the preſtes & Leuytes want one to offre alwaye before me burnt offerynges, to kyndle the meatoffrynges, and to prepare the sacrifyces.

Jere. xxxiii. a. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremye after this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Maye the couenaunt whiche I haue made with daye and nyght be broken, that ther should not be daye and nyght in due ſeaſon? Then maye my couenaunt also be broke whiche I made with David my ſeruaunte, and so he not to haue a sonne to reigne in his Trone. So shall also the preſtes and Leuites neuer saye, but serue me. For lyke as the sterres of heauen maye not be nombred, neither the sande of the see measured: so will I multyplye the sede of David my ſeruaunte, and of the Leuites my myniſters.

Gene. xv. a. Furthermore, the worde of the Lord came to Jeremy, sayinge: Consyderſt thou not what this people speaketh? Two kynredes (saye they) had the Lorde chosen, and those same two hath he caſte awaye. For so farre is my people come, that they haue no hope to come to gyther any more, to be one people agayne. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: If I haue made no couenaunt with daye & nyght, and grauē no ſtatute vnto heuen and earthe: then will I also caſte awaye the sede of David my ſeruaunt: so that I wyll take no pryncē out of his sede, to rule the poſteri- ty of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. But yet I will turne agayne their captiuitie, & be mer- cifull vnto them.

¶ The thirteenth that the cytie, and kynge Sedechias also, shall be geuen in to the handes of the kynge of Babylon. He rebuketh them that brought backe of their brethren into captyuyte, that were pardoned to go at their libertye.

CAPI. XXXIIII.

THese are the wordes whiche the Lord spake vnto Jeremy, what tyme as Nabuchonoſor the kynge of Babylon, and all his Hoſtes (out of al the kingdomes that were vnder his power) and all his people, fought agaynſte Jerusalem, and al the cities therof. Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel: Goo, and speake to Sedechias the kynge of Juda, and tell him: The Lorde ſendeth the this worde: Beholde, I wyll deliuer this citie in to the hande of the kynge of Babylon, he shall burne it, and thou shalte not eſcape his handes, but shalte be taken awaye pri- ſoner, and deliuered in to his power. Then shalte loke the kynge of Babylon in the face, & he shall speake with the, mouth to mouth, then shalte thou go to Babylon. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde, O Sedechias thou kynge of Juda: Thus sayeth the Lorde vn- to the: Thou shalte not be slayne with the ſwearde, but shalt dye in peace. Lyke as thy forefathers the kynges, thy progenitoures, were brente: so shalt thou be brent also, and in the mourning they shall saye: Oh Lorde. For thus haue I determyned, sayethe the Lorde.

Then spake Jeremye the prophete all their wordes vnto Sedechias kynge of Juda in Jerusalem: what tyme as the kynge of Babylons hoſte besieged Jerusalem, and the remnaunte of the cytyes: Namely, Lachis & Azecah, whiche yet remayned of the stronge defenſed cytyes of Juda.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the prophet, when Sedechias was agreed with all the people at Je- rusalem, that there shulde be proclaymed a lyberty: ſo that euery man shulde let his ſeruaunt and handmayde go free, Hebrue and Hebruelle, and no Jewe to holde his brother as a bonde man. Nowe as they had conſented euen so they were obedyent, and let them go free. But afterwarde they repented, and toke agayne the ſeruauntes and handmaydens, whom they had let go free, and so made the bonde agayne.

For the whiche cauſe the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremye from the Lorde him selfe, sayinge: Thus sayethe the Lorde God of Israel: I made a couenaūte with your fathers, when I brought them oute of Egypte (that they shulde no more be bonde men) sayinge: When seuen yeres are out, e- uery man shall let his bought ſeruaunte an Hebrue go free, yf he haue ſerued him ſix yeres. But youre fathers obeyed me not neither enclyned not vnto me. Ye for you, ye were nowe nowe turned, and dyd ryghte before me, in þ ye proclaymed, euery man to let his neigh-boure go free, & in that ye made a couenaunt before me, in the house that beareth my name:

But yet ye haue turned youre selues agayne and blasphemed my name: In this, that eue-ry man hathe required his seruaunte and handmayden agayne, whom ye had let go quyte and fre, and compelled them to serue D you agayne, and to be youre bonde men. And therfore thus sayethe the Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclayme freedome vnto his brother and neighboure: wherfore
I will call you vnto a freedome, sayethe the Lorde: euen vnto the swearde, to the pestilence, and to honger, and will make you to be plaged in all the kyngomes of the earthe.
Yea those men that haue broke my couenaunt and not kepte the wordes of the appoyntment, which they made before me: when they hewed the calfe in two, and went thorowe the two halfes therof: The Princes of Juda, the Princes of Jerusalem, the gelded men, the Priestes and all the people of the lande, which went thorowe the two halfes of the calfe. Those men will I geue in to the power of their enemyes, and into the handes of them that folowe vpon their liues.
And their dead bodyes shall be meat for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the feld.
As for Sedechias the kynge of Juda and his princes, I will deliuer them into the power of their enemyes, and of them that de-syre to slaye them, and into the hande of the kynge of Babylons hoste, whiche nowe is departed from you: But thorowe my commaundement (sayethe the Lorde) they shall come agayne before this citie, they shall fyghte agaynste it, wynne it, and burne it.
Moreouer I will laye the cyties of Juda so waste, that no man shall dwell therin.

¶ He propoundeth the obedyence of the Rechabytes, and sharply confoundeth the pryde of the Jewes. The commaundement of Jonadab, the ryghteousnesse of the Rechabytes. He threatneth punyshment vnto the rebellyous Jewes. He promyseth prosperyte vnto the Rechabytes, for their obedyence vnto their father.

CAPI. XXXV.

THe wordes whiche the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye, in the dayes of Joa-kim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda are these: Goo vnto the house of the Rechabites, and call them oute, and brynge them to the house of the Lorde in to some commo-dyous place, and gyue them wyne to drynke.
Then toke I Jazaniah the sonne of Jeremye, the sonne of Habazinai ah, & his brethren, and all his sonnes, and the hole housholde of the Rechabites: and brought them to the house of the Lorde, into the closet of the children of Hanan the sonne of Jegedaliah the man of God: whiche was by the closet of þ princes, that is aboue the closet of Maasi-ah the sonne of Sellum, whiche is the kepar of the treasurye. And before the sonnes of the E kynred of the Rechabites, I set pottes full of wyne, and cuppes, and sayde vnto them:
Drynke wyne. But they sayde: we drynke no wyne, for Jonadab the sonne of Rechab oure father commaunded vs sayinge: ye and Jerem. xxxv.
youre sonnes shall neuer drynke wyne, build no houses, sowe no sede, plante no vynes, yea ye shall haue no vynyardes: but for all youre tyme ye shall dwell in tentes, that ye maye lyue longe in the lande wherin ye be straungers.
Thus haue we obeyed the commaundemēt, of Jonadab the sonne of Rechab our father:
in all that he hathe charged vs, and so we drinke no wyne all oure lyfe longe: we, nor oure wyues, our sonnes, and our doughters.
Neither buylde we any house to dwell therin, we haue also amonges vs neither vynyardes, ne eyne land to sowe: but we dwel in tentes, we obey, and do according vnto all that Jonadab oure father commaunded vs.
But nowe when Nabuchodonosor the F kynge of Babylon came vp in to the land, we sayde come, let vs go to Jerusalem, that we maye eschape the hoste of the Caldees and the Assirians: & so we dwell nowe at Jerusalem.
Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye sayinge: thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: Go and tell hole Juda and al þ inhabitauntes of Jerusalē: Will ye not be reformed, to obey my wordes? sayth the Lorde. The wordes which Jonadab the sonne of Rechab commaunded his sonnes, that they shulde drynke no wyne, are full and surely kepte: for vnto this daye they drynke no wine, but obey their fathers commaunde-ment. But as for me, I haue stande vp early,
I haue spoken vnto you, and gyuen you ear- Jere. xxv. & xxvi.
nest warning: and yet haue ye not bene obedyent vnto me. Yea I haue sent my seruauntes all the prophetes vnto you, I rose vp early, & sent you worde, sayinge: O turne you, euery man from his wicked waye: amende youre lyues, and go not after straunge goddes, to worshyp them: that ye may continue in the lande, whiche I haue gyuen vnto you & your fathers, but ye wolde neither heare me, ne fo-lowe me.
The children of Jonadab Rechabs sonne D haue stedfastly kepte their fathers commaun-dement, that he gaue them, but this people is not obedyent vnto me. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel:
Beholde, I will bryngе vpon Juda and vpon euery one that dwelleth in Jerusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuysed agaynste them.
For I haue spoken vnto them, but they wolde Proverbe not folowe: I haue called vnto them, neuer- Chap. xlv. b theles they wolde gyue me no answere. Jere- Jeremy. xxv.
my also spake vnto the housholde of the Rechabites: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: For in moche as ye haue obeyed þ commaundement of Jonadab your father, and kept all his preceptes, and done accordynge vnto all that he hath bydde you:
Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, the Jere. xxxiii. q
God of Israel: Jonadab the sonne of Re-chab shall

that not fayle, but haue one out of his stocke, to stande alwaye before me.

¶ Baruch writeth (as Jeremye indyteth) the booke of the curses agaynst Juda and Israel. He is sent with the boke vnto the people, and reherseth it before them all. He is called before the rulers, and reherseth it before them also. The rulers shewe vnto the kynge the wordes of the boke. Jehudi taketh the booke, and readeth a lyttle of it, and after burneth it in the fyre. There is an other written at the commaundement of the Lorde.

CAPI. XXXVI.

A IN the .iiij. yere of Joakim ℔ sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy sayinge: Take a boke Jerem. xxx. a and wryte therin all the wordes that I haue spoken to the, to Israel, to Juda, and to all the people frome the tyme that I beganne for to speake vnto the in the tayme of Josiah vnto this daye. That when the house of Juda heareth of the plage, wherby I haue deuysed for the, they may peraduenture turne euery man from his wicked way, that I maye forgyue their offences and synne.
Jere. xviii. a Then dyd Jeremye call Baruch the Jeremi. xlv. a sonne of Neriah, & Baruch wrote in the boke at the mouthe of Jeremy, all the wordes of the Lorde, whiche he had spoken vnto him. And Jeremy commaunded Baruch, sayinge:
B I am in prison, so that I maye not come in to the house of the Lorde: therfore go thou thyther, and reade the boke, that thou haste written at my mouth: Namely, the wordes of the Lorde, & rede them in the Lordes house vpon the fastyng daye ℔ the people, how Juda, and all they that come out of the cyties maye heare. Peraduenture they will praye meekely before the face of the Lorde, and turne euery one from his wycked waye. For great is the wrathe and displeasure, that the Lorde hath taken agaynst ey is people.
So Baruch the sonne of Neriah dyd accordyng vnto all that Jeremy the prophete commaunded him, readynge the wordes of the Lord out of the boke in the Lordes house And this was done in the fyfth yere of Joakim the sonne of Josiah king of Juda, in the Jone. iii. a nynety moneth when it was commaunded that all the people of Jerusalem shulde faste, before the Lorde, and they also that were come frome the cyties of Juda vnto Jerusalem.
C Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremye
Jere. xxxvi. b out of the boke within the house of the Lord out of the treasurye of Gamariah the sonne of Saphan the Scryde, which is beside the vpper lofte of the doze of the Lordes house: that al the people myght heare. Now when Michaeh the sonne of Gamariah the sonne of Saphan had herde all the wordes of the Lord out of the boke, he went downe to the kynges palace into the Scribes chambre, for there al the princes were set: Elisama the Scryde, Daleiah the sonne of Semei, Nathan the sonne of Achbor, Gemariah ℔ sonne of Saphan, Sedechias the sonne of Hananiah, with all the princes. And Michaeh tolde them all the wordes, that he herde Baruch rede out of the boke before the people.
D Then all the princes sent Jehudi the son of Nathaniah, the sonne of Selamiah, the sonne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, sayinge: Take in thine handes the boke, wherout thou haste red before all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah toke the boke in his hand, and came vnto them. And they said vnto him: Syt downe, & rede the boke that we may heare also. So Baruch red, that they myght heare. Now whe they had herde all the wordes, they were aoaided one vpō an other, and sayd vnto Baruch: We will certifye ℔ kynge of all these wordes. And they examyned Baruch, saying: tell vs, how diddest thou wryte all these wordes out of his mouth?
Then Baruch answered them: He spake all these wordes vnto me with his mouthe, and I alone was with him, and wrote them in ℔ boke.
E Then sayde the Princes vnto Baruch: Go thy waye, and hyde the with Jeremye, so that no man knowe where ye be. And they went in to the court. But they kepte the boke in the chambre of Elisama the Scryde, and tolde the kynge all the wordes that he myght heare. So the kynge sent Jehudi to fetche him the boke, which he brought out of Elisama the Scrybes chambre. And Jehudi red it, that the kynge and all the princes, whiche were about him, myght heare. Now the kynge sat in the wynter house, for it was in the nynth moneth, and there was a good fyre before him. And when Jehudi had red al. 36. 23 or foure leaues therof, he cut the boke in peces with a penne knyfe, and caste it into the fyre vpon the harth, vntyll the boke was al brent in the fyre vpon the harth.
F Yet no man was abashed therof, or rente his clothes: neither the kynge hym selfe, ne his seruaunces, though they herde all these wordes. Neuertheles Elnathan, Dalaiah, and Gamariah besought the kinge, that he wolde not burne the booke: notwithstandynge the kynge wolde not heare them, but commaunded Jerahmeel the sonne of Hamaleel, Saraiah the sonne of Esriel and Selamiah the sonne of Abdiel, to laye handes vpō Baruch the Scryde, and vpon Jeremye the Prophete but the Lorde kept them out of syghte. After nowe that the kynge had brent the boke, and the sermons whiche Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremye: The word of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy, sayinge: Take an other boke, and wryte in it all the formerlayde sermons: that were written in the fyrste boke, whiche Joakim the king of Juda hath brent.
G And tell Joakim the kynge of Juda: thus sayth the Lorde: thou haste brent the booke, and thoughtest within thy selfe: Why haste thou written therin, ℔ the kyng of Babylon shall come, and make this land waste, so that he shall make bothe the people and catell to be out of it? Therfore thus the Lorde sayth of Joahim the kinge of Juda: There shall none of his generacion sytt vpon the throne of Dauid. His dede corpse shall be cast oute that the heat of the day, and ꝑ frost of the nyght may come vpon him. And I will visite the wickednesse of him, of his seed, and of his seruauntes. Moreouer all the euyll that I haue promised them (though they herd me not) wyl I bring vpon them, vpon the inhabitauntes of Jerusalem, and vpon all Juda. Then toke Jeremye an other booke, and gaue it Barnch the Scribe, the sonne of Nerias, which wrote therin out of the mouthe of Jeremye: all the sermons that were in the fyrste booke, whiche Joahim the kynge of Juda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them manye mo sermons then before.

¶ Sedechias succedeth Cononiah. He sendeth vnto Jeremye to praye for hym. Jeremye goynge in to the lande of Ben Jamyn, is taken, put to beaten, and put in pryson. He is deliuered by kynge Sedechias.

CAPI. XXXVII.

SEdechias the son of Josiah, whiche was made kyng therow Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babylon reygned in the land of Juda, in the stede of Cononiah the sonne of Joakim. But neyther he, nor his seruauntes, ne the people in the lande wolde obeye the wordes of the Lorde, which he spake by the Prophet Jeremye. Neuertheles Sedechias the kynge sent Jehucal the sonne of Selemiah, and Sophonih the son of Maasiah preest to the Prophet Jeremy, saying: O praye thou vnto the Lorde our God for vs. Now Jeremye walked yet among the people at that tyme, and was not put in pryson as yet. Pharaos hoste also was come out of Egypt, which whē the Caldees that beseged Jerusalem perceyued, they departed from thence.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye the Prophet, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel, this answere shal ye gyue to the kynge of Juda, that sente you vnto me for counsell: Beholde, Pharaos hoste, whiche is come forth to helpe you, shal returne to Egypt, in to his owne lande: but the Caldees shal come agayne, & fight against this cyte, wyn it, & set fyre vpon it. For thus sayth the Lord: deceyue not your owne myndes, thynkyng on this maner: tush the Caldees goo now their waye from vs: Lo, they shall not go their waye. For though ye had slayne the hole hoste of the Caldees, that besiege you, and euery one of the slayne laye in his tent, yet shulde they stande vp and set fire vpon this cyte.

Nowe when the hoste of the Caldees was broken vp from Jerusalem for feare of the Egyptians armye, Jeremye went out of Jerusalem towarde the lande of Ben Jamin to go certayne busynesse there amongst the people. And whē he came vnder Ben Jamins port, there was a porter called Jeriah the sonne of Selemiah, the son of Hananiah, whiche fell vpon him, and toke him, sayinge: thy mynde is to run to the Caldees.

Then sayd Jeremy: it is not so, I goo not to ꝑ Caldees. Neuertheles Jeriah wold not beleue him, but brought Jeremy bound before the princes. Wherfore the princes were angry with Jeremy, causing him to be beaten, & to be layd in pryson in the house of Jonathes the scribe, for he was the ruler of the pryson. Thus was Jeremye put in the dongeon and pryson, and so laye there a longe tyme. Then Sedechias the kynge sent for him, and called him, and asked him quietly in his owne house sayinge: thynkest thou this busynesse (that nowe is in hande) commeth of the Lorde? Jeremy answered: yea that it doth, and thou (said he) shalt be deliuered in to ꝑ hand of Babylons power.

Moreouer Jeremye sayde vnto kynge Sedechias: what haue I offended agaynste the, agaynst thy seruauntes, or agaynst this people, that ye haue cast me to be put in pryson? Where are your Prophetes which haue prophecyed vnto you, and sayd that the king of Babylon shold not come agaynst you and this lande?

And therfore heare nowe, O my lorde the kynge: let my prayer be accepte before the, and sende me no more in to the house of Jonathas the scribe, that I dye not there. Then Sedechias the kyng commaunded to put Jeremy in the fore entry of the pryson, and dayly to be geuen him a cake of breed, and ete no bigde meate, vntyll all the breed in the cyte was eaten vp. Thus Jeremye remayned in the fore entre of the pryson.

¶ By the meanes of the rulers, Jeremye is put in to a dongeon. At the requeste of Abdmelech the Chamberlayne, the kynge commaundeth Jeremye to be brought forthe of the dongeon. Jeremye speaketh the kynge how he myght escape death.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

SAphatiah the sonne of Mathan, Gedoliah the sonne of Phashur, Jucal the son of Selemiah, and Phashur the sonne of Melchiah perceyued the wordes that Jeremy had spoken vnto all the people: namelye on this maner: Thus sayth the Lord: Who so remayneth in this city, shal perysshe, either by the swerde, with hongre or with pestilence: But who so falleth vnto the Caldees, shall escape wynnynge his soule for a praye, and shall lyue. For thus sayth the Lorde. This cyte (no doubt) must be deliuered in to the power of the king of Babylon, and he also shal wyn it. Then sayd the princes vnto the kyng: Syr, we beseche you lette this man be put to death. For thus he discourageth the handes of the souldyers that be in this city, and the handes of all the people, when he speaketh suche wordes vnto them.

Jeremi. xxi. & xxvii.

B This man verily laboureth not for yeare of the people, but mischefe. Sedechias the kyng answered and sayd: lo, he is in your handes for the kynge may denye you nothyng. Then toke they Jeremy, and cast him into the dongeon of Melchiah the son of Hamelech, that dwelte in the fore entre of the pylon. And they let downe Jeremye with cordes into a vnged, where there was no water, but myre: so Jeremye stacke fast in the myre. Nowe when Abedmelech the Moian beinge a chamberlayne in the kynges court, vnderstode that they had cast Jeremye into the dongeon: he went out of the kynges house, and spake to ye kynge, (whiche then sate vnder the porte of Benjamin) these wordes: My lorde the kinge where as these men medle with Jeremye the Prophete, they doo him wronge: Namelye in that they haue put him in pylon, there to dye of honger, for there is no more breed in the citye.

C Then the kyng commaunded Abedmelech the Moian, and sayd: Take from hence .xxx. men whom thou wilt, and drawe vp Jeremye the Prophete oute of the dongeon before he dye. So Abedmelech toke the men with him, and went to the house of Amelech, and there vnder an almery he gat olde ragges, & worne cloutes, and let them downe by a corde into the dongeon to Jeremy.

D And Abedmelech the Moian sayd vnto the Prophete Jeremye: O put these ragges and cloutes vnder thyne armi holes, but wyst the and the cordes: and Jeremye did so. So they drewe vp Jeremye with cordes, and toke him out of the dongeon, and he remayned in the fore entre of the pylon. Then Sedechias the kynge sent and caused Jeremye the Prophete be called vnto him out of the thirde entre that was by the house of the Lord. And the kynge sayd vnto Jeremy: I wil aske the some what, but hyde nothynge fro me. Then Jeremy answered Sedechias: If I be playne vnto the, thou wilt cause me suffre wyth: yf I gyue the counsel, thou wilt not folowe me. So the kyng swore an othe secretly vnto Jeremy sayinge: As truly as the Lorde lyueth, that made vs these soules, I wil not slee the, ne gyue the in to the handes of them that seke after thy lyfe.

Jer. xxxviii. c

E Then sayd Jeremy vnto Sedechias: thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Yf eale be that thou wylte go forth vnto the kynge of Babylons princes, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and this citye shall not be brent: yea both thou and thy housholde shall escape with youre lyues. But yf thou wylte not go forth to the kyng of Babylons princes, then shall this citye be deliuered in to the handes of the Caldees whiche shall set fyre vpon it, and thou shalte not be able to escape them. And Sedechias sayd vnto Jeremye: I am afrayde for the Jewes, that are fled vnto the Caldees lest I come in their handes, and so they to haue me in derision.

Jere. xxviii.

F But Jeremy answered: Nay, they shal not betraye the: O harken vnto the voyce of the Lord (beseche the) which I speke vnto the, so shalte thou be well, and saue thy lyfe. But yf thou wilt not go forth, the Lord hath told me this playnly: Beholde, all the wome that are lefte in the kyng of Judas house, shall go oute to the kynge of Babylons princes. For they thinke, that thou art deceyued: and that the men in whom thou dyddest put thy truste, haue mastred the, & set thy feete fast in ye myre, and gone their waye from the. Therefore all thy wyues with their children shall be vnto the Caldees, & thou shalt not escape their handes, but shalt be the kyng of Babylons prisoner, and this citye shal be brent.

G Then sayd Sedechias vnto Jeremy: loke that no body knowe of these wordes, & thou shalt not dye. But yf the princes procure that I haue talked with the, and come vnto the, saying: O speake, what sayd the kyng to the? hyde it not from vs, and we will not put the to death. Tell vs (we praye the) what sayd the kyng to the? Se thou giue them this answer: I haue humbly besought the kinge, that he will let me lye no more in Jonathans house, that I dye not there? Then came al the princes vnto Jeremy, and asked him. And he told them after the maner as the kynge bad him. Then they held their peax, for they perceyued nothynge. So Jeremye abode styll in the fore entre of the pylon, vntyll the day that Jerusalem was wonne.

¶ Nabuchodonosor besiegeth Jerusalem. Sedechias fleeth. He is taken of the Chaldees. His sonnes are slayne. His eyes are thrust out. Jeremye is preserued for. Abdemelech deliuered from captyuyte, bycause of the confydence that he hathe in God.

CAPI. XXXIX.

NOw when the citye of Jerusalem was taken (for in the nynth yere of Sedechias kynge of Juda, in the tenth moneth, came Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon and all his hoste, and besieged Jerusalem, and in the eleuenth yere of Sedechias, in the fourthe moneth, in the nynth daye of the moneth he brake in to the citye.) Then all the princes of the kynge of Babylon came in, and sat them down vnder the porte: Nergel, Sarezar, Samergarnabo, Sarsachim, Rabaris, Nergel, Sarezer, Rabmag, with all the other princes of the kynge of Babylon. And when Sedechias the kynge of Juda, with his souldyers sawe them, they fled, and departed out of the citye by nyght thorowe the kynges garden, and thorowe the porte that is betwene the two walles, and so they wente towarde the wildernesse.

A Jeremias. xxxix. Jerusalem

Jeremias

But the Chaldees hoste folowed faste after them, and toke Sedechias in the feldes of Jericho, and brought him prysoner to Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon vnto Reblath that lyeth in the land of Hemath, where he gaue iudgement vpon him. So the kyng of Babylon caused the children of Sedechias, and al the nobles of Juda be slayn before his face face at Reblath. And made Sedechias eyes to be put out, and bounde him with chaynes and ans sent him to Babylon.

Moreouer the Caldees brent vp the kynges palace, with the other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles of Jerusalem. As for the remnaunt of the people that were in the cityе, and suche as were come to helpe them (what so euer was lefte of the common sorte) Nabuzardan the chiefe capitayne caryed them to Babylon. But Nabuzardan the chiefe capitayne lefte the raskall people, (and those that hadde nothynge) dwell styll in the lande of Juda, and gaue theym vynyardes and corne feldes, at the same time. Nabuchodonosor also the kynge of Babylon, gaue Nabuzardan the chiefe capiteyn a charge concernynge Jeremye, sayinge: take and cherysshe him, and make moche of him: se thou do him no harme, but entreate him after his owne desyre.

So Nabuzardan the chiefe Capitayne, Nabusesban the chiefe chamberlayne, Nergalsareser the treasurer, and all the kynge of Babylons lordes sent for Jeremye, and caused him be fet oute of the forre entre of the prison, and committed him vnto Godolias the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Saphan: that he shulde cary him home, and so he dwelt amonge the people.

Now whyle Jeremy laye yet bounde in the forre entry of the prison, the worde of the Lorde came vnto him, sayinge: Go and tell Abedmelech the Mozian: Thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, the cruell and sharpe plage that I haue deuysed for this cityе, wyl I bryng vpon them, that thou shalt se it: but I will delyuer the (sayeth the Lorde) and thou shalt not come in the handes of those men whom thou feareste. For vndoubtedly I will saue the so that thou shalt not perish with the swerde: but thy lyfe shal be saued, and that because thou hast put thy trust in me, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ Jeremye hathe lycence to go whyther he wyll. He dwelleth with the people that remayneth at Jerusalem, ouer whom Godolias ruleth. Johanan prophesyeth deth vnto Godolias.

CAPI. XLI.

THis is the maner how the Lord entreated Jeremy, when Nabuzardan the chiefe capitayne had let him go free from Ramah, whither he had led him bounde amonge all the prysoners, that were caried from Jerusalem and Juda vnto Babylon. The chiefe Capitayne called for Jeremy, and sayd vnto him: The Lorde thy God spake mightily before of the misery vpon this place: Now the Lord hath sent it, and performed it as he had promysed: for ye haue synned agaynste the Lorde, and haue not bene obedient vnto his voyce, therfore commeth this plage vpō you. Beholde, I loose the bondes from thy handes this daye: yf thou wylt now goo wt me vnto Babylon: go ther, for I wyll se to the, and prouyde for the: But yf thou wylte not goo with me to Babylon, then remayne here. Beholde, all the lande is at thy wyl, take where thou thinkest conuenient and good for the to abyde, there dwell. Yf thou canst not be contente to dwel alone, then remayne with Godolias the son of Ahikam the sonne of Saphan: whom the kyng of Babilon hath made gouernour ouer the cities of Juda, and dwell with him among the people, or remayne where so euer it pleaseth the. So the chiefe Capitayne gaue him his expēses with a rewarde, and let him go. Then went Jeremy vnto Godolias the son of Ahikam to Maspha, and dwelte there with him amonge the people that were lefte in the lande.

Now when the Capitaynes of the hoste of Juda (which with their felowes were scatered abrode on euery syde in the lande) vnderstode that the kyng of Babylon had made Godolias the sonne of Ahikam gouernour in the the lande, and that man, wyfe, and child: yea and the poore men in the lande (that were not led captiue to Babylon) shulde be vnder his iurisdiction: They came to Godolias vnto Maspha: Namely Ismael the son of Nathaniah, Johanan, and Jonathan the sonnes of Careah, Sareah the son of Thanhemeth, the sonnes of Ophai the Netophathyte, Jesaniah the son of Machati with their companions. And Godolias the son of Ahikam, the son of Saphan swore vnto them & their felowes on this maner: Be not afrayde to serue the Caldees, dwel in the lande, and serue the kynge of Babylon seruyce, so shal ye prospere. Beholde, I dwell at Maspha to be an officer in the Caldees behalfe, and to satisfye suche as come to vs. Therfore gather you wyne, corne and oyle, and kepe them in your ware houses, and dwel in your cities that ye haue in keping.

Yea all the Jewes also that dwelt in Moab vnder the Ammonites, in Idumea, and in all the countreys, when they herde that the kyng of Babylon hadde made Godolias the son of Ahikam the sonne of Saphan, gouernour vpon them that were left in Juda: All the Jewes (I saye) returned oute of all places where they were fled vnto: and came in to the lande of Juda to Godolias vnto Maspha, and gathered wyne and other fruites, and that very moche.

Moreouer Johanan the sonne of Kareah & all the capitaynes of the hostes, that were scatered on euery syde in the land, came to Gedolias in Maspha, and sayd vnto him: knowest thou not that Baalam king of the Ammonites hathe sent Ismael the son of Nathaniah to slee the? But Godolias the son of Ahikam beleued the not. Then said Johanan the son of Careah vnto Godolias in Maspha these wordes secretly: let me go, I pray the, & I wil slee Ismael the son of Nathaniah, so that no body shal know it. Wherfore wil he kill the, that all the Jewes which resort vnto the might be scatred, and the remnaunt in Juda perish? Then said Godolias the sonne of Ahicam to Johanan the sonne of Careah: Thou shalte not do it, for they are but lyes, that men saye of Ismael.

¶ Ismael slayeth Godoliah grieſully, and many other with hym. Johanan followeth after Ismael.

CAPI. XLI.

A Jer. lii. b. BVt in the seuenth moneth it happened that Ismael the son of Nathaniah the sonne of Elisama (one of the kynges blood) came with them that was greatest about the king, and ten men that were (wyne vnto Godoliah the son of Ahicam to Maspheh, and ate there together. And Ismael the son of Nathaniah, with these ten men that were (wyne to him, start vp and smote Godoliah the son of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan with the (werde and slewe him, whom the king of Babylon had made gouernour of the land. Ismael also slewe all the Iewes that were with Godoliah at Maspheh, and all the Caldees that he found there warryng vpon him.

B The next day after that he had slayne Godoliah (the matter was yet vnknowen) there came certayn men from Sichem, from Silo and Samaria, to the nombre of foure score, whiche had shauen their berdes, rent their clothes, and were all beup byrynged, incense & offrynges and meate in their handes, to offre it in the house of the Lord. And Ismael the son of Nathaniah went to (e them from Maspheh weping, to mete them. Now when he met them, he sayd vnto them: Come your waye to Godoliah the son of Ahicam. And when they came to the myddest of the cite, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah (with them that were (wyne vnto him) slewe them, and cast them into the myddest of the pyte.

C Among these foure score men there were ten that sayd vnto Ismael: Oh slee vs not, for we haue yet a great treasure in the felde, of wheate, barley, oyle and honye. So he spared them, and slewe them not with their brethē. Now the pyt wherin Ismael had cast the dead bodyes of the men, whom he slewe because of Godoliah, had king Asa caused to be made, for feare of Baasa the kynge of Israell, and the same pyt dyd Ismael fyll with slayne men. 4. Reg. xv. b.

So for the remnaut of the people, the kinges doughters and all the people that were yet left at Maspheh, vpon whome Nabuzardan the chiefe Capitayne had made Godoliah the son of Ahicam gouernour: Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah carryed them away prisoners for warre the Ammonites.

But when Johanan the sonne of Careah and all they whiche had ben capitaynes ouer the kynges hoste with him herde of al that wycked(se Ismael the son of Nathaniah had wrought, they toke their companions & went out for to fight with Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, and found him by the waters of Gabaon in Gabaon. Howe when all the people whom Ismael had caryed saw Johanan the Gene. xxxvi. c. 4. Reg. xxv. b.

son of Careah and al the other capitaynes of the host, they were glad. So al the people that Ismael had caryed awaye from Maspheh, were brought agayne.

D And when they returned they came to Johanan the sonne of Careah. But Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah fledde from Johanan with eyght of his (woorne companions, and went to the Ammonites. Then Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the capitaynes of the hoste that were with hym, toke the remnaunt of the people, whome Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had ledde awaye (when he hath slayne Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam) whom they had also returned from hime fighting men, women and children, and gelded men, whom they brought agayn from Gabaon: and went from thence and sate them downe at Beruth Camaam, which lyeth before Bethlehem, that they might go in to Egypte for feare of the Caldees: of whom they were afrayde, because that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had slayne Godoliah Ahicams sonne, whom the kyng of Babylon had made Jere. gouernour in the lande.

¶ The Capitaynes take counsell of Jeremye what they ought to do. Jeremye monysheth the rest of the people not to go in to Egypte.

CAPI. XLII.

SO all the rulers, and Johanan the sonne of Careah, Jesonias the sonne of Osaias came with all the people from the leest vnto the moost, and sayde vnto Jeremye the Prophet: heare our petition, that thou maist praye for vs vnto the Lorde thy God, and for the rest whereof there be verye fewe lefte of many, as thou seest vs: that the Lorde thy God maye shewe vs awaye to go in, and tel vs what we shulde doo. Then Jeremye the Prophete sayde vnto to them: I haue herde you. Beholde, I wyll praye vnto God youre Lorde, as ye haue required me: & lohe what aunswere the Lorde geueth you, I shall certifye you therof, and kepe not backe any thinge from you. And they sayd vnto Jeremy: The Lord of truth and faythfulnesse be our recorde that we wyl do all that the Lorde thy God commaundeth vs, whether it be good or euil. We wil harken vnto the voyce of our Lord God to whome we sende the, that we maye prospere, when we haue followed the voyce of the Lorde our God. Jere. Jere. Jere. Jere. Jere.

And after ten dayes came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremy. Then called he Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the capitaynes of the people that were with him: yea and all the people from the leest to the moost, and sayd vnto them: Thus sayth the Lord God of Israel, vnto whom ye sent me, to lay forth your prayers before him: If ye wyll dwell in this land, I shal buylde you vp, and not bathe you down: I shal plant you, and not rote you out: for I am pacified as concernynge the trouble that I haue done to you.

Feare

Feare not the kynge of Babylon, of whom ye stande in awe: O be not afrayde of hym, sayeth the Lorde: for I will be with you, to helpe you, and deliuer you fromhis handes. I will pardon you, I will haue mercye vpon you, & bringe you agayne into your owne lande.

C Neuertheles, yf ye purpose not to dwell in this lande, nor to folowe the voyce of the Lorde youre God: but will saye thus, We will not dwell here, but goo in to Egypte: where we shall neyther se warre, heare the noyse of batayle, ne suffre honger, there will we dwell. Wherefore heare nowe the worde of the Lorde, o ye remnaunt of Juda. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Yf ye be holly purposed to goo in to Egypte, and to be there as straungers: the swearde that ye feare, shall ouertake you in Egypte, and the honger wherof ye be here afrayde shall hange vpon you in to Egypt, and there ye shall dye. For all they that of set purpose vndertake to goo in to Egypte, there to take them selues of theyr mysterye, shall perysshe with the swerde, with honger, and pestylence: not one of them shall remayne, there shall none escape the plage, that I wyl bring vpon them.

D For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: lyke as my wrathe and indignacion is come vpon the inhabitaunces of Jerusalem, so shall my displeasure goo forthe vpon you also, yf ye go in to Egypte: for there ye shalbe scorned, abhorred, brought to shame and confusion: and as for this place, ye shal neuer se it more. The Lorde forbyddeth you, o ye remnaunt of Juda, that ye shal not go in to Egypte.

And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly this daye, eles shall ye begyle your selues. For ye sente me vnto the Lorde youre God, and sayd: O praye thou the Lorde our God for vs: and loke what answere the Lorde oure God gyueth the, that bringe vs agayne, and we shall doo therafter. Nowe haue I shewed and declared vnto you the voyce of the Lorde youre God, for the whych cause he hathe sent me to you. Yf ye will not folowe it, be sure that ye shall perysshe with the swerde, with honger, and pestilence: euen in the same place, where your lust was to go and dwell.

C Johanan carryeth the remnaunt of the people in to Egypt, contrary to the mynde of Jeremy. Jeremye prophecyeth the destruction of Egypte.

CAPI. XLIII.

NOwe when Jeremye had ended all the wordes of the Lorde God vnto the people (for their sakes to whom God had sent him) Azarias the son of Osaias, and Johanan the sonne of Karee, with al the proude persons, sayd vnto Jeremye: Thou lyest, the Lorde oure God hathe not sent the to speake vnto vs, that we shulde not go in to Egypt, & dwell there: But Baruch the sonne of Nerias prouoketh the agaynst vs, that he might bringe vs in to the captiuitie of the Caldees: that they might slee vs, and cary vs away prisoners vnto Babylon.

So Johanan the sonne of Karee, and al the Capitaynes of the hoste, and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the Lorde: Namely to dwell in the lande of Juda: But Johanan the sonne of Karee, and all the Capitaynes of the hoste, caryed away all the remnaunte in Juda, that were come together agayne from the Heythen, (amonge whome they had ben scattered) to dwell in the lande of Juda: Men, women children, the kinges doughters: al those that Nabuzaradan the chiefe Capitayne had lefte with Godolias the sonne of Ahikam. They caryed alwaye also the Prophet Jeremy, Baruch the sonne of Nerias, and so came in to Egypt: for they were not obedient vnto the commaundement of God. Thus came they to Taphnis. Jeremi. xliij.

And in Taphnis the worde of the Lorde happened vnto Jeremye, sayenge: C Take greate stones in thyne hande, and hyde them in the dyche wall, vnder the doore of Pharaos house in Taphnis, that all the men of Juda maye se, and saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will sende and call for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon my seruaunt, and will set his seate vpon the stones that I haue hyd, and he shall spreade his tent ouer them. Jeremi. xliij.

And when he commeth he shall smyte the lande of Egypt with slaughter, with pyson- D ment, and with the swerde. He shall set fyre vpon the temples of the Egyptians gobdes, and burne them vp, and take them selues prisoners. Moreouer he shal araye him self with the lande of Egypt, lyke as a shepherde putteth on his cote, and shall departe his waye from thence in peace. The pyllers also of the temple of the sunne that is in Egypte: shall he breake in peces, and burne the temples of the Egyptians gobdes.

C He reproueth the people for their Idolatrye. They that leue lyghter by the threatninge of the Lorde, are chastened. The destruction of Egypte and the Jewes therin, is prophecyed.

CAPI. XLIIII.

THis is the worde that was shewed to Jeremye concernynge all the Jewes, whiche dwelte in Egypte: at Magdal, at Taphnis, at Memphis, and in the lande of Patures. Thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: ye haue sene all the myserye that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem, and vpon all the cityes of Juda, so that this daye they are desolate, and no man dwellynge therin: and that because of the great blasphemyes whiche they commytted, to prouoke me vnto anger: In that they

wente backe to doo sacrifyce and worshyp
Jerem. xvij.a and xliij.c vnto straunge goddes: whom neyther they, nor ye, nor your fathers haue knowen. How be it I sent vnto them my seruauntes all the prophetes: I rose vp early, and sente vnto them, and gaue them warnynge: O doo no suche abhominable thynges, and thynges that I hate. But they wolde not folowe nor harken, to tourne from their wyckednesse, and to doo no more sacrifyce vnto straunge goddes.

D Wherefore myne indignacion and wrathe was kyndled, and brent vp the cityes of Juda, the stretes with the stretes of Jerusalem, so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe this daye. Nowe therefore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: Howe happeneth it that ye do so greate euyll vnto your owne soules, thus to destroye the men and women, chyldren and babes of Juda? so that none of you is lefte, vnto that ye prouoke me vnto wrathe with the workes of your owne handes: whe ye offre vnto straunge goddes in the lande of Egypte, where as ye begon to dwell: That ye myght vtterly perysshe, and that ye might be reuyled, and shamefully intreated of all nacyons. Or haue ye nowe forgotten the wyckednesse of your forefathers, the wyckednesse of the kynges of Juda, and their wyues, the wyckednesse that ye your selues and your wyues haue doone in the lande of Juda, and in the cityes and in the lande of Jerusalem?

E Yet are ye not sorye this daye, ye feare not neyther walke ye in my lawe & in my commaundementes that I haue gyuen vnto you and your forefathers.

Therefore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: I am stedfastly abuyded and determined to punysshe you, and to roote oute all Juda. As for the remnaunt of Juda
Amos.ix.b that purposly went in to Egypt, there to take Jeremy.xliij.c and.xlvij.a. them of their misery: I wyll take them and they shall all be destroyed. In the lande of Egypte shall they perysshe, beynge consumed with the swerde and with honger. For from the leest vnto the moost, they shall perysshe with the swerde and with honger. Moreouer they shall be reuyled, abhorred, shamed, and confounded.

For I will visyte them that dwell in Egypte,
Jerem.xxvij. as I haue visited Jerusalem: with the swerde, with honger, and with pestilence: so that none of the remnaunt of Juda, whiche are gone to dwell in Egypte shall be lefte to come agayn in to the land of Juda, although they thinke to come thither agayn, to dwell there. For none shall come agayne, but suche as are fled awaye.

F Then all the men which knewe that their wyues had offered vnto straunge goddes, and a greate sorte of wyues that stode there, yea and all the people that dwelte there in Egypte in the cytye of Pathures answered Jeremye and sayd: as for the worde that thou hast spoken vnto vs in the name of the Lorde we wyll not go wyth hearke them: but what so euer goeth oute of oure owne mouth that wyll we doo: We wyll doo sacrifyce, and offre oblacions vnto the quene of heuen, lyke as we and oure forefathers, our kynges and our heedes haue wont in the cityes of Juda, and in the stretes and lodes of Jerusalem. For then had we plentifulnesse of victayles, then were we in prosperitie, & no misfortune came vpon vs.

But sence we lefte to offre and to doo sacrifyce vnto the Quene of heuen, we haue had scarcenesse of all thynges, and perysshe with the swerde and honger. Last of all, whe we women dyd sacrifyce and offered vnto the Quene of heauen, dyd we make her cakes, and powre vnto her drynckeoffrynges, to wo her ymages, without oure husbandes wyles?

Then sayd Jeremy vnto all the people, to the men, to the women, and to all the folke whiche had gyuen hym that answere: Dyd not the Lorde remembre the sacrifyces that ye, youre forefathers, youre kynges and rulers (with all the people) haue offered in the cityes of Juda, in the stretes and lande of Jerusalem? and hathe he not considered this in his mynde? In so moche that the Lorde might no longer suffre the wyckednesse of youre inuencyons, and the abhomynable thynges whiche ye dyd? So not youre lande desolate and waste, yea and abhorred so that no man dwelleth therin anye more, as it is come to passe this daye?

Dyd not all this happen vnto you bicause ye made sacrye sacrifyce, and synned agaynst the Lorde? Ye haue not folowed his voyce, to walke in his lawe, in his ordinaunces and statutes.

Yea this is the cause, that all myschefe happened vnto you, as it is come to passe this daye. Moreouer, Jeremye spake vnto all the people, and to all the women: Heare the worde of the Lorde all Juda, ye that be in the lande of Egypte: thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: Ye and youre wyues haue spoken with youre owne mouthe the thynge that ye haue fulfilled in dede:

Yea thus haue ye sayd: We wyl not fayle, but doo the thynge that pleaseth vs: we will doo sacrifyce, and powre oute drynkeoffrynges to the quene of heuen. Purposely haue ye set vp youre owne good meanynges, and craftely haue ye fulfylled youre owne intent. And therfore heare the worde of the Lorde all Juda, ye that dwelle in the lande of Egypte.

Beholde, I haue sworne by my greate name, sayth the Lorde, that my name shall not be reherced thorowe anye mans mouthe of Juda, in all the lande of Egypte, to saye: The Lorde God liueth, for I wyll watche to plage them, and not for their wealthe. And all the men of Juda that be in the lande of Egypte, shall perysshe with the swerde, and with honger, vntyll they be vtterly destroyed.

Neuertheles those that fled away for the swerde, swearde, shall come agayne in to the land of Juda, but there shall be very fewe of them. And all the remnaunt of Juda, that are gone into Egypte, there to dwell, shall knowe whose wordes shall be found true: theirs or myne. Take this for a token, that I will visit you in this place, sayth the Lorde, and ye may know, howe that I (without doubt) will performe my purpose upon you to punyshe you. Beholde, sayth the Lorde, I will delyuer Pharao Ophra kynge of Egypte in to the handes of his enemyes, that is he after his lyfe: euen as I gaue Sedechias the kynge of Juda in to the handes of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, which sought after his lyfe.

¶ Baruch is reproued of Jeremye.

CAPI. XLV.

THese are the wordes that Jeremy the Prophet spake vnto Baruch the sonne of Nerias, after he had written these sermons into a boke at the mouthe of Jeremy, in the fourth yere of Joakim the son of Josias kynge of Juda.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israell vnto the, O Baruch: In so moche as thou thoughtest thus, when thou wast wayling. Wo is me, the Lorde hath grudged me payne to my trauayle: I haue wearyed my self with syghynge, and shall I fynde no rest? Therfore tell him O Jeremy, that the Lorde sayth thus: Beholde, The thyng that I haue builded, will I breake downe agayne, and rote out the thynge, that I haue planted, yea this hole lande. And seketh thou yet promotion? Take not for it, and desyre it not. For I will bryng a miserable plage vpon all flesshe sayth the Lorde. But thy life will I giue the for a pray whereloeuer thou goest.

¶ The prophecyeth the destruction of Egypt. Deliuerance is promysed to Israel.

CAPI. XLVI.

HEre folowe the wordes of the Lorde to the Prophete Jeremye, whiche he spake vnto the Gentyles. Their wordes folowynge preached he to the Egyptians chiefly the host of Pharao Necho kyng of Egypt, whom he was in Chaecamis besyde the water of Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon slewe him, in the fourth yere of of Joakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda.

Ye make redy buckler and shylde, ye goo forth to fight: Ye harnesse youre horses and set your selues vpon them: Ye set youre salets fast on, ye bryngе forthe speares, ye scoure youre swordes and put on youre best platis.

But alas, how happeneth it, that I se you so afrayde? why flynde ye backe? wherfore are youre worthyes slayne? Yea they run so fast awaye, that none of them loketh behynde hym. Feare folowe alle to fallen vpon euery one of the sayth the Lorde. The lightest of foote shall not flee awaye, and the worthyes shall not escape.

Toward the North by the water of Euphrates, they shall stomble & fall. What is he this, that swelleth vp, as it were a flode, rysynge & ragynge lyke the streames of water? It is Egypt that ryseth vp lyke a flode, and casteth out the waters with so greate noyse.

For they say: We will go vp, and will couer the earthe: we will destroy the cytyes, with them that dwell therin. Get you to horsback ye rude losers the charettes, come forth ye worthies: ye Mosians, ye Libeans with youre bucklers, ye Libeans with youre bowes: So shall this daye be vnto the Lorde God of hostes, a daye of vengeaunce, that he maye auenge him of his enemyes. The swerde shal deuoure, it shall be satisfied & dathed in their bloude: For the Lorde God of hostes shall haue a slayne offeryng towarde the North, by the water of Euphrates. Go vp (O Galaad) and bryng tryacle vnto the daughter of Egypte:

But in vayne shalte thou go to surgerye for thy wound shal not be stopped. The heythen shall heare of thy shame, and the lande shall be full of thy confusion: for one strong man shall stomble vpon an other, howe then shulde they not fall both together.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake to the Prophet Jeremye, concernyng the hoste of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon, which was sent to destroy the land of Egypt: Preache out therowe the lande of Egypt, & cause it be proclaymed at Magdol, at Nophis and Thaphnis, and saye: Stande fyr, make the redy, for the swearde shall consume the rounde aboute.

Howe happeneth it that thy myghty men thies are fallen? why stode they not fast? Euen because the Lorde thrust them downe. The slaughter was greate, for one fell euer fyr vpon an other. One cryed vpon an other: Up, let vs goo agayne to our owne people, and to ouer owne naturall countrey, from the swerde of ouer enemye.

Crye euen there: O Pharao kynge of Egypte, the tyme will bryng vpon you as truly as I lyue (sayth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of hostes) it shall come as the mount of Thabor, and as Lycanus stit stode in the se. O thou daughter of Egypte make redy thy gere to flye. For Memphis shall be waste and desolate, so that no man shal dwell therin. The lande of Egypte is lyke a goodly fayre calf, but one shal come out of the North to pull her forwarde. Her waged souldiers that be with her, are lyke fat calues.

They also shall fle awaye together, and not abyde: for the daye of their slaughter & the tyme of their visytacion shall come vpon them.

The crye of their enemyes shall make a noyse, as the blaste of a trompet. For they shall enuyron with their host, and come with axes, arte, as it were hewers downe of wod. And they shall cut downe her wodde, sayth the Lorde, without any distrection. For they shal be mo in nombre then the grasshoppers, so that no man shall be able to tell them. The daughter of Egypt shal be confounded, whē she shall be deliuered in to the handes of the people of the North.

Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde I wyl visit that restlesse people of Alexandria, Pharao and Egypte, yea both their goddes and their kynges: euen Pharao, and all theym that put their truste in hym. Yea I wyll deliuer them into the handes of those, that seke after their liues: Namely, into ℔ power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, and into the power of his seruauntes. And after all these thinges it shall be inhabited as afore tyme sayth the Lorde.

28 But be not thou afrayd (O my seruaunt Jacob) feare not thou, O Israel. For lo, I wil helpe the frome farre, and thy sede frome the lande of thy captiuyte. Jacob also shal come agayne, and be in reste: he shall be rych, and no man shall do him harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my seruaunte) sayth the Lorde, for I am with the: and wyll destroye all nacions, amonges whom I haue scattered the, Neuertheles I will not consume the but chasten the and correct the: yea and that with discretyon: neither will I spare the as one that were faultles.

¶ The woorde of the Lorde, agaynste the Philistynes.

CAPI. XLVII.

1 THese are the woordes, that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye the Prophete agaynste the Philistines, before that Pharao smote the cytye of Gaza. Thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, there shal waters arise out of the North: and shal grow to a great floude, runnyng ouer, and ouerrynne the lāde, the cytyes, and them that dwell therin.

And the men shal crye, and all they that 2 dwell in the lande shal mourne at the noyse and stampynge of their stronge barbed horses, at the shakynge of their charettes and at the rombelyng of the wheles. The fathers shall not loke to their children, so feble and wery shal their handes be: at the same tyme when he shall be there, to destroye the hole lande of the Philistines. He shal make waste both Tyrus, Sidon and all other that are swoorne vnto them.

For the Lorde wyll destroye al Philistyn, and the other Iles, that be deuyded from the countrey Caphtorim to come vpon Gaza, Ascalon with her other valleyes shall kepe her peace. L

How longe wilte thou slaye, O thou 5 swearde of the Lorde? Turne agayne into thy scethe, rest, and leaue of. But how can it cease, when the Lorde him selfe hath geuen him a charge agaynste Ascalon, and set him vp agaynste the cytyes of the see coste?

¶ The woorde of the Lorde agaynst the Moabites.

CAPI. XLVIII.

THus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel agaynste Moab: woo be to the citie of Nabo, for it shall be layed waste, brought to confusyon and taken. Yea thy stronge citie of Kiriathaim shall be brought to shame, and afrayd: Moab shall no more be had in honoure: Wicked counsell shall be taken vpon Hesbon. Come (shal they say) let vs roote them out, that they may be no more amonge the nombre of the Gentyles, ye ℔ they may no more be thought vpō: Thus the swerde shal persecute the: A voice shall crye frome Horonaim: With great wasynge and destruction, is Moab made desolate. 1 Num. 21. Esay. 15. Jere. 49.

And this crye shall be herde in all her cytyes. At the goyng vp vnto Luith there shall arise a lamentacion: and downe towarde Horonaim, there shall be herde a cruell and a deedly crye: Get you away, saue your liues and be lyke vnto the herbe in the wyldernes. For because thou hast trusted in thy stronge holdes and treasure, thou shalt be taken, Chamos with his preestes and princes shall goo awaye into captiuytye. Jere. 49.

The destroyer shal come vpō al the cytyes, none shall escape. The valleyes shal be destroyed, and the feldes shall be layde waste lyke as the Lorde hath determyned. 3

Make a token vnto Moab, that she get her awaye spedely: for her cities shall be made so desolate, that no man shall dwell therin. Cursed be he that doth the worke of the Lorde negligently, and cursed be he that kepeth backe his swearde frome shedynge of bloude.

Moab hath neuer bene eyche and careles frome her youth vp, she hath lyuen and taken her ease with her treasure. She was neuer yet put out of one vessell into an other (that is) she neuer went awaye in to captiuytie, therfore her taste remaineth, and her sauour is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tyme commeth, sayth the Lorde that I shal sende her trusters to truste her vp to prepare and season her vessels: yea her vessels rattell and shake to and fro. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israel was ashamed of Bethel, wherin she put her truste.

Wherfore do ye thinke thus: we are 6 mighty men, and stronge men of warre? Moab shall be destroyed, and her cytyes burnt vp: her chosen younge men shall be slayne, sayth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of hostes. The destruction of Moab commeth on a pace, and her fall is at hande. 1 Reg. 22. 2 Chro. 18. Esay. 15. Jere. 49.

All her neighbours shal mourne for her, and all they that knowe her name, shall say: O howe happeneth it, that the stronge staffe and the goodly rod is thus broke? And thou daughter Dibon, come downe from thy glory and and lye in powertye. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vp to the also, and breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get the to the strete, and loke aboute the: aske them that are fled and escaped, and say: what thing is happened? O, Moab is confounded and ouercome.

Mourne and crye, tell it out at Arnon, that Moab is destroyed. And myserye shall come vpon the playne lande: Namely, vpon Holon, & Jahazah, vpon Mephaath & Dibon: vpon Nabo and the house of Diblathaim, vpon Cariathiarim and Bethgamul, vpon Bethmaon and Carioth, vpon Bozrah and all the cyties in the lande of Moab, wyether they lye farre or nere.

The horne of Moab shall be smytten downe, and yet arme broken, saith the Lord. Make her drunken, for she magnifyed her selfe aboue the Lorde, that men may clappe their handes at her dompt, and that she also maye be laughed to scorne. O Israel, maiest thou not laugh him to scorne, when he is taken amonge theues? Yea because of thy wordes that thou hast spoken agaynste him, thou shalte be dryuen awaye. Ye Moabites shall leaue the cities, and dwell in rockes of stone, & become lyke doues, that make their nestes in holes.

As for Moabs pryde, we haue herde of it, she is very high mynded. I know her stoutnesse, her boasting, her arrogancy, & the pryde of her stomach, saith the Lorde. For her furiousnes maye neuer vpholde her w̄ stregth ne dede. Therfore shall there mourninge be made for Moab, and euerye man shall crye for Moabs sake: a lamentacion shalbe made to the men that stande vpon the wall. So will I mourne for the also, O Jazer, and for the O thou vynyarde of Sabamah.

Thy wyne braunches shall come ouer the see, and the braunches of Jazer but vnto the see: the destroyer shall breake into thy harueste and grape gatherynge: Myth and there shall be taken awaye from the tymbrefelde, and from the hole land of Moab.

There shal be no swete wine in the pressle, the treader shall haue no stomache to crye, yea there shal be none to crye vnto him: wherefore aforetyme there herde from Hesbon to Eleale & Jahaz, which lyfted vp their voyce from Zoar vnto Horonaim, that bullocke of three yere olde. The waters also of Nemrim shall be dryed vp.

Moreouer I wyll make Moab ceasse (saythe the Lorde) fromme the offrynges & encense that she hath made vnto her goddes in hygh places. Wherfore my herte mourneth for Moab, like a croude playing on heruy shaw and for the mens sake of the dyeche will my herte mourneth also, euen as a pype that pypeth a dolefull songe: for they shall be very fewe, and destroyed.

All heades shall be shauen, and all berdes clypped of: all handes bounde, and all loynes gyrded about with sackcloth. Vpon all the house toppes and stretes of Moab, there shall be mournynge: For I wyll breake Moab lyke an vnprofytable vessell saith the Lorde. O how fearefull is she? O how mourneth she? O howe doth Moab hang downe her heade, and is ashamed? Thus shal Moab be a laughinge stocke, and had in derision of all them, that be rounde aboute her.

For thus saythe the Lorde: Beholde, the enemy shall come flyenge as an Egle, & spreade his wynges vpon Moab. They shall clyme ouer the walles, and winne the stronge holdes. Then the myghtye mens herte in Moab shal be lyke the hert of a woman trauelyng with chylde. Deu. 28. viii. & Jerem. xlix. d. Jerem. xlix. d

And Moab shall be made so desolate, that she shall no more be a people, because she hath set vp her selfe agaynste the Lorde. Feare, pyt, and snare shall come vpon the (O Moab) saythe the Lorde. Who so escapeth the feare, shall fal in the pyt: and who so getteth out of the pyt, shall be taken in the snare. Esay. xxiiii. c

For I wyll bryng a yeare of vysitacyon vpon Moab, saith the Lorde. They that are able to flye, shall stande vnder the shadowe of Heshbon. For there shall go a fyre out of Hesbon, and a flame from Sion, and shall burne vp that proude people of Moab, bothe before and behynde. Esay. xxiiii. e

Wo be vnto the (O Moab) for thou people of Chamos shalt perysh: Yea thy sonnes and doughters shall be led awaye captyue. Yet at the laste wyll I bryngе Moab out of captyuyte agayne, saythe the Lorde. Thus farre of the plagt of Moab.

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst the Ammonytes, agaynst Idumea, Damascus, Cedar, and Elam.

CAPI. XLIX.

As concernynge the Ammonytes, thus the Lorde saith: Hath Israel no children, or is he without an heyre? Why hath youre kynge then taken Gad in? wher fore dwelt his people dwell in hes cities? Beholde therefore, the tyme commeth (saith the Lorde) that I will bryngе a noyse of warre into Rabah of the Ammonytes. Rabel shal be desolate, and her cytyes brent vp: and the Israelites shall be Lordes ouer those that had them in possession afore, saith the Lord. Hesbon shall mourne, for it shall be rooted out of the grounde, saith the Lorde. The cityes of Rabah shall crye out, and gyrde the selues with sackcloth: they shall mourne, & runne aboute the walles: for their kyng shal be led awaye prysoner: yea his prestes and pryncs with him. A Ezech. xxi. b and. xxv. a Amos. i. a.

Wherfore trustest thou in the waters flowes that flowe to and fro, O thou fearce doughter: and thinkest thou arte so safe (by reason of thy treasure) that no mā shal come to the? B

Beholde, I wyll bryngе a feare vpon the, saith the Lorde God of hostes, from al those that be about the: so that ye shal be scattered euery man fromme an other, and no man shall gather gather them together agayne that be fled. But after that, I will bringe the Ammonites also out of captyuyte agayne.

Esay. xxi. b. Ezech. xxv. b. Iere. xlix. a

Upon the Edomites hath the Lorde of hoostes spoken on this maner: Is there no more wysdom in Theman? Is there nomore good counsell amonge his people? Is their wysdome then turned clene to nought? Get you hence, turne your backes, creepe downe into the depe. O ye cytyzens of Dedan.

For I will bringe destruction vpon Esau, yea y the day of his vysytacion. If the grape gatherers came vpon the, shulde they not leaue some grapes? If the nyght robbers came vpon the, shulde they not take so moch as they thought were ynough?

L But I will make Esau bare, and discouer his secretes, so that he shall not be able to hyde them. His sede shal be wasted away, yea his brethren and his neighbourers, and he him selfe shall not be lefte behynde.

Ierem. xxv. b. Ezechiel. xx. b. 1. Peter. iiii. c.

Thou halte leaue thy fatherlesse children behynde the, and I will kepe them and thy wydowes shall take their comforte in me. For thus hath the Lorde spoken: Beholde, they that men thought were vnmete to drinke of the cuppe, haue dronken with the fyrste: and thynkest thou then to be free?

No no: thou shalte neither be quyte nor free, but thou muste drynke also: For why, I haue swoorne by my selfe, sayth the Lorde, y Bozrah shall become a wildernesse, an open shame, a laughinge stocke and curssynge: and her cities shall be a contynuall desert.

D For I am perfectly informed of the Lorde that he hath sent a message all ready vnto y heithen. Gather you together, and go forth agaynste them: make you ready to the battayle, for lo: I will make the but small amonge the heithen, and lytle regarded amog men.

Abdias. Olap. xi. b. Iere. xlvi. b

The pryde stomache and the pryde of thy hert haue deceyued the because thou wilte dwell in the holes of stony rockes, and haue the hygh mountaynes in possession. Neuertheles though thy nestle were as hygh as the Egles, yet will I cause the downe, sayth the Lorde. Moreouer Idumea shall be a wyldernesse: who so goeth by it, shall be abashed, & wondre at all her miserable plagues. Lyke as Sodome, Gomor, and the cities that laye there about, were turned vp syde downe (sayth the Lorde) so shal no body dwell in Idumea, and no man shal haue his habytacion there. Beholde, lyke as the Lyon commeth vp from the pleasaunt medowes of Jordan vnto the grene pastures of Etham, so will I dryue him, and make him runne agaynste her. But who is the younge man that I wyl ordeyne thereto? Who is lyke vnto me? What is he that will stryue with me? What shepherd may standre in my handes?

Gene. xix. c. Iob. xli. a

E Therfore heare the counsell of the Lorde, that he hathe taken vpon Idumea: and his purpose, that he hath determyned vpon the ynne of Theman: The leest of the flock shall teare the in peces, & lyke what sayze thynge they haue, they shal make it waste, and them selues also: At the noyse of their fal the earth shall quake, the crye of their voyce shall be herde vnto the red see. Beholde, the enmye shall come and flee vp hyther, lyke as it were an Egle, and spred his wynges vpō Bozrah. Then shall the hertes of the worthyest in Edom be as the hert of a woman trauelynge of cyyld. Vpon Damascus, Hemath and Arphad shall come confusyon, for they shall heare euyl tydynges: they shall be tossed to & fro lyke the see that can not standre styll. Damascus shal be sore afrayd, and shal flee, for drynge shall come vpon her. Sorowe and payne shall ouer take her as a woman trauelynge of cyylde.

But howe shulde so worshypfull and glorious a cyrye be forsaken? Heare therfore: her younge men shall fall in the stretes, and all her men of warre shall be taken awaye in that tyme, sayth the Lorde of hoostes. I wyll kindle a fyre in the walles of Damascus, whiche shall consume the palace of Benhadad.

As for Cedar and the kyngdome of Hasor, whom Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon smote downe, the Lorde hath spoken thus vpon them: Aryse, and get you vp vnto Cedar and destroye the people towarde the east. Their tentes and their flockes shal they take awaye, yea their hangynges and their vessell. Their camels also shall they carye awaye with them. They shall come about them on euery syde with a terefull cryc.

F Ezech. xxv.

Flee, get you sone awaye, creepe in to caues, that ye maye dwell there: O ye inhabitaunces of Hasor, sayth the Lorde: for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon hath holden a counsell concernynge you and concluded his deuyce agaynste you. Aryse, and get you vp agaynste yonder ryche and careles people (sayth the Lorde) whiche haue neither gates ne bore barres, and that dwell not together. Their Camels shall be stollen and the droues of their cattayle dryuen away.

Moreouer, these that be shauen will I scatter cowarde al the wyndes, and bringe them to destruction: yea and that thorowe their owne complotes, sayth the Lorde: Hasor also shall be a swellynge for Dragons, & an euerlastynge wyldernesse: so that no body shall dwell there, and no man shall haue there his habytacion.

G These are the wordes, that the Lorde spake to the prophet Jeremy concernyng Elam, in the begynnynge of the raygne of Sedechias kyng of Juda. Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: Beholde: I wyll breake the bowe of Elam, and take away their strength and vpon Elam I will bring the foure wyndes from the foure quarters of heauen, & wil scatter them agaynst the same foure wyndes. And there shall be no people, but some of Elam shall flee vnto them.

For I will cause Elam to be afrayde of their enemyes, and of them that lyke their lyues: and will bringe vpon them the indignacion of my wrathe, sayth the Lorde. And

I wyll persecute them with the sweorde, so longe tyll I haue brought them to nought. I wyll set my stole in Elam, I will destroye both the kynge and the prynces from thence, sayth the Lorde. But in processe of tyme, I wyl bryng Elam out of captyuytye agayne, sayth the Lorde.

¶ He prophecieth the destruction of Babylon, and the deliuerance of Israel, whiche was in captyuytye.

CAPI. L.

THe wordes that the Lorde spake vnto the Prophet Jeremy, concernynge Babylon, and the lande of the Caldees: preache among the Gentyles, let your voyce be herde, make a token: crye out, kepe no silence, but saye: Babylon shall be wonne, Bel shall be confounded, and Merodach shall be ouercome.

Yea their goddes shalbe brought to shame and their ymages shall stande in feare. For out of the Northe there shall come a people agaynste her, whiche shall make her land so waste, that no body shall dwell therin: neyther man ne beaste, for they shall flee and departe from thence.

In those dayes and at that tyme saith the Lorde, the children of Israel shall come, they and the children of Juda, weping and makyng haste, and shall seke the Lorde their God. They shall aske the waye to Sion, thyther shall they turne their faces, and come and hange vpon the, in a couenaunt that neuer shall be broken.

My people hath bene a lost flocke, my shepherdes haue disceyued them, and haue made them go astraye vpon the hilles. They haue gone from the mountayne to the lytle hill, and forgotten their folde. All they that came vpon them, haue deuoured them: and their ennemyes sayde: We haue made no faute agaynste them, for they haue displeased the Lord, yea euen the Lord which is the beautie of their righteousnesse, and that defended their fathers. Yet shall ye flee from Babylo, and departe out of the lande of the Caldees, and ye shal be as the rammes that go before the flocke. For lo, I wyll wake vp an hoste of people from the Northem lande, & bringe them vpon Babylon: these shall laye siege to it, and winne it: their arowes shall not mysse, lyke as a comyng archer shooteth not wrong. And the Caldees shall be spoyled, & all they that spoyle them, shall be satysfyed sayth the Lorde: because ye were so cheerfull and glad, to treade downe myne heritage, and fulfylled your pleasures, as the calues in the grasse: and crymmped ouer the lyke the bulles, when ye had gotten the victorye. Your mothers shall be sore confounded and they that bare you, shall come to shame. Lo he shall be the leste set by amonge the nations, both waste, and dryed vp. No man shal be able to dwell there, for the feare of the Lorde, but he shall be holy desolate. All they that goe by Babylon, shall stande styll, and be astoned, and shall wondre at all her plages.

Go forth in your araye agaynste Babylon rounde about, all ye that can bende bowes shote at her, spare no arowes, for she hathe synned agaynste the Lorde. Crye out: vpon her, vpon her, agaynste her roumde about: she shall yelde her selfe, her foundacions shal fal and her walles shall come downe, for it shal be the vengeaunce of the Lord. Yea vengeaunce shall be taken of her, and as she hathe done, so shal she be dealt withall. They shall roote out the sower from Babylon, and him that handleth the sicle in haruest. For feare of the sweorde of the ennemye, euery man shall get him to his owne people, and euery man shal flee to his owne lande. Israell is a scattered flock, the lyons haue dispersed them. First the kynge of the Assyrians deuoured them, last of all it is Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon hath broken all their bones.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde I wyll vysyt the kynge of Babylon and his kyngdom, as I haue vysyted the kynge of the Assyrians and wyll bringe Israel agayne to his pleasaunt pasture, that he maye fede vpon Carmel and Basan, and be satysfyed vpon the mount of Ephraim and Galaad. In those dayes and at the same tyme (sayth the Lord) yf the offence of Israel be sought for, there shall none be found: Yf men enquyre for the synne of Juda, there shall be none: for I wil be mercyful vnto them, whome I suffre to remayne ouer.

Go downe (O thou auenger) into the ennemyes lande, and vysyt them that dwell therin: downe with them, and smyte them vpon the backes, sayth the Lorde: do accordynge to all that I haue commaunded the. There is gone aboute the lande a crye of slaughter and greate murther, namely on this maner: Howe happeneth it, that the hammer of the hole worlde is thus broken and broken in sonder? Howe chanceth it, that Babylon is become a wylderneste amonge the heathen on this maner? I my selfe haue layed waite for the, and thou arte taken: vnwares art thou crapped and snared: for why, thou haste prouoked the Lord vnto anger: The Lord hath opened his house of ordinaunce, and brought forth the weapons of his wrath. For the thing that is done in the lande of the Caldees, it is the Lorde of hostes worke.

Their thynges shall come vpon her at the laste, they shall breake in to her pryue chambres, they shall leaue her as bare as stones, that be layde together vpon heapes. They shall so destroye her, that nothynge shall be lefte.

They shall slaye all their mighty soudyers, and put them to death. Woe be vnto them, for the daye and tyme of their visitacyon is at hande. We thynke I heare all crye by a crye, of them that be fled and escaped out of the lande of Babylon, whiche shewe in Syon the vengeaunce of his temple: yea

a berre of flew, that erye agaynste Babylō: Call vp all the archers agaynste Babylon, pytch youre tentes rounde about her, that none eskape. Recompense her, as she hath deserued: and accordynge as she hath done, so deale wyth her agayne: for she hath set vp her selfe agaynste the Lorde, agaynste the holy one of Israel. Therfore shall her younge men fall downe in the streetes, and all her men of warre shall be rooted out in that day, saith the Lorde. Beholde I speake vnto the (O proude) saith the Lorde God of hostes: for thy daye shall come, euen the tyme of thy visitacion. And the proude shall stomble & fall, and no man shall helpe him vp. I wyll burne vp his cyties with fyre, and it shall consume all that is rounde about him.

Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: The childzen of Israel and Juda suffre wrongē together. All they that haue them in captiuytye, kepe them fast, and wyll not let them go: but their auenger and redemer is myghtye, whose name is the Lorde of hostes: he shall mayntayne their cause, he shall make the lande shake, and iudge them that dwell therin, one with an other. The swerde shal come vpon the Caldees, sayth the Lorde, vpon them that dwell in Babylon, vpon their princes, and vpon their wyse men: the swearde vpon their southsayers, as for those (they shal be come fooles). The swerde vpon their mightyes, so that they shall stande in feare: The swerde vpon their horsmen and charets and vpon all the common people that dwell vnder them: so that they shall all become lyke women: the swearde vpon their treasure, so that it shall be stolen awaye: The swerde vpon their waters, so that they shall be dried vp: For the land worshipperth ymages and delyteth in straunge wonderfull thinges. Therfore shall wylde beastes, Apes, and Estriches dwell therin: for there shal neuer man dwell there, neyther shall any man haue his habitacion there for euermore. Lyke as God destroyed Sodom and Gomore, with the cities that laye there aboute, sayth the Lorde: So shal no man dwel there also, neither shal any man haue there his habitacion. Beholde, there shall come a people from the North, with a great bond of men, and many kynges shall stande vp from the endes of the earthe: They beare bowes and buckelers, cruel are they and vnmercyful.

Their voyce roareth lyke the ragyng see, they ryde vpon horses, and come wapened to fyght agaynste the: O Babylon. As sone as the kynge of Babylon heareth tell of the his handes shall waxe feble: Sorowe and, heuynes shall come vpon him, as a woman trauelynge with childe. Beholde, lyke as the Lyon commeth vp from the pleasaunt medowes of Jordane vnto the grene pastures of Edom, so wyll I dryue the forth, & make them runne agaynste her. But whome shall I chose out, and appoynte to suche a thynge? For who is lyke me, or who will stryue with me? or what shepherde maye stande agaynst me? Therfore heare the counsell that the Lorde hath gruen vpon Babylon, and the deuyse that he hath taken vpon the lande of the Caldees. The leest amonge the people shall teare them in peces, and lyke what pleasaunt thyng they haue: they shal lay it waste. The noyse at the wynnyng of Babylon shal moue the earthe, and the crye shall be herde amonge the Gentyles.

¶ Howe Babylon shoulde be ouerthrowne. Jeremye giueth his boke to Seraiah.

CAPI. LI.

THus hath the Lorde sayde: beholde, I wyll rayse vp a perelous wynde agaynste Babylon and her cytizens, that beare rayll wyll agaynste me. I wyll sende also vnto Babylon fanners, to fanne her out and to destroye her lande: for in the daye of her trouble they shall be aboute her on euery syde: Moreouer, the Lorde hath sayd vnto the bowe men, and to them that clyme ouer the walles in brasse plates: Ye shall not spare her young men: kyll vtterly all her hoste. Thus the slayne shal fal downe in the syde of the Caldees, and the wounded in the stretes. For Israell and Juda, they shall not be forsaken, of their God, of the Lorde of hostes, of the holy one of Israel: no, though they haue fylled all their lande full of synne, flee away fro Babylō, euery man saue his lyfe. Let no man hold his tōge to her wyckednes, for the tyme of the Lordes vengeaunce is come, yea he shall rewarde her agayne. Babylon hath bene in the Lordes hand a golden cuppe, that maketh all landes dronken. Of her wyne haue all people dronken, therfore are they out of their wyttes. But sodenly is Babylon fallen and destroyed. Mourne for her, bynge playsters for her wounde, yf she maye perauenture be healed agayne. We wolde haue made Babylon hole (saye they) but she is not recouered. Therfore wyll we let her alone, and go euery man into his owne countrey. For her iudgement is come in to heauen, and is gone vp to the cloudes. And therfore come on, we wyll shewe Sion the worke of the Lorde our God.

Make sharpe the arowes, and fyll the quyuers: for the Lorde shall rayse vp the spirite of the kynge of the Medes, whiche hath already a desyre to destroy Babylon. This shal be the vengeaunce of the Lord, and the vengeaunce of his temple.

Set vp tokens vpon the walles of Babylon, make youre watche stronge, set youre watch men in araye, yea holde youre watches: and yet for all that shall the Lorde go forth with the deuyce, whiche he hath taken vpon them that dwell in Babylon.

O thou that dwellest by the great waters, O thou that hast so great treasure and ryches, thyne ende is come: and the tokening of thy wynnynges. The Lord of hostes hath sworne by hym self, that he wyl fylle whelme the with men lyke grashoppers in nombre, which with a courage shall crye Clamor de-larum agaynste the. Yea euen the Lorde of hostes, that with his power made the earth with his wisdome prepared the round world, and with his discretion spredde oute the heauens. As sone as he letteth his voyce be herd the waters in the ayre waxe scarce: He draweth vp the cloudes frome the endes of the earthe. He coumeth the lyghtenynges to rayne, he bringeth the wynde oute of their secrete places. By the reason of wysdome, all men are become fooles. Confounded be all the casters of ymages: For the thynge that they make, is but disceyte, and barbe no breethe. Clayme is it, and worthy to be laughed at: and in the tyme of vysitacion, it shall perysshe.

C Euen the selfe the portion of Jacob is none suche: but he that made all, whose name is the Lorde of hostes, is the rodde of his inheritaunce. Thou breakest my weapons of warre, and yet therfore the I haue scatred the nacions and kyngdomes: Therfore the haue I scatred horse and horseman, yea the charettes, and suche as sate vpon them: Therfore the I haue scattered man and woman, olde and yonge, batteler and mayden, Therfore the, I haue scattered the shepherde and his floche, the husbande man, and his catel, the princes and the rulers. Therfore will I reuenge the cittye of Babylon, and all her citizens the Caldees, with al the euil whi che they haue wone vnto Syon: yea that ye youre selues shall se it, sayth the Lorde. Beholde, I come vpon the (thou noysome hyll) sayth the Lorde: thou that destroyest all landes. I will stretche out my hand ouer the, and call the downe from the stony rockes: & will make the a brente hyll, so that neither corner stones ne pinacles, ne foundacion stones shal be taken any more out of the, but waste and desolate waste thou lye for euer more sayth the Lorde.

Set vp a token in the lande: blowe the trompettes amonge the heathen, prouoke the nacions agaynste her, call the kyngdomes of Ararat, Mynni, and Aschanes agaynste her: nombre oute Saphar agaynste her: bringe as greate a route of horses agaynste her, as yf they were greshoppers. Prepare agaynste theym the people of the Medes, with their kynges, princes, and all theyr chefe rulers, yea and the hole lande that is vnder them.

The lande also shall shake and be afrayed when the deuice of the Lorde shal come forth agaynst Babylon, to make the lande of Babylon so waste, that no man shall dwell any more therin. The worthyes of Babylon shal leaue the battaple, and kepe theym selues in stronge holdes, their strengthe hathe fayled them, they shal be lyke women. Their dwellynge places shall be brente vp, their barres shall be broken. One pursuaunt shall mete an other, yea one poste shall come vp an other to bryng the king of Babylon tydynges: that his cyty is taken on euery syde, the foordes ouerpayd the fennes brent vp, and the souldiers sore afrayed.

For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: the doughter of Babylon hathe bene in her tyme lyke as a thrisshynge floore, but shortly shall her harvest come. Nebuchodonosar the kyng of Babylon hath deuoured and destroyed me, he hath made me an emptye vessell, he swalowed me vp lyke a dragon, and fylled his belye with my delycates: he hath caste me oute, he hath taken my subsaunce awaye, and the thyng that was left me, hath he caryed vnto Babylon, sayth the doughter that dwelleth in Sion: yea and my bloude also vnto the Caldees, sayth Jerusalem. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: Behold I wyll defende thy cause, and auenge the: I wyl drynke vp her see, and dry vp her waterspringes. D

Babylon shall become an hepe of stones, a dwelling place for dragons, a strangement and wondring, that no man dwelleth there. They shall rore together lyke lyons, and as the yonge lyons when they be angry, so shall they bende them selues. In their heate I shal set drynke before them, and they shall be dronken for sope: Then shal they slepe an euerlasting slepe, and neuer wake, sayth the Lorde. I shal cary them downe to be slayn lyke sheepe, lyke wethers and goates. E Esay.xxi.d

O, how was Sesach wonne? O how was the glorye of the hole lande taken? Howe happeneth it that Babylon is so wondred at amonge the heathen? The see is ryssen ouer Babylon, and hath couered her with his great waues. Her cities are layde waste, the lande lyeth vnbuylded & voyde: it is a land where no man dwelleth, and where no man trauayleth thorow. Moreouer I wyll vysyte Bel at Babylon: and the thyng that he hath swalowed vp: that same shal I plucke out of his mouth. The Gentyles also shal run no more vnto hym: yea and the walles of Babylon shall fall Jeremye. l.g Esay.xiii.d Dan.xiv.b.

O my people, come out of Babylon, that euery man maye saue his lyfe, from the feareful wyath of the Lorde. Be not fayntе hertes, and feare not at euery rumour that shall be herde in the lande: for euerye yere bryngeth newe tydynges, yea straunge wyckednesse and iopardye. And lo, the tyme commeth that I wyll vysyte the ymages of Babylon, and the hole lande shall be confounded, yea and her slayne shall lye in the myddest of her: Heuen and erth with all that is therin, shall reioyse ouer Babylon, when the destroyers shall come vpon her from the North, sayth the Lorde.

Lyke as Babylon hath beaten downe and slayne many of Israel, so shall there fall many and be slayne in all her kyngdome. Ye that haue escaped the sweorde, haste you, stande not styll, remembre the Lorde a farre of: and thynke vpon Jerusalem, for we were ashamed to heare the blasphemyes: oure faces were couered with shame, bycause the straunge aliauntes came in to the Sanctuarye of the Lorde. Wherfore beholde (sayth the Lorde) the tyme commeth that I wyl vysyte the ymages of Babylon, and thorowe the hole lande F Jeremye. l.a

a voyce of them, that cry e agaynste Babylō: Call vp all the archers agaynste Babylon, pytch youre tentes rounde about her, that none escape. Recompence her, as she hath deserued: and accordynge as she hath done, so deale wyth her agayne: for she hath set vp her selfe agaynste the Lorde, agaynste the holy one of Israel. Therfore shall her younge men fall downe in the stretes, and all her men of warre shall be rooted out in that day, saieth the Lorde. Beholde I speake vnto the (O proude) saieth the Lorde God of hostes: for thy daye shall come, euen the tyme of thy visitacion. And the proude shall stomble & fall, and no man shall helpe him vp. I wyl burne vp his cyteyes with fyre, and it shall consume all that is rounde about him.

Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: The chyldren of Israel and Juda suffre wyolence togyther. All they that haue them in captyuytye, hepe them fast, and wyll not let them go: but their auenger and redemer is myghtye, whose name is the Lorde of hostes: he shall mayntayne their cause, he shall make ꝑ lande shake, and iudge them that dwell therin, one with an other. The swerde shal come vpon the Caldees, sayth the Lorde, vpon them that dwell in Babilon, vpon their princes, and vpon their wyse men: the swerde vpon their southsayers, as for those (they shal be come fooles.) The swerde vpon their worthyes, so that they shall stande in feare: The swerde vpon their horsmen and charets and vpon all the commen people that dwell amonge them: so that they shall all become lyke women: the swerde vpon their treasure, so that it shall be stollen awaye: The swerde vpon their waters, so that they shall be dryed vp: For the lād wo: shippeth ymages and delyteth in straunge wonderfull thynges. Therfore shall wylde beastes, Apes, and Straches dwell therin: for there shal neuer man dwell there, neither shall any man haue his habitacion there for euermore. Lyke as God destroyed Sodom and Gomorre, with the cities that laye there aboute, sayeth the Lorde: So shal no man dwel there also, neither shal any man haue there his habitacion. Beholde, there shall come a people from the North, with a great bond of men, and many kynges shall rande vp from the endes of the earthe: They beare bowes and bucklers, cruel are they and vnmercyful.

Their voyce roreth lyke the ragyng see, they ryde vpon horses, and come weaponed to fyght agaynste the: O Babylon. As sone as the kynge of Babylon heareth tell of the, his handes shall waxe feble: Sorowe and, heuynes shall com vpon him, as a woman trauaylynge with chylde. Beholde, lyke as ꝑ Lyon commeth vp from the pleasaunt medowes of Jordane vnto the grene pastures of Edom, so wyll I styre the lorde, & make them runne agaynste her. But whome shall I chose out, and ordeyne to suche a thynge? For, who is lyke me, or who will stonde wyth me? or what shepherde maye stande agaynst me? Therfore heare the counsell that the Lorde hath gruen vpon Babylon, and the deuyse that he hathe taken vpon the lande of the Caldees. The leest amonge the people shall teare them in peces, and lyke what pleasaunt thyng they haue: they shal lay it waste. The noyse of the wynnyng of Babylon shal moue the earthe, and the crye shall be herde amonge the Gentyles.

¶ Howe Babylon shoulde be ouerthrowne. Jeremye giueth his booke to Seraiah.

CAPI. LI.

THus hath the Lorde sayde: beholde, I wyll rayse vp a perilous winde agaynste Babylon and her cytizens, that beare euyll wyll agaynste me. I wyll sende also vnto Babylon fanners, to fanne her out and to destroye her lande: for in the daye of her trouble they shall be aboute her on euery syde: Moreouer, the Lorde hath said vnto the bowe men, and to them that tyme ouer the walles in warlyke wyse: Ye shall not spare her young men: hyl downe all her hoste. Thus ꝑ slayne shal fal downe in ꝑ myd of the Caldees, and the wounded in ꝑ stretes. As for Israell and Juda, they shall not be forsaken, of their God, of the Lorde of hostes, of the holy one of Israel: no, though they haue fylled all their lande full of synne. Jeremyah. they shall mourne and fall. Though Babylo clymbe vp in to heuen, and kepe her power on hye: yet shall I sende her destroyers, sayth the Lorde.

A pitcous crye shall be herde from Babylon, and a greate myserye frome the lande of the Caldees: when the Lorde destroyeth the, and when he driueth oute the hye stomache, and proude boastyng, wherwith they haue ben as furyous as the wawes of great water flouddes, and made greate crakes with their wozdes. For the destroyers shall come vpon her, (euen vpon Babylon) whiche shall take her worthyes, and breake they? bowes: for God is disposed to auenge him selfe vpon theym, and sufficiently to recompence them. Yea sayth the Lorde) I will make theyr princes, theyr wyse men, theyr chefe rulers and all theyr worthyes dronken: so that they shall slepe an euerlastyng slepe, and neuer wake: Thus sayth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

G Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: The thycke wall of Babylon shall be broken, and her proude gates shall be burnte vp. And the thyng that the Gentyles and the people haue wrought with greate trauayle & labour, shall come to nought, and be consumed in the fyre.

This is the charge that Jeremy gaue vnto Saraiah the son of Nerias, the son of Maasiah, when he went towarde Babylon with Sedechias the kyng of Juda, in the fourth yere of his raigne. Now this Saraiah was a peaceable prince. Jeremy wrote in a boke all the miserye that shulde come vpon Babylon, yea and all these sermons that be written against Babylon, and gaue Saraiah this charge: When thou commest vnto Babylon, se that thou rede all these wordes and saye: O Lorde thou art determined to rote out this place, so that neyther people nor catell shall dwelle there any more, but to lye waste for euer: and whē thou hast red out the boke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the wyddell of Euphrates and say: Euen thus shal Babylon sinke, and be thrust wonne with the burthen of trouble that I will bring vpon her: so that she shal ne uer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the prophecyes of Jeremye.

The repeteth the ruyne of Sedechias. Jerusalem is taken of the Caldees. Sedechias sonnes are slayne before his face, and his eyes put out. The cyte is burned. The temple is spoyled and robbed. They that were lefte in Jerusalem, are caryed to Babylon. Kynge Joachym is brought forth of prison, and hadde of the kynge.

CAPL. LII.

A Sedechias was one and twenty yere olde when he was made kyng, and he raigned eleuen yere in Jerusalem. His mothers 4. Reg. xxiiii. name was Hamutal, Jeremyes daughter of Lobnah. He synned wyckedly before the Lorde euen as Joachim dyd. Wherfore the Lorde was angrye at Jerusalem and Juda, so longe tyll he had cast them out of his presence. And Sedechias fel frome the kynge of Babylon. But in the nyneth yere of his raygne, in the tenth moneth, the tenth daye of the moneth, it happened that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon with all his host came before Jerusalem, and besieged it, and made them bulwarkes rounde about it. And this besieging of the city endured vnto the eleuenth yere of kynge Sedechias. Jere. xxxix. Ba.

And in the fourth moneth, the nyneth daye of the moneth, there was so greate honger in the city, that there were no more victayles for the people of the lande. So all the souldyers drake away, and fled out of the city by nyght B thorowe the waye of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges garthyn. Now the Caldees habde compassed the cirye rounde about, yet went they men there waye towarde the wildernesse. Jere. xxxix. Ba.

And so the Caldees folowed vpon them, and toke Sedechias the kynge in the feldes of Jericho, when his hoste was run from hym. So they caryed the kynge awaye prysoner to Reblath, vnto the kynge of Babylon in the lande of Hemath, where he gaue iudgement vpon him. Jere. xxxix.

The kyng of Babylon also caused Sedechias sonnes to be slayne before his face, yea and put al the princes of Juda to deth at Reblath. Moreouer he put out the eyes of Sedechias, C caused him to be bounde with cheynes, to be caryed vnto Babylon: and let him lye in prison tyll he dyed.

Now the tenth daye of the fyfth moneth in the nyneth yere of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon, Nabuzardan the chefe capitayne and the kynge of Babylons seruauntes came vnto Jerusalem, and brente the houle of the Lorde.

He brent also the kynges palace, all the houses and all the gorgious buyldynges in Jerusalem.

And the hole hoofte of the Caldees that were with the chefe Capytayne, brake downe the walles of Jerusalem rounde about.

As for the poore people, and suche folke as yet was left in the cirye, whiche also were D fallen to the kyng of Babylon, yea and what people as yet remayned: Nabuzardan the chefe Capytayne caryed them awaye prysoners.

But the poore people of the countreye dyd Nabuzardan the chefe Capitayne leaue in the lande, to occupye the vynyardes and feldes.

The Caldees also brake the brasen pilers that were in the houle of the Lorde, yea the seate and the brasen Laure that was in the houle of the Lorde: and caryed all the metal of them vnto Babylon.

They toke awaye also the Cauldrons, Shouelles, Fleshe hookes, Spynchkins, Spones, and all the brasen vessell that was occupyed occupyed in the seruice: with the basens, cole pannes, snuffdiches, pottes, candelstyches, spones, and cuppes: wherof some were of golde, and some of syluer.

The chiefe Capitayne toke also the two pyllers, the lauer, the twelue brasen bullockes that stode vnder the seate, whiche kynge Salomon made in the house of the Lorde: and all the brasell conteyned so moche metal that it might not be weyed. For euery pyller was eighteene cubites hye, and the rope that went about it was twelue cubytes and foure fyngers thycke and round: Now vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, and euery knop was .v. cubites hye: and vpon the knoppes were popes and pomegranettes round about of clene brasse.

After this maner were both the pyllers facioned with the pomegranettes, wherof there were an hundred foure score and sixteene which hanged vpon the hoopes round about. The chiefe Capitayne also tooke Saraiah the hye priest, and Sophonias that was chiefe next him, and the three keepers of the treasurye. He tooke out of the citye a chamberlayne whiche was a capitayne of the souldyers, and seuen men that were the kinges seruauntes, which were founde in the citye: and Sephes a capitayne that vsed to muster the men of warre with three score men of the countrey that were taken in the citye. These Nabuzardan the chiefe Capitayne tooke, and caryed them to the kynge of Babylon vnto Reblath: and the kynge of Babylon caused them to be put to deathe at Reblath in the land of Hemath. And thus Iuda was leade awaye captyue, out of his owne lande. This is the summe of the people, whome Nabuchodonosor led awaye captyue.

In the seuenth yere of his raygne, he caryed awaye of the Iewes, three thousande and xxiij. In the eyghteenth yere Nabuchodonosor caryed awaye from Ierusalem eight hundred and two and fyftye persons. In the thyrd and twenty yere of Nabuchodonosor, Nabuzardan the chiefe Capitayne tooke awaye seuen hundred. xlv. Iewes pyloners. The holesum of all the pyloners, is foure thousande and sixe hundred.

In the .xxxvij. yere after that Ioakim the kynge of Iuda was caryed awaye, in the xxv. dayes of the .xij. moneth, Euilmerodach kynge of Babylon (the same yere that he raygned) gaue Ioachin the kynge of Iuda his pardon, & let him out of pryson, and spake louyngly to him, and set his throne aboue the throones of the other kynges that were with him in Babylon, he chaunged also the clothes of his pryson, & he ate with him all his lyfe long. And he had a continual lyuyng geuen him of the kynge of Babylon, euery daye a certayne thyng alowed him all the dayes of his life, vntyll he dyed.

Jerusalē synned euer more and more, therfore is she come in decaye. All they that had her in honour, despise her: for they haue sene her fylthynesse. Yea she sighyth and is ashamed of her selfe.

TETH.

Her shyttes are vnclen, she remembred not what wold folowe: therfore is her fal so great and there is no man to comfort her. O Lorde consydre my trouble, for myne enemye hathe the vpper hande.

IOD.

The enemye hathe put his hande to all the precious thynges that she had: yea euen before her eyes came the heathen in and out of the Sanctuarye whome thou (neuertheles) hast forbydden to come within thy congregacion.

CAPH.

All her people sche their breed with heuynesse, and lyke what precious thynge euerye man hath, that gyueth he for meat to saue his lyfe. Consydre, O Lorde, and se, howe vyle I am become.

LAMED.

O ye all that go fore by, beholde and se, yf ther be any sorow like vnto myne, wherwith the Lord hath troubled me in the daye of his fearefull wrathe.

MEM.

From aboue hathe he sent downe a fyre in to my bones and chastened me: he hath layde a net for my fete, and throwen me wyde open: he hath made me desolate, so that I must euer be mournynge.

NVN.

The yoke of my transgression is come of the laste, with his hande hath he taken it vp, and put it aboute my necke. My strengthe is gone: the Lorde hathe deliuered me into those handes, from which I can not quite my selfe.

SAMECH.

Dd

The Lord hath destroyed all ꝧ mighty men that were in me. He hath proclaymed a feest, to slaughter all my best men. The Lorde hath troden downe the doughter of Juda, lyke as it were a wyne presse.

AIN.

Therfore wo I wepe, and myne eyes gush out water: for the comforter that holde quicken me, is farre fro me. My children are dyven awaye, for why? the enemy hath gotten the ouer hande.

PHE.

Syon casteth out her handes, & there is no man to comfort her. The Lorde hath layd the ennemyes rounde aboute Jacob, and Jerusalem is as it were a menstruous woma in the myddest of them.

ZADE.

The Lorde is righteous, for I haue prouoked his ☞ countenaunce vnto anger. O take hede all ye people, and consider my heuinesse: My maydens and my yonge men are led awaye into captiuitie.

KOPH.

I called for my louers (but they begiled me) for my preestes and counsellers, but they perished: euen whyle they sought for meat to saue their lyues.

REE.

Consider (o Lorde) how I am troubled, my bobe is enquieted, my herte turneth about in me, and I am ful of heuinesse. The swerd hurteth me without, and within I am lyke vnto dep.

SIN.

They heare my mourning, but ther is none that will comfort me. All myne enemyes haue herd of my trouble, & are glad therof, because thou hast done it. But thou shalt bring forthe the tyme, whe they also shal be like vnto me.

THAV.

From the shal come al their aduersite, thou shalt pluche them awaye, euen as thou hast plucked me because of all my wickednesse. For my sorow is very greate, and my herte is dep.

CAPL II.

ALEPH.

A Las how hath the Lord darkened the doughter of Sion in his wrath? He for the honoure of Israel, he hath caste it downe from heuen: How happeneth it, that he remembred not his own fote stole, when he was angry?

BETH.

The Lorde hath cast downe all the glorye of Jacob without any fauour: all the strong places of the doughter Juda hath he broken in his wrath, and throwen them down to the ground: her kyngdome and her princes hath he suspended.

GIMEL.

In the wrathe of his indignacyon he hathe broken all the ☞ horne of Israell: he hathe withdrawen his ryghte hande fromr the ennemye: yea, a flambe of fyre is kyndled in Jacob, and hath consumed vp al round about.

☞ Horne betokeneth strength, power, nobylite and dominacyon.

DALETH.

He hathe bente his bowe lyke an ennemye, he hathe fastened his ryghte hande as an aduersarye: and euerye thynge that was pleasaunt to se, he hathe suspeded it downe. He hathe powred oute his wrathe lyke a fyre, into the tabernacle of the doughter of Syon.

HE.

The Lorde is become lyke as it were an ennemye, he hathe caste downe Israell and all his places: yea, all his stronge holdes hathe he destroyed, and fylled the doughter of Juda with moche sorowe and heuynesse.

VAV.

Her tabernacle (whiche was lyke a gardeyn of pleasure) hathe he destroyed: her hye solemne feastes hathe he put downe. The Lorde hath brought it so to passe, that the hye solemne feestes and Sabothes in Syon, are clene forgotten. In his deepe displeasure hathe he made the kynge and preestes to be despysed.

ZAIN.

The Lorde hathe forsaken his owne aulter, and is wrothe with his owne Sanctuarye, and hathe geuen the walles of their towres in to the handes of the ennemye. They ennemyes made a noyse in the house of the Lorde, as it hadde ben in a solemne feast daye.

HETH.

The Lorde thoughte to breake downe the walles of the doughter Syon: he spredde oute his lyne, and drewe not in his hande, vntil he hadde destroyed them. Therfore mourne the turrettes and the broken walles togyther.

TETH.

Her portes are caſten downe to the grounde, her barres are broken and ſmytten in ſonder: her kynge and princes are caryed awaye to the Gentyles. They haue neyther lawe ne Prophetes, nor yet any viſion frome the Lorde.

IOD.

The Senatours of the doughter Syon ſit vppon the grounde in ſylence: they haue ſtrowed aſhes vpon theyr heedes, and gyrded them ſelues with ſackcloth. The mayden of Ieruſalem hange downe theyr heedes to the grounde.

CAPH.

NVN.

ZADE.

Let thyne herte crye vnto the Lorde, O thou cite of the doughter of Syon: let thy teares runne downe lyke a ryuer, daye and night: reſt not, and let not the apple of thine eye leaue of. Ierem. xiii. Of crying what is from the ſcripture, haue we

SIN.

Yong and olde lye behynde the ſtreetes vpon the grounde, my maydens and yonge men are ſlayne with the ſwerde: whom thou in ſ day of thy wrathful indignacion haſt put to deth: yea, euen thou haſt put them to deth, and not ſpared them.

THAV.

My neyghbours that are round about me, haſt thou called, as it were to a feeſt daye: ſo that in the day of the Lordes wrath none eſcaped, neyther was any lefte behynde. Thoſe that I had brought vp and nouriſhed, hathe myne enemy deſtroyed.

CAPI. III.

ALEPH.

I Am the man, that (thorowe the rod of his A wrath) haue experience of miſery.

He droue me forth, and led me: yea in to darcknes, but not in to light.

Againſt me onely he turneth his hand, and layeth it euer vpon me.

BETH.

My fleſhe and my ſkyn hath he make olde, and my bones hath he broken. Gall in b

He hath set me in darcknesse, as they that be dead for ever.

GIMEL.

He hath so hedged me in, þ I can not get out, and hath layed heuy fetches vpon me.

Though I crye and call pitcously, yet heareth he not my prayer.

He hath stopped vp my wayes with hewē squared stones, and made my pathes crooked.

DALETH.

He layeth wayte for me lyke a Beare, and as a Lyon in a hole.

He hathe marred my wayes, and broken me in peces, he hath layed me waste altogether.

He hath bent his bowe, and made me as it were a marcke to shoote at.

HE.

The arowes of his quyuer hath he shot, euen vnto my reynes.

I am laughed to scorne of all my people, they make songes vpon me, all the daye longe.

He hath fylled me with bytternesse and geuen me wormwood to drynke.

VAV.

He hath smytten my teeth in peces, and rolled me in the duste.

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thynges.

I thought in my self: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lorde.

ZAIN.

O remembre yet my myserye and my trouble the wormwood and the gall.

Yea thou shalte remembre them, for my soule melteth awaye in me.

Whyle I consyder these thynges in my hert I get a hope agayne.

HETH.

Namely, that the mercyes of the Lorde are not cleane gone, and that his louynge kyndnes ceaseth not.

His faythfulnesse is greate, and renueth it selfe as the morninge.

The Lorde is my portion, sayeth my soule, therfore will I hope in him.

TETH.

O howe good is the Lorde vnto them, that put their trust in him, and to the soule that seketh after hem.

O howe good is it with stylnesse to wayte and tary, for the helth of the Lorde!

O howe good is it for a man, to take the yocke vpon him from his youth vp.

IOD.

He sytteth alone, he holdeth him styll, and dwelleth quietly by hym self.

He layeth his face vpon the earth, yf peraduenture there happen to be any hope.

He offereth his cheke to the smyter, he will be content with repruues.

CAPH

For the Lorde will not forsake for ever.

Wherfore then murmureth the lyuynge man? lette him murmure at his owne synne.

NVN.

Let vs loke well vpon oure owne wayes, and remembre oure sinnes, and turne agayne to the Lorde.

¶ The prayer of Jeremye.

CAll to remembraunce (O Lorde) what we haue suffred, conyder and se our rebukyon. Oure inheritaunce is turned to the straungers, and oure houses to the aliantes. We are become fatherlesse, & our mothers are as the wydowes. We are fayne to drynke oure owne water for money, and our owne wod must we bye wyth mony. Our neckes are vnder persecucyon, we are werye, and haue no rest. A

Afore tyme we yelded oure selues to the Egyptians, and nowe to the Assyrians, onely that we myghte haue bred ynough. Oure fathers (whiche now are gone) haue synned, & we must bare their wyckednes. Seruauntes haue the rule of vs, and no man delyuereth vs out of their handes. We muste get oure lyuynge with the perill of oure lyues because of the drouth of the wyldernes. B

Oure skynne is as it had bene brente in an ouen, for very sore hunger. The wyues are rauyshed in Sion, and the maydens in the cytyes of Juda. The princes are hanged vp with the hand of the enemyes, they haue not spared the old sage men, they haue take yonge mens lyues from them, and the boyes are pāged vp vpō trees. The elders sytte no more vnder the gates, and the young men vse no more playeng of Musyke. The ioye of our hert is gone, our merry quere is turned in to mournynge. The garlande of oure hed is fallen: alas, that euer we synned so sore. C

Therfore oure herte is full of heuynesse, and oure eyes dymme: because of the hyll of Sion that is destroyed. Ju so moche, that the foxes run vpon it. But thou, O Lorde, that remaynest for euer more, and thy seate worde without ende: wherfore wilt thou styll forget vs, and forsake vs so longe? O Lorde, turne thou vs vnto the, and so shal we be turned. Renue oure dayes as in olde tymes, for thou hast vanysshed vs now long ynough, and hast bene sore displeased at vs. D

¶ The ende of the lamentacyons of Jeremye.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE EZECHIEL.

¶ The tyme when Ezechiel prophecyed, and in what place. The obligynge and offyce. The vysyon of the foure beastes. The vysyon of the wheles. The vysyon of the throne, and of the ymage above the throne.

CAP. I.

A IT chaunced in the thirtye yere the fyfth daye of the fourth Moneth, that I was amonge the prysoners by the ryuer of Cobar: where the heauens opened, and I sawe a vysyon of God. Nowe the fyfth day of the moneth made out the fyfth yere of kyng Joachins captyuytye. ¶ The same tyme came the worde of the Lorde vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the preest, in the lande of the Caldees by the water of Cobar, where the hande of the Lorde came vpon him.

And I lokyd, and beholde a stormy wynde came out of the Northe with a greate cloude full of fyre, which w his glysters lyghtened al rounde about. And in the myddell of the fyre it was all clearе, and as it were the lykenesse of foure beastes, whiche were fashyoned like a man: sauynge, that euery one had foure faces and foure wynges.

B Their legges were streyght, but their fete were lyke bullockes fete, and they glystered, as it had bene layne scoured metall. Vnder their wynges vpon al the foure corners they had mens handes. Their faces & their winges were toward the foure corners: yet were the wynges so, that one euer touched an other. When they went, they turned the not about: but echone went streyght forwarde.

C Vpon the ryght syde of them foure, their faces were lyke the face of a man, and the face of a Lyon: But vpon the left syde, they had the face of an ox, and the face of an Egle. Their faces also and their wynges were spred out about: so that two wynges of one touched euer two wynges of an other, and with the other they couered their body. Euery one when it went, it went streyght forwarde. Where as the spirite led them thyder they went, and turned not about in their goynge.

D The fashyon and countenaunce of the beastes was lyke hote coles of fyre, euen as though burnynge cressettes had bene amdge the beastes: and the fyre gaue a glysters, and out of the fyre there went lyghtenyng. Whē the beastes went forwarde and backwarde, one wolde haue thoughte it had lyghtened. Nowe when I had well consydered the beastes, I saw a worke of wheles vpō the earth with foure faces also lyke the beastes.

E The fashyon and worke of the wheles was lyke the see. The foure wheles were ioyned and made (to)loke vpō as it had bene one whele in an other. When one wente forwarde, they went all foure, and turned them not about in their goinge. They were large, greate and horyble to loke vpon. Their bodyes we full of eyes rounde aboute them al foure. When the beastes wente, the wheles went also with them: And when the beastes lyft them selues vp from the earth, the wheles were lyfte vp also. Whether soeuer the spirite went thyther went they also, and the wheles were lyfte vp, and folowed them: for the spirite of lyfe was in the wheles.

When the beastes went forth, they stode still, or lyft them selues vp from the earth: then the wheles also went, stode styll, and were lyfte vp, for the spirite of lyfe was in the wheles.

F Aboue ouer the bedes of the beastes there was a firmament, whiche was fashyoned as it had bene of the mooste pure Chrystal, & that was spred out aboue vpon their heedes: vnder the same firmament were their wynges layde abrode, one towarde an other, and two winges couered the body of euery beest. And when they went forthe, I herde the noyse of their winges, like the noyse of greate waters, as it had bene the voyce of the greate God, & a tumultuous togyther as it were of an hoost of men. And when they stode styll, they let downe their wynges.

G Nowe when they stode styll, and had letten downe their wynges, it thondred in the firmament that was aboue their heedes. Aboue the firmament that was ouer their heedes, there was the lykenesse of a seate, as it had bene made of Saphyr. Vpon ỹ seate there sat one lyke a man. I beheld him, and he was lyke a clеare lyghte, as it had bene all of fyre with in from his loynes vpwarde,

H And beneth when I loked vpon him vnder the loynes, me thought he was lyke a shynynge fyre, that gruеth lyghte on euery syde. Yea the shyne & glysters that lyghtened rounde aboute, was lyke a rayne bowe, whiche in a rayny daye appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the symylitude, wherin the glorye of the Lorde appeared. When I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, and harkened vnto the voyce of him that spake.

¶ The prophete is sende to call agayne the people from their errour.

CAP. II.

AND then sayde he vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete (o thou sonne of man) & I wyl talke with the. And as he was commynyng with me, the spirite came in to me and set me vp vpon my fete: so that I marked the thyng, ỹ he sayd vnto me. And he sayd: Beholde, thou sonne of man: I wyll sende the to the chyldren of Israel, to their runnagates and obstinate people: for they haue taken parte against me, and are runne away fro me: both they and their forefathers vnto this daye.

E And as I was lokynge vp, beholde, there was sent vnto me an hande, wherin was a me,and it was wryten within and without, full of carefull mourynges: alas,and wo.

heade shalbe harder then Adamant or flint stone: that thou mayste feare them the lesse, and be lesse afrayde of them, for they are a frowarde housholde.

He sayde moreouer vnto me: thou sonne C of man,take dylygent hede with thyne eares to the wordes that I speake vnto the, & lerne them in thyne herte: and go to the prysoners of thy people,speake vnto them,and sape on this maner: Thus the Lorde God hath spoken: whether ye heare, or heare not. With that the spirite toke me vp. And I hearde the noyse of a greate rushynge and remouynge of the moste blessed glory of the Lorde out of his place.

I hearde also the noyse of the wynges of Ez. viii.a.x.
the beestes,that touched one agaynst an other yea and the rollyng of the wheles,that were by them,which rushynge and noyse was very greate.

Nowe when the spirite toke me vp:and ca-ryed me awaye,I went with an heuy and a sorowfull mynde,but the hande of the Lord comforted me ryght soone.

And so in the begynnynge of the moneth D Abib,I came to the prysoners that dwelt by the water of Cobar, and remayned in that place,where they were: And so continued I amonge them seuen dayes,beinge verye sorye.

And when the seuen dayes were expired, Ezec. xxxiii.b
the Lorde sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man
I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: therfore take good hede to the wor-des,and gyue them warnynge at my co-mandement.

If I sape vnto the,concernynge the vngod- E lye man,that (without doubte) he muste Ezec. xxxiii.a.
dye,and thou gyuest hym not warnynge, ne speakest vnto him,that he maye turne from his cursed waye,and so to lyue: Then shall the same vngodly man dye in his owne vnrighteousnes: but his bloude will I require of thyne hande. Neuertheles,yf thou gyue war-nynge vnto the wycked, and he yet forsake not his vngodlynes: then shall he dye in his owne wyckednesse,but thou hast dischargyd thy soule.

Now yf a ryghteous man go from his righ- F teousnesse,and do the thynge that is euell: I wyll sape a stomble stone blocke before him, & he shall dye,because thou hast not geuen him warnynge: yea dye shall he in his owne sin, so that the dedes, which he dyd before,shall not be thought vpon: but his bloude wyl I require of thyne hande.

Neuertheles,yf thou exhortest the ryght- G eous,that he synne not,and so the ryghteous do not synne: then shall he lyue,because he hath receyued thy warnynge,and thou hast dyscharged thy soule. And there came the hād of the Lorde vpon me:and he sayde vnto me:
Aryse vp,and go into the felde,that I may there talke with the.

So when I had ryssen vp,and gone forth Ezechiel.a.
in to the felde: Beholde,the glory of the Lord stode there,lyke as I sawe it afore,by the waters of Cobar.

Then fell I downe vpon my face, and the G spirite came in to me,whiche set me vp vpon my fete,and sayde thus vnto me: Go thy way and spere thy selfe in thyne house. Beholde (O thou sonne of man) there shall chaynes

be

be brought for the, to bynde the withall, so that thou shalte not escape out of them. And I will make thy tunge cleue so to the rofe of thy mouth, that thou shalte be domme, and not be as a chyder with them: for it is an obstynate housholde.

But when I speake vnto the, then open thy mouthe, and saye: Thus saythe the Lord God: who so heareth, let him heare: who so wyll not, let him leaue: for it is an obstynate housholde.

¶ The besiege of the cyte of Jerusalem is signified. The wage contynuaunce of the captyuyte of Israel. An hunger is prophesyed to come in the captyuyte.

CAPI. IIII.

THou sonne of man: take a tyle stone, and laye it before the, and dewyde vpō it the cite of Jerusalem, howe it is besieged, howe bulwarkes and stronge bytches are grauen on euery syde of it: besyde also tentes, and an hoste of men rounde about it.

Moreouer, take an yron pan, and sette it betwyxte the and the cite, in stede of an yron wal. Then set thy face towarde it, besiege it, and laye ordynaunce against it, to wynne it. This shall be a token vnto the housle of Israel.

But thou shalte slepe vpon thy left syde, and lay the synne of the housle of Israel vpō the. Certayne dayes appoynted, thou shalte slepe vpon that syde, and beare their synnes.

Neuertheles, I wyll appoynte the a tyme (to put of their synnes) o the nombre of the dayes: That hundreth and xc. dayes muste thou beare the wyckednesse of the housle of Israel. Whē thou hast fulfilled these daies, lye downe agayne, and slepe vpon thy ryght syde. xl. dayes, & beare the synnes of the housle of Juda.

A daye for a yere, a daye (I saye) for a yere, wyll I euer laye vpon the. Therfore set now thy face agaynste that besieged Jerusalē and discouer thyne arme, that thou mayste prophecy agaynst it.

Beholde, I wyll laye charnes vpon the that thou shalt not turne the fro one syde to an other, tyl thou haste ended the dayes of thy siege.

Wherfore, take vnto the wheate, barlye, beanes, grauell seede Millium and lyrches: and put these together in a vessel, and make the loues of breade therof, accordynge to the nombre of the dayes that thou muste lye vpon thy syde: that thou mayst haue breade to eate, for thre hundreth and xc. dayes.

And the meate that thou eatest, shall haue a certayne wayght appoynted: namely twenty sycles euery daye. This appoynted meate shalt thou eate daylye, from the begynnynge to the ende.

Thou shalte drynke also a certayne measure of water: Namely, the sixte parte of an hyn shalt thou drynke daylye from the begynnynge vnto the ende. Barlye cakes shalt thou eate, yet shalte thou fyrste strake them ouer with mans donge, that they maye se it. And with that sayde the Lorde: Euen thus shal the chyldren of Israel eate their defyled breed in the myddest of the Gentyles, among whome I wyll scattre them.

Then sayd I: Oh Lorde God. Beholde, my soule was yet neuer stayned: for frō my youth vp vnto this houre, I dyd neuer eate of a deed carkase, or of that whiche was slayne of wylde beastes, neither came there euer any vncleane fleshe in my mouth.

Whervnto he answered me, and sayde: Well then, I wyl graunt the to take cowes donge, for the dong of man, and to strake the breed ouer withall before them.

And he sayd vnto me: Beholde thou sonne of man, I will mynyshe all the prouision of breed in Jerusalem, so that they shal wey their breed, and eate it with scarcenesse. But as for water, they shall haue a verye lytle measure therof to drynke. And when they haue no more breed ne water, one shall be destroyed with an other, and samyshe awaye for their wyckednesse.

¶ The ryddle of the heares, by whiche is signified the destruction of the people. The cause of the anger of God towarde the people. The Lorde declareth the ryddle of the heares.

CAPI. V.

OThou sonne of man, take the then a sharpe knyfe, namely a rasour. Take it, and shaue the heere of thy heed & beard. Then take the scales and the waighte, and deuyde the heere asunder. And burne the thirde parte therof in the fyre in the myddest of the cite, and cut the other thyrde parte in peces with a knyfe. As for the thyrde parte that remayneth, cast it in the wynde, and then drawe the bare knyfe.

Yet afterwarde take a lytle of the same, and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a cuttlye of it, and cast it in the myddest of the fyre, and burne it in the fire. Out of the same fire shal there go a flame vpon the hole housle of Israel.

Moreouer, thus saith the Lorde God: this same is Jerusalem, I set her in the myddest of the heathen and nacions that are rounde about her: but she hathe despised my iudgementes more then the Gentyles them selues, and broken my commaundementes more the the nacions that lye rounde about her: for they haue cast out mine ordinaunces, and not walked in my lawes. Therfore thus saythe the Lorde God: For so moche as ye with youre wyckednesse farre excede the heathen that dwell rounde about you: (For ye haue not walked in my lawes, neither haue ye kept myne ordinaunces.) Therfore thus saythe the Lorde God.

I wyll also come vpon the, for in the myddest of the, wyll I syte in iudgement, in the syght of the heathen, and wyl handle the of such

suche a facion as I neuer dyd before, and as I neuer wyll do from that tyme forthe, and that bicause of all thyne abhominacions. For in the, fathers shall be slayne to eate theyr owne sonnes, and the sonnes theyr owne fathers. Suche a course wyl I kepe in the, and the hole remnaunt wyll I scatter in to al the wyndes.

Wherfore as truthe as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) seinge thou hast defyled my Sanctuarye with all maner abhominacions, and with all thy shamefull offences. For this cause wyll I also destroye the. Myne eye shall not entreate the, neither will I spare the.

One thyrde part within the, shal dye of the pestilence and of hunger: An other thirde part shall be slayne rounde about the, with the swerde: The other thirde parte that remayneth wil I scatter abrode towarde al the wyndes, and drawe out the swerde after the. Thus I will perfourme my indignacion, and let my wrath agaynst them and cole my selfe. So that when I haue fulfylled myne angre agaynste them, they shall knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche with a feruente gelousye haue spoken it.

Moreouer I wyll make the waste and abhorred before all the heathen that dwell about the, and in the syghte of all them that go by the: so that when I punishe the in my wrathe, in myne angre, and with the plage of my hoote displeasure, thou shalte be a verye abhominacion, shame, a gasynge and wondring vnto all the heathen that lye about the.

Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, & it shall come to passe, when I shote among them the pestilious darte of hunger, whiche shall be but death: Yea, therfore shall I shote them, bycause I wyll destroye you. I wyll encrease hunger, and myngle all the prouision of breed amonge you.

Plages and myserye wyl I sende you, yea and wylde beastes also to destroy you. Pestilence and bloodshedyng shal come vpon you, and the swerde will I bringe ouer you. Euen I the Lorde haue sayd it.

¶ He sheweth that the people shall be plaged for the synne of Idolatrye. He prophecyeth the ouerthrowe of the remnaunt of the people, and their deliuerance. The destruction of the frowarde is yet foreseen.

CAPI. VI.

AND the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the mountaynes of Israel, that thou mayste prophecye vnto them, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde God, ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus hath the Lorde God spoken to the mountaynes, hylles, valleys and dales.

Beholde, I wyll bringe a swerde ouer you, and destroye youre hye places: I wyll cast downe your aulters, and breake downe your temples. Your slayne men wyll I laye before your goddes, and the dead carkases of the children of Israel wyll I caste before theyr ymages, your bones wyll I destroye rounde about your aulters and dwellynge places.

The cityes shall be desolate, the hyll chapels layde waste: your aulters destroyed, and broken: your goddes caste downe, and taken awaye, your temples layd euen with the grounde, your owne workes clene roted out.

Your slayne men shal lye among you, that ye maye learne to knowe howe that I am the Lorde. Those that amonges you haue escaped the swerde will I leaue among the Gentiles, for I will scatter you among the nacions. And they that escape from you shall thynke vpon me amonges the heathen, where they shalbe in captiuitie.

So for that horrible and vnfaythful hert of theirs, wherwith they ran awaye fro me, I wil breake it: yea and put oute those eyes of theyrs, that commit fornication with their goddes.

Then shal they be ashamed, and displeased with them selues, for the wickednesses and abhominacions which they haue wrought, and shall learne to knowe howe that it is not in vayne that I the Lorde spake to bringe such misery vpon them.

The Lorde sayd moreouer vnto me: Smite thyne handes togyther, and stampe with thy feete, and saye: Wo worth all the abhominacions and wickednesses of the house of Israel, for bicause of them they shal perysh with the swerde, with hunger, & with pestilence. Who so is farre of, shall dye of the pestilence: he that is nye at hande, shall perysshe with the swerde: and the other that be besieged, shall dye of hunger.

Thus wyll I satisfye my wrothfull displeasure vpon them. And so shall ye learne to know that I am the Lorde, when your slayne men lye amonge youre goddes, and aboute youre aulters: vpon all hye hylles and toppes of mountaynes, amonge all grene trees, amonge all thycke okes: euen in the places where they dyd sacrifyce to all theyr goddes. I wyll stretche myne hande ouer vpon them, and wyll make the lande waste: in so that it shall lye desolate and voyde, from the wyldernesse of Diblathath forthe, throwe all them habitacions, to learne them for to know that I am the Lorde.

¶ The ende of all the lande of Israel shall shortly come. The cause of the destruction shewed. The prophetes commanded to shewe the summe of the matter that are at hande.

CAPI. VII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: the I said, O thou sonne of man. Thus sayth the Lord God vnto the lande of Israell: The ende commeth, yea verily the ende cometh vpon al the foure corners of the erth.

But now shal the ende come vpon the: for I wyll sende my wrathe vpon the and wyll punysshe the: accordynge to thy wayes, and rewarde the after all thy abhominacyons.

Eze.vii.b.iii.a Myne eye shall not ouerse the, neyther wyl I spare the, but rewarde the accordynge to thy wayes, and declare thy abhominacyons. Then shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, one mysery and plage shall come after an other: the ende is here. The ende (I saye) that wayteth for the, is come alredye, the houre is come agaynste the, that dwellest in the lande.

B The tyme is at hande, the daye of sedicion is harde by, and no glad tydynges vpon the mountaynes. Therfore I wyll shortly poure out my sore displeasure vpon the, and fulfil my wrathe vpon the. I wyll iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the all thy abhominacions.

Eze.vii.b.iii.a

C Myne eye shall not ouerse the, neyther wyll I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes, and shewe thy abhominacyons, to lerne you for to knowe howe that I am the Lorde that smyteth. Beholde, the daye is here, the daye is come, the houre is runne out, the rodde flourisheth, wylfulnesse waxeth greene, malicyous violence is growen vp, and the vngodly waxen to a staffe. Yet shall there no complaynte be made for them, nor for the trouble that shall come of these thynges.

D The tyme commeth, the day draweth nyer: Who so byeth, let him not reioyce: he that selleth let him not be sory, for why? trouble shal come in the middest of all ecll: so that the seller shall not come agayne to the byer, for neyther of them both shall lyue.

For the vision shal come so greatly ouer al that it shall not be hyndred: No man also with his wyckednesse shall be able to saue his owne lyfe. The trompetters shal ye blowe and make you all redye, but no man shall go to the batel, for I am wroth with all the hole multitude.

E The swerde shall be without, pestylence and hunger within: so that who so is in the felde, shall be slayne with the swerde: and he Deut.xxxii.d. that is in the cityе shall perishe with hunger and pestilence.

And suche as escape and flee from amonge them, shal be vpon the hylles, lyke as the doues in the feldes: euery one shal be afrayde because of his owne wickednesse.

All handes shal be let downe, and al knees F shall be weake as the water: they shal gyrde them selues with sacke clothe, feare shall fall vpon them. Their faces shall be confounded, Esay.xlvii.b Jere.xl.viii.b Sophon.i.b Ezech.xxi.b Iouel.ii.a.b & clappe yr hands, & they shall bedes bald: their syluer shal lye in the stretes, and their golde shall be defyled: for their syluer and golde maye not rescue them, in the day of the fearfull wrath of the Lorde.

They shall not satisfye their hongry soules, neither fyll their empty bellyes therwith: For it is become their owne decaye thorowe their wickednesse: because they made therof not onely costlye iewels for their pompe and pryde, but also abhominable ymages and idols. For this cause wyl I make the to be abhorred.

Moreouer I wyll geue it in to the handes G of the straungers to be spoyled, and to the wicked for to be robbed, and they shall destroye it. My face wyll I turne from them, my treasury shall be defyled: for the theues shall go in to it and vnspende it. I wil make cleane rydaunce, for the lande is full fylled with vnrighteous iudgement of innocent blood, & the citye is full of abhominacions. Wherfore I wil bryng the most cruel tyrannes from amonge the heathen, to take their houses in possession. I will make the pompe of the proude to ceasse, and they shall take in their Sanctuaryes. When this trouble commeth, they shal seke peax, but they shall haue none. One mischefe and sorow shall followe an other, and one rumour shall come after an other. Then shal they seke visions in vayne at their prophetes.

The lawe shall be gone from the preestes, and wysdome from the elders. The kynge shall mourne, the princes shall be clothed in heuynesse, and the handes of the people in the lande shall tremble for feare. I wyll doo vnto them after their owne wayes, and accordynge to their owne iudgemences wyll I iudge them: to lerne them for to know that I am the Lorde.

The vpperaunce of the similitude of God. Ezechiel is brought vnto Jerusalem in the spirite. The Lorde sheweth the Prophete the Idolatries of the house of Israel, and chefely of the preestes.

CAPI. VIII.

IT happened that in the sixte yere, the fifte daye of the sixte moneth I sat in my house A and the Lordes of the counsel of Juda with me: and the hande of the Lorde God fell euen there vpon me.

And as I loked vp, I saw as it were a lyke nesse of fire from his lovnes downeward, and and from his lovnes vpwarde it shyned marueylous cleere. This similitude stretched oute an hande, and toke me by the heery lockes of B my heed, and the spirite lyfte me vp betwixt Dan.i. heuen and earthe: and God broughte me in a vyson to Jerusalem, in to the entrye of the inner porte that lyeth towarde the north: there stode an ymage, with whome he that hathe all thynges in his power, was very wroth.

And beholde, the glorye of the God of Israel was in the same place: euen as I had sene it afore in the felde. And he sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of man, O lyfte vp thyne eyes, and loke towarde the north. Then lyfte I vp C myne eyes towarde the north: and beholde, beyde beſyde the poſt northward, there was an aulter, made vnto the ymage of prouocation in the very entryng in. And he ſayd furthermore vnto me: Thou ſon of man, ſeſt thou what theſe do? Seſt thou the great abhominations that the houſe of Iſrael commit in this place which ought not to be done in my Sanctuary? But turne the about, and thou ſhalte ſe yet greater abhominations. And with ſ brought he me to the court gate: and when I lokid D beholde, there was an hole in the wal. Then ſayd he vnto me: thou ſonne of man, bygge thorowe the wall. And when I bygged thorowe the wall: beholde, there was a doore. And he ſayd vnto me: Go thy waye in, and loke what wycked abhominations they do there. So I went in and ſawe: and beholde, there were all maner ymages of wormes and beaſtes, al phoules and abhominacions of the houſe of Iſrael payntid euery aut rounde about the wall.

There ſtode alſo before the ymages thre ſcore and ten lordes of the counſel of ſ houſe of Iſrael: and in the myddeſt of them ſtode Jaazaniah the ſonne of Saphan: And euery one of them had a cenſour in his handē, and oute of the cloude there wente a ſmoke, as it hadde ben a cloude. Then ſayd he vnto me: E Thou ſonne of man, haſt thou ſene what the ſenatours of the houſe of Iſrael do ſecretly, euery one in his chambre? For they ſay: tuſh the Lorde ſeeth vs not, the Lorde regardeth not the worlde. And he ſayd vnto me: Turne the yet agayne, and thou ſhalte ſe the greate abhominations that they do. And with that he brought me to the dore of the poſte of the Lordes houſe towarde the north. And beholde there ſate women mourninge for Thamus. Then ſayde he vnto me: haſte thou ſene this thou ſonne of man? Turne the about, & thou ſhalt ſe yet greater abhominacio. 9.

F And ſo he brought me in to the inwarde courte of the Lordes houſe: & beholde at the poſte of the Lordes houſe, betwixte the porte entrye and the aulter, there were fyue and twentye men, that tourned their backs vpon the temple of the Lorde, and their faces towarde the Eaſt, and thoſe worſhypped the ſonne.

And he ſayd vnto me: haſt thou ſene this ſ G ſonne of man? Thynketh the houſe of Iſrael that it is but a tryfle, to do their abhominacions here? Shoulde they fyll the lande full of wyckedneſſe, and vnderſtode to prouoke me vnto vnger? Yea and purpoſely to caſte vp their noſes vpon me? Therefore wyll I alſo do ſome thynge in my wrothfull diſpleaſure, ſo that myne eye ſhall not ouerſe them, neyther wyll I ſpare them. Yea and thoughe they crye in myne eares with loude voyce, yet wyll I not heare them.

¶ The deſtruction of Idolaters, and the reuocacion of the righteous. They that ſhall be ſaued are marked. They that are vnmarked are ſlayne. A complaynte of the Prophete for the deſtruction of the people.

CAPI. IX.

HE cryed alſo with a loude voyce in myne eares, ſayinge: Come here ye rulers of the cite, euery man with his weapenid handē to the ſlaughter. Then came there ſixe men oute of the ſtreate of the vpper porte towarde the North, and euery man a weapon in his handē to the ſlaughter. There was one amongeſt them that had on him a lynnen rayment, and a writers ynckhorne by his ſyde.

These went in & ſtode beſyde the braſen aul- B tre: for the glory of ſ Lorde was gone away Exodus 25. from the Cherub, and was come down to the Numer. 7. threſholde of the houſe, and he called the man that had the lynnen rayment vpon him, and the writers ynckhorne by his ſyde, and the Lorde ſayd vnto him: Go thy waye thorow the cite of Jeruſalem, & ſet this marke Thau Exod. 12. vpon the foreheades of them that mourne Apoc. 7. and are ſorye for all the abhominacions that be done therin. And to the other he ſayd that I might heare: Go ye after him thorow the cite, ſlee, ouerſe none, ſpare none, kyll and deſtroye both olde men and yong maydens, children and wyues.

But as for thoſe that haue this marke Than vpon them, ſe that ye touch them not: and begyn at my Sanctuarye. Then they be- Jeremy 25. gan at the elders whiche were in the temple, Ezech. 8. for he had ſayd vnto them: when ye haue defiled the temple, and fylled the courte with the ſlayne, then go your waye forth. So they went out, and ſlewe downe thorow the cite. Now when they had ſene the ſlaughter, and I yet eſcaped, I fell downe vpon my face, and cryed, ſayinge: O Lorde, wilte thou then deſtroye all the reſidue of Iſrael in thy ſore diſpleaſure, that thou haſt powred vpon Jeruſalem? Then ſayd he vnto me: the wyckednes of the houſe of Iſrael and Juda is verye great, ſo that the lande is full of bloode, and the cite full of vnſaythfulneſſe. For they ſay: Tuſhe the Lorde regardeth not the earthe, he ſeeth vs not.

Therfore wyll I vpon them, myne eye D Ezech. 8. ſhall not ouerſe them, neyther wyll I ſpare Eſay. 59. them, but wyll recompence their wyckedneſſe Ezechiel. 11. vpon their heades. And beholde, the Ezech. 10. man that had the lynnen rayment vpon him and the writers ynckhorne by his ſyde, talde all the matter howe it happened, and ſayde: Lorde, as thou haſt commaunded me, ſo haue I done.

¶ Of the man that tooke fyre out of the middeſt of the wheles and of the Cherubyns, in token of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. A rehearſall of the viſyon of the wheles, of the beaſtes, and of the Cherubyns.

CAPI. X.

AND as I lokid beholde in the firmament that was aboue the Cherubyns there appered the ſemblitude of a ſtole E Ezechiel. 1. of Saphir vpon them: Then ſayde he vnto sate therin to him that had the lynen raymte vpon him: Crepe in betwen the wheles that are vnder the Cherubins, and take them hand full of hote coles out from betwene the Cherubyns, and cast them ouer the citye. And he crepte in that I myght se.

Now the Cherubyns stode vpon the rigdt syde of the house, when the man went in, and the cloude fylled the innermer courte. But the glorye of the Lorde remoued fromе the Cherubyns, and came vpon the threshold of the house, so that the temple was ful of cloudes, and the courte was full of the shyne of the Lordes glory. Yea and the sounde of the Cherubins wynges was herde in to the fore courte, lyke as it had ben the voyce of the almighty God when he speaketh.

Ezechiel.10.a

Now when he hadde spoken the man that was clothed in lynen, to go and take the hote coles from the mydest of the wheles, which were vnder the Cherubyns: he wente and stode besyde the wheles. Then the one Cherub reached forthe his hande from vnder the Cherubins, vnto the fire that was betwene the Cherubyns, and toke therof, and gaue it vnto him that hadde on the lynnen rayment in his hande: which toke it, and went oute.

B And vnder the wynges of the Cherubyns, there appered the lykenesse of a mans hande: I sawe also foure wheles besyde the Cherubyns, so that by euery Cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles were (to loke vpon) after the facyon of the precyous stone of Thasis: yet (vnto the syght) they were facyoned and lyke as yf one whele had ben in an other.

When they wente forthe, they wente all C foure together, not turnynge about in their goynge: But where the fyrst wente thyther wente they after also, so that they tourned not about in their goynge. Their hole bodyes, their backes, their handes and wynges, yea and the wheles also were all full of eyes rounde about them all foure. And I herde him call the wheles Galgal (that is) a round boule. Euery one of them had four faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of man, the thyrde of a lyon, the fourth of an Egle, and they were lifted vp about. This is the beest that I sawe at the water of Cobar. Now when the Cherubyns went the wheles went with them, and when the Cherubyns stoke their wynges to lifte them selues vpwarde, the wheles remayned not behynde, but were with them also. Whatsoeuer when they stode, there stode also: And when they were lyfte vp, the wheles were lyfte vp also with them, for the spirite of lyfe was in the wheles.

Ezechiel.10.b

D Then the glory of the Lorde was lyfte vp from the threshold of the temple, and remayned vpo the Cherubins: And the Cherubins flackered with their wynges, and lift them selues vp fromе the earthe: so that I sawe when they wente, and the wheles with them. And they stode at the east syde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde. So the glorye of the Lorde was vpon them. This is the beast that I sawe vnder the God of Israel, by the water of Cobar. And I perceyued, that it was the Cherubyns. Euery one had foure faces, and euerye one foure wynges, and vnder the wynges, as it were mennes handes. Lowe the figure of their faces was, euen as I had sene them, by the water of Cobar, and so was the countenaunce of them: Euerye one in his goynge wente strayght forwarde.

Who they were that made the people of Israel to erre. Agaynst them he propheseyeth, threwynge them how they shall be dyspersed abrode. That remnaunt of the herte commeth of God, otherwyse can we not walcke in his commaundementes. He threatneth them that leane vnto their owne counsailes.

CAPI. XI.

MOreouer the spirite of the Lorde lyfte me vp, and brought me vnto the East porte of the Lordes house. And beholde there were. xxv. men vnder the porte amonge whom I sawe Jaazaniah the sonne of Azur, and Pheltiah the sonne of Bananiah the rulers of the people. Then sayd the Lorde vnto me: thou son of man, these men ymagin mischefe, and a wicked counsell take they in this city, sayinge: tush, there is no destruction at hand, let vs buylde houses: this Jerusalem is the caudron, & we be the flesh. Therfore shalt thou prophecy vnto them, yea prophecy shalt thou vnto them, o sonne of man. And with that fell ꝑ spirite of the Lorde vpon me, and sayde vnto me: Speake, thus sayth the Lorde:

I

On this maner haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israel) and I knowe the ymaginacyons B of youre hertes. Many one haue ye murthered in this citye, and fylled the stretes full of the slayne. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: The slayne men that ye haue layen on the grounde in this citye, are the flesshe, and this citye is the caudron: But I will bringe you oute of it: ye haue drawen oute the swerde, euen so will I also bringe a swerde ouer you, sayth the Lorde God: I will bryng you oute of this citye and delyuer you in to your enemyes hande, and will condemne you. Ye shall be slayne in all the costes of Israell, I will be auenged of you: to learne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Ezechiel.11.a

This citye shall not be your cauldron, neither shall ye be the flesshe therin: but in the costes of Israel will I punysshe you, that ye maye knowe, that I am the Lorde: in whose commaundementes, ye haue not walked ne kepte his lawes: but haue doone after the customes of the heathen that lye rounde about you.

Leuit.26.a

Now when I preached, Pheltiah the son of C Bananiah dyed, then fell I downe vpon my face, and cryed with a loude voyce: O Lorde God, wylt thou then vtterly destroye all the remnaunt remnaunt in Israel? And so the worde of the Lorde came to me on this maner: thou sonne of man: thy brethren, thy kynsfolke, and the hole house of Juda, whiche dwell at Jerusalem saye: they be gone farre from the Lord, but the lande is geuen vs in possession. Therfore tell them, thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyl sende you farre of among the Gentyles, and scatre you amonge the nations, and I will halow you but a litle in the landes where ye shall come.

Tell them also thus sayth the Lorde God: I will gather you agayne out of the nations, and bringe you from the countreyes where ye be scatred, and will geue you the land of Israel agayne: and thither shall ye come. And as for all impedimentes, and all your abhominacions. I wil take them awaye.

And I will geue you one herte, and I will plante a newe spirite within youre bowels. That stony hert wyll I take out of your body, and geue you a fleshly hert: that ye may walke in my commaundmentes, & kepe mine ordinaunces and do them, that ye maye be my people, and I your God. But soke whose hertes are disposed to folowe their abhominacions, and wicked iourneyes: those mens dedes wil I bringe vpon their owne heades, sayth the Lorde God.

After this dyd the Cherubins lifte vp their wynges, and the wheles went with them, & the glory of the Lorde was vpon them. And the glory of the Lorde went vp frō the myddest of the citye, and stode vpon the mounte of the citye towarde the east. But the winde toke me vp, and in a vision (which came by the spirite of God) it brought me agayne in to Caldea amonge the prisoners. Then the vision that I had sene, vanished awaye fro me. So I spake vnto the prisoners al the woordes of the Lord whiche he had shewed me.

CAPL. XII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou son of man, thou dwellest in the myddest of a frowarde housholde whiche haue eyes to se, and yet se not: eares haue they to heare, and yet heare they not, for they are a stubborn housholde. Therfore (o thou son of man) make thy gere redy to flyt, and go forth by fayre day light, that they may se: Yea euen in their sight shalt thou go from thy place to an other place: yf peraduenture they wil consider that they be an vnobedient housholde.

Thy gere that thou hast made redy to flyt withall, shalt thou beare out by fayre day light, that they maye se: and thou thy selfe shalt go forth also at euen in their sight, as a man doth when he flyteth. Digge thorowe the wall, that they maye se, and beare thorow it the same thing that thou takest vp in their sight. As for thy selfe, thou shalte go forth in the darke. Cyde thy face that thou se not the erth, for I haue made the a shewe taken vnto the house of Israel. Now as the Lord commaunded me, so I dyd: the gere that I had made redy, brought I out by daye. At euen I brake downe an hole thorow the wall with my hande: and whē it was darke I toke the gere vpon my shoulders, and bare them out in their sight.

And in the morning came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, saying: Thou son of man, ys not Israel that frowarde housholde aske the, and saye: what doest thou there? Then tel them, thus sayth the Lorde God: This punishment toucheth the chiefe rulers at Jerusalem, and all the house of Israel that dwel among the. Tell them, I am your shewe token: lyke as I haue wrought, so shall it happen vnto you. Ye shal ye also, and go in to captiuite. The chiefest that is among you, shal take his shoulders in the darke, & get him awaye. Ye shal breake downe the wall to cary stuffe therethorow. He shall couer his face that he se not the ground with his eyes.

My lyne wyll I spreade out vpon hym, and catche him in my nette and carye him to Babylon, in the lande of the Caldees, which he shall not se, and yet shall he dye there. As for all his helpers, and all his hoostes, that be about hym, I wyll scatter them towarde all the wyndes, and drawe out a swearde after them. So when I haue scattered them amonge the heathen, and strowed them in the landes, they shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

But I wil leaue a litle nombre of the from the swerde, hunger, & pestilence, to tel all their abhominations amonge the heathen, where they come, that they may knowe how that I am the Lorde.

Moreouer the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saynge: Thou sonne of man, with a feareful tremblynge shalte thou eate thy breed, with carefulnesse and sorow shalt thou drynke thy water. And vnto the people of the lande speake thou on this maner. Thus sayth the Lorde God, to them that dwell in Jerusalem, and to the lande of Israel: Ye shall eate youre breed with sorowe, and drynke youre water with heuynesse: Yea, the lande with the fulnesse therof shall be layd waste, for the wyckednesse of them that dwel therin. And the cityes that now be wel peopled, shall be voyde, and the lande desolate, that ye maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

Yet came the worde of the Lorde vnto me agayne, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, what maner of bywoorde is that, whiche ye vse in the lande of Israel, sayinge: Tushe sayinge that the dayes are so lacke in commynge, all the visions are of none effecte. Tell them therfore, thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyl make that bywoorde to ceasse, so ꝑ it shal no more be cōmonly vsed in Israel

But say this vnto them: The dayes are at hande, that euery thyng whiche hath ben prophecied, shal be fulfilled. There shal no vision be in vayne, neyther any prophecye fayle among the children of Israel: for it is I the Lorde that speke it: and what so euer I the Lorde speake shall be performed, and not be slacke in commynge.

G Yea euen in youre dayes (O ye frowarde housholde) will I perfourme somthyng, and bryng it to passe sayth the Lorde God. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Behold thou sonne of man: the house of Israel saye in this maner: Tush as for the vision that he hath sene, it will be many a daye or it come to passe: It is farre of yet, the thyng that he prophecyeth. Therfore saye vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde God. All my wordes shal no more be slacke: loke what I speke, that same shal come to passe, sayth the Lorde.

The worde of the Lorde against false prophetes, whiche teache the people the counsailles of their owne hertes.

CAPI. XIII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saynge: Thou sonne of man. Speake prophecye against those prophetes, that preache in Israell: and saye thou vnto them that prophecye out of their owne hertes: Heare the worde of the Lorde: Thus False prophe tes. sayth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto those foolishe prophetes that folowe their owne spirite, and speake where they se nothynge. O Israell, thy Prophetes are lyke the foxes vpon the dry felde: for they stande not in the gappes, neither make they an hedge for the house of Israel, that men might abide the perill in the daye of the Lorde. Vayne thynges they se: and tell lyes to maynteyne their preachynges withall. The Lorde (saye they) hath spoken it, when in very dede the Lorde hath not sent them. Vayne visions haue ye sene, and spoken false prophecyes, when ye saye: the Lorde hathe spoken it, where as I neuer layd it.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Be cause your wordes be vayne, and ye se oute lyes: Behold, I will vpon you, sayth the Lorde. Myne handes shall come vpon the Prophetes that loke out vayne thynges, and preache lyes: they shall not be in the counsell of my people, nor written in the boke of the house of Israel, neyther shal they come in the lande of Israell: that ye maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde God. And that for this Jerem. viii. b cause: they haue polluted my people, and tolde them of peax, where no peax was. One setteth vp a walle, and they dawbe it with loose claye. Therfore tell them which dawbe Math. xvii. c. it with vntempered morter, that it shall fall. For there shall come a great showre of rayne, great stones shal fal vpō it, and a sore storme of wynde shall breake it, so shall the wall come towne.

Shal it not then be sayd vnto you: where is nowe the morter, that ye dawbed it withall? Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: I will breake oute in my wrothfull displeasure with a stormye wynde, so that in myne anger, there shall come a mighty showre of rayne and haylestones in my wrathe, to destroye withall.

So for the wall that ye haue dawbed with vntempered morter, I will breake it downe, L make it euen with the grounde: so that the foundacion therof shall remoue, and it shall fall: yea and ye youre selues shall perysshe in the myddest therof: to learne you for to know that I am the Lorde.

Thus will I perfourme my wrathe vpon this wall, and vpon them that haue dawbed it with vntempered morter, and then will I saye vnto you: The wall is gone, and the dawbers are awaye. These are the Prophetes of Israel, whiche prophecye vnto the cyte of Jerusalem, and loke oute visyons of peax for them, where as no peax is, sayth the Lorde God.

Wherfore (O thou sonne of man) set thy face against the doughters of thy people, whiche prophecye oute of their owne hertes: and speake thou prophecye against them, and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto you for sowe pyllowes vnder all arme holes, and bolsters vnder the hedes bothe of yonge and olde, to catche soules withall. For when ye haue gotten the soules of my people in youre captiuite, ye prouoke them D Ezech. xxii. to yre, and dishonoure me to my people, for an handfull of barlye, and for a pece of breed: when ye kil the soules of them, that dye not, and prouoke vnto them that lyue not: thus ye dissemble with my people that beleueth youre lyes.

Wherfore thus sayth the Lord God: Behold, I wil also vpō the pillowes, wherwith ye catch the soules in fleing: them will I take from your armes, and let the soules go, that ye catche in fleing.

Youre bolsters also will I teare in peces, and deliuer my people oute of youre handes: so that they shall come no more in your handes to be spoyled, and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

Seinge that with youre lyes ye discomforte the herte of the righteous whom I haue not discomforted. Agayne: For so moche as ye courage the hand of the wycked, so that he maye not tourne from his wycked waye and lyue: therfore shall ye spye oute no more vanitie, nor prophecye youre owne geslynges: for I will deliuer my people oute of youre handes, that ye maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

The Lorde denyeth his worde to the people for their synnes sake. The dyspysers of the worde both the Lorde sometyme deceyue by false prophetes. A comforte of them that tirdde vnto Babylon.

CAPI. XIIII.

Then

A There resorted vnto me certayne of the elders of Israel, & sate downe by me.
Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, these men bere vp their Idolles in their hertes, and go purposly vpon the stomblynge blocke of their owne wyckednesse: how dare they the ask counsell at me? Therfore speake vnto them, and saye: thus sayth the Lorde God: Euery man of the house of Israel that beareth his Idolles in his herte, purposinge to stomble in his owne wyckednesse, and commeth to a prophet, to enquyre any thynge at me by hym: vnto that man will I the Lorde my selfe geue answere, accordynge to the multytude of his Idolles: that the house of Israell maye be snared in their owne hertes, because they be cleane gone fro me, for their Idolles sakes.

B Wherfore, tell the house of Israel: thus sayth the Lorde God: Be conuerted, forsake your Idolles, and turne your faces fro[m] all your abhominations. For euery man, (whether he be of the house of Israel or a straunger, that sojourneth in Israel) whiche departeth fro me, and carryeth Idolles in his herte purposynge to go still stomblyng in his owne wickednesse, and commeth to a prophet, to aske counsell at me therowe him: vnto that man will I the Lord geue answere, by mine owne selfe. C I will set my face agaynste that man, and will make him to be an example for other, yea and a comen by worde: and will rote him out of my people, & he maye know that I am the Lorde. And yf that prophete be disceyued, when he telleth him a worde: then I the Lord my selfe haue disceyued that Prophete, and will stretche forth myne hand vpon him, to rote him oute of my people of Israel: and they both shall be punyshed for their wickednesse. According to the synne of him that asketh, shall the synne of the prophete be: that the house of Israel be led no more fro me therowe erroure, & be no more defyled in their wyckednesse: but that they maye be my people, and I their God, sayth the Lorde God. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man when the land sinneth agaynst me, and goeth forth in wyckednesse: I will stretche oute myne hand vpon it, and destroye all the prouysyon of their bred, and sende derth vpon them to destroy man and beste in the lande. And thoughe Noe, Daniel, and Job, these thre me were amõg the[m], yet shal they in their righteousnesse delyuer but their owne soules sayth the Lorde God. If I bringe noysome beastes into the lande, to waste it vp, and it be so desolate, that no mã may go therin for beastes: yf these thre men also were in the lande, as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) they shal saue neither sonnes ne doughters, but be onely delyuered them selues: and as for the lande, it shall be waste.

D Or yf I bringe a swearde into the lande, and charge it to go therow the land: so that I slaye owne man & beaste in it, and yf these thre men were therin; As truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) they shall delyuer not ther sonnes ne doughters, but only be saued them selues. If I sende a pestilence into the land, and powre out my sore indignacõ vpõ it in bloude, so that I rote out of it both mã and beast, and yf Noe, Daniel, and Job, were therin: as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) they shall delyuer neither sonnes ne doughters, but saue their owne soules in their righteousnesse. Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde God: Though I send my foure troublous plages vpon Jerusalem: the swearde, honger, noysome beastes and pestilence, to destroy man and beaste oute of it: yet shall there be a remnaũt saued therin, which shall bringe forth their sonnes and doughters. Behold they shall come forth vnto you, and ye shall se their waye, and what they take in hande, and ye shall be coforted, as touchinge all the plages that I haue broughte vpon Jerusalem. G Jere. xxvii. b

They shall comforte you, when ye se their waye and workes: and ye shall knowe, how that it is not without a cause, that I haue done so agaynste Jerusalem, as I dyd, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ To the vnprofytable wodde of the vyne tree is cast in to the fyre, so (sayeth he) shal Jerusalem shall be dyeng.

CAP. XV.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, 1 sayinge: Thou sonne of man: What commeth of the vyne amonge al other trees? and of the vyne stock among al other tymbre of the groue? Do men take of it, to make any worke withall? Or maye there a naple be made of it, to hang any thynge vpõ? Beholde, it is caste in the fyre to be brent, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it, the middest is brente to asshes. Is it mete then for any worke? No. 4

Seing then, that it was mete for no work 5 bringe hole: moche lesse may there any thing be made of it, when the fyre hath consumed and brent it. And therfore thus sayth the Lord God: Lyke as I caste the vyne into the fyre for to be brent, as other trees of the wod: Euen so will I do with them that dwell in Jerusalem, and set my face agaynste them: they shall go out fro[m]e the fyre, and yet the fyre shall consume them. Then shal ye knowe that I am the Lorde, when I set my face against them, and make the lãd waste: because they haue so sore offended, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ The prophete intendynge to speake of the abhominacyons of Jerusalem: doth fyrste shewe the benefytes of God towarde it. Jerusalem is reproued of vnkyndenes, for her fornicacõ with Idolles. He mitigateth the wyckednesse of other people in comparison of the synnes of Jerusalem. The cause of the abhommacyons is to whiche the Godemyters fell. Many is exampled to the repentaunce.

CAP.

CAPI. XVI.

A Gayne, the worde of the Lorde spake vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man shewe the cytye of Jerusalem their abhominacions, and saye: thus sayth the Lorde God vnto Jerusalem: Thy progeny and kynred came out of the lande of Canaan, thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Hethite. In the daye of thy byrth when thou waste borne, the strynge of thy nauell was not cutte of: thou waste not bathed in water to make the clene: ye wast neither rubbed with salte, ne swadled in cloutes: No man regarded the so moche, as to do any of these thynges for the, as to shewe the suche fauoure, but thou wast vtterly caste out vpon the felde, yea dispised wast thou in the daye of thy byrth.

Then came I by the, and sawe the troden downe in thyne owne bloude, and sayd vnto the: thou shalte be purged from thyne owne bloude, from thyne owne bloude (I say) shalt thou be clensed. So I plated the, as the blossome of the felde: thou arte growen vp, and waxen greate: thou hast gotten a maruelous pleasaunt beautye, thy brestes are come vp, thy heare is goodly growen, where as thou wast naked and bare afore.

Nowe when I went by the, and loked vpō the: beholde, thy tyme was come yea euen the tyme to dowe the. Then spred I my clothes ouer the, to couer thy vnhonestie: yea I made an othe vnto the, and maryed my selfe with the (sayth the Lorde God) and so thou becamest myne owne. Then washed I the with water, and pourged thy bloude from the. I annoynted the with oyle, I gaue the chaunge of rayment, I made the shoes of Taras leather: I gyrded the aboute with white sylke, I clothed the with herchues, I decked the with costly apparell, I put rynges vpon thy fyngers: a cheyne about thy necke, I pangers vpō thy forheade, eare ringes vpon thine eares, and set a beautyful crowne vpon thyne heade. Thus waste thou decte with syluer and golde, and thy rayment was of fyne white sylke, of nedle worke and of diuerse colowres.

Thou diddest eate nothyng but fynnels, honye and oyle: maruelous goodly wast ye and beautyfull, yea euen a very Quene wast thou. In so moch, that thy beauty was spoke of amonge the heithen, for thou wast excellent in my beauty, which I put vpō the (saith the Lorde God.

But thou hast put confydence in thyne owne beauty, and played the harlot, when thou haddest gotten the a name. Thou hast committed horedome, with all that wente by the, and hast fulfylled their desyres: yea thou hast taken thy garmentes of diuerse colours, and decked thyne aulters therwith, wherupon thou mygdest fulfyll thine horedome, of suche a fashyon, as neuer was done ne shall be. The goodly ornamētes & Jewels which I gaue the of myne owne golde and syluer, hast thou taken, and made the mens ymages therof, and committed horedome with all.

Thy garmentes of diuerse colowres hast thou taken, and decked them therwith myne oyle and incense hast thou sette before them.

Thy meate which I gaue the, as fynnels, oyle, and honye (to lede the withall) that hast thou set before them, for a swete sauoure. And thus came also to passe, (sayth the Lorde God): Thou hast taken thine owne sonnes and doughters, whom thou haddest begotte vnto me: and these hast thou offered vp vnto the, to be their meat. Is this but a small horedome of thyne (thinkest thou) that thou slayest my children, and gruest them ouer, to be brent vnto them? And yet in all thy abhominacions and horedome, thou hast not remembred the dayes of thy youth, how naked and bare thou wast at that tyme, and troden downe in thyne owne bloude. After all these (thy wickednesse (wo wo vnto the, sayth the Lorde) thou hast buylded thy stewes and brodel houses in euery place: yea at the hede of euery strete hast thou buylded the an aulter. Thou hast made thy beauty to be abhorred, thou hast layed out thy legges to euery one that came by, and multyplyed thine horedome. Thou hast committed fornycation with the Egyptyans thy neighbowres, whiche had moche flesche and thus hast thou vexed thyne horedome, to angre me.

Beholde, I wyll stretch out myne hande ouer the, and wyl mynyshe thy store of lode and delyuer the ouer into the wylles of the Philistines thyne enemyes, which are ashamed of thy abhominable waye. Thou hast played the hore also with the Assyrids, whiche mygdest not satisfie the: Yet thou hast played the harlot, & not had ynough. Thus hast thou styll committed thy fornycacion frome the lande of Canaan vnto the Caldees, and yet thy lust not satisfied. How shall I circumcyse thine hert (saith the Lord God) seinge thou doest all these thynges, thou pryeous hore: buylduynge thy stewes at the heade of euery strete, and thy brodell houses in all places?

Thou hast not ben as an other hore, that maketh bost of her wynnynge, but as a wife that breaketh wedlocke, and taketh other in stede of her husbande. Gyftes are gruen to all other hores, but thou gruest rewardes vnto all thy louers, and offrest them gyftes, to come vnto the oute of all places, and to commyt fornycacion with the. It is come to passe with the in thy horedomes contrary to the vse of other women: yea there hath no such fornicacion ben committed after the, seinge that thou proferest gyftes vnto other, and rewarde is gruen the: this is a contrary thynge.

Therfore heare the worde of the Lorde, O thou harlot, thus sayth the Lorde God. For so moche as thou hast spente thy money, and discouered thy shame, thorowe thy horedome with al thy louers, and with all the ydols of thy abhominacions in the bloude of thy

thy chyldren, whome thou hast gyuen them: Beholde therfore I wyll gather togyther all thy louers, vnto whome thou hast made thy selfe common: yea, and all them whom thou fauourest, and euery one that thou hatest: & will discouer thy shame before the, that they all maye se thy fylthynesse.

Moreouer, I wyll iudge the as a breaker of wedlocke and a murtherer, and recompence the thine owne bloude in wrathe and gelousy. I wyl gyue the ouer into their power, that shall breake downe thy stewes, and destroye thy brodell houses: they shall stryp the oute of thy clothes, all thy fayre and beautyfull Jewells shall they take from the, and so let the syt naked and bare: yea they shall bryng the common people vpon the, which shall stone the, and slaye the wyth their swerdes. They shall burne vp thy houses, and punysh the in the syght of many women. Thus wil I make thy bordome to ceasse, so that thou shalte gyue out no moze rewardes.

Shulde I make my wrathe to be styll, take my gelousye from the, be content, & no moze to be displeased? seinge thou remembrest not the dayes of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wrathe in all these thynges? Beholde therfore, I wyll bringe thyne owne wayes vpon thyne head, sayth the Lorde God: how be it, I neuer dyd vnto the, accordyng to thy wyckednesse and al thy abhomynacyons. Beholde, all they that vse common prouerbes, shal vse this prouerbe also agaynst the: such a mother, such a doughter.

Thou arte euen thy mothers owne doughter, that hath caste of her husbande and her children. Yea thou arte the syster of thy sisters, whiche forsoke their husbandes and their children. Your mother is a Cethite, and your father an Amorytt. Thine eldest syster is Samaria, she and her doughters that dwell vpō thy left hande.

But thy yōgest sister that dwelleth on thy right hande, is Sodoma and her doughters. Yet hast thou not walked after their wayes ne done after their abhomynacions: but in all thy wayes thou hast bene moze corrupte then they. As truely as I lyue, sayth ✠ Lorde God: Sodoma thy sister with her doughters, hath not done so euyl, as ✠ & thy doughters. Beholde, the synnes of thy syster Sodoma were these: pryde, fulnes of meate, aboundance and idelnes: these thynges had she and her doughters. Besides that, they stretched not their hand to the poore & nedy, but were proude, and dyd abhomynable thynges before me: therfore them I toke away, whē I had sene it. Neither hath Samaria done halfe of thy synnes, yea thou hast exceaded them in wyckednes: In so moche that in comparyson of all the abhomynacions whiche thou hast done, thou haste made thy sisters good women.

As for their captyuytye, namely the captyuytye of Sodoma and her doughters: the captyuytye of Samaria and her doughters: I wyll bringe them agayne, so wyll I also bryng agayne thy captyuytye amonge the: that thou mayest take thyne owne confusyō vpon the, and be ashamed of all that thou hast done, and to comforte them. Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodoma and her doughters, Samaria and her doughters, with thy selfe and thy doughters, shall be brought agayne to your olde estate.

When thou wast in thy pryde, and before thy wickednes came to the lyght: thou wolest not heare speake of thy syster Sodoma, vntyll the tyme that the Syrians with all their townes, & the Philistines with all that lye round about them, brought the to shame and confusyon: ✠ thou myghtest beare thyne owne fylthynes and abhomynacio, sayth the Lorde.

For thus sayth the Lorde God: I shulde (by ryght) deale with the, as thou hast done. Thou hast despysed the othe, and broken the couenaunte. Neuertheles, I wyll remembre the couenaunte that I made with the in thy youth, in so moche that it shall be an euerlastynge couenaunt: so that thou also remembre thy wayes, and be ashamed of them: the shalt thou receyue of me thy elder & yonger systers whom I wyll make thy doughters, & that besyde thy couenaunt. And so I wyll stablyshe my couenaunt with the, that thou mayst knowe that I am the Lord: that thou mayst thynke vpon it, be ashamed, and exiule thyne owne confusyon no moze: when I haue forgyuen the, all that thou haste done, sayth the Lorde God.

Ier. xxxi. g Hebre. viii. d

¶ The parable of the two Egles sygnifyeth that Sedechias, whiche contrarye to his othe had forsaken the frendshyp of Nabuchodonosor, turned hym selfe to the kyng of Egypt, and therfore perysshed. An exposicyon of the parrable. A prophesye of Christe.

CAPI. XVII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, I saying: Thou sonne of man: put forth a darcke speakynge and a parable, vnto the house of Israel, and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde God: There came a greate Egle with greate wynges, yea with mighty long wynges, & full of fethers of dyuerse colours, vpon the mounte of Lybanus, & tooke away from a Cedre tree, and brake of the toppe of his twygge, and caryed it in to the lande of Canaan, and set it in a cyte of marchauntes. He toke also a braunche of the lande, & planted it in a frutefull groūde, he brought it vn to greate waters, and set it as a wilowe tree therby.

Then dyd it growe, and was a greate vine stocke, but lowe by the groūnde: thus there came of it a vyne, and it brought forth blossomes, and spred out braunches.

But there was an other Egle, a greate one which had greate wengis and many fethers, and beholde, the rotes of this vyne bad it an hunger after him, and spred oute his braunches towarde him, to water his frutes. Neuertheles it was planted vpon a good grounde beside

beyde greate waters: so that (by reason) it shulde haue brought out braunches & frute, & haue bene a goodly tree. Speake thou therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Shal this braunche prosper? shall not his rotes be pluckte out, his frute be broken of, his grene braunches wither and fade away? yea without either strenght or mighty arme of many people, shall it be pulled vp by the rotes? Beholde, it was plāted: shall it prosper therfore? shall it not be dryed vp and withered, yea euē in the springe out of his blossomes, as soone as the east winde bloweth?

D Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Speake to that frowarde housholde: know ye not, what these thynges be signifye? Tell them: Beholde, the kynge of Babylon came to Ierusalem, and toke the kyng and his princes, & led them to Babylon.

He toke of the kynges seed, and made a couenaunt with him, and toke an oth of him: The princes of the lande toke he with him also, that the lande myght be holden in subiection, and not to rebell, but kepe the couenaunt, and fulfyll it. But he fell from him, and sent his Embassadours in to Egypt that he myght haue horses and moche people.

Shoulde that prosper? Shulde he be kepte safe, that doth suche thynges? Or shulde he escape, that breaketh his couenaunt? As truly as I lyue sayeth the Lorde God: he shal dye at Babylon, in the place where the king dwelleth, that made him kynge: whose oth he hath despysed, and whose couenaunte he hath broken. Neither shall Pharao with his greate hoost and multytude of people, mayntayne him in the warre: when they caste vp bulwarkes, and set vp bulwarkes to destroye moche people. For seinge he hathe despysed the oth, and broken the couenaunte, where as he yet gaue his hande therupon, and done all these thinges, he shall not escape.

Couenaunt breakers.

F Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue, I wyll auenge myne oth that he hath despysed, and my couenaūt that he hathe broken, vpon his owne heade. I wyll caste my net about him, and take him in my yarne. To Babylon will I carye him, there will I punyshe him, because of the great vnkyndnesse that he made me.

Further threatninge.

And for all that shal flowe him out of the hoost, they shall be slayne with the swearde, The reliques shal be scattered towarde al the windes: and ye shall knowe, that I the Lord haue spoken it.

G Thus sayth the Lorde God: I will also take a braunche from an hygh Cedre tree, and wyl set it, & take the vppermost twigge, that yet is but tender, and plante it vpon an hye hyll: Namely, vpon the hye hyll of Sion wyll I wyl plant it: that it may bring forth twygges, and grow frute, and be a greate Cedre tree: so that all maner of foules maye dwell in it: and make their nestes vnder the shadowe of his braunches.

And all the trees of the felde shall knowe that I the Lorde haue brought lowe the hyghe tree, and set the lowe tree vpryght: I haue dryed vp the grene tree, and made the dry tree to flowrysshe: Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, haue also brought it to passe.

The sixt with that euery man shall beare his owne synne. To turne that amendeth is full reason promysed. Deathe is prophesyed to the vngodlyes which turneth backe from the ryght waye.

CAPI. XVIII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: what meanest ye by this comen prouerbe, that ye vse in the lande of Israel, sayinge: The fathers haue eaten soure grapes, and the childrens teth are set on edge? As truely as I lyue sayeth the Lorde God, ye shall vse this by worde no more in Israel. Ezech. 16.

Beholde, all soules are myne. Lyke as the father is myne, so is the sonne myne also. The soule that synneth, shall dye. If a man be godly, and do the thyng that is equal and ryght, he eateth not vpon the hilles: he lifteth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neighbours wife: he medleth with no vnnaturall woman: he greueth no body: he giueth his debter his pledge agayne: he taketh none other mans good by violence: he parteth his meate with the hongry: he clothes the naked: he lendeth no thynge vpon vsury, he taketh nothinge ouer, he withdrawith his hand from doing wickednesse: he handleth faythfully betwyxt man and man: he walketh in my commaundementes, and kepeth my lawes, & performeth them truly: This is a ryghteous man, he shal surely lyue sayth the Lorde God.

If he now get a sonne, that is a murtherer, a sheder of blonde: yet he do not al these thinges (thoughe he do not al) he eateth vpō the hilles, he defyleth his neyghbours wife, he greueth the poore and nedy, he robbeth & spoyleth, he giueth not the debter his pledge agayne, he lyfteth vp his eyes vnto Idols, & medleth with abhominable thinges, he lendeth vpon vsury, & taketh most ouer. Shal this man lyue? He shall not lyue. Seinge he hath done all these abhominations, he shall dye his blonde shall be vpon him.

Nowe if this man get a sonne also, that seeth all his fathers synnes, which he hathe done: and feareth, myght doth suche like. Namely, he eateth not vpon the mountaynes: he lyfteth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neighbours wife, he wrongeth no man, he keepeth no mans pledge he neither spoyleth, nor robbeth any man, he dealeth his meate with the hongry, he clotheth the naked, he oppresseth not the poore, he receyueth no vsury, nor any thinge ouer, he kepeth my lawes, and walketh in my commaundementes. This man shall not dye in his fathers synne, but shall lyue w[illegible] sayth. As for his father, because he oppressed and spoyled his brother, and vyth[illegible] amonge among his people: lo, he is dead in his owne synne. And yet say ye: Wherfore then shall not the sonne beare the fathers synne? Ther-E fore: because the sonne hathe done equitye & right, hath kept all my commaundementes, and done them: therfore shall he lyue in him.

The same soule that synneth, shall dye. The sonne shall not beare the fathers offence, neyther shal the father beare the sonnes offence.
The righteousnesse of the righteous shall be vpon him, and the wickednes of the wicked shall be vpon himselfe also. But if the vngodly will turne away frome all his synnes that he hath done, and kepe all my commaundementes, and do the thynge that is equall & right: doubtles he shal lyue, and not dye. All
F for all his sinnes that he did before, they shal not be thought vpon: but in his righteousnes y he hathe done, he shall lyue. For haue I any pleasure in the death of a synner, sayth the Lorde God: but rather that he conuert, and lyue?

Agayne: if the righteous turne away frome his righteousnes, and do iniquitie, according to all the abhominations, that the wycked man doth, shal he lyue? All the righteousnes y he hath done, shal not be thought vpon, but in the faute that he hath offended withall, and in the synne that he hathe done, he shall dye.

And yet ye saye: Tush, the waye of the Lorde is not mistaken. Here therfore ye house of Israel: Is not my waye right? Or are not your wayes rather wicked? Whē a righteous man turneth awaye from his righteousnesse, and medleth with vngodlynes: he must dye therin: yea for the vnrighteousnesse that he hath done, muste he dye. Agayne: when the wycked man turneth awaye frome his wickednesse, that he hath done, and doth the thynge whiche is equall and right: he shall saue his soule alyue. For in so much as he
G sore mysdeth him selfe, and turneth him frome al the vngodlynesse that he hath vsed, he shal lyue and not dye.

And yet sayth the house of Israel: Tush, the waye of the Lorde is not equall. Are my wayes vnright, O ye house of Israel: Are not your wayes rather vnequall? Lo for me I will iudge euerye man, accordynge to his wayes, O ye house of Israel, sayth the Lord God.

Wherfore be conuerted, and turne you cleane from all your wickednesse, so shall there no synne do you harme. Caste awaye from you al your vngodlynesse, that ye haue done: make you newe hertes and a new spirite. Wherfore will ye dye, O ye house of Israel? seinge I haue no pleasure in the death of him that dyeth, sayeth y Lord God. Turne you then, and ye shall lyue.

¶ The captiuitye of Iechas and Ioacin is signified by the lyons whelpes, and by the lyon. He setteth oute the prosperyte of the cyte of Ierusalem that is past, and the myserye therof that is present.

CAP. XIX.

BVt mourne thou for the princes of Israell, and saye: Wherfore laye thy mother that lyonesse amonge the lyons, & nourysshed her yonge amonge the lyons whelpes? One of his whelpes she brought vp, & it became a lyon: it lerned to spoyle, and to deuoure folke. The heithen herde of him, and toke him in their nettes, and brought him in chaynes vnto the londe of Egypte.

Now when the damme sawe that, al her hope and comforte was away, she toke an other of her whelpes, and made a lyon of him: whiche went amonge the lyons, and became a fearce lyon: lerned to spoyle y to deuoure folke: he destroyed their palaces, and made their cyties waste. In so much that the hole lande and euery thynge therin, were desolate for the noyse of his rauyne.

Then came the heithen togyther on euery syde out of all countreyes agaynst him, layed their nettes for him, and toke him in their pitte. So they bounde him with chaynes, and brought him to the kinge of Babylon: which put him in prison, that his voyce shulde no more be herde vpon the mountaynes of Israell. As for thy mother, she is like a vine in thy bloude, planted by the waterside: her frutes and braunches are growen out of many waters, her stalkes were so strōg that men myght haue made staues therof for officers: she grewe so highe in her stalkes.

So when men sawe that she exceaded the heyght and multytude of her braunches, she was roted out in displeasure and cast to yone to the grounde.

The east wynde dryed vp her frut, her strōg stalkes were broken of, wythered and brent in the fyre. But now she is plāted in the wil Otee xiii.B derneße, in a drye and thurstie grounde. And there is a fyre gone out of her stalkes, which hath brent vp her braunches and her frute: so that she hath no mo strong stalkes, to be staues for officers. This is a pytefull and miserable thynge.

¶ The Lorde denyeth that he will answere them when they praye, for the offence of vnkyndenesse whiche he here obiecteth. He promyseth that his people shall returne from captiuitye. By the worde that shoulde be dyent is signified the barrayne of Ierusalem.

CAP. XX.

IN the .vii. yeare the tenth daye of the .v. moneth, it happened, that certayne of the G elders of Israel came vnto me, for to aske counsell at the Lorde, and sat them downe by me. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me on this maner: Thou sonne of man speake vnto the elders of Israel, and say vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde God: Are ye come to aske any thinge at me? As truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde) I will giue you no

no answere. Wilt thou not reprehende them (o sonne of man) wilt thou not reprehende them? Shewe them the abhominacions of their fore fathers, and tell them: Thus sayth the Lorde God: In the daye when I chose Israel, and lyfte vp myne hande vpon the side of the house of Jacob, and shewed my selfe vnto them in the lande of Egypte: Yea whē I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them, and sayde I am the Lorde your God, euen in the daye that I lyfte vp myne hand ouer them, to bring them out the lande of Egypte, in to a lande that I had prouyded for them, which floweth with milke and hony, and is a pleasaunt lāde aboue all other: Then sayd I vnto them: Cast away euery man the abhominacions of his eyes, and defyle not your selues with the Idols of Egypte, for I am the Lorde your God.

But they rebelled against me, and wolde not folowe me: to cast away euery man the abhominacions of his eyes, and to forsake the Idolles of Egypte. Then I made me to poure my indignacion ouer them, and to satisfye my wrathe vpon them in the myddest of the lande of Egypte. But I wolde not do it, for my names sake: that it shulde not be vnhalowed before the heythē, amonges whome they dwelt, and amonges whome I shewed my selfe vnto them that I wolde bringe them out of the land of Egipt. Nowe when I had caryed them out of the lāde of Egypte, and brought them into the wildernesse: I gaue them my commaundements, and shewed them my lawes: which who so keepeth shall lyue in them. I gaue them al so my holy dayes, to be a token betwyxte me and them, and therby to knowe, that I am the Lorde, whiche halowēth them.

And yet the house of Israel rebelled against me in the wyldernesse, they wolde not walk in my commaundements, they haue cast away my lawes (which who so keepeth should lyue in them) and my Sabboth dayes haue they greatly vnhalowed.

Then I made me to power out my indignacion vpon them, and to consume them in the wyldernesse. Yet I wolde not do it, for my names sake: lest it shulde be dishonoured before the heythen, from the whiche I had caryed them away. But I swore vnto them in the wilderneſſe, that I wolde not bring the into the lande, whiche I gaue them: a lande that floweth with mylke and hony, and is a pleasure of al landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabbothes, for their herte was gone after their Idolles.

Neuertheleſſe myne eye spared the, so that I wolde not vtterly slay them, and consume them in the wyldernesse. Moreouer, I sayde vnto their sonnes in the wyldernesse: walke not in the statutes of your forefathers, kepe not their ordynaunces, and defyle not your selues with their Idols, for I am the Lorde your God. But walke in my statutes, kepe my lawes & do them, halow my Sabbothes for they are a token betwixte me and you, that ye maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

Notwithstandynge, their sonnes rebelled against me also: they walked not in my statutes (they kept not my lawes to fulfyl them (whiche he that doth shall lyue in them) neither halowed they my Sabboth dayes. Thē I made me agayne to poure oute my indignacion ouer them, and to satisfy my wrath vpō them in the wildernes. Neuertheleſſe I with drewe my hande for my names sake, lest it shulde be vnhalowed amonges the heythen, before whome I had brought them forthe. I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them also in the wyldernesse, that I wolde skatre them amōg the heythen, and strowe them amonge the nacions: because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast away my commaundementes, vnhalowed my Sabothes, and lyfte vp their eyes to their fathers Idols.

Wherfore I gaue them also commaundementes not good, & lawes whose lyue which they shulde not lyue, & I vnhalowed them in their owne gyftes (when I appoynted for my selfe all their fyrstborne) to make them desolate: that they myght know, how that I am the Lorde.

Therfore (O thou sonne of man) tell the house of Israel, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Welyke all this, your forefathers haue yet blasphemed me more, and greatlye offended against me: for after I had brought them in to the lande, that I promyſed to gyue them, when they sawe euery hygde hill and all the thick trees: they made there their offringes, & prouoked me with their oblacions, in shynge swete sauoures there, and poured out their drinck offringes. Then I asked them: what haue ye to do withal, that ye go thither? And therfore is it called the hygh place vnto this daye.

Wherfore, speake vnto the house of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: ye are ye men as vncleane as your forefathers, and committe horedome also with their abhominacions. In all your Idols, whereunto ye bringe your oblacions, & to whose honoure ye burne your children: ye defyle your selues, euen vnto this daye: howe haue ye then come, & she any question at me? O ye house of Israel? As truelye as I lyue (sayth the Lord God) ye get no answere of me: and as for the thynge that ye go about, it shall not come to passe, where as ye say: we will be as the heythen, and do as other people in the land, wod and stone will we worshyp.

As truely as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God, I my selfe will rule you with a myghtye hand, with a stretched out arme, and with indignacion poured out ouer you: & will bring you out of the nacions and landes, wherin ye are scattred: & gather you together with a myghtye hande, with a stretched oute arme and with indignacio poured out vpon you: & will bringe you into the wildernesse of the people, & there I will reason with you face to face. Like as I punished your forefathers in the wylderneſſe, ſo wyl I punyſſhe you alſo ſayth the Lorde God.

I wyll bynde you vnder my mꝛſdiction, and vnder the bonde of the couenaunt. The reſiſakers alſo and the tranſgreſſours wyll I take from amonge you, and bryng them out of the lande of youre habitacyon: as for the lande of Iſrael, they ſhall not come in it: that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

Soo nowe then (ſayth the Lorde God) ye houſe of Iſrael, caſte awaye and deſtroye euery man his ydols: then ſhall ye heare me, and no more blaſpheme my holy name with your offrynges and ydolles. But vpon my holye hyll, euen vpon the hye hyll of Iſrael ſhall all the houſe of Iſrael and all that is in the lande, worſhyp me: and in the ſame place wyll I fauour them, and there wyll I requyre youre heaueoffrynges, and the fyrſtlynges of youre oblacyons, with all youre holy ſtynges.

I wyll accepte youre ſweete ſauoure, when I bynge you frome the nacyons, and gather you togyther oute of the landes, wherin ye be ſcattered: that I maye be halowed in you before the heathen, and that ye maye knowe, that I am the Lorde, whiche haue brought you in to the lande of Iſrael: yea, in to the ſame lande that I ſware to gyue vnto youre fore fathers.

There ſhall ye calle to remembraunce youre owne wayes, and all youre ymagynacyons, wherin ye haue bene defyled: and ye ſhall be diſpleaſed with youre owne ſelues, for all youre wyckednelle wherin ye haue bene.

And ye ſhall knowe that I am the Lorde, when I entreate you after my name, not after youre wycked wayes, ne accordynge to your corrupte workes: O ye houſe of Iſrael, ſayth the Lorde.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, ſayinge: Thou ſonne of man, ſette thy face towarde the Southe, and ſpeake to the Southe wynde, and ſaye to the wodde ſowarde the Southe: Heare the worde of the Lorde, thus ſayth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll kyndle a fyre in the, that ſhall conſume the grene trees with the dye. No man ſhall be able to quenche his flame, but all that loketh from the South to the North ſhall be brente therin: and all fleſhe ſhall ſe that I the Lorde haue kyndled it, ſo that no man may quenche it. Then ſayd I: O Lorde, they wyll ſaye of me: Tulhe, they are but fables that he telleth.

The worde of the Lorde came to me, ſayinge: Thou ſonne of man, ſet thy face toward Ieruſalem, ſpeake againſt the Sanctuaryes, and prophecye againſte the lande of Iſrael, ſaye to the lande of Iſrael: Thus ſayth the Lorde God. Beholde I wil vpon the, and wyll drawe my ſwerde out of the ſheathe, and rote out of the both the righteous and the wicked. Seyng then that I wyl rote out of the both the righteous and wicked therfore ſhall my ſwerde go out of his ſheathe againſt all fleſh frome the south to the ſouthe, that all fleſh may knowe how that I the Lorde haue drawen my ſwerde out of the ſheth, and it ſhall not be put in againe.

Mourne therfore (O thou ſonne of man) that thy loynes cracke withall: yea mourne bytterly for them: And yf they ſaye, wherfore mourneſt thou? Then tell them: for the tydynges that commeth, all hertes ſhall melte, all mẽnes ſhall be letten downe, all ſtomaches ſhall fayntc, and all knees ſhall waxe feble. Beholde, it commeth, and ſhall be fulfylled, ſayth the Lorde God.

Agayne, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, ſayinge: Thou ſonne of man, prophecye and ſpeake: Thus ſayth the Lorde God: ſpeake, the ſwerde is ſharpened and well ſtoured. Sharpened is it for the ſlaughter, and ſtoured that it maye be bright. O, the deſtroyinge ſtaffe of my ſonne, ſhall bynge downe all wodde. He hath put his ſwerde to the bryghtnyge, that good haſte may be taken of it. This ſwerde is ſharpened and dyghte, that it maye be gyuen in to the hande of the maſſacer.

Crye (O thou ſon of man) and howle, for this ſwerde ſhall ſmyte my people, and all the rulers in Iſrael, whiche with my people ſhal be ſlayne downe to the grounde therfore this ſwerde. Smyte thou vpon thy thyghe, for wherfore ſhould not the plage and ſtaffe of iudgement come? Prophecy thou ſon of man and ſmyte thyne handes togyther: make the ſwerde two edged, yea make it thre edged, a manſlcers ſwerde, that ſwerde of the greate ſlaughter, whiche ſhall ſmyte therin, euen in euery priuye chambres: to make them aſtoniſhed and fayntc at the porters, and in all gates to make ſome of them fall. O how bryghte and ſharpe is it: how well dyghte, and made for the ſlaughter. Set the to ſome place alone either vpon the ryght hande as vpon the lefte, whyther ſo euer thy face commeth. I wyll ſmyte my handes togyther alſo, and aſſuage my wrathfull indignacion. Euen I the Lorde haue ſayd it.

The worde of the Lorde came yet vnto me agayne, ſayinge: Thou ſonne of man, make the two ſtretes, that the ſwerde of the kynge of Babylon maye come. Both theſe ſtretes ſhall goo oute of one lande. He ſhall ſet them vp a place, at the heade of the ſtrete ſhall he chole him out a corner. Make the a ſtrete, that the ſwerde may come to warde Rabath of the Ammonites, and to the ſtronge cite of Ieruſalem.

¶ He threatneth the ſworde, that is to ſaye, deſtruction to the cytye of Ieruſalem. He ſheweth the fall of kynge Sedechias. He is commaunded to prophecy the deſtruction of the children of Ammon. After the ſlaughter of other, at the laſt the Lorde ſharpeneth death vnto Nabuchodonoſors hym ſelfe.

For the kynge of Babylon shall stande in the courtynge of the wode, at the heed of the two streetes to aske counsell at the soothesayers, castynge the lottes with his arowes to aske counsell at the goddes, and to loke in the lyuer.

But the soothesayinge shall poynte to the right syde vpon Jerusalem, that he maye set men of warre to smyte it, with a great noyse to crye out alarum, to set battelrammes agaynst the gates, to graue vp bulwarkes, and to make bulwarkes.

Neuertheles, as for the soothesayenge, they shall holde it but for vanitie, euen as though a lesynge were told them: yea, and they theym selues remembre their wyckednesse, so that by ryghte they muste be taken and wonne. Therfore sayethe the Lorde God: For so moche as ye youre selues shewe youre offence, and haue opened youre wyckednesse, so that in all youre workes men may se youre synnes: yea in so moche (I saye) that ye youre selues haue made mencion therof, ye shall be taken by violence.

O thou shamefull wicked guyde of Jsrael whose day is come, euen the tyme that wickednesse shall haue an ende. Thus sayethe the Lorde God: take awaye the myter, and put of the crowne, and so is it away: the humble is exalted, and the proude brought low. Ruynsshe, ruynsshe, ruynsshe it, yea ruynsshe them wyth I, and destroye them: and that shal not be fulfylled vntyll he come, to whome the iudgement belongeth, and to whome I haue gyuen it.

And thou (O sonne of man) prophecye and speake: Thus sayethe the Lorde God to the children of Ammon, and to their blasphemye speake thou: The the swerde, the swerde is drawen for the slaughter to the slaughter, and sharped that it glystereth (because thou hast loked the out vanities, and prophecyed lyes) that it maye come vpon thy necke, lyke as vpon the other vngodlye, whiche be slayne: whose daye came, when their wyckednesse was full.

Thoughe it were put vp agayne in to the sheathe, yet wyll I punysshe the in the land where thou wast nourysshed and borne, and powre my indignacyon vpon the, and wyll blow vpon the in the fyre of my wrath, and deliuer the vnto cruell people, whiche are learned to destroye. Thou shalte fede the fyre, and thy bloode shall be shedde in the lande, that thou mayste be put oute of remembraunce. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

¶ The woorde of the Lorde agaynst Jerusalem for manslaughter, and bringyng out dishonour to their fathers and mothers, and other wycked actes. Of the wycked doctryne of the false prophetes and pryestes, and of their vnnaturable couetousnesse. The tyranny of rulers. The vnhappynesse of the people.

CAPL. XXII.

MOreouer the woorde of the Lorde came vnto me and sayd: thou sonne of man, wylt thou not reproue this bloudthirstye cittie? Shewe them their abhominacions and tell them: Thus sayth the Lorde God. O thou cittye that shedest blood in the myddest of the, that thy tyme may come also, and makest the goddes to defyle the withall. Thou hast made thy selfe gyltye in the bloode that thou hast shed: & defyled the in the goddes, whiche thou hast made.

Thou hast caused thy dayes to drawe nye, and made ꝑ tyme of thy yeres to come. Therfore wil I make the to be confounded among the heathen, and to be despyted in all the landes, whether they be nye or farre from the: they shall laugh the to scorne, thou that hast gotten the so foule a name, and arte full of mischiefe. Beholde, the rulers of Jsrael haue Deuteron. xxvi.

Beholde, I haue smytten my handes vpon thy couetousnesse that thou haste vsed, and vpon the bloude whiche hathe ben shedde in the. Is thy herte able to endure it, or maye thy handes defende them selues in the tyme that I shall bringe vpon the? Euen I the Lorde that speake it, wyll bringe it to passe. I wyll scatter thy selfe among the heathen, and strowe the about in the landes, and wyll cause thy fylthynesse to cease out of the: yea and I wil haue the in possession in the sight of the heathen, that thou mayste knowe that I am the Lorde.

And the woorde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, the house of Jsrael is turned to drosse. All they that shall be drosse, tynne, yron, and leade are in the fyre become drosse. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: for so moche as ye all are turned in to drosse: beholde, I wyll bringe you together vnto Jerusalē lyke as syluer, drosse, yron, tynne, and leade are put togither in the furnace, and the fyre blowen there vnder to melte them: Euen so wyll I gather you, put you in togyther, and melte you in my wrath and indignacyon. I wyl bringe you together, and kyndle the fyre of my cruell displeasure vnder you, that ye maye be melted therin.

Lyke

Lyke as the syluer is melted in the fyre, so shall ye also be melted therin: that ye maye know how that I the Lorde haue poured my wrath vpon you.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge. Thou sonne of man, tell her: Thou art an vncleane lande, whiche is not rayned vpon in the day of thy cruel wrath: the Prophetes that are in the, are lyke a rorynge Lyon that ranneth by his pray.

They receyue ryches & good, and make many wydowes in the. Thy preestes breake my law, and defyle my Sanctuary. They put no difference betwene the holy & vnholy, neither discerne betwene the cleane and vncleane: they turne their eyes fro my Sabothes, and I am vnhalowed amongst them. Thy rulers in the are lyke rauenynge wolues to shede blood, and to destroy soules for theyr owne couetous lucre. So for thy prophetes, they daube with vntempered clay, they se vanities, and prophecy lies vnto them, sayinge: the Lorde God sayth so, where as the Lorde hathe not spoken. The people in the lande vseth wicked extorcion and robberye. They vexe the poore and needy, and oppresse the straunger agaynst ryght.

And I sought in the lande for a man that wolde make vp the hedge, and set him self in the gap before me, in the landes behalfe, that I wolde not vtterly destroye it, but I coulde fynde none. Therfore will I poure out my ire vll displeasure vpon them, and burne them in the fyre of my wrath: their owne wayes will I recompence vpon theyr heades, sayethe the Lorde God.

¶ Of the fornicacyon, meaninge the Idolatry of Samaria and Jerusalem: vnder the names of Aholah and Aholibah. In comparison of Samaria he sheweth that the fornicacyon of Jerusalem is the synnyer. The destruction of Jerusalem is prophecyed. The auouterye of both the sores is found out. Theyr destruction.

CAPI. XXIII.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, there were two women that had one mother: These (when they were yonge) began to playe the harlottes in Egypte. There were theyr dyttes disfled, and the pappes of them maydenhed destroyed. The eldest of them was called Aholah, and her youngest syster Aholibah. These two were myne, and bare sonnes and doughters, theyr names were Samaria, and that was Aholah: and Jerusalem that was Aholibah. As for Aholah, she began to goo a whoringe, when I had taken her to me. She was set on fyre vpon her louers the Assirians, which had to do with them the princes and Lordes that were dearé in costly araye: fayre yonge men, lusty rydars of horses.

Thus thorowe her whordome, she cleaued vnto all the yonge men of Assiria: Yea, she was mad vpon them, and defyled her self with all their idolles. Neyther ceased she from the fornicacion that she vsed with the Egyptiās: for in her youthe they laye with her, they vsed the virgynite of her maydenhed, & poured their whordome vpon her. Wherfore I deliuered her in to the handes of her louers, euen the Assirians whom she so loued. These discouered her shame, toke her sonnes and doughters, and slewe her with the sworde. An euyl name gat she of all people, and they punished her.

Her syster Aholibah sawe this, and destroyed her self with inordinate loue, more then she, and exceded her syster in whordome, she loued the Assirians (whiche also laye with her) namely the princes and great lordes, that were clothed with al maner of gorgyous apparell, all lusty horsemen, and fayre yong persōnes. Then I sawe that they bothe were defyled alyke.

But she increased styll in whordome: for when she sawe men paynted vpon the walle, the ymages of the Caldees set forthe with fresshe colowres, with fayre gyrdles about them, and goodly bonettes vpon their heades, louynge all lyke Pynces (after the maner of the Babylonyans and Caldees in theyr owne lande, where they be borne) immediatlye as soone as she sawe theym, she burnt in lone vpon them, and sent messengers for them into the lande of the Caldees.

Now when the Babylonians came to her they laye with her, and defiled her with theyr whordome, and so was she polluted with them. And when her lust was auoyded from them, her whordome and shame was discouered and sene, then my herte forsoke her, lyke as my herte was gone from her syster also.

Neuertheles, she vsed her whordome euer the lōger the more, and remembred the dayes of her youth, wherin she had played the harlot in the land of Egypt / she burnt in lust vpō them, whose flesh was like the flesh of Asses, & their seed lyke the seed of horses. Thus thou hast remembred the wickednesse of thy youth, when thy louers vsed thy pappes, & maried thy brestes in Egypte.

Therfore (O Aholibah) thus sayethe the Lorde God: I will rayse vp thy louers (with whom thou hast fornicated thy self) against the and gather them together coumbe about the: namely the Babylonias, and all the Caldees: Pecod, Soa and Coa, with al the Assirias, all yonge and fayre louers, princes and lordes, knyghtes, and gentylmen, whiche be all good horse men: these shall come vpon the with horses, charyottes, and a great multitude of people, which shall be harnessed about the on euery syde, with bocklers, sheldes and helmettes, I will committe the before them, yea they them selues shall punysshe the, according to their owne iudgement. I will put my gelousy vpon the, so that they shall deale cruelly with the.

They shall cut of thy nose and thyne eares, and the remnaunt shall fall downe vnder the sweorde. They shall carye awaye thy sonnes and doughters, and the residue shall be brent in the fyre. They shall stripe the oute of thy clothers, and carye thy costly iewelles awaye with them.

Thus will I make an ende of thy fylthynesse and whoredome, which thou hast brought out of the lande of Egypte: that thou shalte nowme thyne eyes no more after them, and call thy mynde no more vpō Egypte. For thus sayethe the Lorde: beholde, I wyll deliuere the in to the handes of them whom thou hatest: yea, euen in to the handes of them, with whome thou hast fulfylled thy lust, whiche shal deale cruelly with the. All thy labour shal they take with them, and leue the naked and bare, and thus the shame of thy fylthy whoredome shal come to light. All these thinges shal happen vnto the, bycause of thy whoredome, whiche thou hast vsed amonge the Gentyles with wrongfull goods thou hast defiled thy selfe. Thou hast walked in the waye of thy syster, therfore wyll I geue the her cup in thy hande.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: Thou shalte drynke of thy systers cuppe, whose depe and large is euen as it be to the botome. Thou shalt be laughed to scorne, and hadst as greate in derysion, as is possible. Thou shalte be full of dronkennesse and sorowe, for the cup of thy syster Samaria, is a cuppe of destruction and wastynge: the same shalte thou drynke and suppe it oute, euen to the dregges: yea thou shalte eate vp the broken peces of it, and to teare thyne owne breastes: For euen I haue spoken it sayethe the Lorde God.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: For so moche as thou hast forgotten me, and cast me alybe, so beare nowe thyne owne fylthynesse and whoredome.

The Lorde sayd moreouer vnto me: thou sonne of man, wylte thou not reproue Oholah, and Oholibah? Shewe them their abominacions: namely that they haue broken their wedlocke, and stayned their handes with bloode: yea euen with their goods haue they committed aduoutrye, and offred them their owne children (to be deuoured) whome they had borne vnto me.

Yea, and this haue they done vnto me also: they haue defyled my Sanctuarye, in that same daye, and haue vnhalowed my Sabboth. For, when they hadde slayne their children for their goodes, they came the same daye in to my Sanctuary to defyle it. Lo, this haue they done in my house.

Beside all this, thou hast sente thy messengers for men oute of farre countreyes: and when they came, thou hast bathed, trymmed and set for the thy selfe of the beste facion: thou sattest vpon a goodly bed, and a table spred before the, wherupō thou hast set myne incense and myne oyle.

Then was there great cheer with her, and the men that were sent from farre countreyes ouer the deserte, vnto whom they gaue bracelettes vpon their handes, and set glorious crowners vpon their heedes: then thought I no doubte, but wyll vse their harlotry also with ponder olde booze. And they went in to her, as one vnto a comon harlot. Euen so wil they also to Oholah and Oholibah those lyke women.

Ye all that loue vertue and righteousnes iudge them, and punyshe them: as aduoutrers and murtherers ought to be iudged and punyshed. For they are breakers of wedlocke and the bloude is in their handes. Wherfore thus sayethe the Lorde God: Bringe a greate multitude of people vpon them, and make them be scattered and spoyled: their shall stone them, and gore them with their swordes. They shall slee their sonnes and doughters, and burne vp their houses with fyre.

Thus wyll I destroye all suche fylthynesse oute of the lande, that all women may learne, not to doo after youre vnclennesse. And so they shall laye youre fylthynesse vpon youre owne selues, and ye shall be punyshed for the synnes that ye haue committed with youre goddes: and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

The prophet the kyngge of Ierusalem by a parable of a leedynge potte. The parable of Ezechiels wyfe beynge dead, whiche he after expoundeth.

CAPI. XXIIII.

In the nineth yere, in the tenth moneth, the tenth daye of the moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, saying: O thou son of man, wryte vp the name of this daye, yea euen the houre of this present daye, when the kynge of Babylon set him selfe against Ierusalem. Shewe that stubborne housholde a parable, and speake vnto them. Thus sayth the Lorde God. Set the a pot, set it on, and poure water in to it: put all the peces togyther in it, all the good peces, the lorne & the shulder, and fyll it with the best bones. Take one of the best sheepe, and an heape of bones with all: let it boyle well, and set the bones selfe well therin.

With that sayde the Lorde God on this maner: Wo be vnto the bloudy citye of the pot, wherupon the rustynesse hangeth, and is not yet cleaned awaye. Take oute the peces that are in it, one after an other: there nede no lottes be cast therfore, for the bloude is yet in it. Vpon a playne bare stone hath she powred it, and not vpon the grounde, that it myghte be couered with dust. And therfore haue I letten her poure her bloode vpon a playne bare stonye rocke, bycause it shoulde not be hyd: and that I myghte brynge my wrothful indignacion and vengeaunce vpon her.

Wherfore, thus sayth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto that bloudy citye, for whome I wyll prepare a heape of wodde:

bence thou the bones togyther, kyndle vpon thy fyre, sethe the fleshe, let all be well sodden, that the bones maye be lusker oute. Moreouer set the potte empty vpon the coles, that it maye be warme, and the metall hote, that the fylthe and vnclennesse maye be consumed.

D But it wyll not goo of, there is so moche of it: the vnclennesse muste be brent oute. Thy fylthynesse is abhominable, for I wolde haue clensed the, but thou wouldest not be clensed. Thou canst not be pourged fro me thyne vnclennesse, tyll I haue poured my wrothfull indignacion vpon the. Euen I the Lorde haue so decreed: Yea, it is come therto alredye that I wyll do it. I wyll not go backe I wyll not spare, I wyll not be intreated: but accordynge to thy wayes and ymaginacyons, thou shalte be punished sayth the Lorde God.

E And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, beholde, I will take awaye fro the pleasure of thyne eyes with a plage: yet shalte thou neyther mourne nor wepe, ne water thy cheches therfore: but mayst mourne by thy selfe alone: but vse no wedy lamentacion. Holde on thy bonet, and put on thy shoes vpon thy fete, couer not thy face, and eate no mourners breed.

So I spake vnto the people delymes in the morninge, and at euen my wyfe died: then vpon the nexte morowe I dyd as I was commaunded. And the people sayd vnto me: wilt thou not tell vs what that signifieth whiche thou doest?

F I answered them, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Tell the house of Israel, thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyll suspende my Sanctuarye: euen the glorye of your power, the pleasure of your eyes, and the thyng that ye loue: your sonnes and doughters whom ye haue left, shall fall thorowe the swerde.

Lyke as I haue done, so shall ye doo also: Ye shall not hyde your faces, ye shall eate no mourners breed: your bonnettes shall ye haue vpon your heedes, and shoes vpon your fete.

G Ye shall neyther mourne nor wepe, but in your synnes ye shall be sorowfull, and one repente with an other. Thus Ezechiel is your shewe token. For lyke as he hath wrought (when this commeth) ye shall doo also: that ye maye lerne to knowe, that I am the Lorde God.

But beholde, O thou sonne of man: In the daye when I take fro them their power, their ioye and honoure, the lust of their eyes, the burthen of their bodyes: namely their sonnes and doughters. Then shall there one escape, and come vnto the / for to shewe the. In that daye shall thy mouthe be opened to him whiche is escaped, that thou mayste speake, and be no more domme: yea, and thou shalte be their shewe token, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

¶ The worde of the Lorde vpon the Ammonites, whiche reioyced at the fall of Jerusalem. Ezayed vpon Moab and Seir. Against Idumea. Against the Philistynes.

CAPI. XXV.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, set thy face against the Ammonites: Prophesye vpon them, and saye vnto the Ammonites: heare the worde of the Lorde God. Thus sayth the Lorde God. For so moche as thou spraukest ouer my Sanctuarye, & the, I trowe it be nowe suspended: and ouer the lande of Israel, I trowe it be nowe desolate, yea and ouer the house of Juda, I trowe they be nowe ledde awaye prysoners. Beholde, I wyll deliuer the to the people of the East, that they maye haue the in possession: they shall sette their castles and houses in the. They shall eate thy fruite, and drynke vp thy mylke. As for Rabath, I will make of it a stall for camelles, and of Ammon a sheepe folde: and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lorde.

1 Sam. 13. Jere. 49. a.

For thus sayth the Lorde God: In so moche as thou hast clapped with thyne handes, and stamped with thy fete, yea reioyced in thyne herte ouer the lande of Israel with despyte: beholde, I wyll stretche oute myne hand ouer the also, and deliuer the to be spoyled of the Heathen, and rote the oute from among the people, and cause the to be destroyed oute of all landes / yea I will make the be layd waste, that thou mayst knowe that I am the Lorde.

15

Thus sayth the Lorde God: For so moche as Moab and Seir do saye: Se for the house of Juda, it is but lyke as all other Gentiles be. Therfore beholde, I will make the cities of Moab weponlesse, and shall take awaye their strengthe: their cityes and chefe coostes of their lande, which are the pleasures of the countrey: As namely Bethesimoth, Baalmeon, and Cariathaim: these wyll I open vnto them of the East, that they maye fall vpon the Ammonites: and wil geue it them in possession / so that the Ammonites shal no more be hadde in remembraunce amonge the Heathen. Euen thus wyll I punyshe Moab also, that they maye knowe how that I am the Lorde.

Ezay. 15. a. Jerem. 48. b. Ezech. 25. d. 35. a. Sophon. 2. b.

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde God: Because that Edom hath auenged and exalted him selfe vpon the house of Juda / therfore thus sayth the Lorde: I wil stretche out mine hand vpon Edom, and take awaye man and beast out of it.

Ezay. 34. d. Jerem. 49. b. Ezech. 35. b. Obad. 1. Genes. 36. b.

From Theman vnto Deden will I make it desolate: they shal be slayne with the swerde. Then shall my people of Israel wyll I auenge me ageyn vpon Edom: they shal handle him accordyng to my wrath and indignacion, so that they shall knowe my vengeaunce, sayth the Lorde God.

Ezech. 35. b.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: For so moche as the Philistynes haue wroke this: namely taken vengeaunce with despytefull domacke, and of an olde cruell wyll set them selues to destroye. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll stretche oute myne hande ouer the Philistines, and destroy the destroyer, and cause all the remnaunt of the see coste to perysshe. A greate vengeaunce wyll I take vpon them, and punysshe them cruelye: that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde, whiche haue auenged me of them.

The prophecyeth that Tyrus shall be ouerthrowen, because it reioyced at the destruction of Jerusalem. The wonderynge and astonyshment of the marchauntes, for the desolacyon of Tyrus.

CAPI. XXVI.

IT happened that in the .xi. yere, the fyrste daye of the moneth, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, because that Tyre hath spoken vpon Jerusalem: Ha, now I trow the portes of the people be broken, and she turned vnto me, for I haue destroyed my dely full.

Yea, therefore sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, O Tyre, I wyl vpon the, I wyl bryng a great multytude of people agaynste the, lyke as when the see ariseth with his waues: Thei shall breake the walles of Tyre, and caste downe her towres: I wyll scrape the grounde fro me her, and make her a bare stone: yea an hyding place where the fysshes hange vp the nettes by the see syde. For I haue spoken it, sayth the Lorde God. The Gentiles that people her, her waughtes vpon the lande, shall perysshe with the swerde that they may knowe how that I am the Lorde.

For thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyl bryng vpon Nabuchodonosor (whiche is the kynge of Babylon, and a kynge of kynges) from the North vpon Tyre, with horses, charettes, horsemen, and with a greate multitude of people. Thy doughters that are in the land, shal be slayne with the swerde: but agaynste the he shall make bulwarkes, and graue vp dyches about the, and lyfte vp his shylde agaynste the. His slynges and batterll rammes shall be prepare for thy walles, and with his weapons breake downe thy towres. The duste of his horses shall couer the, they shall be so many: thy walles shall shake at the noyse of the horsemen, charettes, and wheles, when he commeth to thy portes, as men doo in to an open cytye. With the hoofes of his horse fete, shall he treade downe al thy strietes.

He shall slee thy people with the swerde, & breake downe the pyllers of thy strengthe. They shall make awaye thy substaunce, and spoyle thy marchaundyse. Thy walles shall they breake downe, and destroye thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones, thy tymbre and youre Jerem. 52.d. rockes shall they caste in the water. Thus wyll I bryngе the melodye of thy songes, & the noyse of thy instrumentes to an ende, so that they shall no more be herde. I wyll make a bare stone of the: yea a dryinge place for nettes, and shalte neuer be buylded agayne: For euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, sayth the Lorde God: thus hathe the Lorde God spoken concernynge Tyre. The Iles shall be moued at the noyse of thy fall, and at the cry of the slayne that shall be murthered in the. All kynges of the see shall come downe from their seates regall: they shall laye awaye their robes, and put of their costly clothinge: Yea with trembylnge shall they be clothed, they shall sytte vpon the grounde: they shall be afrayde at thy sodeyn fall, and be abasshed at the.

They shall mourne for the, and saye vnto the: O thou noble cyty that hast ben so greate D. Ezech. by occupyed of olde, thou that hast ben the strongest vpon the see with thyne inhabitaunters, of whom all men stode in feare: howe art thou now so vtterly destroyed? Nowe at the tyme of thy fall the inhabitaunces of the yles / yea and the yles them selues shall stande in feare at thyne ende.

For thus sayth the Lorde God: when I make the a desolate cyty (as other cyties be, that no man dwell in) and when I bring the deepe vpon the, that greate waters maye couer the: Then wyll I cause the downe vnto them that descende in to the pytte: vnto a people that hath ben longe dead, and set the in a lande that is benethe, lyke the olde wyldernesse, with them which go downe to their graues, so that no man shall dwell more in the. And I wyll make the to be no more in honoure in the lande of the lyuynge. I wyll make an ende of the, and thou shalt be gone. Thoughe thou be sought for, yet shalte thou not be founde for euermore, sayth the Lorde God.

The Prophete is moued to bewayle the destruccyon of Tyrus. He setteth out the pryde of Tyrus for the hauntyng of marchauntes there.

CAPI. XXVII

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, E sayinge: O thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complaynt vpon Tyre, and saye vpon Tyre, whiche is a porte of the see, Ezech. 26. that occupieth with moche people and many yles: Thus speaketh the Lorde God. O Tyre, thou hast sayde: What, I am a noble cyte: Thy borders are in the myddest of the see, and thy buylders haue made the meruaylous goodlye, all thy tables haue they made of Cypres trees of the mount of Sanir. From Libanus haue they taken Cedre trees to make the maste: and the okes of Basan to make the towres.

Thy benches haue they made of yuory, and of costly wod out of the yle of Cethim. Thy sayle was of whyte smal nedle worke out of the lande of Egypte, to hange vpon thy maste and thy hangynges of yelowe lyke purple, out of the yles of Elisa. F

They of Sidon and Arnad were thy mariners, and the wisest in Tyre were thy shipmasters. The eldest & wysest of Gebal were they, that mended and stopped thy shippes. All shippes of the see with their shippmen occupyed their marchaudyse in the. The Persies, Lidians, and Libias, were in thyne host, & helped ꝑ to fight: they hinged up their shelde and helmettes with the, they sette forth thy beautye. They of Arnad were with thyne host round about thy walles, and were thy watchmen upon thy towres, they hanged vp their shildes round about thy walles, and made the meruelous goodly. Tharsis occupyed with the in all maner of wares, in syluer, yron, tynne, and leade, and made thy market greate. Iauan, Tubal, and Mesech were thy marchaunts, which brought the men & ornamentes of metall for thy occupynge. They of the house of Thogarma brought vnto the at the tyme of thy marte, horse, horsmen and mules.

They of Deban were thy marchaunts: & many other Iles that occupyed with the, brought the wethers, Elephant bones and peacockes for a present. The Syrians occupyed with the, because of thy diuers workes, and increased thy marchaundyse, with Smaragdes, with scarlet, with nedle worke, with white lynen cloth, with sticke & with Chrystall.

Iuda and the land of Israel occupyed with the, and brought vnto thy marketes, wheat balme, hony, oyle, and tryacle. Damascus also vsed marchaundyse with the, in the best wyne and white wull: because thy occupynge was so great, and thy wares so many. Dan, Iauan, & Mesal haue brought vnto thy marketes, yron redy made, with Casia & Calamus, accordynge to thyne occupynge. Deban occupyed with the, in fayre tapestrye worke and purpilwyns. Arabia and al the princes of Cedar haue occupyed with ꝑ, in sheepe, wethers and goates.

The marchaunts of Seba and Regma haue occupyed also with ꝑ, in al costly spyces in all precious stones and golde, which they brought vnto thy marketes. Haran, Chene and Eden, the marchaunts of Saba, Assia and Chrimad, were all ouer with the, & occupyed with the: in costly rayment, of perlowe sylke and nedle worke (very precious, & therfore packte and bounde together with ropes) yea and in Cedre wod, at the time of thy marketes. The shippes of Tharsis were the chefe of thy occupynge.

Thus thou art full, and in worshyp euen in the myddest of the see. Thy mariners were ouer bryngynge vnto the oute of many waters. But the east wynde shall smyte the into the myddest of the see: so that thy wares, thy marchaudyse, thy spyces, thy mariners thy shippmasters, thy helpers, thy occuppyers (that brought the thynges necessary) the men of warre that are in the yle and all thy comens shall perysshe in the myddest of the see in the daye of thy fall.

The suburbes shall shake at the sounde of the crye of thy shypmen. All they men, and all mariners vpon the see, shall leape oute of their boates, and set them selues vpon the lande. They shall syghe vp them ouer because of ꝑ, and make a lamentable cry. They shall caste dust vpon their heades, and lye wyne in the asshes. They shal shaue them selues, and put sacke cloth vpon them for thy sake.

They shall mourne for the with bretfull sorowe, and bytter lamentacion, yea their children also shall wepe for the. Alas, what cyty hath so bene destroyed in the see, as Tyre is? When thy wares and marchaundyse came from the see, thou gauest al people ynough. The kynges of the erth hast thou made rich, therfore the multytude of thy wares and occupynge.

But thou arte nowe cast downe into the depe of the see, all thy resorte of people is perished with the. All they that dwell in the Iles are abasshed at the, and all their kynges are afrayed, yea their faces haue changed colour. The marchauntes of the nacions wondre at the. In that thou art so cleane brought to nought, and comest no more vp.

¶ The worde of God ageynst the kynge of Tyrus for his pryde. Daniel. The Prophete is moued to bewayle the kynge of Tyrus. The worde of the Lorde ageynst Sydon. The Lorde promyseth to gather together the children of Israel.

CAPI. XXVIII.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, tell the prince of Tyre. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: because thou hast a proude herte and haste sayde: I am a God, I haue my seate in the myddest of the see like a God: where as thou art but a man and not God, and yet settest in thyne owne conceyt, ꝑ thou art God: Beholde, thou rekenest thy selfe wyser then Daniel, that there is no secretes hyd from the

With thy wysdome and thy vnderstandynge, thou hast gotten the great worshipp and gathered treasure of syluer and golde: With thy greate wysdome and occupynge hast thou increased thy power, and because of thy greate ryches, thy herte is proude.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so much as thou hast sette vp thyne herte, as though thou were God beholde, I wyl bringe enemyes vpon the, euen the tyraunte of ꝑ heithen: these shall drawe out their swerdes vpon thy beautye and wysdome, and shal bedyle thy glory.

They shall cast the downe to the pytte, so that thou shalte dye in the myddest of the see as they that be slayne.

Let it, yf thou wilte say then before them that slaye the: I am God: where as thou art but a man & not God, in the handes of them that slaye the.

Dye shalt thou, euen as the vncircumcysed in the handes of the enemyes: for I my selfe haue spoken it: sayeth the Lorde God.

Moreouer

Moreouer the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complaynte ouer the kynge of Tyre, and tell him: Thus sayethe the Lorde God: Thou art a seale of a symetrelle, ful of wysdome and excellent beautye. Thou hast bene in the pleasaunt garden of God: thou art dect with all maner of precyous stones: with Rubye, Topas, Cristal, Jacynct, Onix, Jaspis, Saphir, Smaragde, Carbuncle, and golde. Thy beautye and the holes that be in the were set forthe in the daye of thy creacion. Thou art a layre Cherub, stretched wyde out for to couer.

D I haue set the vpon the holy mounte of God, there hast thou bene, & walked amonge the layre glysterynge stones. Frome the tyme of thy creacion thou hast ben ryght excellēt, tyll wickednesse was founde in the. Because of thy greate marchaundyse, thy herte is full of wyckednes, and thou hast offended. Therfore wyll I cast the from the mount of God (O thou coueryng Cherub) and destroye the amonge the glysterynge stones. Thy herte was proude in thy layre beautye, and therfore thy beauty thou hast destroyed thy wisdome, I will caste the downe to the ground, & that in the syghte of kinges.

E Thou hast defyled thy Sanctuary, with the greate wickednesse of thy vnrighteous occupyenge. I will bringe a fyre from the middest of the, to consume the: and will make the to ashes, in the syght of all the that loke vpon the. All they that haue bene acquaynted with the amonges the Heithen, shall be abashed at the: seinge thou arte so cleane brought to nought, and commest no more vp.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynste Sidon.

Prophecye vpon it, and speake. Thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde O Sidon, I wyll vpon the, and get me honoure in the: that it maye be knowen, howe that I am the Lorde when I punyshe her, and get me honoure in her. For I wyll sende pestylence and bloude therinto her streates, so that thole whiche be slayne with the sweorde, shal lye rounde about in the myddest of her: and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. She shall no more be a prickinge thorne, and an hurtynge speer vnto the house of Israel, ne vnto them that lye rounde about her and hate her: and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: when I gather the housholde of Israel togyther agayne from the nations among whome they be scattered: then shal I be sanctified in them, in the syght of the Gentyles, and they shall dwell in ꝑ land, that I gaue to my seruaūte Jacob. They shall dwell safely therin, buylde houses and plante vynyardes: yea safelye shall they dwell therin, when I haue punyshed all thole that despyse them rounde about: and then shall they knowe, that I am the Lorde their God.

¶ The prophecyeth agaynst Pharao. He ꝓphecyeth the desolation of Egypt, and the sparynge & byldinge of the Egyptians. The Lorde promyseth that he will restore Egypt agayne after fortye yeares. Egypt is therewarde of kynge Nabuchodonosor for the labour whiche he tooke agaynst Tyrus.

CAP. I. XXIX.

IN the tenth yere vpon the twelueth daye of the fyfth moneth, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: O thou sonne of man, set nowe thy face agaynste Pharao the kynge of Egypte, prophecye agaynste him, & agaynste the hole lande of Egypte: Speake and tell him, thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde, O Pharao thou kinge of Egypte, I wyll vpon the, thou greate dragon, that lyest in the waters: thou that sayest: the water is mine. I haue made it my selfe. I wyll put an hooke in thy chawes, and hange all the fysshe in thy waters vpon thy skales: after that I wyll drawe the oute of thy waters: yea and all the fysshe of thy waters that hange vpon thy skales. I will caste the oute vpon the dry land with the fysshe of thy waters, so that thou shalte lye vpon the felde. Thou shalte not be gathered ne taken vp: but shalt be meate for the beastes of the felde, and for the fowles of the ayre: that all they whiche dwell in Egypte, maye knowe, that I am the Lorde: because thou hast bene a staffe of reede to the house of Israel. Whē they toke holde of the with their hande thou brakest & pyercest them on euery syde: and yf they leaned vpon the, thou brakest and hurtest the ioynts of their backes. Therfore, thus sayethe the Lorde God: beholde, I will bringe a sweorde vpon the, and rote out of the both man and beaste. Yea the lande of Egypt shal be desolate and waste, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde: Because he sayde: ꝑ water is myne, I my selfe haue made it: Beholde therfore, I wyll vpon the, and vpon thy waters: I wyll make the lande of Egypte waste and desolate, from the towre of Syenes, vnto the borders of the Moreans lande so that in xl. yeres there shal no foote of man walke there, neither foote of catell go there, neither shall it be inhabyted. I wyll make the lande of Egypte to be desolate, amonges other waste countreyes, and her cyties to lye waste xl. yeres, amōg other desolate cyties: And I wil scatter the Egyptians amōg the heithen and nations.

Agayne, thus sayth the Lorde God: When the xl. yeres are expired, I wyll gather the Egyptians to gether agayne, out of the nations, amonges whome they were scattred, & wyll bringe the prysoners of Egypte agayne into the lande of Pathures their owne natyue countrey, that they may be there a lowly small kingdome: yea they shal be the smallest amonge other kyngdomes lest they exalte them selues about the Heithen: for I will so mynisshe them that they shal no more rule the Heithen.

They shall no more be an hope vnto the house of Israel, neither ꝓuoke them any more more to withehnes, to cause the turne backe and to folowe them: and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde God.

D In the .xxvij. yere, the first daye of the first moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me saynge: Thou sonne of man, Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon hath made his hoste, with greate trauayle and labour to come before Tyre: that euery head maye be balde, and euery shoulder bare. Yet hathe Tyre gruen neither him ne his hoost any reward, for the greate trauayle that he hath taken there.

Therfore thus sayethe the Lorde God: beholde I wyll gyue the lande of Egypt vnto Nabuchonosor the king of Babylon, that he may take away all her substaunce, rob her robberyes, and spoyle her spoyles, to pay his hoost their wages withal. I wil gyue him the lande of Egypt for his labour, that he toke for me before Tyre.

At the same tyme wyll I cause the horne of the house of Israel to growe forthe, and open thy mouth agayne amonge them: that they maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

¶ The destruction of Egypte and of his cytyes is bewayled.

CAPI. XXX.

E THe worde of the Lorde came moreouer vnto me, sayinge: thou sonne of man, prophecye and speake: thus sayethe the Lorde God: Mourne, wo worth this daye, for the daye is here, the daye of the Lorde is come: the darcke daye of the Heithen, the houre is at hande, the sweardes commeth vpon Egypte.

Whē wounded me fal downe in Egypte, whē her people are taken away, & when her foundacions are destroyed, the Moriens lād shall be afrayed, yea the moriens lande, Libia and Lidia, all their common people, and Chub, all that be confederate vnto theym, shall fall with them thorowe the sweardes.

F Thus sayth the Lorde: the mayntenours of the lande of Egypte shall fal, the pride of her power shall come downe: euen vnto the tower of Syenen shall they be slayne downe with the swearde, sayth the Lorde God: amonge other desolate countreyes they shall be made desolate, and amonge other waste cytyes they shall be waste. And they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I kyndle a fyre in Egypte, and when all her helpers are destroyed.

At that tyme, shall thrie me sīngers goo forth fro me in shyppes, to make the careliesse Moriens afrayed, and sorow shall come vpō them in the daye of Egypte for doubtelesse it G shall come.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyl make an ende of the people of Egypte thorow the hande of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylō. he and his people with him, yea and the cruel tyrauntes of the heithen shalbe brought to destroye the lande.

They shall drawe out their sweardes vpō Egypte and fyll the lande full of slayne: I wyll drye vp the ryuers of water, and sell the lande into the handes of wicked people. The lande and all that is therin, wyll I destroye thorow the enemyes. Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

And thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll D destroye the Idolles, and bringe the ymages ¶ Jere. 43. Ezech. 6. of Nopd to an ende. There shall no more be a prince of Egypte, and a fearfulnesse wyll I sende into the Egyptians land. As for Pathures, I wil make it desolate, and kyndle a fyre in Zoan. Alexandria wyll I punysshe, and poure my wrathfull indignacion vpon Sin which is the strength of Egypte. All the substaunce of Alexandria wyll I destroye, and kyndle a fyre in Egypte.

Sin shall be in greate heuynesse, Alexan- E dria shall be rotted out, and Nopd shall haue dayly sorowe. The best men of Heliopolis and Bubalis shall be slayne with the sweard, and carryed awaye captyue. At Taphnis the daye shall be darke, when I breake there the septer of the lande of Egypte, and when the pompe of her power shall haue an ende. A cloude shal couer her and her doughters shal be led awaye into captyuyte. Thus wyl I punysshe Egypt, that they may knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

It happened in the .xj. yeare, vpō the seuenth I daye of the fyrste moneth, that the Lordes worde came vnto me, sayinge: Beholde thou sonne of man, I wyl breake the arme of Pharao kynge of Egypte: and lo it shall not be bound vp to be healed, neither shal any playster be layde vpon it, for to cast it, or to make it so strong, as to holde a swearde. Therfore, thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll vpon Pharao the kynge of Egypt, and breke his stronge arme (yet is it but a broken one) and wyll smyte the swearde out of his hand.

As for the Egyptians, I wyll scatter them among the heithen, and throw them in the landes aboute. Agayne I wyl strength the arme of the kyng of Babylō, & geue him my sweard in his hād: but I wyl breake Pharaos arme so that he shall bothe it before him pitefully lyke a wounded man.

Yea I wyll stably stre the kynge of Baby- G lons arme: and the armes of Pharao shall fal Pharao downe: that it maye be knowen, that I am the Lorde, whiche geue the kynge of Babylon my swearde in his hande, that he maye drawe it oute vpon the lande of Egypte: & that when I scatter the Egyptians amonge the Gentyles, and throwe them in the landes aboute, they maye knowe, that I am the Lorde.

¶ A comparyson of the puyssaunce of Pharao, with the prosperyte of the Assyrians. He prophecyeth a lyke destruccion vpon them bothe.

CAPI. XXXI.

Moreouer

A Moreouer, it happened in the .xi. yeare the fyrste daye of the thirde moneth that the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man speake vnto Pharao the kinge of Egypte, and to al his people: Whō art thou lyke in thy greate nesse: Beholde Assur was lyke a Cedre tree vpon the mount of Libanus with fayre braunches: so thicke, that he gaue shadowes and wod out very hyghe. His coppe reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made him greate, & the depe let him vp an hyghe. Rounde about the rotes of him ranne there floudes of water he lette oute his fyne ryuers vnto all the trees of the felde. Therfore was he hyghe then all the trees of the felde, and therowe the multytude of waters that he sent from him he optayned many longe braunches. All fowles of the ayre made their nestes in his braunches, vnder his bowes gendred all the beastes of the felde, and vnder his shadow dwelt all people. Fayre and beautyfull was he in his greatnesse and in the length of his braunches, for his rote stode by the greate waters no Cedre tre myghte lyke him. In the pleasaunt garde of God, there was no fyne tre lyke his braunches, the playne trees were not like the bowes of him. All the trees in the garden of God might not be compared vnto him in his beauty in fayre and goodlye had I made him with the multytude of his braunches: In so moche that all the trees in the pleasaunt garden of God, had enuye at him. D Therfore thus sayth the God: for so moche as he harde lyfte vp him selfe so hyghe and stretched his toy vnto the cloudes, and semge his herte is proude in his hyghnesse: I wyll delyuer him in to the handes of the myghtyest amonges the heythen, whiche shall rote him out. Accordinge to his wyckednesse will I cast him away, the enemyes shal destroy him, and the myghtye men of the heythen shall so smatre him that his braunches shall lye vpon all mountaynes and in al valleyes, his bowes shall be broken downe to the grounde thorow out the lande. Then all the people of the lande shal go from his shadow and forsake him. When he is fallen, all the E fowles of the ayre shall lye vpon him, and all wylde beastes of the felde shall go about amonges his braunches: so that frome hence forthe, no tree in the mater shall attayne to his hyghnes, nor reache his coppe vnto the cloudes, neyther shall any tree of the water stande so hyghe, as he hath done. For vnto death shall they all be delyuered vnder the earth, and go downe to the graue, lyke other men.

F Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde God: In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue I wyll cause a lamentacion to be made. I wyll couer the depe vpon him, I will staunche his floudes, and the greate waters shal be restrayned. I shall cause Libanus to be sorowfull for his sake, and all the trees of the felde shall be smytten.

I wyll make the heythen shake at the sounde of his fall, when I caste him downe to hell, with them that descende in to the pytte. All the trees of Eden, with al the chosen and best trees of Libanus, yea and all they that are planted vpon the waters, shal mourne with him also in the lower habytacyons: for they shall go downe to hell with him, vnto them that be slayne with the sworde, which dwelt afore vnder the shadowe of his seme among the heythen. To whom shalte thou be lyke-ned, that art so glorious and great, amonge the trees of Eden? yet art thou cast downe vn-der the earth (amonges the trees of Eden) where thou must lye amonges vncircumcyded, with them that be slayne with the sworde. Euen thus is it with Pharao and all his people, sayth the Lord God.

¶ The Prophete is commaunded to bewayle Pharao. He prophecyeth that destruction shall come vn-to Egypt through the kynge of Babylon.

CAP. XXXII.

IN the .xii. yeare, the fyrste daye of the .xii. moneth, the worde of the Lorde came vn-to me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, take vp a lamentacion vpon Pharao kynge of E-gypte, and saye vnto him: Thou art counted as a lion of the heythen, and as a whalefishe in the see. A

Ezech. xxxi. a

Thou rasest thy waters about the, thou troublest the waters with thy fete, and stam-pest in their floudes. Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll spred my net ouer the, namely, a greate multytude of people: these shall bryng the in to my yarne, for I will caste the vpon the lande, and let the lye vpon the felde that all the fowles of the ayre maye lye vpon the: I wyll gyue all the beastes of the felde ynoughe of the.

Ezechiel. xxxii. a

My flesshe wyll I caste vpon the hilles, & fyll the valleyes with thy hyghnesse. I wyll B water the lande with the aboundaunce of thy bloude euen to the mountaynes, and the valleyes shall be full of the. When thou arte put out, I wyll couer the heauen, and make his starres dymme. I will spre be a cloude ouer the Sunne, and the Moone shal not gyue her lyght.

Ezechiel. xxxii. a Esaie. xiii. a

All the lyghtes of heuen wyll I put oute ouer the, and bryng darckenesse vpon thy lāde sayth the Lorde God. I wyl trouble the hertes of many people, when I bryng thy de-struction amonges the heythen & countreyes whom thou knowest not. Yea I wyll make many people with their kynges so afrayde thorowe the, that their herte shall stand vp, when I shake my sworde at their faces. So dreadfully shall they be affrayed, euery man in him selfe, at the daye of thy fall.

For thus sayth the Lorde God: the kyng C of Babylons sweardes shall come vpon the, with the swerdes of the worthyest wyll I smyte downe thy people.

All they that be myghtye amonge the Gen-tyles, shal waste the proude pompe of Egypte and dyng downe al her people. All the costly also of Egypte wyll I destroye, that they shal come no more vpon the waters: so that neither mans foote ne beastes clawe, shal feare them any more. Then wyll I make their waters cleare, and cause their floudes to runne lyke oyle, sayth the Lord God: when I make the lande of Egypte desolate, and when the countreye with all that is therin, shall be layde waste: and when I smyte all them whiche dwell in it, that they maye knowe, that I am the Lord. This is the mourning, that the doughters of the heathen shal make: yea a lowde and lamentacion shal they take vp, vpon Egypte and all her people, sayth the Lorde God.

D In the .xij. yeare, the .xv. daye of the moneth came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, Take vp a lamentacion vpon the people of Egypte, and cast the downe, yea and the mightye people of the heathen also ouer with the that dwell beneth: and with them that go downe in to the graue. Downe, downe layde (he) and laye the with the vncircumcised. Amonges those that be slayne with the sworde, shall they lye.

The sworde is geuen alreadye, he shall be drawen forth and al his people. The mightye worthies & his helpers, that be gone downe and lye with the vncircumcised & with them that be slayne with the sworde: shall speake to him out of the myddest of hell.

E Assur is there also with his company, and their graues round about, which were slayne and fil al with the sworde, whose graues lye be syde him in the lowe pyt. His commons are buryed rounde about his grade: all together wounded and slayne with the sworde, which men afore tyme brought feare into the land of the liuynge.

There is Elam also with all his people, & their graues rounde about: which all being wounded and slayne with the sworde, are gone downe vncircumcised vnder the earth, whiche neuertheles somtyme brought feare into the lande of the liuynge: for the whiche they bare their shame, with the other that be gone downe to the graue.

Their buryal is geuen them and all their F people, amonges them that be slayne. Their graues are round about all them which be vncircumcised, and with them that be slaine thorowe the sworde: for seinge that in times past they made the lad of the liuynge afrayed, they muste nowe beare their owne shame, with them that go downe to the pyt, & lye amonge them that be slayne.

There is Mesech also and Tubal, & their people, and their graues round about. These all are amonges the vncircumcised, and the that be slayne with the sworde, because afore tyme they made the lande of the liuynge afrayed.

Shulde not they then lye amonges the worthies, and vncircumcised Gyauntes? whiche with their weapons are gone downe to hell: whose swordes are layed vnder their heades, whose wickednesse is vpon their bones: because that as worthyes, they haue brought feare in to the lande of the liuynge. Yea amonges the vncircumcised shalt thou be destroyed, and slepe with them, that perished thorow the sworde.

There is the lande of Edom with her kinges & princes also, which with their strength are layed by them that were slayne with the sworde, yea amonge the vncircumcised, and them whiche are gone downe into the pit.

G Moreouer, there be all the princes of the north, with all the Sidonians, whiche are gone downe to the slayne. Jerem.xlix.b Ezechi.xxxii.b xxxv.a.

With their feare & strength they are come to confusion, and lye there vncircumcised, amõges those that be slayne with the sworde and beare their owne shame, with them that be gone downe to the pyt.

Nowe when Pharao seith this, he shal be comforted ouer all his people, that is slayne with the sworde: both Pharao and all his hoaste, sayth the Lorde God. For I haue geuen my feare in the land of the liuyng. But Pharao and al his people shall lye amonges the vncircumcised, and amonges them that be slayne with the sworde sayth the Lorde God.

¶ The fourth out the ofyce of a preacher. He strengtheneth them that despayre, and boldeneth them with the promyse of mercy. As the former ryghteousnesse helpeth not the ryghteous, yf he geue vpon trust agayne to synne: so the former euyll workes are not imputed to the wycked that conuerteth. The worde of the Lorde agayne the rest of the people. Against the mockers at the wordes of the Prophet.

CAPI. XXXIII.

A Gayne, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of mã Speake to the chyldren of thy people, and tell them: When I sende a sworde vpon a lande, yf the people of the land take a man of their countrey, and sette him to be their watchman: the same man (when he sayeth the sworde come vpon the lande) shall blowe the trompette, and warne the people. G Preachers be watchmẽ. 2.Reg.ix.b

If a man now heare the noyse of the trompet and wyll not be warned, and the sworde come and take him awaye: his bloude shall be vpon his owne head: for he herde & sounde of the trompette, and wolde not take hede, therfore his bloude be vpon him. But yf he wyll receyue warnynge, he shall saue his lyfe.

Agayne, yf the watchman se the sworde come and blowe it not with the trompet, so that the people is not warned: if the sword come then, and take any man from amonges the: the same shall be taken awaye in his owne synne, but his bloude wyll I require of the watchmans hand.

And nowe (O thou sonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israell? Ezechie.iii.d

rael: that where as thou hearest any thynge out of my mouth, thou maiste warne them on my behalfe. If I saye vnto the wycked thou wycked, thou shalte surely dye: and yf thou warnest hym not warnynge, that he maye beware of his vngodly waye: then shall the wycked dye in his owne synne, but his bloude will I require of thy hande. Neuertheles yf thou warne ỹ wicked of his way, to turne from it, wher as he yet will not be turned from it, he shal be dye because of his synne, but thou hast deliuered thy soule.

Therfore (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto the house of Israel. Ye say thus: Our offences and synnes lye vpon vs, and we be corrupte in them: how shulde we then be restored vnto lyfe? Tell them: As truly as I lyue, saythe the Lorde God, I haue no pleasure in the deathe of the wycked, but rather that the wicked turne from his waye and lyue. Turne you, turne you from youre vngodly wayes, O ye of the house of Israel. Oh, wherfore will ye dye?

Thou sonne of man, tell the children of thy people: The righteousnesse of the righteous shall not saue him, whan so euer he synneth: and wickednes of ỹ wicked shal not hurte him, whan soeuer he conuerteth from his vngodlynes. And the righteousnesse of the righteous shall not saue his lyfe, whansoeuer he synneth.

If I saye vnto the righteous, that he shall surely lyue, and so he trust to his owne righteousnesse, and do synne: then shal his righteousnesse be no more thought vpon, but in the wickednesse that he hathe done he shall dye.

Agayne, if I saye vnto the wicked: thou shalte surely dye: and so he turne from his synnes, and do the thinge that is lawfull & right: In so much that the same wicked maketh the pledge agayne, restoreth that he had taken away by robberye, walketh in ỹ commaundementes of lyfe, & doth no wickednesse: Then shal he surely lyue, and not dye. Yea the synnes ỹ he hath wrought, shal neuer be thought vpon.

For why? he doth now the thing that is lawfull and right, he shall lyue. And yet the children of thy people say: Tush, the way of the Lord is not right, where as their owne waye is rather wrought.

When the righteous turneth from his righteousnesse, and doth the thyng that is wicked, he shal dye therfore. But if the wicked turne from his wickednesse, & doe the thinge that is lawfull and right, he shall lyue therfore. Yet ye saye: the waye of the Lorde is not equall. O ye house of Israel, I will iudge euery one of you after his wayes.

And in the twelueth yere the .v. day of ỹ x. moneth of our captyuite, it happened, that one whiche was fled out of Ierusalē, came vnto me, and sayde: The citye is destroyed. Now the hande of the Lord had bene vpon me the euening afore (to him which was escaped) came I vnto me, & had opened my mouth, vntyll the morowe that he came to me: yea he opened my mouth, so that I was no more domme.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, and sayde: Thou sonne of man, they that dwell in the wasted landes of Israel, lay Abraham was but one man, and he had the lande in possession: now we are many, & the lande is geuen vs to possesse also.

And therfore tell them: Thus saythe the Lorde: In the bloude haue ye eaten, your eyes haue ye lyfte vp to Idols, and haue shed bloud: shal ye then haue the land in possession.

Ye leane vpon youre swerdes, ye worke abhominacyons, euery one defyleth his neighbours wyfe: and shall ye then possesse the lande? Say thou these wordes vnto them: Thus saythe the Lorde God: As truely as I lyue all ye that dwell in this wildernes, shal be slayne with the swerde: what so euer is vpon the felde, will I geue vnto the beastes to be deuoured: those that be in stronge holdes and dennes, shall dye of the pestylence. For I will make the lande so desolate and waste, and the pomp of her strength shal come to an ende. The mountaynes in Israel shall be so waste that no man shall trauayle therby.

Then shall they learne to knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I make the lande waste and desolate, because of all their abhominacions, that they haue wrought. And thou sonne of man, the children of thy people that talke of the, by the walles & in the doores of their houses, sayinge one to another: Come lette vs heare, what worde is gone forthe from the Lorde: These come vnto the, after the maner of a great people: ye my people sit be wont before the, and heare thy wordes but they wil not therafter: for with their mouthes they shewe them louinge, as though they were feruent, but their herte goeth after their owne couetous lucre.

And as a ballet ỹ hath a swete tune, & is pleasaunt to synge, so shalte thou be vnto them: thy wordes shall they heare, but they will not be therafter. When this commeth to passe (for lo, it commeth in dede) then shall they knowe, that there hathe bene a prophete amonge them.

Against Bysshoppes and Curates that betraye the flocke of Christe, and seke their owne. The Lorde sayethe that he will require his scattered flocke, and gather them together. He reproueth the enuyous of enuyenge of the flocke. He promiseth the true Shepherde Christe, and with him peace.

CAPI. XXXIII.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, prophecye agaynst the Shepherdes of Israel, prophecye and speke vnto them: Thus saythe the Lorde God: Wo be vnto the Shepherdes of Israel, that feede them selues! shulde not the Shepherdes fede the flocke?

Ye

D Ye haue eaten by the fatte, ye haue clothed you with the woll: the best feede haue ye slayne, but the flocke haue ye not nourished. The weake haue ye not holpen vp, the sycke haue ye not healed: the broken haue ye not bounde together, the outcastes haue ye not brought agayne: the lost haue ye not sought, but cruelly & cruelly haue ye ruled them. Thus are they scattered here and there without a shepherde: yea all the beastes of the fielde deuoure them, and they goo astraye.

E My shepe goo wandringe vpon all mountaynes, and vpon euery hye hyll. Yea they be scattered abrode in all feldes, and there is no man that carefully for them, or seketh after the. Therfore, O ye shepherdes, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lord God. As truly as I lyue, for as moche as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured of all the wylde beastes of the fielde hauynge no shepherde: and seinge that my shepherdes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede them selues onely and not my shepe. Therfore heare the worde of the Lord, o ye shepherdes: Thus sayth the Lord God: Beholde, I my selfe wil vpon the shepherdes, and require my shepe from their handes, and make them ceasse from feedyng of my shepe: yea the shepherdes shal fede them selues no more: For I will deliuer my shepe out of their mouthes, so that they shall not deuoure them after this. For thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyl loke to my shepe my selfe, and seke them. Lyke as a shepeherde amonges the flocke, seketh after his shepe that are scatred abrode, euen so wil I seke after my shepe, and gather them together oute of all places, where they haue ben scattered in the cloudy and darke daye. I wil bring them out from all people, and gather them together oute of all landes. I wyll bringe them in to their owne lande, and fede them vpon the mountaynes of Israell by the ryuers, and in all the places of the countrey. I wyll fede them in right good pastures, vpon the hye mountaynes of Israel shall their folde be. There shall they lye in a good folde, and in a fatte pasture shall they fede: euen vpon the mountaynes of Israel.

I wyll fede my shepe my selfe, and bringe them to their rest, sayth the Lord God. Such as be lost, wil I seke: suche as go astraye, wil I bring agayne: suche as be wounded, wil I bynde vp: suche as be weake, wyll I make strong: suche as be fat and well liuinge, those wil I preserue, and fede them with the thyng that is iustfull. And as for you, O my shepe, sayth the Lorde God: I wil put a difference amonge the shepe, amonges the wethers and the goates. Was it not enough for you to eate vp the good pasture, but ye must treade vnder the residue of your pasture with your feete also? Was it not enough for you to drynke clere water, but ye must trouble the residue also with your feete?

F Thus my shepe muste be fayne to eate the thynge, that ye haue troden downe with your feete, and to drynke it, that ye with your feete haue defyled. Therefore, thus sayth the Lorde God vnto them: Beholde, I wyll iudge the fatte shepe betwene the leane: for as moche as ye haue shot the weake shepe vpon the hores and shoulders, and run vpon them with youre hornes, so longe tyll ye haue vtterly scattered them abrode. I wyll helpe my shepe, so that they shall be no more spoyled: yea I wyll diuerse one shepe from an other. I wyll raise vp vnto them one onely shepherde: euen my seruaunt Dauid, he shal fede them, & he shal be their shepeherde. I the Lorde wyll be their God, and my seruaunte Dauid shall be their prince: Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it. Job 10. Ezech. 34. Dauid.

Moreouer, I wyll make a couenaunte of peace with them, and driue all euyll beastes out of the lande, so they that maye dwelle safelye in the wyldernesse, and slepe in the woddes. Good fortune and prosperous wyll I geue them, and vnto all that be rounde about my hylle. A prosperous showre and rayne wyll I sende them in due season, that the trees in the wodde maye bringe forthe their fruites, and the grounde her increase. They shall be safe in their lande, and shall knowe that I am the Lorde, when I haue broken their yoke, and deliuered them oute of the handes of those that helde them in bondage. T

They shall no more be spoyled of the heathen, nor deuoured with the beastes of the lande, but safely shal they dwell, and no man shall make them. I wyll set vp an excellente planter for them, so that they shall suffre no more hunger in the lande, neyther beare the reproche of the heathen any more. Thus shall they vnderstande that I the Lorde their God am with them, and that they (euen the house of Israell) are my people, sayth the Lorde God. Ye men are my flocke, ye are the shepe of my pasture: and I am youre God, sayth the Lorde God. Ioh. 10. Psal. 95. & 100.

¶ The destruction that shal come on the hyll Seir, that is on the Idumeans, because they troubled the people of the Lorde.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

MOreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face towarde the mount Seir, prophecy vpon it, & saye vnto it: Thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, O thou mount Seir, I wyl vpon the. I wil reache out myne hande ouer the, yea waste and desolate wyll I make the. Thy cityes wil I vtterly destroye, and thou shalte lye voyde, that thou mayste know howe that I am the Lord. For so moche as thou hearest an olde enmitye agaynst the the children of Israell, and with a cruell hate hast made them afrayde, what tyme as they were troubled and punished for their synne. Therfore as truely as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God, I wyll prepare the vnto bloude, yea bloode shal followe vpon the.

stynge thou layest wayte for blonde, therfore shall blonde persecute the. Thus will I make the mount Seir violate and waste, and bring to passe that there shal no man go thither, ne come from thence. His mountaynes wil I fil with his slayne men: thy hylles, dales, and valeys shall lye full of them that are slayne with the swerde. I will make the a perpetuall wylderneße, so that no man shal dwell in thy cityes: that ye maye knowe how that I am the Lorde.

And bycause thou hast layd: what, bothe these nacions, and bothe these landes muste be myne, and I will have them in possession, where as the Lorde was there. Therfore, thus sayth the Lord God: As truly as I live I will handle the accordynge to thy wrathe and grefoulye, lyke as thou hast deale cruelly with them: that I maye be knowen among them, howe I have punyshed the. Yea, and that thou mast be sure that I the Lorde have herde all thy despytfull wordes, which thou hast spoken agaynste the mountaynes of Israel, sayinge: Lo, they are made waste, and given vs to devoure. Thus with your mouthes ye have made youre boaste agaynste me, yea, and multeplyed youre proude wordes agaynste me, whiche I have herde all togyther. Wherunto thus sayth the Lorde God: When the hole worlde is in wealthe, then will I make the waste. And lyke as thou (O mount Seir) wast glad, bycause the heritage of the house of Israel was destroyed: euen so will I do vnto the also, that thou and hole Edom shal be destroyed, and know that I am the Lorde.

The promysed deliveraunce from the Gentyles vnto Israel. The benefytes done vnto the Jewes are to be alwayes to the mynde of God, not vnto their deliveraunce. God reneweth our hertes that we maye walcke in his commaundements.

CAPI. XXXVI.

Thou sonne of man, prophecie vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and speke. Heare the worde of the Lorde. O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayth the Lorde God: Bycause your enmeny hath layd vpon you: Ah ha, the hye euerlastynge places are now become ours: Prophecye therfore and speake: thus sayth the Lorde God: Seing ye be wasted and troden downe on euery syde, and become a possession vnto the residue of the Gentiles, whiche have brought you in to mennes mouthes, and vnto an euyll name amongst the people. Therfore heare the worde of the Lorde God. O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus sayth the Lorde God vnto the mountaynes and hylles, valleys and dales, to the voyde wylderneßes, and desolate cytyes, whiche are spoyled, and hadde in derision on euery syde, amonge the residue of the Heathen: Yea, euen thus sayth the Lorde God: In the fyre of my grefoulye have I taken a vewpet, agaynst the residue of the Gentyles, and agaynst all Edom: whiche have given my lande vnto them seizure for a possession, whiche also reioyced from their hole herte, with a despytefull stomacke to waste it and to spoyle it.

Prophecye therfore vpon the lande of Israel, speake vnto the mountaynes and hylles, to valleys and dales, thus sayth the Lord God. Beholde, this have I devised in my grefoulye and terrible wrathe: For so moche as ye have suffred reproche of the heathen: therfore, thus sayth the Lorde God: I have sworne that the Gentyles which lye about you, shall beare youre confusyon them selues. And as for you (O mountaynes of Israel) ye shall shoote out youre braunches, and bringe forthe youre fruite to my people of Israel, for it is harde by that they come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you will I tourne me, that ye maye be tylled and sowen.

I will sende you moche people, which shal be all of the house of Israel: the cityes shall be inhabited, and the decayed places shall be reparied agayne. I will prouyde you with moche people & catel, which shal encreale and bringe fruite. I will restore you also to youre olde estate, and shewe you more kyndenesse then euer ye hadde before: wherbye ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde. Yea, people will I sende vnto you (O my folke of Israel) which shall have the in possession, and thou shalt be their inheritaunce, so that thou shalt no more be without them. Agayn, thus sayth the Lorde God: for so moche as they saye vn to you: Thou art an eater vp of men, & a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no mo men, neyther destroye thy people any more, sayth the Lord God. And I will not suffer the to heare thyne owne confusyon amonge the Gentyles from henceforth. Thou shalte not beare the reproche of the nations, nor cause oute thyne owne people any more, sayth the Lorde God.

Moreover, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: O thou son of man, when the house of Israel dwelt vpon their own ground they defyled therm selues with their owne waves and ymagynations: so that in my syght their waye was lyke the vncleanesse of a menstruous woma. Wherfore I poured my wrath full displeasure vpon them, bycause of the blonde that they had shed in the lande, and bycause of their idols, wherwith they had defyled them selues. I skatred them also among the Heathen, so that they were throwen about in the landes. Accordynge to their waves, and after their owne inuentions, so dyd I punyshe them.

Lowe when they were come vnto the Heathen, and come in amongst them, they dishonoured my holy name: so that it was sayd of them: Are these the people of God, and must go out of their owne land? Then spared I my holy name which the house of Israel had dishonoured amongst the Gentyles, to whome they came. Therfore tell the house of Israel: Thus sayth the Lorde God: I do not this for your sakes (O house of Israel) but for my my holye names sake, whiche ye dishonured amonge the heathen, when ye came to them. Therfore, I will halowe my greate name agayne, whiche amonge the Gentiles is euyl spoken of: for ye your selues haue dishonured it amonge them. And the Gentiles shall knowe that I am the Lorde, when I am honured in you before their eyes, sayeth the Lorde God.

And for you, I will take you from amonges the heathen, and gather you togyther out of all countreyes, and bringe you agayne in to youre owne lande. Then will I poure clere water vpon you, and ye shall be clene: from all your vnclennesse, and from all your idols shall I clense you. A newe herte also will I gyue you, and a newe spirite will I put in to you: and for that stonye herte, I will take it oute of youre bodye, and gyue you a fleshly herte. I will gyue my spirite amonge you, and cause you to walke in my ordinaunces, to kepe my lawes, and to fulfyl them.

And ye shall dwell in the lande that I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God. I will helpe you out of all your vnclennesse. I will call for the corne, and will encrease it, and will let you haue no hongre. I will multiplye the fruites of the trees, and the encrease of the felde for you, so that ye shall beare no more reproche of hongre amonge the heathen. Then shall ye remembre youre owne wicked wayes, and your imaginacions, whiche were not good: so that ye shall take displeasure at your owne selues, by reason of your synnes and abominacions.

But I will not doo this for your sakes (saieth the Lorde God) be ye sure of it. Therfore, O ye house of Israell be ashamed of youre synnes. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: what tyme as I shall clense you from all youre offences, then will I make the cityes to be occupyed agayne, and wyl repayre the places þ be decayed. The desolate land shall be tylyed agayne, whiche afore tyme laye waste in the syght of all them that went by.

Then shall it be sayd: this waste lande is become lyke a gardeyn of pleasure, and the voyde, desolate and broken downe cities are nowe stronge and fenced agayne. Then the residue of the heathen that lye rounde about you, shall knowe that I am the Lorde which repayre that was broken downe, and plante agayne that was made waste. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, and will do it in deede.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyl yet ones be founde agayne of the house of Israell, and doo this for them: I shall encrease them as a flocke of men. Lyke as the holy flocke, and the flocke of Jerusalem are in the tyme of solemne feastes: so that also the wylde walled cityes be fylled with flockes of men: and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

The prophecyeth the bringynge agayne of the people beynge vncircumcysed, the wyues of the ten tribes with the two. Chardo to the kynge of the Chaldees people alone, and the onely ouerlordge Shepherde therof.

CAPI. XXXVII.

The hande of the Lorde came vpon me, and caryed me oute in the spirite of the Lorde, & let me downe in a playne felde, that laye full of bones, and he led me rounde about by them: and behelde the bones that laye vpon the felde were very many, and maruelous dry also. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou sonne of man: coyldest thou these bones wake lyue agayne? I answered: O Lorde God, thou knowest. And he sayde vnto me: Prophecy thou vpon these bones, and speake vnto them: Ye dry bones, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto these bones: Beholde I wyl put breth in to you, that ye may lyue: I will gyue you synewes, and make flesh grow vpon you and ouer you with skin, and so gyue you breth that ye maye lyue and knowe that I am the Lorde.

So I prophecied as he had commaunded me. And as I was prophecyinge, there came a noyse and a greate moeuing, so that the bones came euery one to an other. Lo when I had loked, beholde, they had synewes, and flesh grewe vpon them, and aboue they were couered with skynne, but there was no breth in them: Then sayd he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, prophecye thou towarde the wynde: prophecye, and speake to the wynde: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: come (O thou spirite) from the foure wyndes, and blow vpon these slayne, that they maye be restored to lyfe. So I prophecied, as he had commaunded me, then came the breth in to them, and they receyued lyfe, and stode vp vpon their fete, a maruelous great hoste.

Moreouer, he sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the hole house of Israel. Beholde, they saye: Our bones are dryed vp, our hope is gone, we are clene cut of. Therfore prophecye thou, and speake vnto them: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll open your graues (O my people) and take you oute of your sepulcres, and bringe you in to the lande of Israell agayne. And thou shalt knowe that I am the Lorde, when I open youre graues, and bringe you oute of them. My spirite also will I put in you, and ye shall lyue: I will sette you agayne in youre owne lande, and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, whiche haue sayd, and fulfylled it in deede.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, take a stycke and wryte vpon it: Vnto Juda and to the children of Israell his companions. Then take an other stycke, and wryte vpon it: Vnto Joseph þ stok of Ephraim, and to all the house of Israel his companions. And the take both these sticke togyther in thyne honde, so that there be one lyche therof. Now yf the chyldren of thy people saye vnto the: wylte thou not shew vs what thou meanest by these? Say vnto them: thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde I will take the stocke of Ioseph, whiche is in the hande of Ephraim, and of the tribes of Israel his felowes, and will put them to the stocke of Iuda, and make the one stocke, and they shall be one in my hande. And the two styckes whereupon thou writest shalt thou haue in thyne hande, that they may se, and shalt saye vnto them:

Ezech. xxxvii.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, I will take awaye the children of Israel from among the heathē, vnto whom they be gone and will gather them together on euery syde, and bryng them again in to their owne land. yea I will make one people of the in my land, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they all shall haue but one kyng. They shall no more be two peoples seome hereafter, neyther be deuyded in to two kyngdomes: they shall also defile them selues no more with their abominacions, idols, and all their wicked doinges. I will helpe them out of all their dwellyng places wherein they haue synned, & will so clense them, that they shall be my people, and I their God.

David my seruaunt shall be ther kynge, and they all shall haue one shepeherde onely. They shall walke in my lawes and my commaundementes shal they bothe kepe and fulfyll. They shall dwell in the lande that I gaue vnto Jacob my seruaunt, where as your fathers also haue dwelt. Yea eue in the same lande shall they, their children, and their children children dwell for euer more: and my seruaunt David shall be their euerlastynge prynce.

Ezech. xxxiiii. d Ioseph. x.d.

Moreouer, I will make a bonde of peace with them, which shal be vnto them an euerlastynge couenaunt. I will settle them also, and multiply them, my Sanctuarye will I set among them for euermore. My dwellyng shal be with them: yea I will be their God, and they shal be my people. Thus the heathe also shall knowe that I the Lorde am the holy maker of Israel: when my sanctuary shal be amonges them for euer more.

The prophecyeth that Gog and Magog shall come with an appoynted host in to the lande of promyse. Theyr ruyne. He rehearseth that the comminge of Gog was before prophecyed of the Prophetes. The destruction of hym.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

AND the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, coūte thy face towarde Gog in the lande of Magog, whiche is the chefe prynce at Mesech and Tubal: prophecye against hym, and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde God: O Gog thou chefe prynce Mesech and Tubal: Beholde, I will vpon the, and will tourne the about, and put a bytte in thy chawes: I will bringe the forth and all thyne hoste, horse, horsemen, & euery man, beynge all weaponed of the best sorte, a great people, that handle all together speres, shyldes, and swordes: the Persis, Moriens, and with them the Lydians, whiche all beare shyld and helmettes: Gomer and all his hoostes: the house of Thogorma out of the North quarters, and all his hostes, yea and many people with the.

Ezech. xxxix. Apoc. xx.

Therfore prepare the, set thy selfe in aray with all thy people that are come vnto the by heapes, and be thou their defence. After many dayes thou shalte be visited, and in the latter yeres thou shalte come in to the lande, that hathe bene destroyed with the swerde, and now is replenyshed again with diuers people vpon the mountaynes of Israel, whiche haue longe lyen waste. Yea, they be broughte out of the nacyons, and dwell all safe. Thou shalte come vp lyke a stormye weather, to couer the lande, and as it were a darke cloude: thou with all thyne hoostes, and a greate multytude of people with the.

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde God: At the same tyme shall many thinges come in to thy mynde, so that thou shalte ymagen mischiefe and say: I wil vp to yonder playne land lying (yet at ease, and dwell so safely (for they dwel all without any walles, they haue neyther barres nor wozes) to spoyle them, to robbe them, to laye hande vpon them so well inhabited wyldernesse: against that people, that is gathered together from among the heathen, whiche haue gotten catell and good, and dwell in the myddest of the lande. Then shall Saba, and Dedan, and the marchauntes of Thartis with all their worthes saye vnto the: Art thou come to robbe? hast thou gathered thy people together, because thou wylte spoyle? to take syluer and golde: to carry awaye catell and good: and to haue a greate praye?

Therfore, O thou sonne of man, thou shalte prophecye, and saye thus vnto Gog: Thus sayth the Lorde God: In that daye thou shalte knowe that my people of Israel dwelleth safe: and shalte come frō thy place out of the North partes: thou & many people with the, whiche ryde vpon horses, whereof there is a great multitude and an innumerable sorte. Yea, thou shalte come vpon my people of Israel, as a cloude to couer the lande. This shall come to passe in the latter dayes. I wyl bryng the vp in to my land, that the heathen maye knowe me, when I gette me honour vpon the, O Gog, before their eyes.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: Thou arte he, of whome I haue spoken afore tyme, by my seruauntes the prophetes of Israel, which prophecyed in those dayes and yeres, that I would bringe the vpon them. At the same tyme, when Gog commeth vp in to the lande of Israel (sayth the Lorde God) shall my indignacion goo forthe in to my wrathe. For in my gelousye and hoote displeasure I haue deuysed, that there shall be a great trouble in the lande of Israell at that tyme. The verye fyshes in the see, the foules of the ayre, the beastes of the felde, and all the men that are vpon the earthe, shall tremble for feare of me.

The hylles also shall be ouerrun vp and downe, the hayres of stone shall fall, and all walles shall synche to the grounde. I will call vp a swerde vpon them in all my mountaynes, sayethe the Lorde God: so that euery mans swerde shal be vpon an other. With pestilence and bloode will I punysshe them: hayle stones, fyre & brymstone will I cause to rayne vpon him, and all his heape: yea and vpon all that great people that is with him. Thus will I be magnified, honoured, and knowen amonges the heathen: that they maye be sure how that I am the Lorde.

¶ She sheweth the destruction of Gog and Magog. The graue of Gog and of his hoste. The prophecye of that Gog and his company shal be deuoured of byrdes and beastes. Wherfore the house of Israel is warned. Their byenge ageine from captyuyte is promysed.

CAPI. XXXIX.

THerfore, O thou sonne of man, prophecye agaynste Gog, and speake. Thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, o Gog thou chiefe prince at Mesech and Tubali: I will vpon the, and tourne the aboute, and lede the from the North partes, and bringe the vp to the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy bowe I wil smyte it out of thy lefte hande, and cast thyne arowes out of thy right hand. Thou with al thyne heape and all the people that is with the, must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then wil I gyue the vnto the foules and wylde beestes of the feld, to be deuoured: there must thou lye vpon the felde: for euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, sayth the Lorde God.

And to Magog, and amonge them that dye so carelesse in the yles: will I sende a fyre, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. I will make also the name of my holynesse to be knowen amonges my people of Israel: & I wil not let my holy name to be euyll spoken of any more: but the very heathen also shal knowe, that I am the Lorde, the holye one of Israell. Beholde it commeth and shall be fulfylled in dede, sayth the Lorde God. This is the day whereof I haue spoken: They that dwell in the cyties of Israel, shall goo forth and set fyre vpon the weapons, and burne them: shyldes and speres, bowes and arowes, hylles and clubbes: seuen yeres shall they be burnynge therof, so that they shall ells bring no stickes from the felde, neither haue nede to hewe downe any ouke of the wodde. For they shal haue weapons enough to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed them, and spoyle those that spoyled them, sayth the Lorde God.

At the same tyme will I gyue vnto Gog a place to be buryed in, in Israell: euen the valey, wherethrow men go from the East to the see ward. Those that trauaile there shall abhorre it: There shall Gog and all his people be buryed: and it shal be called the valey of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes long shall the house of Israel be burying of them, that they maye clense the lande. Yea all the people of the land shall bury them. O it shal be a glorious daye, when I get me that honoure, sayethe the Lorde God. They shall ordeyne men also to be ever burynge, euer goynge thorowe the lande, and appoynte them certayne places to burye those in which remayne vpon the felde, that the lande may be clensed. From ende to ende shall they serche, & that seuen monethes longe. Now those that go thorow the lande, where they se a mannes bone, they shal set vp a token by it, til the very buryers haue buryed it also, in the valey of people of Gog. And the name of the cite shal be called Hamonah: Thus shall they make the lande clene.

And thou sonne of man: thus sayethe the Lorde God: Speake vnto al the foules and euery byrde, yea and to all the wylde beastes of the felde, Gather you together and come, gather you rounde about vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you: euen a great slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israel: eate flesshe, and drynke bloode. Ye shall eate the flesshe of the worthyes, and drynke the bloode of the princes of the land: of the wethers, of the lambes, of the gotes, and of the oxen that be all slayne at Basan. Eate the fat vnto ye be full, and drynke bloode tyll ye be dronken of the slaughter which I haue slayne vnto you. Fyll you at my table, with horses an stronge horsemen: with capitaynes and all men of warre sayeth the Lorde God.

I will bringe my glorye also amonges the Gentyles, that all the heathen maye se my iudgement that I haue wrought, and my hande whiche I haue layde vpon them: that the house of Israel maye knowe how that I am the Lorde their God from that day forth. And the heathen shal knowe, that where as the house of Israel were led in to captiuitye it was for their wickednesse sake, because they offended me.

For the whiche cause I hyde my face from them, and deliuered them in to the handes of their enemyes, that they myghte all be slayne with the swerde. Accordynge to their vncleannesse, and vnfaythfull seruynges, so haue I entreated them, and hyde my face from them. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Now will I bring ageine the captyues of Jacob, and haue mercye vpon the hole house of Israel, and be gelous for my holye names sake. All their confusion and offence that they haue done ageinst me, shal be taken awaye: and so safely shall they dwell in their lande, that no man shall make them afrayde. And when I haue brought the ageine from amonges the people, when I haue gathered them together out of their enemyes handes, and am prayſed in them before many Heathen: then ſhall they knowe that I am the Lorde their God, which ſuffred them to be ledde in to captiuitie amonge the Heathen, but now haue brought them againe in to their owne land, and not lefte one of them yonder.

After that will I hide my face no more from them, but will poure out my ſpirite vpon the houſe of Iſrael, ſayth the Lorde God.

Ezec. xxxix.d.

¶ The reſtoryng of the cytye and of the temple that was to come is ſhewed vnto the Prophete.

CAPI. XL.

A IN the xxv yere of our captiuitie, in the beginnyng of the yere, the tenth day of the moneth: that is the xiiij. yere after that the cyty was ſmytten downe: the ſame day came the hand of the Lord vpon me, and caried me forth, euen in to the ſame of Iſrael, brought he me in the viſions of God: & ſet me downe vpon a marueylous hye mountayne, whereupon there was a buyldyng (as it had ben of a cyty) towarde the north.

B Thyther he caryed me: and beholde, there was a man, whoſe ſimilitude was ſuche as the braſſe whiche had a threde of flaxe in his hande, and a meteroad alſo. He ſtode in the waye and ſayde vnto me: marke well with thyne eyes, hearken vnto with thine eares, and faſten it in thine hert what ſo euer I ſhal ſhewe the, for to the intent that they myght be ſhewed the, therfore arte thou brought hyther, and what ſo euer thou ſeyſt, thou ſhalt certifie the houſe of Iſrael therof.

C Beholde, there was a wall on the outſyde rounde about the houſe: the meteroad that he had in his hand was ſixe cubites long and a ſpanne. So he meaſured the breadth of the buyldyng, which was a meteroad, & the height alſo a meteroad. Then came he vnto the Eaſt dore, and went vp the ſteppes, and meaſured the poſtes of the dore, whereof euery one was a meteroad thicke. Euery chambre was a meteroad longe and brode, betweene the chambres were fyue cubites. The poſt of the dore within the porche, was one meteroad. He meaſured alſo the porche of the innermer dore, whiche contayned a meteroad. Then meaſured he the entrye of the dore that contayned eight cubites, and his pilleres two cubites: and this entrye ſtode inwarde.

D The chambres of the dore Eaſtward, were three on euery ſyde, alyke brode and long. The pilleres alſo that ſtode of both the ſides, were of one meaſure. After this, he meaſured the wideneſſe of the dore, which was ten cubites, and the length of the dore thyrtene cubites. The cbye before the chambres was one cubit brode vpon both the ſides, and the chambres ſixe cubites wide of euery ſyde. He meaſured the dore from the rygge of one chambre to another, whoſe wydneſſe was xxv. cubites, and one dore ſtode againſt an other. He made pilleres alſo three ſcore cubites hye, rounde about the courte dore. Before the forwarde part vnto the fore entrye of the innermer dore, were fyftye cubites. The chambres and their pilleres within, rounde about vnto the dore, hadde fyue wyndowes: So hadde the fore entryes alſo, whoſe wyndowes went rounde about within. And vpō the pilleres there ſtode date trees.

Then brought he me in to the fore courte, where as were chambres and paued worke, made in the fore courte rounde about, thyrtye chambres vpon one paued worke. Nowe the paued worke was alonge beſyde the dores, and that was the lower paued worke. After this, he meaſured the breth from the lower dore vnto the innermer courte of the out ſyde which had an hundred cubites vpon the Eaſt and the Northe parte. And the dore in the vttermoſt courte towarde the North, meaſured he after the length and breth, bothe the chambres alſo on either ſyde, with his pilleres and fore entryes, whiche had euen the meaſure of the fyrſt dore. His height was fifty cubites, the breth xxv. cubites: his wyndowes and porches with his date trees, had euen lyke meaſure as the dore towarde the Eaſt, there were ſeuen ſteppes to go vp vpon and their porche before them. Now the wall of the innermer courte ſtode ſtreyght ouer againſt the dore that was towarde the North Eaſt. From one dore to an other he meaſured an hundred cubites.

E After that, he brought me to the Southe ſyde, where there ſtode a dore towarde the South: whoſe pilleres and porches he meaſured, whiche had the firſt meaſure, and with their porches, they had wyndowes rounde about, lyke the firſt windowes. The height was l. cubites, the breth xxv. with ſteppes to go vp vpon: his porche ſtode before him, with his pilleres and date trees on either ſyde. And the wall of the innermer courte ſtode towarde the South, and he meaſured from one dore to an other an hundred cubites.

So he brought me in to the innermer courte throwe the dore of the South ſyde, which he meaſured, and it had the meaſure afore ſayd. In lyke maner his chambres, pilleres, & fore entryes, had euen the fore ſayd meaſure alſo. And he had with his porches rounde about wyndowes of fyftye cubites height, and fyue and twentye cubites brode. The porches rounde about were xxv. cubites longe, and fyue cubytes brode: and his porche reached vnto the vttermoſt courte: vpon his pilleres there were date trees, and eyght ſteppes to goo vp vpon.

F He brought me alſo in to the innooſte courte vpon the Eaſt ſyde, and meaſured the dore, accordyng to the meaſure afore ſayd. His chambres, pilleres, and porches had euen the ſame meaſure as the firſt had: and with his porches he had wyndowes round about. The height was fiftye cubites, the breth xxv. cubites: his porches reached vnto the vttermoſt courte: his pilleres alſo had date trees on either ſyde, and eyght ſteppes to goo vp vpon.

And

And he brought me to the north dore, and measured it, whiche also had the fore sayde measure. His chambres, pylers and porches had windowes rounde about: whose heigth was. l. cubites, & the bredth. xxv. His pilers stode towarde the vttermost courte, and vpō them both were date trees, and eyght steppes to go vp vpon. There stode a chambre also, whose entraunce was at the dore pylers and there the burntofferynges were washed.

In the dore porche there stode on either syde two tables for the slaughtrynge: to slaye the burntofferynges, synneofferynges and trespacesofferynges therupon. And on the outside as men go forth to the north dore, there stode two tables. Foure tables stode on either syde of the dore, that is eyght tables, whervpon they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewen stone for the burntofferynges, of a cubyte and a halfe longe & brode, and one cubyte hyghe: whervpon were layed the vessels and instrumentes, whiche were vsed to the burnt and slayne offrynges, when they were slaughted. And within ther were bokes foure fyngers brode fastened rounde about, to hang flesh vpon and vpon the tables was layde the offrynge flesshe. On the outside of the innermest dore were the syngers chambres in the inwarde courte beside the North dore ouer against the south. There stode one also, beside the east dore northwarde.

And he sayde vnto me: This chambre on the South syde belongeth to the preestes that kepe the babytacion: and this towarde the North, is the Preestes that wayte vpon the aulter: whiche be the sonnes of Sadoch, & so seruyce before the Lorde in steade of the children of Lewi. So he measured the fore courte, whiche had in length an. C. cubytes, and as moche in bredth by the foure corners. Nowe the aulter stode before the house. And he brought me to the fore entry of the house and measured the walles by the entry dore: which were fyue cubytes long on either syde. The thicknesse also of the dore on either syde was thre cubytes. The length of the porche was. xx. cubytes, the bredth. xi. cubytes, and vpon steppes went men vp to it: by the walles also were pylers, on either syde one.

¶ The disposicyon and dewyse of buyldyng after the temple, and of the other thynges therto belongyng.

CAPI. XLI.

After this he brought me to the temple and measured the postes: which were of both the sydes. vi. cubites thicke, according to the wydenesse of the tabernacle. The bredth of the dore was. x. cubytes & the walles of the dore on either syde fyue cubites. He measured the length therof, whiche contayned fourty cubytes, and the bredth. xx. The dore he in, & measured the dore postes, whiche were two cubytes thicke: but the dore it selfe was syx cubites, and the bredth of the dore was seuen cubytes. He measured the length & bredth therof, which were fourty one xx. cubites before the temple.

And he sayde vnto me: This is the holyest of all. He measured also the walles of the house, whiche was syx cubytes. The chambres that stode rounde about the house, were euery one four cubytes wyde, and one stode harde vpon another, whereof there were thyrtie and thre. And there stode postes beneth by the walles rounde about the house, to beare the vp: but in the wal of the house, they were not fastened. The syde chambres were the hyghest & wyder, and had steppes whereby them rounde about the house. Thus was it wyder about, that from the lowest men myght go to the hyghest and myd chambers. I sawe also that the house was very hyghe rounde about. The foundacion of the side chambres was a meteres (that is vi. cubytes) brode. The thicknesse of the syde wall without, conteyned. vi. cubytes, and so dyd the out wall of the chambres in the house.

Betweene the chambres, was the wydenes xx. cubytes rounde about the house. The chambres stode ouergaynst the out wall. & one dore was towarde the north, the other towarde the South: and the thicknesse of the out wall was fyue cubytes rounde about. Now the buyldynge that was seperated towarde the west, was thre score and ten cubites wyde: the wall of the buyldynge was. v. cubites thicke rounde about, and the length foure score cubites and ten. So he measured the house whiche was an. C. cubytes longe, and seperated buyldynge with the wal were an. C. cubytes longe also. The wydenesse before the house and of it that was separated towarde the east, was an. C. cubytes.

And he measured the lengthe of the buyldynge before and beyonde with the chambres vpon both the sydes: and it conteyned an. C. cubytes. The innermest temple, the porch of the fore courte, the syde postes, there that had syde wyndowes, and pylers rounde about ouer against the postes, from the grounde vp to the wyndowes.

The windowes them selues were syled ouer with bordes: and thus was it about the wal, both the innerst house, and without also: Yea the hole wall on euery syde both within and without was syled ouer with greate bordes.

There were Cherubyns and date trees made also, so that one date tree stode euer betwixt two Cherubyns: One Cherub hadde two faces, the face of a man lokyng alyde toward the date tree, and a lyons face on the other syde.

Thus was it made rounde about in al the house: Yea the Cherubins and date trees were made from the ground vp about the dore and so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The by postes of the temple were foure squared, & the fashyon of the Sanctury was euen as it appeared vnto me afore in the vision. The table was of wod. iij. cubytes hyghe and. ij. cubytes longe: his corners, the lyng & and

and the walles were of wod.

And he sayde vnto me: This is the table that shall stande before the Lorde. The temple and the holyest of all had either of them two dozes, & euery doze had two lytle wicketes whiche were folden in one vpon another, on euery syde two. And vpon the dores of the temple there were made Cherubins & date trees, like as vpon the walles: & a greate thicke balke of wod was before on the outer syde of the porche. Vpon both ſ syders of the walles of the porche, there were made depe windowes and date trees, hauing beames ouerthwart, like as the house had.

¶ Of the chambres of the temple for the preestes, and the holy thynges.

CAPI. XLII.

THen caryed he me out in to the fore courte towarde the north and brought me into the chambre that stode ouer against the backe buylding northward, whiche had the length of an. C. cubytes whole dore turned towarde the north. The wideneſſe contayned. L. cubites: ouer against the. xx. cubites of the inner most court, and against the paued worke that was in the fore court. Before all these thre, there stode pyllers, one ouer against an other: And before the chambre, there was a walkynge place of x cubites brode, and within was a waye of one cubite brode, and their dores towarde the north.

Thus the highest chambres were alway nerest vnto them the lowest and myddemost of euery buylding: for they had chambres vpon chambres stode thre together one vpon an other and conynge pyllers like the fore courte: therfore were they smaller then thole beneth & in the myddest, to reken from the ground vpwarde.

The wall without that stode by the chambres towarde the vttermost court vpon the fronte of the chambres, [illegible] for the length of [illegible] chambres in the [illegible] wall. L. cubytes also but the lyght stode before the temple was an. C. cubites.

Vnder chambres hat vnder the ne entrance of the east syde, whereby a man myght go in to them out of the fore courte, there by the thicke wall of the fore courte towarde ſ east, ouer against the seperate buylding. Before ſ same buylding vpō this syde there were chambres also whiche had a way vnto them, like as ſ chambres on the north syde of the same length & wydenesse.

Their entrawce, fashyon and dores were also of the same maner. Yee euen like as the other chambre dores were, so were theirs also of the same fashion. And before the way towarde the lengere steppes on ſ east syde, there stode a hedge to kepe it.

Then sayde he vnto me: The chambers towarde the north syde and the south which stand before the backe buylding, thole be holye habytacions, wherin the preestes that do seruyce before the Lorde, maye eate the most holy offrynges: and there must they laye the most holy offrynges: meate offrynges, synne offrynges & trespace offrynges, for it is an holy place. Whē the preestes come therin, they shall not go oute in to the fore courte: but (seinge they be holye) they shall leaue the clothes of their mynystracion, and put on other garmētes, when they haue any thynge to do with the people.

Now when he had measured all the inner most house, he brought me forth thorowe the east porte, and measured the same rounde about. He measured the east syde with ſ meteroed, which conteyned rounde conteyned fyue C. meterodes. And the north syde measured he, which conteyned rounde about euen so moche. The other two sides also toward the south and the west (which he measured) contayned either of them. v.C. meterodes. So he measured all the foure sydes where there went a wall rounde about. v.C. meterodes longe, and as brode also which separated the holy from the vnholy.

¶ How the glory of God goynge in to the temple, from whence it had bē ofte departed. He mysteryeth the abolishyng of the idolatrye of the children of Israel, for whose sake they were captiued and brought to bondage. He is commaunded to tell them agayne all ſ abominacions.

CAPI. XLIII.

SO he brought me to the dore, that lyeth towarde the east. Beholde, then came ſ glory of ſ God of Israel from out of the east, whose voice was like a great noyse of waters, and the earth was lightened with his glory. This sight so like vnto that like the sight, that I sawe, when I came to destroye the cyte. Like as the visions that I sawe by the water of Chebar. Then fell I vpon my face, but the glory of the Lorde came into the house through the east [illegible] and the spirite [illegible] and filled the house full of the glory of the Lorde.

I herde one speakynge vnto me out of the house, and there stode one by me, that spake vnto me: O thou sonne of man, this is the place of my throne, and the place of my fote stole, where on I will dwell amonge the children of Israel for euer more, and that the house of Israel shal no more defyle my holy name with their, or their kynges, whoren their hye house chestnut their hyghe places, and therwith the dedes bodyes of their kynges: which house bulte their thresholde in manner hard vpon my thresholde, and their poste right at my poste: so that there is but a thin wall betwyxt me and them.

Thus haue they defyled my holy name with their abhominacions, that I haue consumed them in my wrath. Wherfore I haue withdrawen thē in my wrath. But now they shall put away their whoredome and the dedes bodyes of their kynges out of my sight, that I may dwell among them for euermore. Therfore O thou sonne of man, shewe thou the house of Israel

Israel a temple, that they maye be ashamed of their wickednesse, and measure them ye vre an example therof.

And when they be ashamed of all their workes, then shewe them the fourme and fashyon of the temple: the compasse of it, the goynge out, all the maner and discripcion therof, yea all the dewe and ordynaunces of it, that they may kepe and fulfyl al the fashions and customes therof.

This is the discripcion of the house: Aboue vpon the mount rounde aboute all the comers, it shall be the holyest of all. Beholde, that is the discripcion and fashyon of the house. This is the measure of the aulter (after the true cubyte: whiche is a spanne longer then an other cubyte) his bottome in the myddest was a cubite longe and wyde, & the lodge that went rounde about it, was a span brode. This is the heigth of the aulter: From the grounde to the lower steppes the length is two cubytes, and the breadth one cubyte: and from the lower steppes to the higher are foure cubytes, and the breadth but one cubyte.

The aulter was foure cubytes hyghe, and from the aulter vpwarde shall foure hornes: and it was xij cubytes longe and xij cubytes brode, vpon the foure corners: the compasse of the aulter was xiij cubytes long and xij brode vpon the foure corners, and the lodge that went rounde about, had halfe a cubyte: and the bottome therof rounde about vnto the steppes shall turne towarde the east. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus sayth the Lorde God: These are the ordinaunces & lawes of the aulter in the daye when they shall make it, to offer burnte offringes vpon it, & to sprenkle bloude therupon. To the preistes, to the Leuites that be of the seed of Sadoch and come before me to do me seruice, sayth the Lorde God: Thou shalt geue them a yonge bullocke for a synne offringe, and take of the bloude of it, and put it vpon the foure hornes of the aulter, vpon the foure corners of the settle, and vpon the border rounde about: and with shalt them clense it, and make it holy. Then shalte take the bullocke of the synne offringe, & burne him at a deuised place without the sanctuarye.

The seconde daye shalt thou take a goteborde without blemysshe for a burneoffering, to make the aulter holy: lyke as it was necessary to the bullocke. And when thou hast made it clense, thou shalt proffre vnto the Lorde a yonge bullocke without blemysshe, and a ramme out of the flocke without blemysshe also: Offer them before the Lorde and let the preistes cast salt vpon them, and proffre them to the Lorde for a burneoffering. Seuen dayes shalt thou prouyde a goteborde for a synne offringe, euerye day a goteborde. A yonge bullocke and a ramme of the flocke without blemysshe shall they offer. Seuen dayes shall they reconcyle and clense the aulter, and offer vpon it. When their dayes are expired, then vpon the viij. daye and so forth, the preistes shall offer their burneoffringes and thankes offringes vpon the aulter: so will I be mercyfull vnto you sayth the Lorde God.

Ezechiel sheweth what dore of the temple is shutte. He is commaunded to vpbrayde the people with their offence. The vncircumcysed in herte and in the flesshe. who are to be admytted to the seruyce of the temple, and who to be refused. He sheweth what prestes he wolde haue admytted in to the holy place, and also theyr office.

CAPI. XLIIII.

After this, he brought me againe to the vtwarde dore of the Sanctuarye on the east syde, and that was shut. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: This dore shal be kept shut, and not opened for any man to go thorow it, but onely for the Lorde God of Israel: yea he shall go thorowe it, therfore shal it be shutte kept. The prynce hym selfe shall come therin it, that he maye eate breade before the Lorde. At the porche shall he come in, & there shal he go out agayne. Then brought he me to the dore, vpon the North side of the house. And as I loked about me, beholde, the glory of the Lorde fylled the house, and I fell downe vpon my face. And the Lorde spake vnto me: O thou sonne of man, fasten thyne eyes, behelde, and take diligent hede to all that I wyll saye vnto the, concernyng all the ordynaunces of the Lorde, and all the lawes: ponder well with thyne eyes the commyng in of the house and the goynge out of the Sanctuarye: and tell that obstynate house of Israel: Thus sayth the Lorde God: O house of Israel, ye haue had inough withall your abhominacions, seynge that ye haue brought into my Sanctuary strangers, prouyded vncircumcysed hertes and flesshe, where through my Sanctuary is defyled, when ye offer me bloude, fat, and bloude.

Thus haue all your abhominacions ye not broken my couenaunte, and not kepte the holy ordinaunces of my Sanctuary: but the keapinge of my Sanctuary, haue ye geuen vnto other vnder you to kepe for you. Thus sayth the Lorde God: Of all the Strangers that dwell amonge the children of Israel, no Strangers (whose hertes & flesh is not circumcyse) shall come within my Sanctuary: Ye, not the Leuites that be gone backe fro me, and haue erred from me after their idoles, but they shall beare their owne wickednesse. Neuerthelesse they be set to ouerseare the seruyce in the house of the house of my Sanctuary: and to be seruyte in the houses: slaye burneoffringes and sacrifyces for the people: to stand before them, & to serue them: seing the seruyce that they do them, is before their idoles, & cause the house of Israel to stumble therinne: therfore haue I lyfted vp myne hande ouer them (sayth the Lorde God) that they shall beare their owne wickednesse, and not to come nyghe me, to serue me with their preisthode, nor to come nyghe vnto all my holy gyftes, in the most holyest of all: but shall beare their che they haue done. Shulde I ose them to be is done therin? But the priestes the Leuytes the sonnes of Sadoch, that kept the holy ordynaunces of my sanctuarye, when the children of Israel were gone fro me: shall come to me, to do me seruyce, to stande before me, and to offre me the fat and the bloude, saythe

the Lorde God.

They shall go in to my Sanctuarye, and entre before my table, to do me seruyce, and to wayte vpon myne ordynaunces. Now whe they go in at the dores of the inwarde court they shall put on lynen clothes, so that no woollen come vpon them: whyle they do ser-uyce vnder the dores of the inwarde court, and within. They shall haue fayre lynnen bonettes vpon their heades, and lynnen breches vpon their loynes, whiche in their laboure they shall not put about them. And when they go forth to the people in to the vtwarde court, they shal put of the clothes wherin they haue mynystred, and laye them in the habitacion of the Sanctuary, and put on other apparell, lest they vnhalow the people with their clothes.

They shall not shaue their heades, ne nother lose the bushe of their heere, but rounde their heades only. All the priestes that go in to the inmost courte, shall drinke no wyne.
They shal mary no widowe, neither one that is put from her husbande: but a mayde of the sede of the house of Israel, or a wydowe, that hath had a preest before.

They shall shewe my people the differrence my Sabbothes. They shal come at no dede personne, to defyle them selues, except it be father or mother, sonne or daughter, brother or syster, that hathe had yet no husbande, in suche they maye be defyled.

And when he is clensed, there shall be re-kened vnto him. vij. dayes: and yet he go into the Sanctuarye agayne to do seruyce, he shal offre a synnofferynge, sayth the Lorde God.
They shall haue an heritage, yea I my selfe

The meatofferynge, synneofferynge, and

The fyrstlynges of all the fyrste frutes, and

Ye shall gyue vnto the preste also for fyrstspere the seruyce. But no dead caryon shall ¶ Out of al the lande of promyse are there seperate foure portyons, of whiche the fyrste is gyuen to the priestes. And to the temple, the seconde to the Leuites the thyrde to the cyrye, the fourth to the Prynce.

An exhortacion to the heades of Israel. Of vnle weyghtes and measures. Of fyrste frutes &c.

CAPI. XLV.

When ye deuyde the land by the lot, ye shall put aside one parte for the Lorde, to be holye from other landes: namely. xxv. M. meterodes longe, and. x. M. brode.
This shall be holy, as wyde as it rounde about. Of this parte there shall belong vnto the Sanctuarye. v. C. meterodes in all the foure corners, & l. cubytes wyde rounde about to the suburbes. And from this measure, namely of. xxv. M. meterodes long, and. x. M. brode thou shalte measure, wherin the Sanctuary and the holyest of all maye stande.

The reryduе of that holy grounde shall be the priestes, whiche do seruyce in the Sanctuary of the Lorde, & go in before the Lord to serue hym, that they may haue rowme to dwell in.

As for the Sanctuary: it shall stande for it selfe: and to the Leuites that serue in the house, there shal be gyuen. xx. habitacions, of the xxv. M. length: and. x. M. brede, ye shall gyue also vnto the cyrye a possessy, of. v. M. meterodes brode, and. xxv. thousande longe before the parte of the Sanctuary: that shal be for the hole house of Israel. Vpon both sydes of the Sanctuaryes parte, and by the cyrye, there shall be gyuen vnto the prince, whatsoeuer lyeth ouer agaynste the cyrie, as farre as reacheth westwarde and eastwarde:
whiche shall be as longe as one parte, from the west vnto the east.

This shall be his owne lande in Israel, & my princes be no more chargeable, vnto my people. And suche as remayneth yet ouer in lande, shall be gyuen to the house of Israel accordynge to their trybes. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O ye princes, ye haue now oppressed & destroyed ynough: now leaue of, & do we accordynge to the ryghte, that is equal and lawfull: and thrust out my people no more, sayeth the Lorde God. Ye shall haue a true weight, a true Ephah, & a true Bath. The Ephah and the Bath shall be a like. One Bath shall conteyne the tenth parte of an Homer, and so shall one Ephah do: their measure shall be after the Homer. One Mycle maketh. xx. Geras. Ho. xx Mycles, and xxv. and. xv. Mycles make a pounde. Thou the heueroffrynge, that ye shall gyue to be heaued: namelye, the xvi. part of an Ephah, out of an Homer of wheate: & the. xvi. parte of an Ephah, out of an Homer of barly. The oyle shall be measured with the Bath: ye wen the tenth parte of one Bath out of a Cor.

Ten Bathes make one Homer: for one Homer hylleth ten Bathes. And one lambe from two hundreth shepe out of the pasture of Israel, for a meteoffrynge, burntoffrynge and healthoffrynge, to reconcyle them, sayth
the Lorde God.

All the people of the lande shall gyue this heueroffrynge with a free wyll. Agayne, it shall be the princes parte to offre burntof-frynges, meate offrynges, and drynckoff-frynges vnto the Lorde, in the holy dayes, newe

newe Moones, Sabbothes and in all the hyghe feastes of the house of Israel. The synoffryng, meatoffryng, burntoffryng and healthoffryng shall he gyue, to reconcyle the house of Israel. Thus sayth the Lorde God: The fyrste daye of the fyrste moneth thou shalte take a yonge bullocke without blemyth, and clense the Sanctuary. So the preste shall take of the bloud of the synnoffryng, and sprinckle it vpon the postes of the house, and vpon the foure corners of the aulter, with the boxeposte of the innermer courte. And thus thou shalte do also the.vij. daye of the moneth (for such as haue synned of ignorannce, or beynge deceyued) to reconcyle the house withall. Vpon the. xiij daye of the fyrste moneth ye shall kepe Easter. Seuen dayes shall the feaste contynue, wherin there shall no sowre me leuened bread be eaten.

C Vpon the same daye shall the prince gyue for him selfe and all the people of the lande a bullocke for a synnoffryng. And in the feaste of the seuen dayes he shall offre euery day a bullocke and a ramme, that are without blemyth, for a burntoffryng vnto the Lorde: and he gote dayly for a synnoffryng. For the meatoffringes, he shal gyue euer an Ephah to a bullocke, an Ephah to a ramme, and an hin of oyle to an Ephah. Vpon the.xv. daye of the seuenth moneth, he shall kepe the seuen dayes holye one after an other, euen as the other seuen dayes: with the synneoffryng, burntoffryng, meatoffryng, & with the oyle.

¶ The sacrifyces of the Sabboth and of the newe moone. Through what doores they must go in, & come out of the temple, &c.

CAPI. XLVI.

THus sayth the Lorde God: the doore of ꝑ innermer courte toward the East, shall be shut the.vi. worke dayes: but in the Sabboth and in day of the new mone it shall be open. Then shall the prince come vnder the doore porch, and stande styll without by the doore cheke. So the prestes shall offer his burnt and healthoffringes. And he shall worshyp at ꝑ doore poste, and go his way forth ayayne: but the doore shal no more be shut tyll the euenynge.

On the same maner shal the people of the lande also do their worshyp before the Lord without this doore vpon the Sabbothes and newe Moones. This is nowe the the burnt offringe, that the prince shall bringe vnto ꝑ Lord vpon the Sabboth: syxe lambes with oute blemyth, and a ram without blemyth, and an Ephah for a meatoffryng, with the ram. As for the lambes, he maye gyue as many meatoffringes to them, as he wyll, and an hin of oyle to an Ephah. In the daye of the newe moneth, it shal be a yong bullocke without blemyth, syxe lambes and a ram al so without blemyth. With the bullock he shall gyue an Ephah, and with the ramme an Ephah also for a meatoffryng: but to the lambes, what he may come by: And euer an hin of oyle to an Ephah. When the prince commeth he shall go vnder the doore of the porche, and there departe forth agayne. But when the people of the lande come before ꝑ Lorde in the hygh solempne feaste, as many as come in by the north doore to be worshyped, shall go out agayne at the South doore. And they that come in at the South doore, shal go forth agayne at ꝑ North doore. There shall none go out at the doore where he came in, but shall go forth ryght ouer on the other syde and the prince shal go in and out among them.

Vpon the solemne and hyghe feaste dayes this shall be the meatoffryng: An Epha to a bullocke and an Epha to a ram, and to the lambes: as many as he wil, but euer an hin of oyle to an Epha. Lowe when the prince bringeth a burntoffryng or an healthoffryng with a free wyll vnto the Lorde, the east doore shall be opened vnto him, that he maye do with his burnt and healthoffringes, as he doth vpon the Sabboth, and whe he goeth forth, ꝑ doore shal be shut after hym ayayne. He shall dayly bring vnto the Lord a lambe of a yere olde without blemyth for a burntoffryng: this shall he do euery morynge. And for a meatoffryng he shal gyue the.vi. part of an Epha, and the thyrde part of an hin of oyle (to myngle with the cakes) euery morynge. Yea this shall be a dayly meatoffryng vnto the Lorde for an euerlastynge ordinaunce: and thus shal the lambe, the meatoffryng and oyle be gyue euery morynge, for a dayly burntoffryng.

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde God. If the prince gyue a gyfte vnto anye of his sonnes, then shall it be his sonnes herete perpetuall, that he may possesse it. But if he wyl gyue one of his seruauntes some of his heritage, it shall be his to the fre yeare, and then to returne ayayne vnto the prince: for his heritage shall be his sonnes onely. The prince also shall take none of the peoples enheritaunce, ne put them from their possessio but to his owne sonnes shal he gyue his possessio, that my people be not scattered abrode, but that euery man maye haue his owne.

And he brought me thorow the intraunce at the syde of the doore to the habytacion of the Sanctuarye, that belongeth to the prestes and lode toward the north, and beholde there was a place vpon the West syde, then sayde he vnto me: This is the place, where the prestes shall dyght the trespace and the offringes, and bake the meatoffringes: that they nede not beare them in to the outward court and so to vnhalowe the people. So he brought me in to the vttermost courte, rounde about all the foure corners. Beholde, in euery corner of the fyue courte, there was yet a litle court.

Yea in all the foure corners of the courte there was a lytle courte of.xl. cubytes lōge & xxx. cubites brode: these fyue litle courtes were were of one lyke measure, and there were a ryght wall rounde about them al foure, vnder the which there were barthes made rounde about. Then sayd he vnto me: This is the kitchin, where the ministers of ꝑ house shal dresse the slayne offringes of ꝑ people.

¶ The description of the waters that come out of the temple. The costes of the lande of promyse, and the deuision therof by tribes.

CAPI. XLVII.

AFter this he brought me agayne before the dore of the house: and beholde there gushed out waters from vnder the postes of ꝑ house eastward (for the house stode eastwarde) the same ranne downe vpon the ryght syde of the house, which lyeth to the aulter south ward. Then caried he me out to the northe dore, and brought me forth there rounde about by the vttermost dore that turneth eastwarde. Beholde, there came forthe the water vpon the ryghte syde. Now when the man that had the measured in his hande went vnto the east dore, he measured a M cubites, and then he brought me thorowe the water, euen to the ankles. So he measured yet a thousande, and brought me thorow the water agayne vnto the knees: yet measured he a thousand, and brought me thorowe the water vnto the loynes. After this he measured a thousande agayne, then was it such a ryuer, that I myght not wade thorowe: The water was so depe, ꝑ it was needefull to gaue I wymmed, for it myght not be waded ouer. And he sayd vnto me: hast ꝑ seene this, O thou sonne of man? and with that, he brought me to the ryuer banche agayne.

Nowe when I came there, there stode many trees vpon either syde of the ryuer backe. Then sayd he vnto me: This water that goeth out toward the east, & runneth downe in to the playne felde, commeth into the see: and from the see it runneth out, and maketh the waters hole. Yea all that lyue and moue where vnto this ryuer commeth, shall recouer. And where this water commeth, there shall be moch fysh. For all that comme to this water, shall be lusty and hole. By this ryuer shall be fyshers stande from Engaddi vnto Eneglaim, & there sprede out their nettes: for there shal be great heapes of fish lyke as in the mayne see. As for his clay and pottes, they shal not be hole, for why, it shal be occupyed for salte.

By this ryuer vpon bothe the sydes of the shore, there shall growe all maner of fruitful trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, neither shall their fruite perysh: but euer be fryt at their monethes, for they waters runneth out of the sanctuary.

This fruite is good to eat, and his leafe profitable for medycyne. Thus saith the Lorde God: Let this be the border, wherin ye shal deuide the land vnto the xij. tribes of Israel with the lyne.

Parte it indifferently vnto one as vnto an other: of the which lande I swore vnto your fathers, that it shulde fall to your enheritaunce.

This is the border of the lande vpon the northsyde, from the mayne see, as men goo to Zedada: namely Hemath, Berocha, Sabarim: from the borders of Damascus and Hemath vnto Hazar Thichon, and that lyeth vpō the costes of Hauteran.

Thus the borders from the see forth, shall be Hazar Enan, the border of Damascus the North, and the borders of Hemath: that is the north parte.

The east syde shall ye measure frome Hauteran and Damascus from Galead and the land of Israel by Jordan and so forth, from the see cost, that lyeth eastwarde: and this is the east parte.

The southsyde is, from Thamar forthe to the waters of stryfe vnto Cades, the ryuer, to the mayne see: and that is the southe parte.

The west parte: namely the greate see for the borders therof tyl a man come vnto Hemath: this is the west parte.

This lande shall ye part amonge you, accordynge to the tribes of Israel, & deuyde it to be an heritage for you, & for the straungers that dwell amonge you, and beget children. For ye shal take them amonge ꝑ children of Israel, lyke as though they were of your owne housholde & countrey, and they shal haue heritage with you amonge the children of Israel.

Loke in what tribe the straunger dwelleth, in the same tribe shall ye geue him his heritage, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ The lottes of the seuen tribes. The parte of the possession of the preistes and of the temple, of the Leuytes, of the cyte, of the prynce, are reherced. The lottes of the other tribes. The gates of the cyte.

CAPI. XLVIII.

THese are the names of the tribes that lye vpon the northsyde, by the waye of Hethlon, tyl thou comest vnto Hemath and Hazar Enam, the borders of Damascus towarde the North beside Hemath: Dan shall haue his portion frome the east quarter vnto the west. Vpon the borders of Dan frome the east syde vnto the west, shall Aser haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Aser from the east part vnto the west shal Nephthali haue his portion.

Vpon the borders of Nephthali from the east quarter vnto the west, shall Manasses haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Manasses from the east syde vnto the west, shall Ephraim haue his portion.

Vpon the borders of Ephraim frome the east part vnto ꝑ west, shall Ruben haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Ruben frome the eaſt quarter vnto the weſt ſhal Iuda haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Iuda from the eaſt parte to the weſt, ye ſhal ſet aſyde one portion of.xxv.M.meterodde longe o brode, (lyke as an other portion from the eaſt ſyde vnto the weſte) therin the Sanctuary ſhall ſtande.

As for the portion that ye ſhal ſeparate out for the Lorde, it ſhal be.xxv.M. longe, and ten thouſand brode. Which ſeparated holy portion ſhal belong vnto theſe: namely to the prieſtes towarde the northe xxv.M. and toward the weſt ten thouſand brode, toward the eaſt ten thouſand brode alſo, and toward the ſouth.xxv.M. long, wherin the Sanctuary of the Lord ſhal ſtande. Yea this ſame place ſhal be the prieſtes that are of the children of Sadoch, and haue kepte my holy ordinaunce, which went not aſtraye in the errour of the children of Iſrael, lyke as the Leuites are gone aſtray: and this ſeparated peece that they haue of the lande, ſhal be the moſte holy, harde vpon the borders of the Leuites.

And next vnto the prieſtes, ſhal the Leuites haue.xxv.thouſande long, and ten.M.brode. This ſhal be on euery ſyde.xxv.M. long, and ten.M brode. Of this portion they ſhal ſell nothing, ne make any permutacion therof, leeſt the chiefe of the lande fall vnto other, for it is halowed vnto the Lorde.

The other five.M. after the breadth that lyeth by the.xxv.thouſand, ſhall be common: it ſhal belong to the city and to the ſuburbes for habitacions, and the citye ſhall ſtande in the middeſt therof. Let this be the meaſure: toward the northe part five hundred and four.M. towarde the ſouth part, five.C. and four.M. toward the eaſt part.v.C. and four.M. toward the weſt part.v.C. and four thouſand.

The ſuburbes hard vpon the city, ſhal haue toward the north.l. and two.C. towarde the ſouth.l. and two.C. toward the eaſt.l. and.C. and toward the weſt alſo.l. and two hundred. All that is ſeparated of the.xxv.thouſande long and.xxv.thouſand brode on the four parties, that ſhall ye put a ſyde for the ſeparated portion of the ſanctuary, and for the poſſeſſion of the citye. The reſidue vpon both the ſydes of the ſanctuary and poſſeſſion of the city ſhal belonge to the prince, betwene the place of the xxv.thouſande vnto the eaſt ende, and before the place of the.xxv.M. weſtwarde, vnto the borders of the citye: this ſhall be the princes portion. Thus ſhall be the holy place, and the houſe of the ſanctuary ſhall ſtande in the middeſt. Moreouer, from the Leuites and the citye poſſeſſion that lye in the middeſt of the princes part: lyke what remaineth betwixt the borders of Iuda and the borders of Benjamin, ſhal be the princes.

Thus is the land with his portions which ye ſhall diſtribute vnto the tribes of Iſrael ſayth the Lord God. Thus wide ſhal the city reache: Vpon the north part five.C. and four thouſande meaſures. The portes of the citye ſhall haue the names of the tribes of Iſrael. Three portes of the north ſyde: one Ruben, an other Iuda, the thirde Leui.

Vpon the eaſt ſyde five.C. and foure thouſand meaſures, with three portes: The one Ioſeph an other Benjamin, the third Dan. Vpon the ſouth ſyde five hundred and four thouſand meaſures, with three portes: the one Symeon, an other Iſahar, the third Zabulon. And vpon the weſt ſyde five hundred.C. and foure.M. meaſures, with three portes alſo, the one Gad an other Aſer, the third Nephthali. Thus ſhal it haue.xviij.thouſand meaſures rounde about. And from that time forth the name of the city ſhalbe: The Lorde is there.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE DANIEL.

¶ The Prophete theweth the captyuyte of Joachim kynge of Juda. Of the sonnes that were in captyuyte. The kynge commaundeth to chose whyte of them shoulde be taught the lernyng and language of the Caldees. They are alowed the kynges kytchyng. Daniel abstayneth from the meate of the kynge of Babylon. The lucke and promocion of these chyldren.

CAPI. I.

a ANNO. V. REGIS. & ELIA. XXIIII.

IN the thyrde yere of the raygne of Joachim kynge of Juda, came Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon vnto Jerusalem, and besieged it: and the Lorde delyuered Joachim the kynge of Juda in to his honde: with certayne ouermetes of the house of God: which he caryed awaye vnto the land of Sennar, to the house of his God, and there he broughte them in to his goddes treasury. And the kynge spake vnto Aspenaz the chefe chamberlayne, that he sholde kynge him certayne of the children of Israel that were come of the kinges seed, and of Princes, yonge spryngolds without any blemyshe, but faire and welfauoured in sterne in all wysdome, conning and vnderstandynge, which were able to stande in the kinges palace, to rede, and to lerne so, to speake Caldeish.

b Vnto these the kynge appoynted a certeyn porcion of his owne meate, and of the wyne, whyche he dranke hym selfe, so to nourysshe them thre yere, that afterwarde they myght stande before the kynge. Amonge these nowe were certayne of the chyldren of Juda/name ly Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Vnto these the chefe Chamberlayne gaue o ther names, and called Daniel Balthasar: Ananias Sydrach: Misael Misach: and Azarias Abednago. But Daniel was at a poynte with hym selfe, that he wolde not be defyled therowe the kynges meat, ne the wyne whyche he dronke. And this he desyred of the chefe chamberlayne, lest he sholde be defyled hym selfe. So God gaue Daniel fauour and grace before the chefe chamberlayne, that he sayde vnto hym: I am afrayde of my lorde ℣ kyng, whyche hathe appoynted you your meate and drynche, lest he spye youre faces to be worse lykynge then the other spryngolds of youre age, and so ye shall make me lose my heed vnto the kynge.

Genesis xli. Exodi. b. Judith xii. c

Then Daniel answered Melasar, whome the chefe chamberlayne had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias, and sayde: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruaunces, and let vs haue potage to eate, and water to drynche / then loke vpon oure faces, and theyre that eate of the kynges meate. And as then seme, so deale with thy seruaunces. So he consented to them in this matter, and proued them ten dayes. And after the ten dayes theyr faces were better lykynge, and fatter then all the yonge spryngolds whych ate of ℣ kynges meate.

Thus Melasar toke away theyr meat and D wyne, and gaue them potage therfore. God gaue nowe these foure spryngolds cunnyng and lerning in all scripture and wysdome, but vnto Daniel specially he gaue vnderstandyng of all vysions and dreames. Nowe when the tyme was expyred that the kyng had appoynted to bryngе in their yonge spryngolds before him: the chefe chamberlayne broughte them before Nabuchodonosor, and the kynge communed with them. But amonges them all were founde none suche as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias.

Therfore stode they before the kynge, whyche in all wysdome, and matters of vnderstandyng that he enquyred of them, founde them ten tymes better then all the sothesayers and charmers, that were in al his realme. And Daniel abode styll vnto the fyrste yere of kynge Cyrus.

¶ The dreame of Nabuchodonosor. He calleth vnto hym sothsayers, and requyreth of them, both the dreame and the interpretacion therof. They answere that they can not shewe it. The kynge commaundeth all the wyse men of Babylon to be slayne. Daniel requyreth tyme to shewe the questyon. The Lorde openeth the mysterye vnto Daniel. Daniel is brought vnto the kynge, and sheweth him his dreame and the interpretacion therof. Of the euerlastynge kyngdome of Christe. The stone Christe. Daniel is exalted and promoted of the kynge.

CAPI. II.

a ANNO. II. REGNI NABU.

IN the seconde yere of the raygne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreame where thorowe his spirite was vexed, and his slepe brake from hym. Then the kynge commaunded to call togyther all the sothesayers, charmers, witches and Caldees, for to shewe the kyng his dreame. So they came and stode before the kynge. And the kyng sayd vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spirite was so troubled therwith, that I haue clene forgotten what I dreamed. Vpon this the Caldees aunswered the kynge in the Syrians speche: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shewe thy seruaunces the dreame, and we shall shewe the what it meaneth. The kynge gaue the Caldees theyr answere, and sayde: It is gone fro me: Yf ye will not make me vnderstande the dreame, with the interpretacion therof, ye shall dye, and youre houses shall be pylled. But yf ye tell me the dreame and the meanynge therof, ye shall haue of me gyftes, rewardes, and great honoure: onely, shewe me the dreame and the signification of it.

Dyd

They aunswered agayne and sayde: The kynge muste shewe his seruauntes the dreme and so shall we declare what it meaneth.
Then the kynge aunswered, sayinge: I perceyue of a truthe, that ye be but prolonge the tyme: for so moche as ye se that the thyng is gone fro me. Therfore ye will not tell me the dreame, ye shal all haue one iudgement. Wut ye sayne and dissemble with vayne wordes, whiche ye speake before me, to put of the tyme.
Therfore tell me the dreame, and so shall I knowe yf ye can shewe me what it meaneth.
Upon this the Caldees gaue answere before the kynge, and sayde: there is no man vpon earthe that can tell the thynge, whiche the kynge speaketh of: Yea, there is neyther kynge, prince nor Lorde, that euer asked suche thynges of a sothesayer, charmer or Caldee: for it is a harde matter, that the kynge requyreth. Neyther is there any, that can certifye the kynge therof, except the goddes: whose dwellynge is not among the creatures.
E For the whiche cause the kyng was wrothe with greate indignation, and commaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babylon, and the proclamation went forthe, that the wyse men shoulde be slayne. They sought also for Daniel with his companions. Then Daniel enquyred Arioch the kynges stewarde, of the iudgement and sentence, that was gone forthe afordye to kyll suche as were wyse at Babylon.
He answered and sayd vnto Arioch beinge then the kinges deputie: Why hath the king proclaymed so cruell a sentence? Ho Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. Upon this went Daniel vp, and desyred the kynge that he might haue leasure to shewe the kyng the interpretation: and then came he home agayne, and declared the thyng vnto Ananias, Misael, and Azarias his companions, that they shoulde beseche the God of heuen for grace in this secrete, that Daniel and and his felowes, with other suche as were wyse in Babylon, perysshed not.
D Then was the mistery shewed vnto Daniel in a vysyon by nyght. And Daniel praysed the God of heuen. Daniel also cryed loude and sayd: O that the name of God might be praised for euer and euer, for wysdome & strength are his owne / he chaungeth the tymes and ages: he putteth downe kynges / he setteth vp kynges: he giueth wysedome vnto the wyse, and vnderstandynge to those that vnderstande: he openeth the depe secretes; he knoweth the thynge that lyeth in darknesse, for the lyghe dwelleth with him. I thanke the, and prayse the (O thou God of my fathers) that thou hast lent me wysedome and strength, and hast shewed me the thynge that we asked of the, for thou hast opened the kinges matter vnto me.
Upon this went Daniel in vnto Arioch, whome the kynge had ordeyned to destroye the wyse at Babylon: he went vnto him and sayd: destroye not suche as are wyse in Babylon, but bringe me in to the kynge, and I shall shewe the kynge the interpretation.
Then Arioch brought Daniel in to the kyng in all the haste, and sayde vnto him: I haue founde a man amongest the prysoners of Iuda, that shall shewe the kynge the interpretation. Then answered the kynge, and sayd vnto Daniel, whose name was Baltheasar: Art thou he that canst shewe me the dreame, whiche I haue sene, and the interpretation therof? Daniel answered the kynge to his face, and sayd: No for this secret, for the wise the kynge maketh no question: it is neyther the wyse, the sorcerer, nor charmer, ne the deuyll coniurer, that can certifye the kynge of it: Onely God in heauen can open secretes, and he it is that shewed the kyng Nabuchodonosor, what is for to come in the latter dayes. Matth. xiii

Thy dreame, and that which thou hast seen in thyne bed, and thy deuises in thy bedde canst vp thy mynde what should come hereafter. So he that is the opener of mysteries, telleth the what is for to come. As for me, this secret is not shewed me for any wysdom that I haue more then any other liuyng: but only that I might shewe the kynge the interpretation, and that he might know the thoughtes of his owne hert. Then kyng sawest, and beholde, there stode before the a great ymage, whose figure was maruelous great, and his bryght glymme. The ymage here was of fine golde, his brest and armes of syluer, his bealy & loynes were of copper, his legges were of yron, his fete were parte of yron and parte of erthe.
This thou sawest, tyll the tyme that without any handes there was beaten of a stone, wyche smote the ymage vpon the fete, that were bothe of yron and erth, and brake the to pouder: then was the yron, the erth, the copper the syluer and gold broken all togither in peces and became lyke the chaffe of corne, that the wynde blowseth awaye from the summer floores, that they can no more be found. But the stone that smote the ymage became a greate mountayne, which fulfilleth all erthe with the dreme. And now will we shew before the kinge, what it meaneth. Matth. xxi. Luke xx. b

O kynge, thou arte a kyng of kynges: for the God of heauen hathe geuen the a kyngedome, rychesse, strengthe, and maiestye: and hathe deliuered the all thynges that are amonges the children of men: the beastes of the feld, and the foules vnder the heuen, and graue the dominion ouer them all. Thou arte that golden hede. After the, there shall arise an other kyngdome, whiche shall be lesse then thyne. The thyrde kyngdome shall be lyke copper, and haue dominacion in all landes. The fourthe kyngdome shall be as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron breaketh and breaketh all thynges: Yea euen as yron beateth euerye thynge downe, so shall it beate downe and vnbroke. Dan. ii. b

Where as thou sawest the fete and toes parte of erthe and parte of yron, that is a deuyded kyngdome, wherof there shall haue some of the yron grounde myxte with it for so moche as thou hast sene the yron myxte with claye.

The toes of the fete that were part of yrō and part of claye, signifieth that it shall be a kyngdome partly stronge, and partly weyke. And where as ꝑ sawest yron mixte with claye, they shall myngle them selues with the seed of symple people, and yet not continue one with an other, lyke as yron will not be souldered with a potsherd.

Clay.2.b

In the dayes of these kynges, shall the God of heuen set vp an euerlastynge kyngedome, whiche shall not perysshe, and his kyngdome shal not be gyuen ouer to an other people: yea the same shall breake and destroy all these kyngdomes, but it shall endure for euer.

Dedy.2.f

And where as ꝑ sawest that without anye handes there was cut out of the mount a stone, whyche brake the yron, the copper, the erth, the syluer and golde in peces: by that hathe the great God shewed the kynge what wil come after this. This is a true dreme, and the interpretacion therof is sure.

Then the kynge Nabuchodonosor fell downe vpon his face, and bowed him self vnto Daniel, and commaunded that they shulde offre meate offerynges and swete odoures vnto him. The kynge answered Daniel, and sayd: yea of a truthe youre God is a God above all gobdes, a Lorde above all kynges, and an opener of secretes, seynge thou canste discouer this mistery. So the kinge made Daniel a great man, and gaue him many a great gyfte.

He made him ruler of all the countreyes of Babylon, and lorde of all the nobles that were at Babylon. Nowe Daniel entreated the kinge for Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago so that he made them rulers ouer all the offices in the lande of Babylon. But Daniel him self remayned styll in the courte by the kynge.

¶ The kynge setteth vp a golden Image, whiche he commaundeth to be worshepped. Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago are accused, bycause they dyd not the kynges commaundement. They are brought vnto the kynge and commaunded to worshyp the Image. They refuse to do it, and are put in to a burnynge ouen. By beleue in God, they are deliuered from the fyre. Nabuchodonosor confesseth the power of God after the sight of the myracle.

CAPI. III.

NAbuchodonosor the kynge caused a golden ymage to be made, which was three score cubites hygh, and sixe cubites brode. This he made to be set vp in the fielde of Dura in the lande of Babylon, and sente oute to gather togethee the dukes, lordes, and nobles, ꝑ iudges and officers, the debuties ꝑ shyres, with all the rulers of the land: that they myghte come to the dedicacion of the ymage which Nabuchodonosor the kynge hadde set vp. So the dukes, lordes and nobles / the iudges and officers, deputyes and viewes / with all the rulers of the lande gathered them togither, and came vnto the dedicacyng of the ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Nowe when they stode before the ymage, whiche Nabuchodonosor sette vp, the herald cryed oute with all his myght: O ye people, kynredes and tunges, to you be it sayd: that when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes whiche shall be blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteryes, symphonyes, and all maner of musyke: ye fall downe and worshyp the golden ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kynge hathe set vp. Who so then falleth not downe and boweth him selfe, shall euen the same houre be cast in to an hote burnynge ouen. Therfore, when all the folke herde the noyse of the Trompettes that were blowē with the Harpes, Shawmes, Psalteryes, Symphonyes, and all kynde of melodye: then all the people, kynredes and nacions fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golden ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Now were there certayne men of the Caldees that went euen then and accused the Iewes, and sayd vnto the kynge Nabuchodonosor: O king, God saue thy life for euer. Thou being kynge, hast gyuen a commaundement, that all men, when they heare noyse of the trompettes, harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonyes, and all the other melodyes: shall fall downe and bow them selues toward the golden ymage: who so then fell not downe, and worshypped not, that he shulde be cast in to an hote burning ouen. B

Nowe are there certeyn Iewes, whom thou hast set ouer the offices of the land of Babylon: namely, Sydrach, Misach and Abednago. Daniel

These men (o kyng) regarde not thy commaundement, yea they will not serue thy gobdes, ne bow them selues to the golden ymage that thou hast set vp.

Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wrathe and displeasure, commaunded, that Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago shulde be brought vnto him. So these men were brought before the kyng. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them and sayd: what? O Sydrach, Misach and Abednago, will not ye serue my gobdes? nat bowe your selues to the golden ymage, that I haue set vp? well be redye hereafter, when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowe with ꝑ Harpes, Shawmes, Psalteryes, Symphonyes, and all the other melodyes: that ye fall downe and worshyp the ymage whiche I haue made. But yf ye worshyp it not, ye shall be caste immediatlye in to an hote burnynge ouen. Lette se, what God is there, that maye deliuer you oute of my handes? Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago answered the kynge, and sayde: O Nabuchodonosor, we ought not to consent vnto the in this matter, for why? oure God whome we serue, is able to kepe vs from the hote burnynge ouen (O kynge) and can ryght well deliuer vs out of thy handes. And though he will not,

Dan.3.a

Dan.3.a

Yet shalt thou knowe (O kynge) that we wyll not serue thy goddes, nor doo reuerence to the ymage, which thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonozor full of indignacion, so that the countenaunce of his face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Misach, and Abdonago. Therfore he charged & commaunded that the ouen shulde be made seuen tymes hotter then it was wont to be, and spake vnto the strongest worthyes that were in his hoste, for to binde Sidrach, Misach and Abdonago, and to cast them in to the hote burnyng ouen.

So these men were bounde in their cotes, hosen, shoes, with their other garmentes, and cast in to the hote burning ouen: for the kinges commaundement was so sharpe, and the ouen was exceedyng hote. As for the men that put in Sidrach, Misach, and Abdonago, the flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these thre men: Sidrach, Misach, and Abdonago, fell downe in the hote burnynge ouen, being fast bounde.

Then Nabuchodonozor the kyng maruey-led, and rose vp in all haste: he spake vnto his counsell and sayde: dyd ye not cast these thre men bounde in to the fyre? They answered, and sayde vnto the kynge: Yea, O kynge. He answered and sayde: Lo for all that, yet do I se foure men goynge loose in the myddest of the fyre; and nothynge corrupte, and the fourthe is lyke an aungell to look vpon.

Upon this went Nabuchodonozor vnto the mouth of the hote burninge ouen: he spake also, and sayd: O Sidrach, Misach, and Abdonago, ye seruauntes of the hye God, go forth and come hyther. And so Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago went oute of the fyre. Then the dukes, lorde, and nobles, and the kynges counsell came together to se these men, vpon whom the fyre had no maner of power in their bodyes. In so moche that the very heere of their hed was not burnt, and their clothes vnchaunged: yea there was no smell of fyre felt vpon them.

Then spake Nabuchodonozor and sayde: Blessed be the God of Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago: whiche hathe sente his aungell, and defended his seruauntes, that put their truste in him: that haue altered the kynges commaundement, and ioparde their bodyes therevpon, rather then they wolde serue or worshyp any other God, except their owne God onely.

Therfore I wyll and commaunde, that all people, kynredes and tunges, whiche speake anye blasphemye agaynste the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, shall dye, and their houses shall be pyled: Bycause there is no God that maye saue, as this. So the kynge promoted Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago, in the lande of Babylon.

¶ Nabuchodonozor dreameth agayne. Daniel interpreteth it. Nabuchodonozor is put oute of his realme, and eateth with beastes. He confesseth the power of God, and is restored in to his kyngdome.

CAPI. IIII.

NAbuchodonozor kynge vnto all people, kynredes and tunges that dwell vpon the hole earthe: peace be multiplyed amongste you: I thought it good to shew the tokens and marueylous workes, that the hye God hath wrought vpon me. O howe greate are his tokens, and howe mighty are his wonders? his kyngdom is an euerlastyng kyngdome, and his power lasteth for euer, and euer. [Psal. 144. Daniel. vii. Luke. i.]

I Nabuchodonozor kynge at rest in myne house, and flourysshynge in my palace, sawe a dreame, whiche made me afrayde: and the thoughtes that I had vpon my bed, with the visions of my hed troubled me. Then sent I out a commission, that all they which were of wysdome at Babylon shulde be brought before me, to tell me the interpretacyon of the dreame.

So there came the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees and coniurers of deuyls: to whome I tolde the dreame, but what it betokened they could not shew me: tyl at the last there came one Daniel (otherwyse called Balthasar, accordynge to the name of my God) with the hath the spirite of the holy goddes in him: to whome I tolde the dreame, saynge: O Balthasar, thou Prynce of sothsayers: for so moche as I knowe that thou hast the spirite of the holy Goddes, and no secrete is hid from the: tell me therfore what the vysyon of my dreame (that I haue seen) maye signifye. I sawe a vision in my hed vpon my bed: and beholde there stode a tre vpon the grounde whiche was very hyghe, greate, and myghtye: the heyght reached vnto the heuen, and the brede extended to all the endes of the earthe: his leaues were fayre, he had very moche fruite, so that euery man had ynoughe to eate therin.

The beastes of the felde had shadowes vnder it, and the fowles of the ayre dwelte in the bowes therof. Shortly, all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my hed a vysion vpon my bedde: and beholde, a watcher came downe from heuen, and cryed myghtyly, saynge: Hewe downe the tree, breake of his braunches, shake of his leaues, and scatter his fruite abrode: that all the beastes maye gette them awaye from vnder him, and the fowles from his braunches. Neuertheles, leaue the grounde of his roote styll in the earthe, and bynde him vpon the playne felde, with cheynes of yron and stele. With the dewe of heuen shall he be wet, and he shal haue his part in the herbes of the ground with other wylde beastes.

That mannes herte of his shall be taken from him, and a beastes herte shall be geuen him, till seuen yeres be come and gone vpon him.

This errande of the watcher, is a commaundement graunted and sought out in the counsell of him that is moste holye: to lerne men for to vnderstande that the highest hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men, and

MM.ij. geueth

gruth them to whom it lyketh him, & bynge geth the bereye caitaffes of men ouer them.
This is the dreame that I kynge Nebuchodonoſor haue ſene: therefore, O Balthaſar, tell thou me what it ſignifieth: for ſo moche as all the wyſe men of my kyngdome are not able to ſhewe me what it meaneth. But thou canſt do it, for the ſpirite of ♄ holy god-des is in the.

D Then Daniel (whoſe name was Balthaſar) helde his peas by the ſpace of an howre, and his thoughtes troubled him. So the kynge ſpake, and ſayd: O Balthaſar, let neither the dreame ne the interpretacion therof feare the.
Balthaſar anſwered, ſayinge: O my Lorde, this dreame happen to thyne enemyes, & the the interpretacion to thyne aduerſaryes. The for the tree that thou ſaweſt, whiche was ſo greate and mightye, whoſe heyghte reached vnto the heuen, & his breth in to all ♄ worlde:
whoſe leaues were fayre, and the frute moch vnder the whiche the beestes of the felde had their habitacion, and vpon whoſe braunches the foules of the ayre dyd ſyt.

Euen thou, O kynge, art the tree, great and ſtronge. Thy greatneſſe encreaſeth, and reacheth vnto the heuen, ſo doethe thy power to the endes of the erth. But where as the kinge ſawe a watcher, euen an holy aungell, that came downe from heuen, and ſayde: hewe downe the tree, and deſtroye it: yet leaue the grounde of the roote in the earthe: and bynd him vpon the playne felde, with chaynes of yron and ſtele. He ſhall be wet with the dewe of heuen, and his parte ſhall be with the beaſtes of the felde, tyll ſeuen yeres be come and gone vpon him. This (O kynge) is the interpretacion, yea it is the very mater of him that is hyeſt of all, and it toucheth my Lorde
the kynge.

E Thou ſhalte be caſt oute fro men, and thy dwellynge ſhall be with the beaſtes of the felde: with graſſe ſhalte thou be fed lyke an ox. Thou muſt be wet with the dewe of he-uen: Yea, ſeuen yeres ſhall come and goo vpon the, tyll thou knowe that the hieſt hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, and gyueth them to whom he will. Moreouer, where as it was ſayd that the roote of the tre ſhulde be left ſtyll in the grounde: it betokeneth ♄ thy kyngdome ſhall remayne hole vnto the, after thou haſt learned to knowe, that the power commeth from heauen. Wherfore, O kynge, be content with my counſell, that thou mayſt loſe thy ſynnes with righteouſneſſe, and thyne offences with mercy to poore people: for ſuche thynges ſhal prolong thy pear.
All theſe thynges touche the kyng Nabucho-donoſor.

♄ After twelue monethes, the kyng walked vp and downe in the palace of the kyngdome of Babylon, and ſayd: This is ♄ great citye of Babylon, which I my ſelfe (with my power and ſtrengthe) haue made a kynges courte for the honour of my maieſtie. While theſe wordes was yet in the kynges mouthe, there fell a voyce from heuen ſaying: O kyng Nabuchodonoſor, to the be it ſpoken: The kyngdome ſhall departe from the, thou ſhalt be caſt out of mens company: thy dwellynge ſhall be with the beaſtes of the felde, ſo that thou ſhalt eate graſſe lyke an ox, tyll ſeuen yeres be come and gone ouer the, euen vntyll thou knoweſt that the hieſt hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, and that he maye geue them vnto whome it pleaſeth him.
The ſelfe ſame houre was this matter fulfy-lled vpon Nabuchodonoſor: for that he was caſte out of mennes compayny, and eate graſſe lyke an ox. His body was wet with ♄ dewe of heuen, tyll his heares were as great as Egles fethers, and his nayles like byrdes clawes.

G When this tyme was paſt, I Nabucho-donoſor lyfted vp myne eyes vnto heuen, and myne vnderſtandynge was reſtored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thankes vnto ♄ hieſt, I magnified and prayſed him that lyueth for euer more, whoſe power endureth alwayes, and his kyngdom from one generacion to an other: in comperyſon of whom all they that dwelle vpon the earthe, are to be reputed as nothynge.

He handleth accordynge to his will among the powers of heuen, and amonge the inhabitauntes of the earth: and there is none that maye reſiſt his hande, or ſaye: what doeſt thou? At the ſame tyme was myne vnderſtanding geuen me agayne, and I was reſtored to the honour of my kingdome, to my dignitie, & to myne owne ſhape agayne. My great eſta-tes and prynces ſought vnto me, and I was ſet in my kyngdome agayne, ſo that I had yet greater worſhyp.

Then dyd I Nabuchodonoſor laude, magnifie and prayſe the kynge of heuen, for all his workes are true, and his wayes right. And thoſe that goo proudly, he is able to bringe them downe.

¶ Balthazar kynge of Babylon abuſynge the veſſelles of the temple, ſeith an hande writynge on the wall. The ſoothſayers called of the kynge, can not expounde the writynge. Daniel is called, whiche reedeth it, and interpreteth it alſo. Balthazar beynge ſlayne, Darius ſucceedeth in his roume.

CAPI. V.

KYng Balthazar made a great banket to his thouſande Lordes: with all that thouſand he made great chere, and wil he was drenken with wyne, he commaunded to bring him the golden & ſyluer veſſelles, wh-che his father Nabuchodonoſor had take out of the temple at Jeruſalem: that the kyng & his lordes ♄ his quene and concubines might drynke therin.

So they brought the golden veſſell ♄ was taken oute of the temple of the lordes houſe at Jeruſalem. Then the kynge and his lordes with his quene and concubynes dronke of them. They dronke wyne, and prayſed their idolles of golde, ſiluer, copper, yron, wod and ſtone.

In

In the verye same houre there appeared fyngers, as it had bene of a mans hande wrytynge right over against the candelsticke vpon the playne wall in the kynges palace: and the kynge sawe the palme of the hande that wrote. Then chaunged the kyng his countenaunce, and his thoughtes troubled him, so that the ioyntes of his backe lodes, and his knees smote one against the other. Wherfore the kyng cryed vngodely, that they should bringe him the charmers, Caldees and soothsayers of Babylon. The kyng spake also to the wise men of Babylon, and said: Who so redeth this writtinge, and shewe me the playne meanynge therof: shall be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde about his necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kingdome.

Vpon this, came all the kynges wyse men: but they could neither reade the writtinge, nor shew the kyng what it signified. Then was the kinge sore afrayed: in so moche, that his colour chaunged, and his lordes were sore vexed. So by reason of this matter, that had happened to the kyng and his lordes, the quene went vp her selfe into the banchet house, & spake vnto the kinge, saynge: O kyng, God sane thy life for ever: Let not the thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenaunce be chaunged. For why? there is a man in thy kingdom, that hathe the spirite of the holye goddes within him, as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstandynge & wisdome lyke the goddes. Yea the kinge Nabuchodonosor thy father made this man cheife of the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees and vpsil coniurers: because that such an abundaut spirite, knowledge and wysdome (to expoune dreames, to vpdi secretes, and to declare hard doubtes) was found in him: yea euen in Daniel, whome the king named Balthazar. Let this same Daniel be sent for, and he shall tell, what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel brought before the kinge. So the kinge spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: Arte thou that Daniel, one of the captiues of Juda, whome my father the kynge brought out of Jury? I haue herarde speake of the, that thou hast the spirite of the holy goddes, experience and vnderstandynge, and that there hath bene great wysdome founde in the. Now haue there ben brought me, wyse and cunnynge charmers to reade this wrytynge and to shewe me the meanynge therof: But they coulde not tell me, what this matter signified. The herde I saye, that thou couldest expound harde ryngynges, and declare harde doubtes. Wel then, yf thou canst rede this wrytynge, and shewe me the meanynge therof: thou shalte be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde about thy necke, and rule the thirde parte of my kingdome.

Daniel answered, & sayd before the king: Be for thy rewardes, kepe them to thy selfe, & gyue thy ryches gyftes to an other: yet nat the lesse, I wyll reade the writtinge vnto the kinge and shewe him the interpretation therof. O kyng, God the highest gaue vnto Nabuchodonosor thy father, the kyngdome, & a kinge, with worshipp and honoure: so that all people, kynredes & tonges dread & feare before him. Whom he slewe, whom he wolde: he smote, whome he pleased, & layed: whom he exalted, he set vp: & whom he wolde, he put downe. But because he hertened not his mynde, and his stomacke lift vp selfe vnto wyl fulnesse: he was brought from his kyngly throne, and his worshipe was taken from him. He was thrust out from amonges men, his hert was lyke a beastes hert, & his dwellynge was with the wylde asses: he was fayne to eate grasse like an ox, and his body was wet with the dewe of the heauen: vntyll he knewe that the highest had power vpon the kinge dome of men, and setteth ouer them whom he wyll.

And thou his sonne (O Balthasar) for all this, hast not humbled thyne hert, thoughe thou knewest all this thinges: but hast magnifyed thy selfe against the Lord of heuen, so that the vessels of his house were brought before the: that thou, and thy Lordes, with thy quene & concubines, mighte drinke wyne therin. And hast praysed the Idols of syluer and gold, copper and yron, of wod and stone. But for the God in whose hande consysteth thy breth and all thy wayes: thou hast not loued him.

Therfore is the palme of this hande sent hyther from him, to token vp this wrytyng. And this is the scripture, that is written vp: Mane, Thetel, Phares. Now the interpretacion of the thing is this: Mane, God hath nombred thy kyngdom, and brought it to an ende: Thetel, thou art weyed in the balance & arte found to light: Phares, thy kingdom is delte in peces, and geuen to the Medes and Perses.

Then commanded Balthasar, to clothe Daniel with purple, to hange a cheyne of gold about his necke, and and to make a pro clay macyon countrynge him, that he shuld be the ruler of the thyrde parte of his kyngdome. The verye same nyght was Balthasar the king of the Caldees slayne, and Darius out of Medea toke the kyngedome, beynge lxij yere of age.

Dan. v. Balthasar.

Esay. xlvij. Jere. l. Dan. ix. a.

¶ Daniel is made ruler ouer the lordes. The inuygeancyon of an acte agayne Daniel. The proclamacyon of the acte, wherof Daniel is certified vnto the kynge to a mayntenance. He is put in to a denne of lyons by the commaundement of the kyng. He is deliuered by fayth in God. Daniels accusers are put in to the lyons in his stede. Darius by the proclamacyon of a decree, magnifyeth the God of Daniel.

CAPI. VI.

IT pleased Darius to sette ouer his kingdom an. C. and xx. Lordes, whiche shulde be in all his kyngdom about. Above these he set three Princes (of whome Daniel was one) that the lordes might gyue accompte vnto vnto them, and the kynge to be vndiscaled.

But Daniel excedeth all these princes and lordes, for the spirite of God was plenteous in him: so that the kynge was minded to set him ouer the hole realme. Wherfore the princes and Lordes sought, to picke oute in Daniel some quarel against the kingdom yet could they fynde none occasion ne fawte vpon him. For why? he was so faythfull, that there was no blame ne dishonestye founde in him.

B Then sayde these men: we wyll get no quarell agaynste this Daniel, except it be in the lawe of his God. Vpon this, went the princes and lordes together vnto the kinge, and sayde thus vnto him: kinge Darius God saue thy lyfe for euer. All the great estates of the realme: as the princes, Dukes, Senatours, and Judges, are determed to put out a commaundement of the kynge, & to make sure statute namely, that who so desireth any petition, either of any God or man (within this .xxx. dayes) except it be only of the, O kinge: the same person maye be cast into the lyons denne. Wherfore, O king confirme this statutes, and make a writyng that the thinge which the Medes and Persis haue ordeyned be not aultered ne broken.

C So Darius made the writynge, and confirmed it. Nowe when Daniel vnderstode that the writinge was made, he went into his house: and the windowes of his hall, towarde Jerusalem stode open. There kneled he downe vpon his knees, thre tymes a day there he made his petition, and prayed his God, lyke as his maner was to doo afore tyme.

Then these men made searche, and founde Daniel makinge his petition, and prayenge vnto his God: So they came to the kynge, & spake before him concernynge his commaundement, sayinge: O kynge, hast thou not subscribed the statute, that within thirty dayes who so requyreth his petition of anye God or man but only of thy self, O kyng: he shal be cast into the den of the lyons? The kinge answered, and sayde: yea it is true. It must be as a law of the Medes and Persis, that maye not be broken.

D Then answered they, and sayde vnto the kinge: Daniel one of the prysoners of Juda O king, regardeth neither the, ne thy statute that thou hast made, but maketh his petition thre tymes a day. When the kynge heard these wordes, he was sore greued, and wold haue rescued Daniel, to delyuer him & put of the matter, vnto the Sunne went downe to the intent that he myght saue him.

These men perceyuyng the kinges mynde sayde vnto him: knowe this (O kynge) that the lawe of the Medes and Persis is that the commaundement and statute which the kinge maketh, maye not be altered. Then the kynge bad them bryng Daniel, and they cast him into the lyons den.

Dani.vi.c.

The kynge also spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: thy God, whom thou alwaye seruest, euen he shall defende the. And there was E brought a stone, and layde vpon the hole of the den, this the kinge sealed with his owne ringe, & with the signet of his princes: that the kynges commaundement concernynge Daniel, shulde not be broken.

So the kinge went into his palace, and kept him sober all nyght, so that there was no table spred before him, neither coulde he take any slepe. But by tymes in the morninge at the breake of the daye, the kynge arose, and went in all haste vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Now as he came nygh vnto the denne, he cryed with a pitteous voyce vnto Daniel: yea the kinge spake, and sayde vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunt of the liuynge God is not thy God (whom thou alway seruest) able to delyuer the from the Lyons? Daniel sayde vnto the kinge: O kinge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. My God hath sent his aungell, which hath shut the Lyons mouthes, so that they myght not hurte me. For why? myne vngiltynesse is founde out before him. And as for the, O kynge, I neuer offended the.

Then was the kynge exceadyng glad, and F commaunded to take Daniel out of the den. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, & no maner of hurt was founde vpon him. For he put his truste in his God. And as for those men whiche had accused Daniel, the kinge commaunded to bringe them, and to caste theym in the lyons denne, them their chyldren and their wyues. So the Lyons had the mastery of them, and brake all their bones a sonder, or euer they came at the grounde.

After this, wrote kynge Darius vnto all people kynredes, and tunges, that dwelte in all landes: peace be multyplyed with you: G My commaundement is, in all my dominyon and kyngdome, that men feare and stande in awe of Daniels God.

For he is the lyuynge God, which abideth euer: his kyngdome shall not fayle, and his power is euerlastynge. He is he that delyuereth & saueth: he with wodders & maruerlous workes, in heauen and in earthe: he hathe preserued Daniel from the power of the lyons. This Daniel prospered in the regyne of Darius and Cirus of Persia.

A vision of foure beastes is shewed vnto Daniel. The vision is interpreted of foure kyngdomes of the world. Of the power and increase of Antichrist. Of the euerlastynge kyngdome of Christe.

CAPI. VII.

IN the fyrste yeare of Balthasar kynge of Babylon, sawe Daniel a dreame, and a vysyon was in his heade vpon his bedde. Whiche dreame he wrote, and the summe of the matter is this: Daniel spake, and sayde, I sawe in my vysyon by nyght, and beholde the foure windes of the heauen stroue vpon the the se, and foure greate beastes came vp frō the se one vnlyke an other.

The fyrst was as a lyō, and yet had he Egles wynges. I sawe, that his wynges were pluckt from him, and he taken awaye from the earth, that he stode vpon his fete as a man and that there was gyuen hym a mans hert.

Behold, the seconde beast was lyke a beer, & stode vpon the one syde. Amonges his teeth in his mouth he had thre greate longe teeth, & it was sayde vnto him: Aryse, eate vp, macke fleshe.

Then I loked, and beholde, there was an other lyke vnto a Leoparde: this had wings as a foule, euen foure vpon the backe. This beast had foure heades, and there was power gyuen hym.

After this I sawe in a vysion by nyght, & beholde the fourth beast was grym & horrible, and meruaylous stronge. It had greate yron teeth, it deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his fete. It was farre vnlyke the other beastes that were before hym, & had ten hornes, wherof I take good heed.

And beholde, there came vp among them an other lytle horne, before whome there were thre of the fyrste hornes pluckte awaye. Behold this horne had eyes lyke a man, and a mouth speakyng presumptuous thynges. I loked tyll the seates were prepared, and tyl the old aged sat hym down. His clothing was as whyte as snowe, and the heeres of his heed lyke the pure wull. His trone was lyke the fyry flame, and his wheles as the burnynge fyre. There brewe forthe a fyry steme, and went out from him. A thousande tymes a thousande serued hym. x. M. tymes ten thousande stode before him. The iudgement was set, and the bokes opened. Then toke I hede therbuto, because of the voyce of the proude wordes, which that horne spake I beheld, tyll the beast was slayne, and his body destroyed, and gyuen ouer to be brente in the fyre.

As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken awaye, but their lyues were prolonged for a tyme and season. I sawe in a vision by nyght, and beholde, there came one in the cloudes of heauen lyke the sonne of a man, whiche went vnto the olde aged, before whom they brought him: Then gaue he hym power & dignytie regall, that al people, kyndes and tunges shulde serue him. His power is an euerlastynge power, which shall neuer be put downe: and his kingdome endureth vncorrupt. My herte was vexed, and I Daniel had a troubled spirite within me, & the visions of my head made me afrayde: tyll I gate me vnto one of them that stode by, to knowe the truth concernynge all these thinges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstande the interpretacion of these thynges.

These foure great beastes, are foure kynges whiche shal aryse out of the earth. These shall take in the kyngdome of the sayntes of the most hyghest, and possesse it tyl more and more for a longe season. After this I requyred diligently to knowe the trueth, concernynge the fourth beaste, which was so farre vnlike the other beastes, & so horrible: whose teeth were of yron, and his nayles of brasse: which deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his fete. I desyred also to know the trueth, as touchynge the ten hornes that he had vpon his heade, and this other whiche came vp after warde, before whose face there fell downe three: which horne had eyes and a mouth that spake presumptuous thinges, and loked with a greater syght then his fellowes. I beheld, and the same horne made battayle against the sayntes, yea and gat the victorye of them vntyl the tyme that the olde aged came, that the iudgement was gyuen to the holy sayntes: and tyll the tyme that the sayntes had the kyngdome in possession. He gaue me this answere: That fourth beast shall be the fourth kyngdome vpon earth: it shall be more then all other kyngdomes, it shall deuoure, treade downe, and destroye all other landes.

The ten hornes, are ten kinges, that shall aryse out of the kingdom, after whome there shall stande vp an other, which shal be greater then the fyrste. He shall subdue thre kinges, and shall speake wordes agaynste the hyghest of all: he shall destroye the sayntes of the most hyghest, and thynke, that he may chaunge tymes and lawes. They shal be gyuen vnder his power, vntyll a tyme, two tymes, and halfe a tyme.

But the iudgement shall be kepte, so that his power shal be taken from him, for he shal be destroyed, and perysshe at the laste. As for the kyngdome, power, and all myght that is vnder the heuen: it shall be gyuen to the holye people of the most hyghest, whose kyngdome is euerlastynge / yea all powers shall serue and obeye hym. Thus farre extende the wordes. Nowe therefore, I Daniel was so vexed in my thoughtes, that my countenaūce chaunged but the wordes I kepte styll in my herte.

¶ A vyson of a fyrye byrowne ramme and an he gote. The vnderstandyng of the vyson, sect the battell betweene the kynge of Persia, and the kynge of the Grecians. Of the shamefull kynge Antiochus.

CAPI. VIII.

In the thyrde yere of the tayne of kynge Balthazar, there appeared a vyson vnto me Daniel, after that I had sene the fyrst I sawe in a vyson (and when I sawe it, I was at Susis in the chiefe city, whiche lieth in the lande of Elam) and in the vision me thought I was by the ryuer Vlai.

Then I loked vp, and sawe: and beholde, there stode before the ryuer, a ramme, which had hornes: and these hornes were hygh, but one was hygher then an other, & the hyghest came vp last.

I sawe that this ramme pushed with his hornes, against the weste, against the north and a agaynst the swalowe that no beastes might stande before hym, ne defende them from his power: but he dyd as him lysted, and warred greatly. I to take hede vnto this, and then came there an he gote from the west ouer the hole earth, and touched not the grounde.

B This goote had a meruelous goodly horn betwixte his eyes, and came vnto the ramme I had the .ij. hornes (whom I had sene afore by the ryuer Vlai) and ranne fearcely vpon him with his might. I sawe hym drawe nigh vnto the ramme, bringe herre fearce vpon hym: yea he gaue him suche a stroke, that he brake his two hornes: Neither had the ram so much strength as to stande before hym: but he cast him downe, trod him vnder his feete: and no man was able to deliuer the ram out of his power.

C The goote warred exceadynge greate, and when he was at the strongest, his great horn was broken also. Then grewe there other foure suche vpon the stede, towarde the .iij. Da. vii. xiii. Mychab. i. wyndes of the heauen. Yea out of one of the lest of these hornes, there came vp yet an other horne, whiche warred meruelyous great: towarde the south, toward the east, and towarde the fayre pleasaunt lande. It grewe vp to the hoost of heauen, wherof it did cast some downe to the grounde, and of the starres also, and trod them vnder feete.

Yea it grewe vp vnto the prince of the hoost, from whom the dayly offeringe was taken, and the place of his Sanctuary caste downe. And a certayne fraion was geuen vp to it, agaynst the dayly offeringe (because of wyckednesse) that it might caste downe the veryte to the grounde, and so to prosperre in all thinges, that it went about.

D Then I herd one of the Saintes speakinge, whiche sayde vnto one that asked this question: How long shall this vision of the dayly sacrifyce and of the wasting abhominacion endure: that the Sanctuary and the power shall so be troden vnder foote? And he answered him: Vnto the euenynge & the morninge, euen two thousande and thre hundreth dayes: then shall the Sanctuarye be clensed agayne.

E Nowe when I Daniel had sene this vision, and sought for the vnderstandynge of it: beholde, there stode before me a thynge lyke vnto a man. And I herd a mans voyce in the ryuer of Vlai, whiche cryed, and sayde: O Gabriel, make this man vnderstande the vision. So he came, and stode by me. But I was afrayde at his commynge, and fell downe vpō my face.

Then sayd he vnto me: O thou sonne of man, marke well, for in the laste tyme shall this vision be fulfylled. Nowe as he was speakynge vnto me, I waxed fayne, so that I stombe downe to the grounde. But he toke holde vpon me, and set me vp agayne, saying: Beholde, I will shewe the, what shall happen in the laste wrath: for in the tyme appointed it shall be fulfylled.

The ramme whiche thou sawest with the two hornes, is the kinge of the Medes and Perses: but the goote is the kyng of Grecia lande: the greate horne that stode betwixte his eyes, that is the principall kinge. But where as it brake, and foure other rose vp in the stede: it signifyeth, that out of this people shall stande vp foure kyngdomes, but not so mighty as it.

After these kyngdomes (while vngodlynesse is a growynge) there shall aryse a kinge of an vnshamefast face, whiche shall be wise in darke speakinges.

He shall be mighty and stronge, but not in his owne strength. He shall destroy aboue measure, and all that he goeth about shall prosperr: he shall slaye the stronge and holy people. And therowe his craftynesse, falsehed shall prosperre in his hande, his herte shall be proude, and manye one shall he put to death in his welthynes, he shall stande vp agaynste the Prince of Princes, but he shal be destroyed without hande. And this vision that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as the cuenynge and the morninge. Therfore wryte thou vp this syght, for it wyll be longe or it come to passe.

Vpon this was I Daniel very sayntc, so that I laye sycke certayne dayes: but when I rose vp, I went aboute the kynges busynesse, and maruey led at the vysyon, & no man knewe of it.

¶ Daniel desyreth to knowe that performed of God whiche he had promysed concernynge the returne of the people from theyr bandysshment in Babylon. I erre confessyon. Gabriel is sente. Gabriel the Angell expounderh vnto hym the vysyon of the .lxx. weekes and ten weekes. The annoyntynge of Christe. The buyldynge agayne of Jerusalem vnder Nehemias. The death of Christe. The destruccyon of the wycked Jewes.

CAP. IX.

I In the fyrste yere of Darius the sonne of Assuerus, whiche was of the sede of the Medes, and was made kinge ouer the realme of the Caldees: yea euē in the fyrst yere of his raygne, I Daniel desyred to knowe the perfyt nombre out of the bokes, whereof the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the Prophet: that Jerusalem shulde lye waste three score and ten yeres: and I turned me vnto God the Lord for to praye & make myne intercession, with fastyng, sackcloth and asshes, I prayed before the Lorde my God, and knowleged, saynge:

O Lorde, thou greate and fearfull God, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy with them, which loue the, and do thy commaundementes: We haue synned, we haue offended, we haue bene disobedyent & gone backe: yea we haue departed from all thy precepte and iudgmentes.

We wolde neuer folowe thy seruauntes the Prophetes, that spake in thy name to our kynges and princes, to our fore fathers and to all the people of the lande. O Lorde, ryghteousnesse belongeth vnto the, vnto vs perteyneth tayneth nothynge but open shame: as it is come to passe this daye vnto euery man of Juda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem: Yea vnto al Israel, whether they be farre or nyghe thorow out all landes: wherin thou hast strowed them, because of the offences y they had done agaynst the.

L Yea O Lorde, vnto vs to our kynges and princes, to oure forefathers: euen to vs all, that haue offended, belongeth open shame. But vnto the, O Lorde our God, pertayneth mercy and forgyuenesse. As for vs, we are gone backe from him, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord our God, to walke in his lawes, whiche he layed before vs by his seruauntes the Prophetes: yea al Israel haue transgressed, and gone backe from thy lawe, so that they haue not hearkened vnto thy voyce.

Wherfore the curse and oth, that is written in the lawe of Moses the seruaunte of God (agaynst whom we haue offended) is powred vpō vs. And he hath performed his wordes, which he spake agaynst vs, and agaynst our iudges that iudged vs: to bringe vpon vs suche a great plage, as neuer was vnder heauen lyke as it is nowe come to passe in Jerusalem. Yea all this plage, as it is written in the lawe of Moses, is come vpon vs. Yet made we not oure prayer before y Lorde our God, that we myght turne agayne from our wickednesse, & to be learned in thy veryte. Therfore hath the Lorde made haste, to bringe this plage vpon vs: for the Lord our God is righteous, in all his workes which he dothfor why, we wolde not herken vnto his voyce.

D And now, O Lorde our God, thou that with a myghty hande hast brought thy people out of Egypt, to get thy self a name, wht the remayneth this daye: we haue synned, O Lorde, and done wickedly agaynste all thy righteousnes: yet let thy wrothfull displeasure be turned awaye (I beseche the) fro thy cytye Jerusalem thy holy hyl. And why? for our synnes sake and for the wickednesse of our forefathers is Jerusalem and thy people abhorred, of all them that are about vs. Nowe therfore, O oure God, here the prayer of thy seruaunte, and his intercession. O let not thy face shyne ouer thy Sanctuary, that lyeth wast.

O my God, enclyne thyne eare, and heare (at the leest for thyne owne sake) open thyne eyes: behold how we be desolated, yea and the cytye also, whiche is called after thy name: for we do not cast oure prayers before the in our owne righteousnesse, no: but only in thy great mercyes, O Lorde, heare. O forgyue Lorde: O Lorde consyder, tarye not ouer longe: but for thyne owne sake do it. O my God: for thy cytye and thy people is called after thy name.

F As I was yet speakinge at my prayere, knowledgynge myne owne synnes, and the synnes of my people, makynge so my request before the Lorde my God, for the holy hylls sake of my God: yea whyle I was yet speakinge in my prayer, beholde, the man Gabriel (whom I had sene afore in the vysy) came flyinge to me, and touched me aboute the offeryng tyme in the euenynge. He instourmed me and spake vnto me: O Daniel sayde he, I am nowe come to make the wyse Dan. viii. g stande it: For as soone as thou begannest to make thy prayer, it was so heard, y therfore am I come to shewe the. And why? for thou Daniel. x. d art a man greatly beloued.

Wherfore ponder the matter well, that G thou mayste learne, to vnderstande the vision. Lxx. seuen and ten weekes are determed ouer thy people, and ouer the holye cyty: that the wickednesse may be consumed, that the sin maye haue an ende, that the offence maye be reconcyled, and to bringe in euerlasting righteousnesse, to fulfyll the visions and the prophetes, and to anoynte the most holye one. Vnderstande this then, and marcke it well that fro the tyme it shall be concluded, to go & repayre Jerusalem agayne, vnto Christe (or the anoynted) prince: there shall be seuē weekes. Then shall the stretes and walles be buylded agayne. lxij. weekes, but with harde troublous tyme. After these. lxij. weekes, shal Christe be slayne, and they shall haue no pleasure in hym. Then shall there come a people with the prince, and destroye the cytye and the Sanctuarye: and his ende shal come as the water floude. But the desolacion shall contynue tyll the ende of the battayle.

He shall make a stronge bonde with many, for the space of a weke: and when the weke is halfe gone, he shall put downe the slayne and meatoffrynge. And in the temple there shall be an abhominable desolacion, tyll it haue destroyed all. And it is concluded, that this wast ynge shal contynue vn to the ende. Math. xxiiij. Marke. xiij. b

¶ There appeareth vnto Daniel a man clothed in lynen, whyche strength hym wherfore he is sent.

CAPI. X.

IN the thyrde yeare of kynge Cirus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniel (otherwise called Balthasar) a matter, yea a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme durynge. He vnderstode the matter well & perceyued what the vysion was. At the same tyme, I Daniel mourned for the space of thre weekes, so that I had no lust to eat bryde: as for fleshly wyne there came none within my mouthe. Lo, I dyd not anoynte my selfe, tyl the hole thre weekes were out. A

Vpon the. xxiij. daye of the fyrste moneth, I was by the greate floude, called Tigris: I lifte vp myne eyes, and loked: and beholde, a man clothed in lynnen, whose loynes were gyrded vp with fyne golde of Arabye: his body was lyke the Chrisolite stone, his face (to loke vpon) was lyke lyghtenynge, his eyes as the flame of fire, his armes and fete were lyke fayre glysteryuge metall, but the voyce of his wordes was lyke the voyce of a multytude. Daniel. viii. b Apoca. i. a

I Daniel

D I Daniel alone sawe this vision, the men
Daniel.c.10.a that were with me, sawe it not: but a greate fearfulnesse fell vpon them, so that they fled awaye and hyd them selues. I was left there my selfe alone, and sawe this greate vision, so long tyl there remayned no more strength within me: yea I loste my colloure cleane, I waxed awaye, and my strength was gone. Yet herde I the voyce of his wordes, and as soone as I herde it, sayncnesse came vpon me, and I fel downe flat vpon the ground vpon my face, and beholde, an handc touched me, whiche set me vp vpon my knees and vpon the palmes of my handes, sayinge vnto me: O
Daniel.d Daniel, thou well beloued man: take good hede of the wordes, that I shall saye vnto the, and stande right vp, for vnto the am I nowe sent.

E And when he had sayde these wordes, I stode vp trymblynge. Then sayde he vnto me, feare not Daniel: for why since the first daye that thou set thyne herte to vnderstande & vexedst thy selfe before thy God: thy wordes haue bene herde. And I hadde come vnto the, whē thou begannest to speake had not the prince ouer the kingdome of the Perses withstande me .xxi. dayes. But lo Michael one of the chiefest princes, came to helpe me, hym haue I left by the kyng of Persia, & am come to shewe the what shall happen vn to thy people in the latter dayes: for it yet shall be longe yet or the vysyon be fulfylled.
Iosue.b.d Daniel.xii.c

Nowe when he had spoken these wordes vnto me, I cast down my herde to the ground and helde my tunge. Beholde, there touched my lyppes one like vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, & sayde vnto him, that stode before me: O my Lorde, my ioyntes are lowsed in the vision, and there is no more strength within me: howe may my Lordes seruaunt then talke with my Lorde? seinge there is no strength in me, so that I can not take my breth? Vpon this there touched me agayne, one like a man, and comforted me sayinge: O thou man so wel beloued, Daniel.b feare not: be content, take a good herte vnto the, and be stronge.

F So when he had spoken vnto me, I recouered, and sayd: Speake on my Lord, for thou hast refreshed me. Then sayde he: knowest thou wherefore I am come vnto the? nowe wyll I go agayne to fyght with the prince of the Perses. As soone as I go forth, lo, the prince of Grecia shall come. Neuertheles, I wyll shewe the that thyng, that is fast noted in the scripture of truthe. And as for all yon ther matters, there is none that helpeth me in them, but Michael youre prince.

CAP I.

AND in the fyrst yere of Darius of Media, I stode by hym, to comforte hym, & to strength him, and now wyl I shewe the the truthe. Beholde, there shall stande vp yet thre kinges in Persia, but the fourthe shall be farre rycher then they all. And when he is in the chiefest power of his riches, he shall prouoke euery man agaynst the realme of Grecia land. Then shal there arise yet a mighty king that shall rule with greate dominion, and do what him list. And as soone as his kingdome is come vp, it shall be destroyed, & deuided towarde the foure windes of the heuē. They that come after him, shal not haue such power and dominyon as he: but his kingdome shall be scattered, yea euen amonges other then those. And the kynge of the south shall be myghtyer, then his other princes. Against hym there shall one make hym selfe stronge, and shall rule his dominyon with greate power.

But after certayne yeares they shall be ioyned togyther, and the kinges doughter of the south shall come to the kynge of the north, for to make frendshyp, but she shall not obtayne the power of that arme, neither shall she be able to endure thorowe his myght: but she, and suche as brought her (yea and he that begat her, & coforted her for his time) shall be ouerthrowen vp. Out of the braunches of her rote, there shal one stād vp in his stede which with power of armes shal go thorow the kinges land of the north, and handle him accordynge to his strength.

His for these Idols and princes, with their costly Iewelles of golde and syluer, he shall cary them awaye captyues into Egypte, & he shal preuayle against the kinge of the north certayne yeares. And when he is come in to the kynges realme of the south, he shall be forced to turne agayne in to his owne lande. Wherfore his sonnes shall be displeased, and shall gather togyther a mighty greate hoste of people: and one of them shall come, and go thorowe like a water floude then shall he returne, and go forth with defyinge & vexinge vnto his owne lande.

Then the kynge of the south shal be angry and shall come forth to fyght against the kynge of the north, yea shall bringe a great multytude of people togyther, and a greate heape shal be geuen into his hand, which shall be caryed awaye with greate pryde, for so much as he hath cast downe so many thousandes. Neuertheles he shall not preuayle. For the kinge of the north shall gather (of the armye a greater heap of people then afore, and come forth (after a certayne time and yeares) with a mighty hoste and exceadyng greate good.

At the same tyme there shall many stande vp against the kinge of the south, so that the wicked children of thy people also shall exalte them selues (to fulfyll the vision) & then fall.

So the kynge of the north shall come & laye syege, and to take the stronge holde ty-¶ Prophecye of the kynges of Persia. Of the kyngdome of Grece. Of the kyngdome of Egypt, and of the bonde therof, and of the battell with the kyngdome of Syria. Of the Iewes that fyre vnto the kynge of Egypt, whom Antiochus the kyng of Syria persecuteth, whiche figureth vnto vs Antichrist. The pryde of Antiochus.

ctres: And the power of them of the southe shall not be able to abyde him, and the best men of the people shall not be so stronge as to resyst him. Wherfore, when he commeth, he shal handle him as he lyst, and no man shall be so hardy as to stande agaynst him. He shal stande in the pleasaunt countrey, which thynge him shall be destroyed. He shal set his face with al his power to optayn his kyngdome, and to be like it. Yea that shall he do, and gyue him vnto the doughters amonges women, to destroye him. But he shall fayle, neither shal he optayne his purpose.

After this shall he set his face vnto the yles, and take many of them. A prince shal stop him, to do him a shame, beside the confusion that vnto him shall come vnto him. Thus shall he turne agayne to his owne land, stomble and fall, and be no more founde: so be that came vpon him, and vyd him violence, shall stande in his place, and haue a pleasaunt kingdome: and after few dayes he shal be destroyed, and that neither in wrath, ne in battayle. In his stede there shall aryse a vyle person, not holden worthye of a kynges dignitie: this shall come in craftelye, and obteyne the kyngedome with fayre wordes: he shall fyghte agaynste the armes of the myghtye (and destroye them) yea, and agaynst the prynce of the couenaunt.

And after that he hath take truce with him, he shal handle disceytfully: that he maye get vp, and ouercome him with a small flocke, and so with craftynesse to get him to the fattest place of the lande, and to deale otherwyse then eyther his fathers or graundfathers did. For he shal destroye the thinge that they robbed and spoyled, yea and all their substaunce, ymagininge thoughtes against the strong holde, and that for a tyme. His power and herte shal be styred vp with a great armye agaynst the kinges of the south, where thorowe the kynge of the south shall be moued then vnto battell with a great and mighty hoste also. Neuertheles he shall not be able to stande, for they shal conspyre against him. Yea, they that eate of his meat shal hurt him, so that his hoste shal fall, and many be slayne downe.

These two kynges shal be mynded to do mischief, and talke of deceyte at one table: but they shal not prospere: for why? the ende shal not come yet, vnto the time appoynted. Then shal he go home againe in to his owne land with great good, and set his herte against the holy couenaunt, he shall be busy against it, and the same home. At the tyme appoynted he shal come againe, and go towarde the south. But it shall happen otherwise then at the first or euer agayn. And why? the shippes of Cithim shall come vpon him, that he may be smytten and turne agayne, that he may take indignacion agaynst the couenaunt of holynesse, to medle against it. Yea he shall tourne hym, and drawe suche vnto him as leaue the holye couenaunt.

He shall set myghtye men to vnbalowe the Sanctuarye of strengthe, to put downe the dayly offeringe, and to set vp the abhominable desolacion, and suche as breake the couenaunte shall he flatter with fayre wordes. But the people that wyll knowe their God, shall haue the ouer hande and prosper. Those also that haue vnderstandynge amongst the people, shal enfourme the multitude: and for a longe season they shall be persecuted with swerde, with fyre, with captiuitie, and with the robbyng awaye of their goodes. Nowe when they fall, they shall be holpe vp with a lytle helpe, but many shall cleue vnto them faynedly.

Yea some of them which haue vnderstandynge shal be persecuted also, that they may be tried, purified and clensed, tyll the ende be come, for there is yet an other time appointed. The kynge shal doo what him lyst, he shall exalte and magnifye him self aboue al, that is God. Yea he shall speake maruelous thynges against the God of all goddes, wherin he shall prospere, so longe tyl the wrath be fulfylled, for the conclusion is decreed alreadye. He shal not regarde the God of his fathers, but his lust shall be vpon women: Yea he shall not care for any God, for he shall magnifye hym self aboue all. In his place shall he worshyp the myghty gods: and the God whome his fathers knewe not, shal he honoure with gold and syluer, with precyous stones, and pleasaunt iewels.

This shall he doo, seruynge helpe and succour at the myghtye gods and straunge goddes. Suche as wyl receyue him, and take him for God, he shall gyue them greate worshyp and power: yea and make them lordes of the multitude, and gyue them the lande with rewardes.

In the latter tyme shall the kynge of the south stryue with him, and the kynge of the north in lyke maner shall come agaynste him with charrettes, horsemen, and with a great many of shippes. He shal come in to the landes, ouerflowe and go thorow: he shal entre also in to the fayre pleasaunt land. Many cyties and countreys shal decaye, except these, Edom, and the best of the children of Ammon which shall escape from his hande. He shall stretche forth his handes vpon the countreys, and the lande of Egypt shall not escape hym. For thorow his going in, he shal haue dominion ouer the treasures of golde and golde, ouer all the precious iewels of Egypte, Lybia, and Ethiopia.

Neuertheles the tydynges out of the East and the North shall trouble him, for the wyl the cause be shal goo forth to destroye and cause a greate multitude. The tentes of his palace shal be pytched betwixt the two seas, vpō the hylle of the noble Sanctuarye, for he shall come to the ende of it, and then shall no man helpe him.

CAPL XII.

Apoc.x.c.4 ¶ The tyme will come also that the great prince Michael, which stondeth on thy people syde shal aryse vp, for there shal come a time of trouble, such as never was sen there began to be any people, vnto that same tyme. Then shal thy people be deliuered, yea all those that be founde written in the boke. Iud.v.c. Many of them that slepe in the dust of the erth shal awake, some to the euerlasting lyfe, some to perpetuall shame and reproue. The wyse (that be such as haue taught other) shall glystre as the shyning of heuen, and those that haue instruct the multitude vnto godlynesse, shall be as the sterres, worlde without ende.

Mat.xiii.c

B And thou, O Daniel, shut vp these wordes, and seale the boke til the last time. Many shal go about here and there, and then shal knowlege increase. So I Daniel loked, and behold, there stode other two: one vpon this shore of the water, the other vpō yonder syde. And one of them sayd vnto him, which was clothed in linen, and stode about vpō the waters of the flood: Howe longe shall it be to the ende of these wonderous wo, kes?

Apoc.x.a

C Then herd I the man with the fine clothes which stode about vpon the waters of the flood when he held vp his right and left hand vnto heuen, & sware by him which liueth for euer: that it shall last for a time, two times & half a time: when the power of the holy people is clene scatred abrode, then shall all these thinges be fulfylled.

Apo.xi.c.xii.c

D I here it wel, but I vnderstode it not. Then sayd I: O my Lord, what shal happen after that? He answered: Go thy way Daniel, for these wordes shal be closed vp, and sealed, til the last time: and many shal be purified, clensed, and tried. But the vngodly shal liue wickedly, and those wicked (as many of them as they be) shall haue no vnderstandinge. As for suche as haue vnderstanding, they shal vnderstode it. And from that tyme forth that the dayly offringe shall be put away, and the abhominable desolacion set vp, there shall be a thousande, two hundreth, and xc. dayes. O well is him that waytyth, and commeth to the. CCC. xxxv. hundred, and xxxv. dayes. Goo thou thy waye now til it be ended, take thy reste, and byde in thy lot, til the dayes haue an ende.

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Daniel.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE OSEAS.

¶ The tyme wherin Oseas prophecyed. Oseas by takynge an harlotte to his wyfe, signifyeth the Idolatrye of the people. The destruction of the offspringe of Jehu, and of the Idolatrers is prophecyed.

CAPI. I.

THis is the worde of A the Lorde, that came vnto Oseas the sonne of Beeri, in the dayes of Oseas, Joathā, Achas, and Ezechias kynge of Iuda: and in the time of Jeroboam the sonne of Joas kynge of Israell.

B First when the Lord spake vnto Oseas, he sayd vnto him: Go thy waye, take an harlot to thy wyfe, and get children by her: for the land hath committed great whordom against the Lorde. So he went, and toke Gomer the daughter of Diblaim: which conceyued and brought forth a sonne. And the Lorde sayd vnto him: call his name Jezrael, for I wil shortly auenge the bloode of Jezrael vpon the house of Jehu, and wyll bringe the kyngedome of the house of Israel to an ende. Then wil I breake the bowe of Israel in the valey of Jezrael.

C She conceyued yet agayne, and bare a doughter. And he sayde vnto him: Call her name Lorubamah (that is, not optayninge mercye) for I wyll haue no pitie vpon the house of Israell, but forget them, and put them clene out of remembraunce. Neuertheles, I wyll haue mercy vpon the house of Iuda, and wyll saue them, euen through the Lorde their God. But I wil not helpe them through anye bowe, swerde, battel, horses or horsemen.

D Now when she had weaned Lorubamah, she conceyued againe, and bare a sonne. Then sayd he: call his name. Loammy. For ye are not my people, therfore wyll not I be yours. And though the nombre of the children of Israell be as the sande of the see, which can neither be measured ne tolde: yet in the place, where it is sayde vnto them, ye be not my people: euē there shal it be thus reported of them: they be the children of the liuinge God. Then shal the children of Juda, and the children of Israell be gathered together agayne and chose them selues one heed, & then departe out of the land: for great shal be the daye of Israel.

¶ The people is called vnto repentaunce.

CAPI. II.

Call

A TEll your brethren, that they are my people: and your systeren, that they haue obteyned mercy. As for your mother, ye shall chyde with her, and reproue her: for she is not my wyfe, neyther am I her husbande, vnlesse she put away her hoordome out of my sight, and her aduoutrye from her breastes. If no, I shal strip her naked, and set her euen as she came in to the worlde: yea, I shal lay her waste, and make her lyke a wylderneslle, and slee her for thyrste. I shall haue no pitie also vpon her children, for they be the children of fornication.

B Their mother hathe broken her wedlocke, and she that bare them, is come to confusion. for she sayde, I wyll goo after my louers, that gyue me my water and my breed, my wolle and flaxe, my oyle and my drynke. But I wyll hedge her waye with thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynde her foote-steppes: and thoughe she runne after her louers, yet shall she not get them: she shal seke them, but not fynde them. Then shall she say well, I wyll goo tourne agayne to my fyrste husbande, for at that tyme was I better at ease, then nowe. But this woulde she knowe, where as I yet gaue her corne, wyne, oyle, siluer and golde, whiche she hath hanged vpon Baal.

Wherfore nowe wyll I go take my corne and wyne agayne in their season, and fet agayne my wolle and my flaxe whiche I gaue her to couer her shame. And now wyll I discouer her foolyshenesse, euen in the syght of her louers, and no man shall deliuer her out of my handes. Moreouer, I wyll take away all her myrth, her holy dayes, her newe moones, her Sabbothes, and all her solemne feastes: I wyll destroye her vynyardes and figtrees, thoughe she sayche: lo, here are my rewardes that my louers haue gyuen me. I wil make it a wodde, and the wylde beastes shall eate it vp: I wyll punyshe her also for the dayes of Baal, wherin she serued him, decking him with her eare ringes and cheynes when she folowed her louers, and forgat me, sayth the Lorde.

C Wherfore beholde, I wyl call her agayne, bringe her in to a wylderneslle, and speake kyndely vnto her: there wyll I gyue her her vynyardes agayne: yea, and the valleye of Achor also to hope her hope and comforte. Then shall she synge there, as in the tyme of her youthe, and lyke as in the daye when she came out of the land of Egypt.

D Then (sayeth the Lorde) she shall saye vnto me: O my husbande, and shall call me no more Baal: for I wyll take awaye those names of Baal from her mouth, yea she shal neuer remembre their names any more. Then wyll I make a couenaunde with them, with the wild beastes, with the foules of the ayre, and with euery thyng that creepeth vpon the earthe.

E As for bowe, swerde and battayle, I will destroye suche out of the lande, and wyll make them to slepe safely. Thus wyll I marye the vnto myne owne selfe for euer more, yea, euen to my selfe wyll I marye the, in righteousnesse, in equitie, in louynge kyndenesse and mercye. In fayth also wyll I marye the vnto my selfe, and thou shalt knowe the Lorde. At the same tyme wyll I shewe my selfe frendly and gracyous vnto the heuens, sayeth the Lorde: and the heuens shall helpe the earth, and the earth shal helpe the corne, wyne and oyle, and they shall helpe Jesrael. I wyll sowe them vpon earthe, for a seed to myne owne selfe, and wyll haue mercye vpon her that was wythoute mercye. And to them whiche were not my people, I wyll saye: thou arte my people. And he shall saye: thou art my God.

CAP. I. III.

A THen sayde the Lorde to me: Go yet thy waye, and loue an aduouterous woman whome thy neyghbour louyeth, as the Lorde doth the children of Israel: how be it they haue respecte to straunge goddes, and loue the wyne cannes. So I gat her for .xv. syluerlynges, and for an Homer and an half of barleye, and sayde vnto her: thou shalte byde with me a long season, but se that thou playest not the harlot, and take thou no holde with none other man, and then wil I kepe my selfe for the.

¶ A complaynte against the people and the preestes of Israel.

CAP. I. IIII.

C HEare the worde of the Lorde, O ye children of Israell: for the Lorde maketh complaynte against the inhabitauntes of the lande. And why? There is no fayethfulnesse, there is no mercye, there is no knowlege of God in the lande: but swearynge, lyenge, manslaughter, theftes, and aduoutrye, haue gotten the vpper hande, and one bloudgiltynesse followeth an other. Therfore shall the lande be in a miserable case, and all they that dwel therin, shall mourne. The beastes in the felde, the foules in the ayre, and the fyshes vnder the sea shall dye. Yet let there none that wyll chasten nor reproue an other. The preestes whiche shoulde reforme other men, are become lyke the people.

D Therefore stombleth thou in the daye tyme and the prophet with the in the night. I wyl bringe thy mother to silence, and why? my people perysshe, because they haue no knowelege. Seinge then that thou haſt refuſed vnderſtandynge, therfore wyll I refuſe the alſo: ſo that thou ſhalt no more be my preeſt. And for ſo moche as thou haſt forgotten the lawe of thy God, I wyll alſo forget thy chyldren. The more they increaſed in the multytude, the more they ſynned agaynſte me, therfore wyll I chaunge theyr honoure in to ſhame. They eate vp the ſynnes of my people, and encourage them in theyr wyckedneſſe. Thus the preeſt is become lyke the people. Wherfore I wyll punyſhe them for theyr wycked wayes, and rewarde them accordyng to their owne ymaginacions. They ſhall eate, and not haue ynoughe: They haue vſed hoordome, therfore ſhall they not proſpere: and why? they haue forſaken the Lorde, and not regarded him.

L Hoordome, wyne, and vnthriftineſſe take the herte away. My people aſke counſell at their ſtockes, their ſtaffe muſt tell them. For an hooryſhe mynde hath bleryed them, ſo that they commyt fornication agaynſte theyr God. They make ſacrifices vpon the hye mountaynes, and burne their incenſe vpon the hylles, yea amonges the okes, greues and buſhes, for there are good ſhadowes. Therfore youre doughters are become harlottes, and youre ſpouſes haue broken their wedlocke. I wyll not punyſhe youre doughters for beynge herlottes, and youre huſbandes that become hoores: ſeinge the fathers them ſelues haue vſed with harlottes, and offred vp vnthriftes: but the people that wil no vnderſtandynge muſt be punyſhed.

D Though thou Iſrael arte diſpoſed to play the harlot, yet ſhouldeſt not thou haue offended, O Iuda: thou ſhouldeſt not haue runne to Galgala, nor haue gone vp to Bethauen, ne haue ſworne, the Lorde lyueth. For Iſrael is gone backe lyke a wanton cowe. The Lorde therfore ſhall make her fede as the lambe that goeth aſtraye. And where as Ephraim is become partaker of ydolles: wyll let him goo. Their hoordomme haue put the backe, and brought them to hoordome. Their rulers loue rewardes, bringe (ſaye they) to their owne ſhame. A wynde ſhall take holde of their fethers, and they ſhall be confounded in their offeringes.

¶ Againſt the preeſtes and rulers of Iſrael. The helpe of man can do nothynge againſt God.

CAPL V.

E Ye preeſtes: heare this, take hede, O thou houſhold of Iſrael: gyue eare, O thou kynges houſe: for thes punyſhmēt wil come vpon you that are becom a ſnare vnto Maſphah, and a ſpred net vnto the mount of Thabor. They kyll ſacrifices by heapes, to begyle the people therwith: therfore wyll I puniſh them all. I know Ephraim wel ynough and Iſrael is not hyd fro me: for Ephraim is become an harlot, O Iſrael is defiled. They can not applie to turne vnto their God, for they haue an hoorish herte, ſo that they can not knowe the Lorde.

But the pryde of Iſrael wyll be rebuked B Oſe. 4. him in his face: yea both he Iſrael and Ephraim ſhall fall for their wickednelle, and Iuda with them alſo. They ſhall come with theyr Ieremi. 3. Deute. 12. ſheepe and bullockes to ſeke the Lorde, but Gene. 6. they ſhall not fynde him, for he is gone from them. As for the Lorde, they haue refuſed him and brought vp baſtarde chyldren: a moneth therfore ſhall deuoure them, with their portions. Blowe with the thawmes at Gabaa, and with the trompet in Ramah, crye vnto at Bethauen vpon the backeſyde of Benjamin. In the tyme of the plage ſhall Ephraim be layde waſte, therfore oyd I faythfully warne the tribes of Iſrael. Yet are the princes of Iuda become lyke them that remoue the landemarkes, therfore wil I poure out my wrathe vpon them lyke water.

Ephraim is oppreſſed, & can haue no right C of the lawe: for why? they folowe the doctrines of men. Therfore wyll I be to Ephraim as a moth, and to the houſe of Iuda as a caterpyller.

When Ephraim ſawe his ſyckneſſe, and Iuda his diſeaſe: Ephraim went vnto Aſſur, & D 2. Reg. 15. ſent vnto king Iareb, yet couldē not he helpe you, nor eaſe you of youre payne. I am vnto Ephraim as a lyon, and as a lyons whelpe to the houſe of Iuda. Euen I wyll ſpoyle them and goo my waye. I wyll take them wyth me and no man ſhall reſcue them. I wyll go, and returne to my place, tyll they waxe ſayntes, and ſeke me.

¶ Affliction coueteth a man to returne to God. The hypocriſie of the preeſtes.

CAPL VI.

IN their aduerſitie they ſhall ſeke me, and A ſaye: come lette vs returne agayne to the Lorde: for he hath ſmitten vs, and he ſhall heale vs: he hath wounded vs, and he ſhall bynde vs vp agayne: after two dayes ſhal he quicken vs, in the thyrde daye he ſhall ryſe vs vp, ſo that we ſhall lyue in his ſyght. Then ſhal we haue vnderſtandynge, and endeuour our ſelues to knowe the Lorde. He ſhall goo forthe as the ſpringe of the daye, and come vnto vs as the comynge and mornynge rayne vpon the erth.

O Ephraim, what ſhall I do vnto the? O Iuda how ſhall I entreate the? Seinge youre B loue is like a morninge cloude, and like a dewe that goeth early awaye. Therfore haue I ſet owne the Prophetes, and let them be ſlayne for my wordes ſake: ſo that thy punyſhment ſhall come to lyght.

For I haue pleaſure in louyng kyndneſſe C and not in offeryng: yea in the knowinge of God more then in bornofferinges. But euen like as Adam dyd, ſo haue they broken my couenaunt and ſet me at nought. Gilead is a cyte of euyll doers, of maliciouſe people & bloudſhedders. The multytude of the preeſtes is lyke an hepe of theues, murtherers, and bloudſhedders for they haue wrought abhominacion. Horrible thynges haue I sene in the house of Israel, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, and Israell is defyled: but Juda shall haue an harueste for him selfe, when I returne the captiuite of my people.

ſo

¶ Of the vyces and wantonnesse of the people.

CAPI. VII.

1 When I vnderstode to make Israel hole, then the vngratiousnesse of Ephraim, and the wyckednesse of Samaria commeth to lyghte: then goo they aboute with lyes. At home they be theues, and without they fall to robbynge. They consydre not in their hertes that I remembre all their wyckednesse. They goo aboute with their owne inuencions, but I se them well ynoughe.

They make the kynge and the Pyncers to haue pleasure in their wyckednesse and lyes.

2 All these bueno in aduoutrye, as it were an ouen that the baker heateth, when he hathe lefte kneadynge, tyll the dowe be leuended. Euen so goeth it this daye with oure kynges and Pyncers, for they begynne to be wodde dronken thorowe wyne: they vse familiarite with suche as diffeyne them. They with the ymagination of their herte are lyke an ouen, their slepe is all the nyghte lyke the slepe of a baker, in the morneng is he as hote as the flame of fyre: they are all togyther as hote as an ouen.

3 They haue deuoured their owne Judges, all their kynges are fallen, yet is there none of them that calleth vpon me. Therfore must Ephraim be mixte amonge the Heathen. Ephraim is become lyke a cake, that no man tourneth: Straungers haue deuoured his strengthe, yet he regardeth it not: he waxeth full of grene heeres, yet will he not knowe it: and the pryde of Israell is caste downe before their face, yet will they not tourne to the Lorde their God, nor seke him for all this.

Ephraim is lyke a woute that is begyled and hath no herte. Nowe call they vpon the Egyptians, nowe goo they to the Assirians: But whyle they be goynge here and there, I shall spreade my nette ouer them, and drawe them downe as the foules of the ayre: and accordynge as they haue ben warned, so wyll I punyth them. Wo be vnto them, for they haue forsaken me.

They must be destroyed, for they haue set me at nought. I am he that haue redemed them, and yet they dissemble with me. They call not vpon me with their hertes, but lye howlyng vpon their beddes. Where as they come together, it is but for meate and drynke, and nat will they not obeye. I haue taught them and defended their armes, yet do they ymagyn mischefe agaynst me, they tourne them selues, but not a right, and are become as a broken bowe. Their pryncers shall be slayne with the sweord, for the malyce of their tunges, suche blasphemyes haue they lerned in the lande of Egypte.

¶ The destruction of Juda and Israel, because of their Idolatrye.

CAPI. VIII.

SEt the horne to thy mouthe, and blowe: 1 get the (wyfelyy (as an Egle) vnto the house of the Lorde: for they haue broken my couenaunt, and transgressed my lawe. Israel can saye vnto me: thou art my God, we knowe the, but he hath refused the thyng that is good, therfore shall the enmemy folowe vpō him. They haue ordeyned kinges, but not thorow me: they haue made prynces, and I must not knowe of it. Of their syluer & golde haue they made them ymages, to bring them selues to destruccion. Deut. xvii. b. 4. Reg. xiii. a.

Thy calfe, O Samaria, shall be taken awaye, for my wrathfull indignacions gone forth agaynst the. Howe longe wyll it be, or they can be clensed? For the calfe came from Israel, the workeman made it, therfore can it be no God, but euen to a spyders webbe shall the calfe of Samaria be tourned. They haue sowne wynde, therfore shall they reepe a storme. 2

They sede shall beare no corne, there shall no melt be made of their encreace: thoughe they reepe, yet shal straungers deuoure it vp. Israel shall perish, the Gentyles shall entreate him as a foule vessell. Seuen they wente vp to the Assyrians, they are become lyke a wylde asse in the wildernesse. 3

Ephraim gyueth rewardes to get louers, therfore are they scattered amonge the Heathen, there wyl I gather them vp. They shal soone be weryed of the burthen of kynges and pyncers. Ephraim hathe manye aulters to doo wyckednesse, therfore shall the aulters tourne to hys synne. Thoughe I drewe them my lawe neuer so moche, they counte it but straunge doctryne. Where as they doo sacrifyce, offeryng the fleshe, and eatynge it: the Lorde wyll haue no pleasure therin: but wyll remembre their wyckednesse, and punysshe their synnes. Israell tourneth agayne in to Egypte, they haue forgotten him that made them, they buylde churches, and Juda maketh many strange cityes: therfore will I sende a fyre in to their cityes, and it shal consume their places. 4

¶ Of the hunger and captyuyte of Israel.

CAPI. IX.

DO not thou tryumphe, O Israel, make 1 no boostynge more then the Heathen, for thou hast committed aduoutrye agaynst thy God: thy straunge sewarmes hast thou loued, moost them all the corne floores. Therfore shall they no more eniope the corne floore and wine pressis, and their hope shall fayle them. They wyll not dwell in the Lordes lande, but Ephraim tourneth agayne Hos. ix. c.

into Egypte, and eateth vncleane thynges amonge the Assyrians. They poure out no wyne vnto the Lorde, neyther gyue they hym their slayne offrynges: but they be vnto me as mourners meate, wherein all they that eate them are defiled. For the breed that they haue suche lust vnto, shall not come into the house of the Lorde. What wyl ye do then in the solemne dayes, and in the feaste of the Lorde? Loo, they shall get them away for the destruction, Egypte shall receyue them, and Nophy shall bury them.

D The nettles shall ouergrowe their pleasaunt goodes, and burres shal be in theyr habytacions. Be ye sure (O Israel) the tyme of visitacion is come, the dayes of recompensynge are at hande. As for the Prophete, ye holde him for a foole: and him that is ryche in the spirite for a madde man: so greate is your wyckednesse and malyce. Ephraim hathe made hym selfe a watche man of my God, a Prophete that is become a snare to me in all his wayes, and abhominacion in the house of his God. They be gone to farre, and haue destroyed them selues, lyke as they did afore time at Gabaa. Therfore their wickednesse shall be remembred, and their synnes punyshed.

E I founde Israell lyke grapes in the wyldernesse, and lyke theyr fathers as the fyrste frygges in the top of the frygge tree, but they are gone to Baal peor, and runne awaye from me to that shamefull ydoll, and are become as abhominable as their louers. Ephraim shall be a bryde, so shall theyr glorye also. Yea to muche that they shall neyther begette, conceyue ne beare chyldren. And though they bringe vp any, yet will I make them childelesse among men. Yea wo shal come to them, when I departe from them. Ephraim (as me thinke) is planted in welthynesse, lyke as Tyrus, but now must he bringe her owne chyldren forth to the murtherer.

Ephraim is bewen downe, their rote is dryed vp, so that they shal bryng no more frute: yea, and though they bringe forth any, yet wil I slee euen the best beloued frute of their body. Their herte is deuyded, therfore shall they be destroyed. The Lorde shall breake downe their ymages, he shall destroye their autters. Then shall they saye: we haue no kynge: for why? we haue not feared the Lorde. And what shal then the kyng do to vs? They common together, and sweare dayne othes: they be ouerthrowe together, therfore groweth their punyshment, as the weedes in the forowes of the lande.

B They that dwell in Samaria haue worshypped the calfe of Bethauen: therfore shal the people mourne ouer them: yea, and the preestes also that in theyr welthynesse reioyced with theym: and why? It shall passe awaye from them. It shall be brought to the Assyrians for a present vnto kynge Iareb. Ephraim shall receyue full punyshment: Israel shall be confounded for his owne ymaginacions / Samaria with his kynge shall vanyshe awaye as the fromme in the water. The hye places of Auen, where Israel is synne, shal be caste downe: thystles and thornes shall grow vpon their autters. Iudic. 20.

Ephraim was vnto me, as a calfe that is vsed to go to plow, therfore I loued him, and fell vpon his fayre necke. When Israel was yonge, I loued him, and called him my sonne out of the lande of Egypt. But the more they were called, the Smote they went backe, offrynge vnto Idols and caruynge Images: I lerned Ephraim to go, and bare them in myne armes, but they regarded not me, that wolde haue holpen them. I led them with cordes of frendshyp, and with bandes of loue. I was vnto hy, that layed the locke vpon their neckes. I gaue them their fodder my selfe, that they shulde not go agayne into Egypte. And nowe is Assur their kinge: for they wolde not turne vnto me. Therfore shall the swearde begynne in their cities, the floze that they haue layed by, shall be destroyed and eaten: and that be cause of their owne ymaginations. My people hath no iust to turne vnto me, their prophetes lay the locke vpon the, but they take them not of their hartes.

What great thinges haue I gyuen the, O Ephraim? how faythfully haue I defended the, O Israel? haue I dealt with the as with Adama? or haue I intreated the lyke Seboim? Oh my hert is otherwyse myndet.

Yea my mercy is so feruent: therfore haue I not turned me to destroye Ephraim in my wrothful displeasure. For I am God and no man, I am euen that holy one in the myddest of the, though I come not within the cyte.

The Lorde roseth lyke a lyon, that they may folowe him: yea as a lyon roseth he? they may be afrayde lyke the children of the fre: that they may be gathered awaye from Egypt, as men gaare byrdes: and frayed as wayfe (as ofte vse to be) from the Assirians lande: and that because I wolde haue them tary at home, sayth the Lorde. But Ephraim gath about me with lyes, and the house of Israel dissembleth. Only Juda holdeth him with God, and with the true holy thynges.

Of the vayne trust of the people.

CAPI. XII.

Ephraim kepeth the ayre, and followeth after the east wynde: he is euer increasing lyes and destruction. They confederate with the Assirians, their oyle is caryed in to Egypt. The Lorde hath a contro to holde with Juda, and wyll punysh Jacob: after their owne wayes accordyng to theyr owne inuencions, shall he recompense the. He toke his brother by the hele, when he was yet in his mothers wombe: & in his strength he wrestled with God. He strone with the angel, and gat the victorye: he that he prayed and beseyged hym. He fought him at Bethel, and there he talked with us.

Yea the Lorde God of hoostes, euen the Lorde hym selfe remembreth hym: Thou turne to thy God, kepe mercy and equite, and hope styll in thy God. But the marchaunt hath a false weyght in his hande, he loueth a pleasure to oppresse extorcion. Ephraim thynketh thus Well, I am ryche, I haue good rowme: In all my workes shall not one fault be founde, that I haue offended. Yet am I the Lord thy God, euen as whan I brought the out of the lande of Egypt, and set the in thy tentes, and as in the hyghe feste dayes.

I haue spoken vnto the prophetes, and shewed diuerse visions, and declared my selfe by the myny similitudes of the prophetes. But at Galaad is the abhominacion, they are taken to vanitie. At Galgall they haue slayne oxen: and as many heapes of stones as they had in their landes forowes, so many aultres haue they made. Jacob fled into the lande of Aram, and Israel serued for a wyfe, and for a wyfe he kept shepe.

By a Prophete the Lorde brought them out of Egypte, and by a Prophet he preserued them. But Ephraim hath prouoked him to displeasure thorow his abhominacyon, therfore shall his bloud be poured vpon him self and the Lorde his God shall rewarde him his blasphemyes.

Of the abhominacyons of Israel.

CAPI. XIII.

The abhominacion of Ephraim is come also into Israel. He is gone backe to Baal, therfore muste he dye. And nowe they synne more and more: of theyr siluer they make the molte Images, lyke the Idolles of the Heithen, and yet all is nothynge but the worke of the craftesman. Notwithstandyng they preache of the same: who so wyll kysse the calues, offereth to men. Therfore they shal be as the morynge cloude, and as the deawe that early passeth awaye, and lyke as the dust that the wynde taketh away from the flower, and as smoke that goeth out of the chymney.

I am the Lorde thy God, whiche brought the out of the land of Egypt: that thou shalt knowe no God but me onely: and that thou shuldest haue no Sauyour but only me. I take diligent hede of the in the wylderneste that dry lande. But when they were wel fed and had ynough, they waxed proude and forgat me. Therfore wyll I be vnto them as a lyon, and as a Leopardin the waye to the Assirians. I wyll come vpon them as a she bere, that is robbed of her whelpes, and I wyll breake that stubborne hert of theirs. There wyll I deuoure them as a lyon: yea the wylde beastes shall teare them.

O Israel, thou hest but destroyed thy selfe. In me onely is thy helpe. Where are thy kinges nowe, that shulde helpe the in all thy cities? Yea and thy rulers, of whom thou saydest, gyue me a kynge and Princes? well, I gaue the a kynge in my wrath, and in my displeasure wyll I take him from the agayne. The wyckednesse of Ephraim is bounde together, and his synne lyeth hyde. Therfore shall sorowes come vpon him, as vpon a woman that trauayleth. An vnprudent sonne is he, for he considereth not, that he shulde not haue bene habde to haue endured in the tyme of his byrth, had not I withstand him from the graue, and deliuered him from death.

O death, I wyll be thy death: O hell, I wyll be thy stynge. Yet can I se no comforte,

As for Samaria, they shal be made waste, and why? they are disobedyente vnto their God. They shall perysshe with the swerde, their children shall be slayne and their women great with childe shall be ripped vp.

O Israel, turne the nowe, vnto the Lorde thy God, for thou hast taken a greate fal thorow thy wickednes. O (if they wolde do this) I shulde beare their sores: yea with all my herte wolde I loue them: so that my wrath shulde clene be turned awaye from them. Yea I wolde be vnto Israell as the dewe, and he shulde growe as the lylye, and his rote shulde breake oute as Libanus. His braunches shulde spreade out abrode and be as faire as the olyue tree, and smell as Libanus. They that dwel vnder his shadowe, shulde come againe, and growe vp as the corne, and flourysshe as the vyne: he shulde haue as good a name, as the dewe of Libanus.

O Ephraim what have I to do with Idoles any more? I will graciously heare him, & bee him forth. I wyll be vnto the as a greene fyrre tree, vpon me shalt thou finde thy fruite.

THis is the worde of the Lorde, that came vnto Joel the sonne of Phatuel: Heare, O ye elders: ponder this wel all ye that dwell in the land: if euer there happened suche a thinge in youre dayes, or in the dayes of youre fathers. Tell youre children of it, and let them shewe it vnto their children, and so they to certeyne their posterityes therof. Loke what the caterpyller hath left, that hath the grashopper eaten vp: what the grashopper left, that hath the locust eaten vp: and what the locust hath left, that hath the blastynge consumed. Wake vp ye dronkardes, and wepe: mourne all ye wynebybers, because of youre swete wyne, for it shal be taken awaye from youre mouthe. For a myghtye and an innumerable people shall come vp in to my land: their haue teeth like the teeth of lyons, and chaft bones lyke the lyonesses. They shal make my vineyard waste they shall pyll of the barckes of my trees, stryp them bare, caste them away, & make the braunches white.

Deu.xxviii.

Make thy mone as a virgin beside that gyrded her self with sack, because of her husbande. For the meate and drinckoffrynge shal be taken awaye from the house of the Lorde and the prestes the Lordes ministers shall mourne. The felde shall be wasted, the lande shall be in a mysserable case: for the corne shall be destroyed, the swete wyne shal come to confusion, and the oyle vtterlye desolate. The housbande men and the wyne gardeners shal lode pyteously & make lamentacion for the wheate, wyne and barly, and because the harueste vpon the felde is so cleane wasted. The grape gatherers shall make great mone, when the vineyarde and syguere be so vtterlye wasted.

Yea all the pomgarnetes, palmetrees, apple trees, and the other trees of the felde shal wyther awaye. Thus the the mery ioyes of the children of men, shall come to confusion.

Gyrde you, and waile youre selues, O prestes: mourne ye mynysters of the aulter, go youre wayes in, and slepe in sack clothe, ye ministers of my God: for the meate and drinckoffrynge shall be taken awaye from the house of youre God. Proclayme a fastynge, call the congregacion, gather the elders and all the inhabytours of the lande to gether into the house of the Lorde your God, and crye vnto the Lorde, alas, alas, for the daye. And why? the daye of the Lorde is at hande, and commeth as a destroyer from the almyghtye. That not the meates be taken awaye before oure eyes, the myrth also and ioye from the house of oure God? The seed that perysh in the ground, the garners shall lye waist, the floores shalbe broken down, for the corn shal be destroyed. O what a lyghtinge make the catell? the bullockes are very euill lykinge, because they haue no pasture: and the sheepe are famished awaye.

O Lorde, to the wyll I crye: for the fyre hath consumed the goodlye pastures of the wylderneslle, and the flame hath brent vp all the trees of the felde. Yea the wylde beastes crye also vnto the: for the water ryuers are dryed vp, and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wylderneslle.

¶ The prophesyeth the commynge and crueltye of their enemyes. An exhortation to moue them to amende.

CAPI. II.

BLowe out the trompet in Sion, & crye vpon my holy hyll, that all suche as dwell in the the lande, maye tremble at it: for the day of the Lord commeth, and is hard at hande: a darcke day, a gloomynge day & cloudy day, yea & a stormy day, lyke as the morninge spredeth out vpon the hylles: Namely, a great and mighty people: suche as haue not bene sene sens the beginninge, neither shal be after them for euermore. Before him shall be a consumynge fyre and behynde him a burninge flame. The lande shall be as a garden of pleasure before him, but behynde him shall it be a very wylderneslle, and there is no man, that shall escape him. They are to loke vpon lyke horsemen. They skippe vp vpon the hilles, as it were the sounde of charrettes, as the flame of fyre that consumeth the stubble, and as a mighty people redy to the battel.

The lorke shall be afrayed of him, all faces shall be as blacke as apot. Their shall runne lyke gyauntes, and leape ouer the walles lyke men of warre. Euery man in his goinge shall kepe his arraye, and not go out of his path. There shal not one hynder an other, but eche shall kepe his owne way. They shal breake in at the wyndowes, and not be hurt. They shal come into the cite, and runne vpō the walles: They shall clymme vp vpon the houses, and skyp in at the windowes lyke a theife. The earth shall quake before him, yea the heauens shall be moued: The sonne and moone shall be darckened and the starres shall withdrawe their shyne. The Lord shall thrust his hoyer before his hoste, for his hoste is greate, stronge and mighty to fulfyll his commaundement. This is that greate and maruaylous dreadfull daye of the Lorde: And who is able to abyde it.

Loue therfore saieth the Lorde: Turne you vnto me with all youre hertes, with fastinge weepinge and mourninge, rent youre hertes, and not youre clothes. Turne you vnto the Lorde youre God, for he is gracyous and mercyfull longe sufferinge and of great compassion: and redy to pardon wickednes. That (no doubte) he also shal turne, and forgyue: & after his chastisynge, he shall let power in-crease remayne, for meate and drinckofferynges vnto the Lorde youre God: Blowe out with the trompet in Sion, proclayme a fastinge, call the congregacyon, and gather the people togither: warne the congregation, and gather the elders, bring the children and sucklyngres to gyther. Let the the bridgrome go forthe of his chambre, & the bryde out of her closet. Let the preistes serue the Lorde betweene the porche and the aulter weepinge and sayinge: be fauourable, O Lorde, be fauourable vnto thy people: let not thine heritage be brought to suche confusion, leest the Heithen be lordes ouer them. Wherfore shulde they saye amonge the heithen where is nowe their God?

Then shall the Lorde be gelous ouer his lande, and spare his people: yea the Lorde shall answere, and saye vnto his people: Behold, I will sende you corne, wine, & oyle, so that ye shal haue plentye of them: and I will no more geue you ouer to be a reproche amonges the heithen. Agayne, as for hym of the north, I shall driue him farre from you: and shut him out into a dry and waste land his face towarde the east see, and his hynder partes toward the vtteremost see. The stynck of him shall go vp, and his fylthy corruption shal fal vpon himselfe, because he hath wrought so proudely.

Feare not (O land) but be glad and reioice for the Lorde wyl do great thinges. Be not ye afrayed neither (O ye beastes of the felde) for the pastures shall be grene and the trees shal beare their fruite: the frytrees and vine yerdes shal geue their encrease.

Be glad then (O ye children of Sion) and reioyce in the Lorde youre God, for he hath geuen you a teacher of righteousnesse: and he shall sende you showres of rayne, early and late in the fyrst moneth: so that the garners shall be full of corne, and the pattes plenteously in wine and oyle. And as for the yeres that the gorthopper, locuste, blastynge and caterpiller (my great hoaste, which I sent amonge you) haue eaten vp, I shall restore the to you agayne: so that ye shall haue ynough to eate, and be satisfyed: & praise the name of the Lord youre God, that so marueylously hath dealte with you.

And my people shal neuer be confounded any more. Ye shal well knowe, that I am in the myddest of Israel, and that I am youre God: yea & that there is none other, & my people shall no more be brought to confusion.

After this, wil I powre out my spirite vpō all flesshe: and youre sonnes and doughters shall prophecye: youre old men shal dreame dreames, and youre yonge men shall se visions. yea & vpon seruauntes and maydes I wyl powre out my spirite in those dayes. I wyl shewe wonders in the ayre aboue, and tokens in the earthe beneth: bloude and fyre, and the vapoure of smoke. The sonne shall be turned turned into darcknesse, and the moone in to bloude: before the greate and notable daye of the Lorde come. And the tyme shall come that who so euer calleth on the name of the Lorde, shall be saued. For vpon the mounte Sion and at Jerusalem, there shall be a saluacion, lyke as the Lord hath promysed: yea and amonge the other remnaunt, whom the Lorde shall call.

¶ Of the iudgement of God agaynst the enemyes of his people.

CAPI. III.

FOr lo in those dayes & at ſ same tyme when I turne agayne the captyuite of Juda and Jerusalē: I shal gather all people together, and bringe them in the valleye of Iosaphat: and there will I reason with them: because of my people and heritage of Israel: whome they haue scattered about in the nacions, and parted my land: yea they haue cast lottes for my people the yong me haue they set in ſ stabel house, and solde the Damsels for wyne that they myght haue to drynke. Thou Tirus and Sidon and all ye borders of the Philistines: what wolde ye to do vnto me? Wyl ye helpe me? wel, if ye wil nether defye me, I shal rewarde you, euen vpon your heade, and that rygh te shortly: for ye haue taken away my syluer and golde, my fayre and goodly Jewels, and brought them into your goddes houses. The chyldren also of Juda and Jerusalem haue ye solde vnto the Grecians, that ye myghte bringe them farre fromthe borders of their owne countreyes.

Beholde therfore, I wyll rayse them out of the place, where ye haue solde them, & will rewarde you euen vpon your heade. Your sonnes & your doughters wyl I sel thorowe the handes of the chyldren of Juda, and so they shall syue them forth to sel, vnto them of Saba, a people of a farre countrey, for the Lorde hym selfe hath layed it. Cry out these thinges amonge ſ Heithen, proclayme warre make vp the gaunters, let them drawe nygh, let them come vp all the lusty warryours of the. Make you (werdes of your plowshares, and speares of your sythes and sythes. Let the weake man layer I am stronge. Assemble you, and come, al ye Heithen rounde about: gather you together, there shal the Lord lay al the gaunters to the grounde. Let the people aryse, and get them to the valley of Iosaphat: for there wyll I syt, and iudge all the Heithen rounde about. Lape to your sythes, for the harueste is rype, come get you downe, the wynepresse is ful, yea the wynefattes runne ouer, for their wickednesse is waxen great.

In the valley appoynted, there shal be many, many people, for the day of the Lorde is nyghe in the valley appoynted. The sunne & moone shall be darckened, and the starres shal withdrawe their lyght. The Lorde shal roare out of Sion, and cryе out of Jerusalem, that the heauens and the earth shal quake withal. But the Lord shalbe a defence vnto his owne people, & a refuge for the chyldren of Israel. Thus shall ye knowe, that I the Lord your God dwell vpon my holy mount of Sion. Then shal Jerusalem be holy, and there shal no straungers go thorow her any more. Then shall the mountaynes drope swete wyne, & the hilles shal flowe with mylcke. All the ryuers of Juda shal haue waters ynoughe, and out of the Lordes house there shal flowe a ſpryng to water the bryde of Sittim. but Egypte shal be layed waste, and Edom shal be desolate: because they haue dealte so cruelly with the chyldren of Juda, and shed innocēt bloude in their lande. Ageayne, Juda shal be inhabyted for euermore, and Jerusalem from generacion to generacion: for I wyll not leaue their bloude vnauen ged. And the Lorde shal dwel in Sion.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE AMOS.

¶ The ryme of the prophetye of Amos. The worde of the Lorde ageynst Syria, ageynst Tyre, ageynst Edom, and ageynst the chyldren of Ammon.

CAPI. I.

THese are the sermõs that were sermed vnto Amos (whi che was one of the shepherdes at Thecua) vpon Israel in the tyme of Ozias kinge of Iuda, & in the time of Jeroboam the sonne of Joas kinge of Israel, two yere before the earth quake. And he sayd: The Lord shall rore out of Sion, & throwe his voyce fro Jerusalem: so that the pastures of the shepherdes shall be in a miserable case, and drop of Charmel dryed vp. Thus sayth the Lord for thre and foure wickednesses of Damascus, I will not spare her: because they haue threshed Galaad with yron flayles: But I will sende a fyre into the house of Hazael, & same shal consume the palaces of Benadab. Thus will I breake the barres of Damascus, and rote out the inhabiter from the felde of Auen, and him that holdeth the sceptre out of the pielaice house so þ the people shal be dryuen out of Syria Hircta, sayth the Lord. Thus sayth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesse of Gaza, I will not spare her: because they make the prysoners yet more captyue, and haue shutte them in to the lãde of Edom. Therfore will I sende a fyre in to the walles of Gaza, whiche shall deuoure her houses. I will rote out them that dwel at Asdod and him that holdeth the sceptre of Ascalon, and stretch out myne hande ouer Accaron, that the remnaunt of the Philistines shal perysshe sayth the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesse of the cytye of Tire, I will not spare her: because they haue increased the captiuite of the Edomytes, and haue not remembred the brotherly couenaunt. Therfore will I sende a fyre in to the walles of Tire that shall consume her palaces. Thus sayth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesse of Edom I will not spare him, because he persecuted his brother with the swerde, destroyed his mothers wombe, bare hatred very log and so kept mygnacion alway by him. Therfore will I sende a fyre into Theman whiche shall deuoure the palaces of Bosra.

Thus sayth the Lord: For thre and foure wickednesse of the children of Ammon I will not spare them: because they rypte vp þ women great with chylde in Galaad, to make the borders of theyr landes the wyder. Therfore I will kyndle a fyre in the walles of Rabbath, that shall consume her palaces with a greate crye, in the daye of battayle, in trumpett and in the day of storme: so that their kinge shall go into captiuite he and his prynces together, sayth the Lorde.

¶ Ageynst Moab, Iuda, and Israel.

CAPI. II.

THus sayth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of Moab, I will not spare him: because he burnte the bones of the king of Edom to asshes. Therefore will I sende a fyre into Moab, whiche shall consume the palaces of Carioth: that Moab shall perysshe with a noyse and the sounde of a trompe. I will rote out the iudge from amonge them and slaye all the princes with him sayth the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesse of Juda, I will not spare him: because he hath caste away the lawe of the Lorde, and not kept his commaundementes: for why, they were ledde astraye with þ lyes, that their forefathers followed. Therfore will I sende a fyre into Juda, which shall consume the palaces of Jerusalem.

Thus sayth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of Israel, I will not spare him: because he hath solde the righteous for money, and the poore for shoes. They treade vpon poore mens heades, as the dust of the earth, and croke the wayes of the meke. The sonne and þ father go to the harlot, to dishonoure my holye name, they lye beside euery aulter vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in the house of their goddes they drinke þ wine of the oppressed.

Yet destroyed I the Amorite before them that was as high as the Cedre trees, and as stronge as the okes: not withstandynge I destroyed his fruite fromme aboue and his rote fromme vnder.

Agayne: I brought you out of the lande of Egypt, and led you .xl. yeares thorowe the wildernesse, that ye myght haue the Amorites lande to possession. I raysed vp prophetes amonge your children, and aduaynces amonge your yonge men. Is it not so, O ye children of Israel, sayth the Lorde? But ye gaue the aduaynces wine to drynke, and ye commaunded the prophetes, sayeng, Prophecy not. Beholde, I will crushe you in sonder lyke as a wayne crusheth, that is ful of sheaues, so that the swyfte shall not escape, neither the stronge be able to do any thinge, no, the giaunt shall not saue his owne lyfe. The archer shall not abyde, & the swyfte of fote shall not escape. The horsman shall not saue his lyfe, and he that is as manly of hymselfe as a giaunt, shall in that daye be faine to runne his waye naked, sayth the Lorde.

¶ The reproueth the house of Israel of wyckednes.

CAPI. III.

Heare

A HEare what the Lorde speaketh vnto you (O ye children of Israel) namely, vnto all the tribes, whom I brought out of Egipt and said: you only haue I accepted from all the generacions of the earthe: therfore will I visite you in all youre wickednesses. Haye twayne walke together except they be agreed amõg them selues? Doth a lyon rore in the wod, except he haue a pray? B Or cryeth a lyons whelpe out of his denne, excepte he haue gotten some thinge? Doth a bryde fal in a snare vpon the earth where no louler is? Taketh a man his snare vp frõ the grounde, afore he catch somwhat? Cryet they oute Alarum with the trompette in the citie, and the people not afrayde? Commeth there any plage in a city wbout it be ℣ Lordes bowge? Nowe doth the Lorde God no maner of thinge, but he reuleth his secrete before vnto his seruauntes the prophetes. When a lyon rozeth, who will not be afrayed? Seinge then that the Lorde God hym selfe speaketh, who wyl not prophecye?

C Preache in the palaces at Asdod, and in the palaces of the lande of Egypt, and saye: gather you together vpon the mountaynes of Samaria, so shall ye se great murther and byolent oppression amonges them: for why, they regard not the thyng that is right, saith the Lorde, they gather to gether euell gotten goodes, and laye robbery in their houses.

Therfore thus saith the Lord God: This D lande shall be troubled and besieged rounde about, thy strength shal be pluckte from the, and thy palaces robbed. Thus saith ℣ Lord, lyke as an herdeman taketh two legges or a pece of an eare out of the lyons mouth: Euen so the children of Israel (that dwell in Samaria, hauynge their couches in the corner, and their beddes at Damascus) shall be pluckte awaye. Heare, and beare recorde in the house of Jacob (saith the Lorde God of hoostes) that when I begyn to visite the wickednesse of Israel, I will visite the aulters at Bethel also: so that the horues of ℣ aulter shall be broken of, and fall to the grounde.

Amo. 3. Exo. 32. Deu. 9.

As for the winter house and sõmer house, I will smyte them downe: and the houses of Iury, yea and many other houses shal perishe, and be destroyed, saith the Lorde.

¶ Against the gouernors of Samaria.

CAPI. IIII.

A OHeare this worde ye fat kyne, that be vpon the hyll of Samaria: ye that do poore men wrõge, and oppresse the needy: that saye to youre lordes: bring hither let vs drinke. Therfore ℣ Lord hath sworne by his holynesse: The dayes shall come vpon you, that ye shall be lyfte vp vpon speares, & your posterite caryed away in fyshers pannyers. Ye shal get you out at ℣ gappes one after an other, and in Armon shal ye be cast away, saith the Lorde.

Psal. 49.

Ye come to Bethel for to worke vngracyousnesse, and haue increased youre synnes at Galgal: ye brought your sacrifices in the morynge and your tythes vnto the thirde daye. Ye made a thanckesseryng of leuen, ye proclamed freewyll offeringes, and proclaymed them. Such lust had ye, O ye children of Israel, saith the Lorde God. Therfore haue I gyue you pure teeth in al your cytyes, and scarcenesse of bred in all your places yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, saythe the Lord. When there were but thre monethes vnto the haruest, I withholde the rayne from you: yea I rayned vpon one citie, and not vpon an other one pece of grõd was moystened with rayne and the grounde that I rayned not vpõ was dry. Wherfore two, yea thre cytyes came vn to one to drincke water: but they were not satisfyed, yet wil ye not turne vnto me, saith the Lorde.

Amo. 4. Deu. 28. Leui. 26. C

I haue smytten you with drouth & blasting and loke how many orchardes, vineyardes, figtrees and oliue trees ye had: the caterpyller hath eaten them vp. But yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, saith ℣ Lord. Pestilence haue I sent among you, as I dyd in Egypte your yong men haue I slayne with the sword and caused your horses be taken captyue: I made the stinkinge sauoure of your tentes to come vp in to your nosthrels: Yet will ye not turne vnto me, saythe the Lorde. Some of you haue I ouerthrowen, as I ouerthrew Sodome and Gomorre: so that ye were as a brande pluckt out of the fyre. Yet will ye not turne vnto me, saith the Lorde. Therfore thus will I handle the agayne, O Israel, prepare thy self to mete thy God, O Israel. For lo, he maketh the mountaynes, he vnderneth the wynde, he sheweth man what he is about to do, he maketh the morynge and the darkenes, he treadeth vpon the hygh places of the earth: the Lorde God of hoostes is his name.

Ye turne the lawe to wormwod, and caste

bowne ryghteousnesse vnto the grounde. The Lorde maketh the seuen sterres and the Orions, he tourneth the nyght in to dayt, and of the dayt he maketh darckenesse. He calleth the waters of the see, and poureth them out vpon the playne grounde: the Lorde is his name.

E He reyseth destruction vpon the myghtye people, and bryngeth downe the strong holdes: but they owe him euyll will that reproueth them openly: and who so telleth them the playne truth, they abhorre him. For in mocke then as ye oppresse the poore, and robbe him of his best sustenaunce: therfore where as ye haue buylded houses of square stone, ye shall not dwell in them. Of ruerylous pleasaunte vynegardes shall ye plante, but the wyne of them shall ye not drynke: and why? as for the multitude of youre wyckednesses, and youre slouth symnes, I knowe them ryghte well. Enmemyes are ye of the ryghteous, ye take rewardes, ye oppresse the poore in iudgmente. Therfore the wyse muste nowe be sayne to holde his tonge, so wycked a tyme is it.

D Seke after the thynge that is good, and not euyll, so shall ye lyue: yea the Lorde God of hoostes shall be with you, accordynge to youre owne belyefe: hate the euyll, and loue the good: set vp ryghte agayne in the porte: and (no doubte) the Lorde God of hoostes shall be mercyfull vnto the remnaunt of Ioseph. Yt no (sayth the Lorde God, the God of hoostes) there shall be mournynge in all stretes: yea they shall saye in euerye streete, Alas alas.

They shall cal the husbande man to lamentacion, and suche as can mourne to mournynge. In all vynegardes there shall be mournynge, for I will come amongest you, sayth the Lorde.

E Woo be vnto them that desyre the daye of the Lorde: Wherfore wolde ye haue it: for that daye of the Lorde, it shall be darcke and not clere: Yea ryght as when a man runneth from a lyon, and a beer meteth with him: or when he commeth in to the houle, and leaneth his hande vpon the wall, and a serpent byteth him. Shall not the day of the Lorde be darke, and not clere? shall it not be cloudy, & no shyne in it?

I I hate and abhorre youre holye dayes, and where as ye assemble me when ye come together, I will not accepte it. And thoughe ye offre me burnt offeryngs and meate offeryngs, yet haue I no pleasure therin. No for youre fat thankesofferyngs, I will not loke vpon them.

G Away with that noyse of thy songes, I will not heare thy playes of musycke: but let equitie flowe as the water, and ryghteousnesse as a myghtye ryuer. O ye houle of Israell, gaue ye me offeryngs and sacrifyces those fortye yeres longe in the wyldernesse? yet haue ye set vp tabernacles to youre Moloch, and ymages of youre goddes, yea and the sterre of youre god Remphe, figures whiche ye made to worshyp them. Therfore will I cause you be caryed awaye beyonde Damascus, sayth the Lorde, whose name is the God of hoostes.

¶ Against the pryuate & proude lyuynge in pleasure.

CAPI. VI.

O Woo be to the proude welthy in Syon to suche as thynke themselues sure vpon the mount of Samaria? whiche holde them selues for the beste of the worlde, & rule the houle of Israel, and as they lyst. Go vnto Calne, and se: and from thence get you to the mayn the great cirye, & so go downe to Gath of the Philistines: be they better at ease then these kyngdomes, or the borders of theyr lande wyder then youres? Ye are taken oute for the euyll daye, euen ye that syt in the stoole of wyckednesse: Ye that lye vpon beddes of Iuyre, and vse your wantonnesse vpon youre couches: ye that eate the beste lambes of the flocke, and the fattest calues of the stalle: ye that synge to the lute, and in playenge the instrumentes compare youre selues vnto Dauid: ye that dryncke wyne oute of goddlettes, and annoynte youre selues with the beste oyle, but no man is sorye for Iosephs hurte. Therfore nowe shall ye be caryed awaye captyue of them, that shall be leder awaye captyue and the lusty cheere of the wylfull shall come to an ende.

The Lorde God hath sworne euen by him selfe (sayth the Lorde God of hoostes) I hate the pryde of Iacob, and I abhorre his palaces: and I will gyue ouer the cirye, with all that is therin: so that thoughe there remayne ten men in one houle, they shall dye. So that next kynsfolkes, and the dead buryers shall take them, and carye awaye theyr bones, and saye vnto hym that is in the innermost houle: is there yet any mo by the? And he shall answere they are all gone, holde thy tunge (shall he saye) for they wolde not remembre the name of the Lorde.

Beholde, the Lorde is mynded to smyte the greate houle, so that they shall decaye: and the lytle houles that they shall cleaue asunder. Who can run with horses, or plowe with oxen vpon the harde rockes of stone? For why, ye haue tourned true iudgmente in to bytternesse, and the fruite of ryghteousnesse in to wormewodde. Yea, euen ye that reioyse in vayne thynges, ye that saye: haue not we obteyned hornes in oure owne strengthe? Well take hede, O ye houle of Israell, sayth the Lorde God of hoostes: I will bryng a people vpon you, which shall trouble you from the waye that goeth towarde Hemath in to the broke in the medowe.

¶ Of the captyuyte of Israel and Iuda.

CAPI. VII.

A The Lorde God shewed me suche a vyſion: beholde there stode one that made grashoppers, euen when the corne was shotinge forth, after the kynge had clypt his shepe.

Nowe when they vnderteke to rote vp all the grene thynges in the lande, I sayde: O Lorde God, be mercyfull I beseche the: who shoulde elles helpe vp Jacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lorde was gracious therin, and the Lorde sayde: well, it shall not be.

B Agayn the Lorde shewed me this vision: beholde, the Lorde God called the fyre to punyshe withall, and it deuoured the greate depe: yea it consumed a parte alredye. Then sayd I: O Lorde God, holde thyne hande: for who shoulde elles helpe vp Jacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lorde was mercyfull therin, and the Lorde God sayd: well, it shall not be.

C Moreouer he shewed me this vyſion: Beholde, the Lorde stode vpon a plastered walle, and a masons trowell in his hande. And the Lorde sayd vnto me: Amos, what seest thou? I answered: a masons trowell. Then sayde the Lorde: Beholde, I will laye the trowell amonge my people of Israell, and will no more ouerse theym: but the hyghe hyll chapelles of Israel muste be layde walle, and the churches of Israell made desolate, and as for the house of Jeroboam, I will stande vp agaynst it with the swerde.

D Vpon this sente Amasiah the Priest to Bethel, vnto Jeroboam the kynge of Israel, sayinge: Amos maketh the house of Israell to rebell agaynste the, the lande can not awaye with his wordes. For Amos sayth, Jeroboam shall dye with the swerde, and Israel shall be led awaye captyue out of theyr owne lande.

And Amasiah sayde vnto Amos: Get the hence (thou that canste se so well) and flee in to the land of Juda: get the there thy liuing and prophecye there, and prophecye no more at Bethel, for it is the kynges chapell, & the kynges courte.

Amos answered and sayde to Amasiah: As for me, I am neyther Prophete ne prophettes sonne, but a kepar of cattell. Now as I was dressynge downe mulberyes, and gaynge after the cattell, the Lorde tooke me, and layde vnto me: Goo thy waye and prophecye vnto my people of Israell. And therfore heare thou now the worde of the Lord: Thou sayest: prophecye not agaynste Israell, and speake not thynge agaynste the house of Isaac. Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde: Thy wyfe shall be defyled in the cyte, thy sonnes and doughters shall be slayne with the swerde, and thy lande shall be measured out with the lyne. Thou thy selfe shalte dye in an vncleane lande, and Israell shall be driuen out of his owne countrey.

¶ Agaynst the rulers of Israel. The Lorde threatneth that he will take vp the kynges whether he haue determyned agaynst Israel.

CAPI. VIII.

A The Lorde God shewed me this vyſion: and beholde, there was a maunde with sommer frute. And he sayd Amos, what seest thou? I answered: a maunde with sommer frute. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: the ende commeth vpon my people of Israel, I will no more ouerse them. In that daye shall the songes of the temple be tourned in to sorowe, sayth the Lorde God. Many dead bodyes shall lye in euerye place, and be cast forth secretly.

B Heare this, O ye that oppresse the poore, and destroye the nedye in the lande, sayinge: When will the newe moneth be gone, that we may sell vytayle, and the Sabboth, that we maye haue starcenesse of corne: to make the bushell lesse, and the syele greater? We shall set vp false weyghtes, that we may get the poore bodye vs with their money, and the nedye also for shoes: yea let vs sell the chaffe for corne.

C The Lorde hath swore agaynst the pryde of Jacob: these workes of theirs will I neuer forget. Shall not the land tremble, & all they that dwell therin mourne for this? Shal not their destruction come vpon them lyke a water floode, and flowe ouer them, as the floode of Egypt? At the same tyme (sayth the Lorde God) I shall cause the sunne to go downe at noone, and the lande to be darke in the clearest daye. Your hye feastes will I turne to sorowe, and youre songes to mourninge: I will bringe sacke clothe vpon all youre backes, and baldnesse vpon euery head: yea suche a mourninge will I sende them, as is made vpon an onely begotten sonne, and they shall haue a miserable ende.

D Beholde, the tyme commeth (sayth the Lorde God) that I shall sende an hunger in to the earthe, not the hunger of breed, nor the thyrste of water: but an hunger to heare the worde of the Lorde: so that they shall goo frome the one sea to the other, yea from the North vnto the East, runninge about to seke the worde of the Lorde, and shall not fynde it. In that tyme shall the fayre virgins and the younge men perysshe for thyrste, yea euen they that sweare in the offence of Samaria, and saye: as truly as thy God liueth at Dan, and as truelye as thy God liueth at Berlaba. Theye shall fall, and neuer ryse vp agayne.

¶ Threatenynges agaynst Israel. No man can escape the hande of God.

CAPI. IX.

A I Sawe the Lorde standynge vpon the aulter, and he sayde: smyte the worke stoke, that the poostes maye shake withall. For theyr couetousnesse shall fall vpon all theyr heades, and theyr posteritie shall be slayne with the swerde. They shall not flee awaye, there shall not one of them escape, ne be deliuered.

Though

Thoughe they were beryed in the hell, my hande shal fetche them from thence: though they clymme vp to heauen, yet shall I cast them downe: though they hyde them selues vpon the toppe of Carmel, yet shall I serche them oute, and bynge them from thence: Thoughe they creepe downe fro my syghte in to the depe of the see, I shall commaunde the serpent euen there to byte them: If they go awaye before their enemies in to captiuitie, then shall I commaunde the swerde there to slee them.

Thus wyll I set myne eyes vpon them, for they harme, and not for they welth. For worn the Lorde God of hoostes toucheth the lande, it consumeth awaye, and all they that dwelle therin, muste nedes mourne: And why? euery destruction shall aryse as euerye streame, and runne ouer them as the floode in Egypte.

He that hath his dwellynge in heuen, and groundeth his tabernacle in the earthe: He that calleth the waters of the see, and powreth them out vpon the playne grounde: his name is the Lorde. O ye children of Israell are ye not vnto me, euen as the Moryens, saythe the Lorde? haue not I brought Israell oute of the lande of Egypte, the Philistynes fromt Caphtor, and the Syrians fromt Cyr? Beholde, the eyes of the Lorde are vpon the realme that synneth, to roote it cleane out of the earthe: Neuertheles I wyl not vtterly destroye the house of Jacob sayth the Lorde.

For lo, this I promyse: though I syfte the house of Israell amongest all nacyons (lyke as they vse to syfte in a syue) yet shal not the smallest graueil stone fall vpon the earthe: But all the wicked doers of my people, that saye: Nayshe, the plage is not so nye, to come so hastely vpon vs: those shall perysshe with the swerde.

At that tyme wyll I buylde agayne the tabernacle of David, that is fallen downe, and stoppe vp his gappes: and lode what is broken, I shall repayre it: Yea I shal buylde it agayne, as it was afore tyme, that they mayst possesse the remnaunte of Edom, yea, and all suche people as call vpon my name with them, saythe the Lorde, whiche dothe these thinges.

Beholde, the tyme commeth (saythe the Lorde) that the plowman shall ouertake the mower, and the treader of grapes hym that sowethe seed. The mountaynes shall droppe swete wyne, and the hylles shall be fruteful, and I wyll couerte the captiuitie of my people of Israell: they shall repayre the waste cityes, and haue them in possession: they shal plant vynyardes, and drynke the wine therof: they shall make gardens, and eate the frutes of them. And I wyll plante them vpon their owne grounde, so that I will not vnroote them out agayne fro their lande whiche I haue geuen them, saythe the Lorde thy God.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE ABDI.

¶ Against Edom, and the trust that they had in erthly.

CAPI. I.

A Ezech.xxv.d Jerem.xlix.c Amos.ix.c

THis is the vysyon that was shewed vnto Abdi: Thus hath sayde the Lord God vpon Edom: We have herd of the Lord, that there is an imbassage sent amonges the heathen: Up, lette vs aryse and fyght agaynst them. Beholde, I will make the small amonge the heathen, so that thou shalt be vtterly despysed. The pryde of thyne herte hath lyfte the vp, thou that dwellest in the strong holdes of stone, and hast made the an hye seate: Thou sayst in thyne herte: who shall caste me downe to the grounde? But though thou wentest vp as hye as the Egle, and madest thy nest above amonge the sterres: yet wolde I pluche the downe from thence. If the theves and robbers came to the by nyght, thou takynge thy rest, thoulde they not steale, tyll they hadde ynought? If the grape gatherers came vpon the, wolde they not leave the some grapes? But howe shall they serche Esau, and serche out his treasures?

B Jerem.xlix.a Abacuc.ii.b

C

Yea, the men that were sworne vnto the shall dryve the out of the bordres of thyne owne lande. They that be nowe at one with the, shall disceyve the and overcome the: Euen they that eate thy breed shall betraye the so sore, that thou perceyvest it not. Shall not I of the same tyme destroy all the wise men at Edom, and those that have vnderstandyng from the mount of Esau? Thy graunters, O Theman, shall be afrayde, for they owe the slaughter they shal be all overthrowen vpon the mount of Esau. Shame shall come vpon the, for the malyce that thou shewedst to thy brother Jacob: yea for euermore shalt thou perysshe, and that bycause of the tyme when thou bidd'st set thy selfe agaynst him, euen when the ennemyes carved awaye his hoste, and when the alyeauntes came in at his portes, and cast lottes vpon Jerusalem, thou thy selfe wast as one of them.

D Ezech.xxxv.c Numer.xx.c

Thou shalte no more se the daye of thy brother, thou shalte no more beholde the time of his captyvite, thou shalt no more triumphe ouer the children of Juda, in the day of their destruction, thou shalte triumphe no more in the tyme of their trouble. Thou shalt no more come in at the gates of my people, in the tyme of their trouble, thou shalt not se their misery in the day of their fall.

E

Thou shalte fynde out no man agaynst their hoste, in the daye of their adversite: neyther shalte thou stande, mayntayne anye more at the corners of the strete, to murther suche as are fledde, or to take them prysoners, that remayne in the daye of their trouble.

For the daye of the Lorde is harde by vpon all the heathen. Lyke as thou hast done, so shalte thou be dealte withall: yea, thou shalte be rewarded euen vpon thyne heed. For lykewyse as ye have dronken vpon myne holye hyll, so shall all heathen dryncke contynually: yea, dryncke shall they, and swalowe vp, so that ye shall be, as though ye had neuer ben.

F Jerem.xlix.c

But vpon the mounte Syon, there shall a remnaunt escape: there shall be holy, and the house of Jacob shall possesse euen those that had them seasyd afore in possession. Moreouer, the house of Jacob shall be a fyre, the house of Joseph a flame, and the house of Esau shall be the strawe, whiche they shall kyndle and consume, so that nothyng shal be left of the house of Esau, for the Lorde hym selfe hath sayd it.

G Jerem.xlix.c

They of the South shall have the mount of Esau in possession, and lohe what lyeth vpon the grounde, that shall the Philistines have: the playne tribes shal Ephraim & Samaria possesse: and the mountaynes of Galaad shall Ben Jamin have. And this hoste shal be the childre of Israels prysoners. Howe what so lyeth from Canaan vnto Zarephath, and in Sepharad, that shall be vnder the subiection of Jerusalem: and the citeyes of the south shall enheryte it. Thus they that escape vpon the hyll of Sion, shall go vp to punysh the mounte of Esau, and the kyngdome shall be the Lordes.

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Abdi.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE IONAS.

¶ Of the flyght of Jonas when he was sent to Ninive. He is swolowed of a fysh, and cryeth him to the Lord for his deliverance.

CAPI. I.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto Jonas the sonne of Amithai, sayinge: Aryse, and get the to Ninive that great cite, & preache vnto them, how that their wickednesse is come vp before me. And Jonas made him redy to flie vnto Tharsis from the presence of the Lord, and got him to Joppa, where he found a shyp redy for to goo vnto Tharsis. So he payde his fare, & went aborde, that he might goo with them vnto Tharsis, from the presence of the Lorde. But the Lorde sente a greate wynde in to the see, and there was a mighty tempest in the see: so that the shyppe was in iupardye of goynge in peces. Then the mariners were afrayde, and cryed euery man vnto his god: and the goodes that were in the shyppe, they cast in to the see to lighten it of them. But Jonas gat him vnder the hatches, where he layde him downe and slept.

So the maister of the shyp came to him and sayd vnto him, why slomberest thou? Vp, call vpon thy God: yt God (happily) will thinke vpon vs, that we perysshe not. And they sayd one to an other: come, let vs cast lottes, that we may knowe for whose cause we are thus troubled. And so they caste lottes, and the lot fell vpon Jonas.

Then sayd they vnto him: tell vs for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thyne occupacion? whence commest thou? what countrey man art thou, and of what nacion? He answered them: I am an Ebrue, and I feare the Lorde God of heuen, which made bothe the see and dry lande. Then were the men exceedingly afrayde, and sayde vnto him: why hast thou so? (for they knewe that he was fled from the presence of the Lorde, because he had told them) and sayd moreouer vnto him: What shalbe we to vnto the, that the see maye ceasse from troublynge vs? (for the see wrought and was troublous) he answered them: Take me and cast me in to the see, so shall it let you be in rest: for I wote, it is for my sake, that this great tempest is come vpon you.

Neuertheles, the men assayed with rowyng to bringe the shyp to lande, but it would not be, because the see wrought so, and was so troublous agaynste them. Wherfore they cryed vnto the Lorde, and sayd: O Lorde, let vs not perysshe for this mans death, neyther laye thou innocent bloude vnto our charge, for thou, O Lorde, hast done euen as thy pleasure was.

So they toke Jonas and cast him into the see, and the see left ragyng. Then the men feared the Lorde exceedingly, & offred sacrifice and made vowes vnto the Lorde.

¶ Jonas is swallowed of a whale. The prayer of Jonas.

CAPI. II.

BVt the Lorde prepared a great fysshe to swalowe vp Jonas. So was Jonas in the belly of the fish, thre dayes and thre nyghtes. And Jonas prayed vnto the Lorde his God out of the fishes belly, and sayd: In my trouble I called vnto the Lorde, and he herde me: out of the belly of hell I cried, and thou herdest my voyce. Thou hadest cast me downe deepe in the middell of the see, and the floudes compassed me about: yea all thy waues and floudes of water went ouer me. I thought that I had ben cast away out of the syghte: but I will yet agayne looke toward thy holy temple.

The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule: the depe laye about me, and the weedes were wrapt about myne head. I went downe to the bottome of the hylles, and was buried in with erth for euer. But thou, O Lorde my God, hast brought vp my life agayne out of corruption. When my soule fainted within me, I thought vpon the Lord, and my prayer came in vnto the, euen in to thy holy temple. They that holde of vayne vanities will forsake his mercy. But I will do the sacrifice of the voyce of thanckesgyuynge, and will paye that I haue vowed: for why? saluacion commeth of the Lorde. And the Lorde spake vnto the fysshe, and it cast out Jonas agayne vpon the dry lande.

¶ Jonas is sente agayne to Ninive. The repentaunce of the kynge of Ninive.

CAPI. III.

THen came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jonas agayne, sayinge: vp & get the to Ninive that great cite, and preache vnto them the preaching which I bad the. So Jonas arose, an went to Ninive at the Lordes commaundement. Ninive was a great cite vnto God, namely of thre dayes iourney.

And Jonas went in, & entred in to the cite eut a dayes iourney, and cried, sayinge: There are yet xl dayes, and then shal Ninive be ouerthrowen. And the people of Ninive beleued God, and proclaymed fasting, and arayed them selues in sackcloth, as well the great as the small of them. And the tidinges came vnto the kyng of Ninive, which arose out of his seate, & did his apparell of, and put on sackcloth, and sat him downe in asshes.

And it was cried and commaunded in Ninive, by the authorite of the kyng and his lordes sayinge: se that neither man nor beest, ore or herde taste ought at all, and that they neither fede, ne drynk water, but put on sackcloth both man and beest, & cry mightely vnto God: yea & let that euery man turne from his euil waye, & from the wickednesse that he hath in hand.

D Who can tell? God may turne, and repent
Ed. xxxviii. D and cease frō his feerce wrath, that we perish not. And when God sawe their workes, how they turned from their wicked wayes, he repented on the euil which he sayd he wolde do vnto them, and did it not.

¶ Jonas is reproued of God.

CAPI. III.

A Therfore Jonas was sore discontent and angry. And he prayed vnto the Lorde, & sayd: O Lord was not this my saying (I pray the) when I was yet in my countrey?
therfore I hasted rather to flie vnto Tharsis, for I knew wel enough that thou art a mercyful God, full of compassion, longe suffering, and of great kyndnesse, and repentest when Ii. Reg. vii. a Iudith. xi. a thou shalt take punishment. And now, O Lorde, take my lyfe fro me (I beseche the) for I had rather dye then lyue. Then sayde the Lorde:
art thou so angry? And Jonas gat him out of the city, and sate vnder on the east side therof, and there made him a boothe, and sat vnder it in the shadowe till he might se, what shulde chaunce vnto the city.

And the Lord God prepared a wylde vyne B which sprange vp ouer Jonas, that he might haue shadowe aboue his head to deliuer him out of his payne. And Jonas was exceedinge glad of the wylde vyne. But vpon the next morow against the spring of the day, the Lord ordeyned a worme, which smote the wylde vyne, so that it withered away. And when the sunne was vp, God prepared a vehement C hoote wynd: and the sunne beate vpon the head of Jonas that he fainted, and wished in his soule, that he might dye, and sayde: It is better for me to dye, then to liue. Then God sayd vnto Jonas: Art thou so angry for the wylde vyne? And he sayde: yea, I am angry euen vnto death. Then the Lorde sayd: thou hast compassion vpon a wylde vyne, wherein D thou deseruest no labour, nor madest it grow:
which sprang vp in one night, and perished in an other, and shuld not I then haue compassion vpon Niniue that great city, wherin there are aboue an hundred and twenty thousand persons, that knowe not their right hande from their left, besydes many cattell?

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Jonas.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE MICHEAS.

¶ Of the destruction of Samaria, because of their Idolatrye.

CAPI. I.

THis is the word of the Lorde that came vnto Micheas the Morasthite, in the dayes of Iotham, Achas and Ezechias kinge of Iuda: which was shewed him vpon Samaria and Jerusalem. Heare all ye people marke this well, O earthe, and that therein is: Yea the Lorde God him self be witnesse amonge you, euen the Lorde from his holye temple. For why? beholde, the Lord shal go out of his place, and come downe, and treade vpon the hyghe thinges of the earth. The mountaynes shall consume vnder him, and the valleyes shal cleaue asunder: lyke as wax cō sumeth at the fyre, and as the waters runne downewarde. And al this shal be for the wickednesse of Jacob, & the synnes of the house of Israel.

B But what is the wickednesse of Jacob? Is not Samaria? Which are the high places of Juda? Is not Jerusalem? Therfore I shal make Samaria an heape of stones in the felde to lay about the vineyard: yea stones shal I cast in to the valley, and discouer her foundacions. All her Images shalbe broken downe and all her wemmages shall be brent in the fyre: yea all her Idols will I destroye: for why, they are gathered out of the hyre of an hore, and into an hore yre shal they be turned agayne. Wherfore I wyll mourne and make lamentacion, bare and naked will I go I must mourne like the dragons, and take sorowe as the Estriches: for their wounde is past remedy: And whyche is come in to Juda and hath touched the port of my people at Jerusalem alredye. Wepe not, lest they at Geth perceyue it.

C Thou at Betaphra, welter thy selfe in the dust and asshes. Thou that dwellest at Saphir, get the hence with shame. The proude shall boast no more for very sorowe: & why? her neighboure shal take from her what she hath. The rebellyous citie hopeth, & it shall not be so cruel: but for al that, the plage shal come from the Lorde, euen into the porte of Jerusalem. The great nopte of the chaarettes shal feare them: that dwel at Lachis, which is an occasion of the synne of the doughter of Sion, for in came vp the wickednes of Israel. Yea she sent her counsell into the lande of Geth.

D The houses of lyes wyll deceyue the kinges of Israel. And as for the (O thou that dwellest at Mozaila) I shall bringe a possessi oner vpon the, and the plage of Israell shall reach vnto Odolla. Make the balde, & shaue the, because of thy tender children: Make the eagle come balde as an Egle for they shall be caryed awaye captyue from the.

¶ The threatnynges agaynst the synfull people.

CAPI. II.

WO vnto them, that ymagyn to doo harme, and bruyse vngracyousnes vpō their beddes, to performe it in the clere daye: for their power is agaynst God. Wha they couet land, they take it by violence, they rob men of their houses. A Iac. 5.

Thus they oppresse a man for his house, & curry man for his heritage. Therfore thus sayth the Lord: Beholde agaynste this generacion haue I deuysed a plage, wherout ye shal not pluche your neckes. Ye shal no more go so proudly, for it will be a perilous tyme. In that daye shall this terme be vsed, and a mournynge shall be made ouer you on this maner: We be vtterly destroyed, the portyon of my people is translated. When wyll he part vnto vs the land, that he hath taken frō vs?

Neuertheles there shall be no man to deuide the by portion in the congregacion of the Lord. Tush, holde your tunge (say they) It shall not fall vpon this people, we shall not come so to confusion. Sayth the house of Jacob? Is the spirite of the Lorde so cleane awaye? or is he so myndeb? Truth it is, my wordes are frendly vnto the that lyue right but my people hath the contrarye, therfore must I take parte agaynst them: for they take awaye both coote and cloke from the symple. B Num. 26.

Ye haue turned poore widues to sighes, the women of my people haue ye shut out from their good houses, and taken away my excellent giftes frō their children. Vp, get you hēce for here shall ye haue no rest. C

Because of their Idolatrye they are corrupt, and shall myserably perysshe. If I were a lyeghly felowe and a preacher of lyes, & told the that they myght syt dyddyng & bollinge and be dronken: O that were a Prophet for this people. But I wyll gather the in deede, O Jacob, and bring the remnaūt of Israel al togither I shal cary them one myth an other as a flocke in the folde, and as the cattell in their stalles, that they maye be disquyeted of other men. Who so breaketh the gappe, he shal go before. They shal breake vp the port and go in and out at it. Their kinge shall go before them, and the Lorde shal be vpon the heade of them. D ¶ Agaynst the tyrannye of princes, and false prophetes.

CAPI. III.

HEare, O rulers of the house of Jacob, and ye leaders of the house of Israel: Is duite not ye knowe, what were lawfull and right? But ye hate the good, & loue the euil: ye pluche of mens skynnes, & the A Deut. 17. & 2 Paral. 19. & Ieremi. 5. & Psal. 14. & 52.

the fleshe from their bones: ye eate the fleth of my people slaye of their skynne: ye breake their bones, ye chop them in peces as it were into a cauldyd, and as fleth into a pot. Howe the tyme shall come, that when they call vn to the Lord, he shall not heare them, but hide his face from them, because that thorowe their owne ymaginacions they haue dealt so wyckedly.

B And as concernynge the Prophetes that disceyue my people, thus the Lorde sayethe agaynste them: When they haue anye thyng to byte vpon, then they preache that all shal be well: but yf a man put not some thyng in to their mouthes, they preache of warre agaynste him.

C Therfore your vision shall be turned to nyght, and your prophecying to darcknesse. The sunne shall go downe ouer their Prophetes, and the daye shal be darcke vnto them. Then shall the vision seers be ashamed, and the sothsayers confounded: yea they shal be layne, all the packe of them, to stoppe their mouthes, for they haue not Gods worde. As for me, I am full of strengthe, and of the spirite of the Lord, full of iudgement and boldenesse: to shewe the house of Jacob their wickednesse, and the house of Israel their synne.

D O heare this ye rulers of the house of Jacob, and ye iudges of the house of Israel: ye that abhorre the thinge that is lawfull, and wrest all thinge that is streight: Ye that buylde vp Sion with bloude, and Jerusalem with horrible wronge. O ye iudges, ye geue iudgmente for gyftes: O ye prestes, ye teache for lucre: O ye prophetes, ye prophecy for money. Yet will they be taken as those that holde by the Lorde, and saye: Is not the Lorde amonge vs? Tush, there can no misfortune happen vs. Therfore shall Sion (for your sakes) be plowed lyke a feld, Jerusalem shal become an heape of stones, and the hyll of the temple shall be turned to an hye wod.

¶ Of the callynge of the Gentyles, and conuersion of the Jewes.

CAPI. IIII.

E But in the latter dayes it wyll come to passe that the hyll of the Lordes house shall be set vp hyer then any mountayne or hilles: Yea the people shal prease vnto it, and the multitude of the Gentyles shal bidde them thither, sayenge: Come, let vs goo vp to the hyll of the Lorde, and to the house of the God of Jacob, that ye may teache vs his waye, and that we maye walke in his pathes. For the lawe shall come out of Sion, and the worde of God from Jerusalem, and shall geue sentence amonge the multytude of the heathen, and reforme the people of farre countreyes: so that of their swerdes they shall make plowehares, and of their speres.

Psalm.a

Esay.xl.b

F One people shall not lyfte vp a swerde agaynst an other / yea, they shall no more learne to fyght: but euery man shall sit vnder his vyneyarde and vnder his fygtre, and no man to fraye him awaye: for the mouthe of the Lorde of hoostes hath spoken it. Therfore where as all the people haue walked euery man in the name of his owne God we will walcke in the name of oure God for euer and euer. At the same tyme sayethe the Lord, will I gather vp the lame and the out caste and suche as I haue chastened: and wyl giue yllus vnto the same. I made of the outcastes a greate people and the Lorde him selfe shal be their kinge vpon the mount Sion, from this tyme forth for euermore. And vnto the (O thou towre of Oder, thou stronge holde of the doughter Sion) vnto the shall it come: euen the lordshyp and kingdom of the doughter Jerusalem. Why then art thou nowe so heuye? is there no kinge in the? are thy counceilers awaye that thou arte so payned, as a woman in her trauayle? And nowe (O thou doughter Sion) be sory, let it greue the as a wife labouringe with chylde: for nowe must thou get the oute of the cyetye, and dwell vpon the playn feld: Yea vnto Babylon shalte thou go, there shalt thou be deliuered, there the Lord shal lowse the frome the hand of thine enemyes.

Micheas.iiij.g

Esay.xl.b

Now also are there many people gathered togither agaynste the, sayenge: what lyon is cursed we shall it ouer lulle vpon hes. But they knowe not the thoughtes of the Lorde, they vnderstand not his counsel, for he shall gather them togyther as the sheaues in the barne.

Micheas.iiij.g

Therfore get the vp, O thou doughter Sion, and threshe out the corne: for I wyl make thy horne yron, and thy clawes brasse, that thou mayste gyrnde many people: and their goodes shalt thou appropryate vnto the, and their substaunce vnto the ruler of all the worlde.

¶ Of the deliuerance of Jerusalem.

CAPI. V.

A Ster shalt thou be vexed thy selfe, O thou rebellious doughter: they shall laye siege agaynste vs, and smyte the iudge of Israel vpon the cheke with a rodde. And thou Bethlehem Ephrata, art litle amonge the thousandes of Juda. Out of the shall come vnto me, he that shall be the gouernour in Israel: whose goinges forth haue been from aforetyme, and from euerlastinge.

Micheas.v.a

In the meane tyme shall he geue them vp, vntyll the tyme that she which is in travayle (that is to saye Sion) shall bringe forth. Then shall the remnaunt of his brethren turne vnto the children of Israel. He shall stande fast, and feede in the strength of the Lorde, and in the maiesty of the name of the Lorde his God, and they shall be conuerted, for he shall be magnifyed vnto the worldes ende.

Micheas.v.a

Then shall there be peace, so that the Assyrian maye come into oure lande, and treade downe oure palaces. We shall bringe vp seuen shepeherdes and eight principall prynces vpon them: and these shall subdue the lande of Assur with ꝯ swerde, and the lande of Nimrod with their naked weapons. Thus shall he delyuer vs from the Assirian, when he commeth within oure landes, and setteth his foote within oure borders.

Micheas.v.b

And the remnaũt of Jacob shalbe amõges the multytude of people, as the drew of the Lorde, and as the droppes vpon the grasse, that tarryeth for no man, and wayteth of no body. Yea the remnaũt of Jacob shall be amõges the Gentyles and the multytude of people, as the lyon amonge the beastes, of the wodde, and as the lyons whelpe amonge a flocke of sheepe: which when he goeth thorowe treadeth downe, rendeth in peces, and there is no man that can helpe. Thine handes shall be lyfte vp vpon thine enemyes, and all thyne aduersaryes shal perish.

The tyme shall come also (sayth the Lorde) that I will take thine horses from the, and destroye thy charettes. I will breake downe the cytyes of thy lande, and ouerthrowe all thy stronge holdes. All witchcraftes will I rote oute of thine handes, there shall no mo soothsayenges be with the. Thyne Idols and thyne Images will I destroye out of ꝯ, so that thou shalt no more bowe thy selfe vnto the workes of thyne owne handes. Thy groues will I plucke vp by the rotes, and breake downe the citie. Thus will I be auenged also, vpon all the heythen that will not heare.

¶ An exhortation to heare the iudgemẽte against ꝯ euell beyng vnkynde, what maner of seruyces holy please God.

CAPI. VI.

HEare now what the Lorde sayth: Vp reproue the mountaynes, and let the hylles heare thy voyce. O heare ꝯ punyshmẽt of the Lorde, ye mountaynes and ye mighty foundacions of the earthe: for the Lord will reproue his people, and reason with Israel: O my people, what haue I done vnto the? or wherin haue I hurt the? gyue me answere. Because I brought the fro the lande of Egypt, and delyuered the out of the house of bondage? Because I made Moses, Aron and Miriam to lede the? Remẽber (O my people) what Balach ꝯ king of Moab had ymagined ageynste the, and what answere that Balaam the sonne of Beor gaue him, frome Setim vnto Galgall, that ye maye knowe the louynge kyndnesse of the Lorde.

What acceptable thinge shall I offer vnto the Lorde? shall I bowe my hee to the hygh God? shall I come before him with burnte offeringes, and with calues of a yere olde? Hath the Lorde a pleasure in many thousande rammes, or innumerable streames of oyle? Or shal I gyue my firstborne for myne offence, and the fruite of my body for the sin of my soule? I will shewe the, o man, what is good, and what the Lorde requireth of the: Namely, to do ryght, to haue pleasure in louynge kyndnesse, to be lowlye, and to walke with thy God: that thou mayst be called a cytye of the Lord, and that thy name may be ryghteousnesse. Heare (O ye tribes) who willeth gyue you farther warnynge. Shulde I not be displeased, for the vnrighteous goode in the houses of the wicked, and because the measure is myny shed? Or shulde I iustifye the false balaunces and the bagge of deceytfull weyghtes, among those that be full of ryches vnrighteously gotten: where the rich-mẽ deale with falsed, speake lyes, & haue deceytfull tunges in their mouthes?

Therfore I will take in hande to punyshe the, to make the desolate, because of thy sinne. Thou shalt eate, and not haue ynough: yea thou shalte hunge thy self vnwar. Thou shalt lie, but not escape: and those that thou woldest saue, will I delyuer to the swerde. Thou shalt sowe, but not reape: thou shalt presse oute oliues, but vse shalte them not howe to anoynte thy self withall: thou shalt treade out sweete wine, but shalte drincke no wine. Ye kepe the ordynaunces of Amri, and all the customes of the house of Achab: ye folowe their pleasures, therfore will I make the waste, and cause thy inhabyters to be abhorred. O my people: and thus shalte thou beare thyne owne shame.

¶ A complaynt of the vyle maners of the ryghteous. Against the which ought we not to holde with our greatest frendes.

CAPI. VII.

WOe is me: I am be come as one, that gathered a gleanynge in the harueste. There are no mo grapes to eate, yet wolde I fayne (with al my hert) haue of the best fruit. There is not a godly man vpon earthe, there is not one ryghteous amonge men. They lay bayte all to shed bloude, and euery man hunteth his brother to death: yet they saye they do well when they do euyl. As the prince will, so sayeth the iudge: that he maye haue him a pleasure ageynst. The greate man speaketh what his herte desyreth: and the heartes so folowe him. The best of them is but as a thistle and the most ryghteous of them is but as a bryer on the hedge. But when the daye of thy preachers commeth, that thou shalte be vysyted: then shal they be wasted away. Let no man byleue his frend, ne put his confidẽce in a prynce. Kepe the porte of thy mouthe, fro her that lyeth in thy bosome, for the sonne shall put his father to dishonour, the doughter shall ryse ageynst her mother, the doughter in lawe ageynste her mother in lawe: & a mans foes shall be euen they of his owne household.

Neuertheles I will loke vp vnto the Lord I will paciently abyde God my sauyour: my God shall heare me. O thou enemye of myne, triumphe not at my fal, for I shall ryse vp ageyne: and thoughe I sytte in darcknesse yet the Lorde is my lyght. I will beare the punyshment of the Lorde for why? I have offended him. Yet he sit in iudgement vpō my cause. & se that I have right. he will bringe me forthe to the light, & I shal se his righ-teousnesse.

C Nah. 2. a. Whē that is myne ennemye shall loke vpō it, and be confounded, which se now saieth. Where is thy Lorde God? Myne eyes shal beholde her, when she shall be troden downe as the clay in the stretes. The tyme wil come that thy gappes shall be made vp, and ꝑ law shall go awaye: and at that tyme shall they come vnto the, from Assur vnto the stronge cyties, and from the stronge cities vnto the ryuer: from the one see, to the other, from the one mountayne to the other.

Nah. 3. d. Notwithstandynge the lande must be wa-sted, because of them, that dwell therin, and for the fruites of their owne imaginacions.

D Therefore fede thy people with thy rodde, the flocke of thyne heritage which dwell de-solate in the wodde: that they maye be fed vpon the mounte of Charmell, Basan, & Ga-laad as afore tyme. Marueylous thynges will I shewe them, lyke as when they came out of Egypte. This shall the heathen se, and be ashamed for all their power, so that they shal laye their handes vpon their mouth, and stoppe their eares. They shall lycke the dust lyke a serpēt, & as the wormes of the earthe, that tremble in their holes. They shall be a-fraide of the Lorde oure God, and they shal feare the.

Where is there such a God as thou? that pardoneth wickednesse, and forgiueth the of-fences of the remnaunte of thyne heritage. He keepeth not his wrath for euer. And why? his delite is to haue compassiō: he shal turne? againe, and be mercyfull to vs: he shall put downe oure wickednesses, and caste all oure synnes into ꝑ botome of the see. Thou shalte kepe thy truthe with Jacob, and thy mer-cy for Abraham, lyke as thou hast sworne vnto our fathers longe agoo.

The ende of the prophecy of Micheas,

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE NAHVM.

The destruction of Ninive, and of the deliue-raunce of Israel.

CAPI. I.

THis is the heuye burthen of Ninive, whiche Nahum of Elchos dyd write as he sawe it. The Lord is a gelous God and a taker of venge aunce, yea a taker of vengeaunce is the Lorde, and wrothful. The Lorde taketh ven-geaunce of his ennemy, and reteineth displea-sure for his aduersaryes. The Lorde suffereth longe, he is of greate power, and so innocent that he leaueth no man faultelesse before him. The Lord goth forth in tempest and stormy wether, the cloudes are the dust of his fete. When he repouseth the see, he dryeth it vp, & turneth all the flodes to dry lande. Basan is desolate, Charmel and the pleasure of Li-banus wasteth awaye. The mountaynes tre-ble for him, the hilles consume. At the sight of him, the earth quaketh, yea the hole worlde and al that dwell therin. Who may endure before his wrath? Or who is able to abyde his grym displeasure? His angre taketh on lyke fyre, and the hard rockes burste in sun-der before him.

Full gracious is the Lorde, and a stronge holde in the tyme of trouble, he knoweth the that put their trust in him: when the floude renneth ouer, and destroyeth the place, and when the darcknesse followeth fyll vpō his ennemyes. What do ye ymagyn then against the Lorde on this maner? (Nuld, when he hathe ones made an ende, there shal come no more trouble.) For lyke as the thornes that sticke together, and as the dry strawe, so shal the branchardes be consumed together, euen when they be full. There come out of ꝑ such as ymagyn mischief, & gyue vngracious co-cell agaynste the Lorde.

D Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: Let the be as wel prepared, yea and as many as they can, yet shal they be hewen downe, and passe awaye. And as for the, I will vexe the, but not vtterly destroye the. And nowe will I breake his rod, from thy back, and burste thy bondes in sonder. But the Lorde hath gyuen a cōmaundemēt concernyng the, that there shal come no more seede of thy name. The carued and caste Images wyl I rote out of ꝑ house of thy God. Thy graue shall I prepare for ꝑ and thou shalte be confounded.

The discryeth the vtterly of the Caldees against the Ninuytes.

CAPI. II.

BEholde, vpon the mountaynes come ꝑ fete of him, that bryngeth good tydin-ges, & preach eth peace. O Juda, kepe thy holy holy hayes, performe thy vowes: for Belial shall come no more in the, he is vtterly roted out.

The shatterer shall come vp against the, & lay siege to the castel. Loke thou wel to the stretes, make thy loynes strong, arme thy self with all thy myght: for the Lorde shall vysite against the glory of Jacob, lyke as the glory of Israel. The destroyers haue destroyed them vtterly, and marred the vines braunches. For the shyld of his gaunteis is made redde, his men of warre are clothed in purple. The charettes are as fyre, when he maketh him redy warde, his archers are well horsed and ryded. The charettes rolle vpon the stretes, & meete in the high wayes. They are to lyke vpon lyke confusion of fyre, and go swyftly, as the lightenyng. When he hath but warned his gaunteis, they fall in their waye, and hastely they flyne vp the walles: yea the engins of warre are prepared alredye. The water portes shall be opened, and the hanges palace shall fal. The queene her selfe shal be led away captyue, and her gentylwomen shall mourne as the doues, and grone within their hertes. Nimine is lyke a pole full of water, but then shall they be fayne to flee. Stande, stande, (shall they crye) and there shall not one turne back. Away with the syluer, away with the gold: for here is no ende of treasure. There shalbe a multytude of all maner costly ornamentes. Thus must she be spoyled emptied and cleane swept out: that their hertes may be melted away, their knees tremble all their loynes be weake, & their faces blacke as a pot.

Where is now the dwellyng of the lyons and the pasture of the lyons whelpes? where the lyon and the lyonesse walt with the whelpes, and no man feared them away? But the lyon spoyled enough for his ponge ones, and denoured for his lyonesse: he filled his dennes with his praye, and his dwellynge place with that he had rauyshed. Behold, I wyll vpon the, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes, and wil set fyre vpon thy charettes, & they shal smoke with all, and the swearde shall deuoure the ponge lyons. I will make an ende of thy spoylynge from out of the earth, and the voyce of thy messengers shall no more be herde.

¶ The fall of Nimine.

CAPI. III.

WO to the bloud thurstye cyte, whiche is all full of lyes and robbery, and wyll not leaue of from raueshyng. There is man maye heare scourgynge, rushynge, the noyse of weles, the cryinge of the horses, and the rollyng of the charettes. There the horsemen get vp with naked swerdes, and glysterynge speares: There ryseth a multytude slayne, and a greate heape of deade bodyes: There is no ende of deade corpses, yea men fall vpon theyr bodyes: And that for the greate and manyfolde whoredom, of the fayre and beutyfull horlot: whyche is a maistresse of witchcraft, yea and selleth the people thorow her whoredome, and the nacyons through her witchcraft.

Beholde, I wyll vpon the (sayeth the Lord of hoostes) and wyl pull thy clothes ouer thy heade: that I maye shewe the nakednesse of manye the heathen, and the shame amonge the kingdomes. I wyll caste heape vpon the, to make the abhorred, & a gasyng stock: yea all they that loke vpon the, shall flame backe, & say: Ninine is destroyed.

Who wyl haue pitie vpon the? where shal I fynde one to comfort the? Art thou better then the greate cyte of Alexandria? that laye in the waters, and had the waters rounde about it: whyche was strongly fenced and walled with the sea? Ethiopia and Egypt were her strength, and that excedynge greate about measure. Phutea and Libia were her helpers: yet was she layeth away and brought into captyuyte: her yong children were smytten downe at the head of euery stretе, the lottes were cast for the moste auncyent men in her, and all her myghtye men were bounde in chaynes. Euen so shalt thou also be dronke, and hyde thy selfe, and seke helpe agaynste thyne enemye. All thy stronge cytyes shal be lyke thycke trees with ripe frygges: which when a man shaketh, they fal in to the mouth of the eater.

Behold, thy people within the are but women: the postes of thy lande shall be openly vnto thyne enemyes, and the fyre shall deuoure thy barres. Drawe water now against the be besieged, make vp thy stronge holdes go in to the clay, tempre the morter, make strong bryche: yet the fyre shal consume the, the swerde shall destroye the, yea as the locust doth, so shalt it eate the vp. Yt shall fall thycke vpon the as the locustes, yea rygdte thycke shalt it fal vpon the, euen as the great hoppers. Thy marchauntes haue bene nombred with the starres of heuen: but now shal they spred abrode as the locustes, & flee their waye: Thy lordes are as the grethoppers, & thy captaynes as the multytude of grethoppers: which when they be cold, remayne in the hedges: but when the Sunne is vp, they flie away, and no man can tel where they are become. Thy Shepherdes are a slepe (O kinge of Assur) thy worthyes are layde downe: thy people is scattered abrode vpon the mountaynes and no man gathereth them togither agayne. Thy wounde can not be hyd, thy plage is so sore. All thy that heare this of the shall clappe their handes ouer the. For what is he, to whome is not alway bene thyne payne.

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Nahum.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE ABACVC.

¶ Complaynt against Israel.

CAPI. I.

THis is the heuye burthen, which the prophete Habacuc dyd se. O Lorde, how longe shal I crye, and thou wilte not heare? how longe shall I complayne vnto the sufferynge wrong & thou wilte not helpe? Why letest thou me se wyckednesse and labours? Tyranny and violence are before me: power ouergoeth right: for the law is torne in peces, and there can no right iudgement go forth. And why? the vngodly is more set by then the righteous: this is the cause, þ wrong iudgement proceedeth. Beholde amonge the heythen, and loke well: wonder at it, and be ashamed: for I wyll do a thinge in youre time whiche thoughte ye be tolde you, ye shall not beleue.

For lo, I wyll rayse vp the Caldees, that bytter and swyft people: which shall go ouer all the lande, to take possession of dwellynge places, that be not theire owne. A feryce and boysterous people is it, these shall ipe in iudgement & punysh. Their horses are swifter then the catres of the mountayne, & more feyer then the wolues in the euenynge. Their horsemen come by greate heapes from farre, they fle hastely to deuoure as the Egle.

They come all to spoyle: out of them commeth an east wynde, which bloweth and gathereth their captiues, like as the sand. They shall mocke the kinges, and laugh the princes to scorne.

They shall not set by any stronge holde, for they shall laye ordynaunce agaynst it, and take it. Then shall they take a freth courage vnto them, to go forthe and to doo more euell, and so attrybe that power vnto their God.

But thou O Lorde my God, my holy one thou arte from the begynnyng, therfore shal we not dye. O Lorde, thou hast ordeyned the for a punyshment, and set them to reproue the wyckednesse.

Thine eyes are cleane, thou mayst not se euyll: thou canst not beholde the chynge that is wicked. Wherefore then beholdest thou loke vpō the vngodlye, and holdest thy tonge when the wicked deuoureth the man that is better then him selfe? Thou makest me as the fysh in the se, and lyke as the creynge beestes, þ haue no gouyde. They take vp all with their angle, they catche it in their nette, and gather it in their yarne: wherof they reioyce and are glad. Therfore offer they vnto their net, and do sacrifice vnto their yarne: because that therowe it their portion is become so fat, and their meate so plentyous. Wherfore they cast out their net agayne, & muste cease to slaye the people.

¶ Of the vision of the prophete. Agaynste pollyng, couetousnesse, and Idolatry.

CAPI. II.

I Wyll stande vpon my watch, and set me vpon my bulwerche, to loke & se what he wolde say vnto me and what answere I shulde geue vnto him that reproueth me. But the Lorde answered me, and sayde: Write the vision playnly, vpō the tables, that whoso commeth by, maye rede it: for the vision is yet farre of for a time, but at the last it shal come to passe and not fayle. And though he tary, yet wayte thou for him, for in very dede he wyll come, and not be slacke. Beholde, who so wyll not beleue his soule shall not prospere: the iuste shall lyue by his fayth. Lyke as the wyne deceyueth the dronckarde, euen so the proude shall fayle and not endure. He openeth his desyre wyde vp as the hell, and is as vnsatysfyable as death. All heythen gathereth he to him, and heapeth vnto him all people.

But shal not all these take vp a prouerbe agaynst him, and mocke him with a by worde, & saye: Wo vnto him that heapeth vp other mens goodes! How longe wyll he lade him selfe with thicke claye? O how sodenly will they stande vp, that shall vexe, and awake, þ shall teare the in peces? yea thou shalte be their praye. Bycause thou hast spoyled many heythen, therfore shall the remnaunt of the people spoyle the: because of mens bloude, and for the wronge done in the lande, in the cite and vnto all them that dwell therin.

Wo vnto him, that courtously gathereth euell gotten goodes into his house: that he maye set his nest an hyghe, to escape from the power of misfortune. Thou hast deuysed the shame of thyne own house, for thou hast slayne to moche people, and hast wyllfully offended: so that the very stones of the wall shall crye out of it, and the tymbre that lyeth betwixt the ioyntes of the buil dynge shal answere. Wo vnto him, that buyldeth þ towne with bloude, & maynteyneth the cite with vnrighteousnesse. Shall not the Lorde of hostes bringe this to passe, that the labourers of the people shall be brent with a greate fyre, and that the thynge wherevpon the people haue werged them selues, shall be lost? For the earthe shall be full of knowledge of the Lordes honoure, lyke as the waters that couer the se.

Wo vnto him that giueth his neyghbour drynche, to geue him worthyll displeasure for his slaunderouse: that he maye se his priuytees. Therfore with shame shalte thou be fylled, in steade of honoure.

Drynche thou also, yi thou slombre with all: for the cuppe of the Lordes right hande shall compasse the about, and shamefull spewinge in thy glorye shall come. For the wronge wrong that thou hast done in Lybanus, shall ouerwhelme the, & the wild beestes that make the afrayde, because of mens bloude, & for the wrong done in the land, in the city, and vnto all suche as dwel therin.

What helpe then wil the ymage do, whom the worke man hath fashioned: Or the vayne false ymage, wherin because the craftesman putteth his trust, therfore maketh he domme poolles? Woo vnto him that sayth to a peece of wod: aryse/ and to a domme stone: stande vp. For what instruction may suche one geue? Beholde, it is layde ouer with golde and syluer, and there is no breth in it. But the Lorde in his holy temple is he, whom all the worlde shoulde feare.

¶ The prayer of the Prophete Habacuc for the ignorant.

CAPI. III.

O Lord, when I herd speke of the, I was afrayde. The worke that thou hast taken in hand, shalt thou performe in his tyme, o Lord/ and when the time commeth, thou shalt declare it. In thy wrath thou thinkest vpon mercy. God commeth from Theman, & the holy one from the mount of Pharan. Selah.

His glorye couereth the heauens, and the earth is full of his prayse. His shyne is as the sunne, and beames of lyghte goo out of his handes, there is his power vpo. Destruction goeth before him, and burnyng coelles go from his feete. He standeth and measureth the earth. He loketh, and the people consume awaye, the mountaynes of the worlde fal downe poulder, and the hylles are layne to bow the selues, for his goinges are euerlastynge and sure.

I sawe that the pauylyons of the Moryans, and the tentes of the lande of Madian were vexed for wickednesse. Was thou not angre, O Lorde, in the waters? Was not thy wrath in that doubte, and thy displeasure in the see? Yes, when thou satest vpon thyne horse, and when thy charettes had the victorye. Thou shewedst thy bowe openly, lyke as thou haddest prompted with an othe vnto the tribes. Selah.

Thou dydest deuyde the waters of the earth. When the mountaynes sawe the, they were afrayde, the water flooode went away: the depe made a noyse at the lyftynge vp of thyne handes. The sunne and moone remayned styll in their habitation. Thyne arowes went out glysteynge, and thy speres as the shyne of the lightening. Thou troddest downe the lande in thyne anger, and hyddest thy selfe the heathen in thy displeasure. Thou camest forthe to helpe thy people, to helpe thyne anoynted. Thou smotest downe the head, the house of the vngodlye, and discouerest his foundacions: euen vnto the necke of hym. Selah. Iosue. 3.

Thou cursest his scepters, the Capitayne of his men of warre, whiche come as a flodde wyndt to scatter me abrode, and are glad when they maye eate vp the poore secretlye. Thou makest alwaye for thyne horses in the see, euen in the mudde of great waters. When I heare this, my bodye is vexed, my lyppes tremble at the voyce therof, my bones rotte, I am afrayde where I stande. O that I myght rest in the daye of trouble, that I myght goo vp vnto our people, which are alredye prepared. C

For the frygge tree shall not be grene, and the vynes shall beare no fruite. The laboure of the olyue shall be but lost, and the landes shall bringe no corne: the sheepe shall be taken out of the folde, and there shall be no catell in the stalles. But as for me, I will be glad in the Lorde, and will reioyce in God my sauyour. The Lorde God is my strength, he shall make my feete, as the feete of Psal. xviii. b Partes: and he which giueth the victorye, shall bring me to my hygh places, singing vpon my plaimes.

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Habacuc.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE SOPHONY.

¶ Threateninges agaynst Juda and Jerusalem, because of theyr Idolatrye.

CAPI. I.

A THis is the worde of the Lorde, whiche came vnto Sophony the sonne of Chusi, the sonne of Godolias, the sonne of Amarias the sonne of Ezechias in the time of Josias the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda.

I will gather vp all thynges in the lande (sayth the Lorde) I will gather vp man and beest. I will gather vp the fowles in the ayre, and the fysshe in the see (to the greate decaye of the wycked) and will vtterly destroye the men oute of the lande, sayth the Lorde. Gen. 6. 7. Hier. 12. 4. I will stretche oute myne hande vpon Juda, and vpon all suche as dwell at Jerusalem.

B Thus will I roote oute the remnaunte of Baal from this place, and the names of the Kemarym and Preestes: yea, and suche as vpon theyr house toppes worshyp and bowe them selues vnto the hoste of heuen, whiche swere by the Lorde, and by theyr Malchom also: whiche starte a backe frome the Lorde, and neyther seke after the Lorde, ne regarde hym. Deute. 4. b. Jerem. 7. b

C Be styll at the presence of the Lorde God for the daye of the Lorde is at hande: yea the Lorde hath prepared a slayne offeringe, and called his gestes thereto, and thus wyll it happen in the daye of the Lordes slayneofferinge: I will vysit the princes, the kynges chyldre, and all suche as weare straunge clothyng. In the the same day also will I vysyte all those that treade ouer the thresholde so proudlye, whiche fyll theyr Lordes house with robbery and falsehed. Am. 8. c. d. Jerem. 5. 5. c. d.

At the same tyme (sayth the Lorde) there shall be herde a great crye from the fyshporte, and an howlynge from the other porte, and a great murther from the hilles. Howle ye that dwell in the myll, for all the marchaunt people are gone, and all they that were laden with syluer, are rooted out.

D At the same tyme will I seke thorow Jerusalem with lanternes, and vysyte them that continue in theyr dregges, and saye in theyr hertes: Tushe, the Lorde will doo neyther good, nor euyll. Theyr goodes shall be spoyled, and theyr houses layde waste: they shall buylde houses, and not dwell in them: they shall plante vyneyardes, but not drynke the wyne therof. For the great daye of the Lorde is at hande, it is herde by, and commeth on a pace. Horrible is the crye of the Lordes daye, then shall the graunt crye out: for that daye is a daye of wrathe, a daye of trouble and heynesse, a daye of bitter destruction and myserye, a darke and glomynge daye, a cloudye and stormye daye, a daye of the noyse of trompettes and shawmes, against the strong cities and hyghe towres. Jerem. 6. c. Deut. 28. c. Jeremiah. 6. c.

I will bringe the people into suche distres, that they shal go about like blynde men because they haue synned againste the Lorde. Their bloude shall be shed as the dust, and their bodyes as the myre. Neither their syluer ne their golde shall be able to deliuer them in the wrothfull daye of the Lorde, but the hole lande shal be consumed thorow the fyre of his gelousye: for he shall soone make cleane ryddaunce of all theym that dwell in the lande. Ezech. 7. Sophon. 3.

¶ He moueth to returne to God, prophesying vnto the one destruction, and to the other deliueraunce.

CAPI. II.

COme together and gather you, O frowarde people: or the thinge go forth that is concluded, and or the tyme be passed awaye as the dust: or the fearefull wrath of the Lorde come vpon you, yea or the daye of the Lordes sore displeasure, come vpon you. A Seke the Lorde all ye meke herted vpon earthe, ye that worke after his iudgemente: seke rygheousnesse, seke lowlynesse: that ye maye be defended in the wrothful daye of the Lorde. For Gaza shall be destroyed, and Ascalon shal be layd wast. They shall cast out Asdod at the noone day, and Accaron shall be pluckte vp by the rotes. Iere. 47. Ioan. 4.

B Wo vnto you that dwell vpon the see coste ye murtherous people: the worde of the Lord shall come vpon you, O Canaan thou lande of the Philistines, I wyl destroy the, so that there shall no man dwell in the any more: as for the see coost, it shal be herdmens cotages and shepe foldes: yea it shall be a porcion for suche as remayne of the house of Juda, to fede ther vpon. In the houses of Ascalon shal they rest towarde nyght: for the Lord their God shall vysyte them, and turne away their captyuytye. I haue herde the dispyte of Moab, and the blasphemyes of the children of Ammon howe they haue shamefully intreted my people, and magnifyed them selues within the borders of their lande. Therfore as truely as I lyue (sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel) Moab shal be as Sodome, and Ammon as Gomorra: euen dyre thorne hedges, salte pyttes and a perpetuall wyldernesse. Ezech. 25. c. Jere. 48. c. Ezech. 35. c.

C The residue of my folke shall spoyle the, the remnaunt of my people shall haue them in possession. This shall happen vnto theym for their pryde, because they haue dealte so shamefully with the Lord of hoostes people, and magnyfyed them selues aboue them. The Lorde shall be grym vpon them, and destroye all the goodes in the lande. And all the Iles of the heethen shal worshyp him euery man in his place.

D Ye Moabites also shall perishe with my swerde:

swerde: yea he shal stretche out his hand ouer the north, and destroye Assur. As for Niniue, he shal make it desolate, drye and waste. The flockes and all the beastes of the people shall lye in the myddest of it with pellicanes and hedgehogs shall abyde in the vpper postes of it, foules shall syng in the wyndowes, and rauens shal sytte vpon the balkes, for the bulwarkes of Cedre shal be ouerthrowne. This is the proude and carelesse city, that said in her herte: I am, and there is els none. O how is she made so waste that the beastes lye therin? Who so goeth by mocketh her, and poputteth at her with his fynger.

¶ Against the gouernors of Jerusalem. Of the callynge of all the Gentyles. A comforte to the reysidue of Israel.

CAPI. III.

WOo to the abhominable, frithy and cruel city: which wil not heare, ne be reformed. Her trust is not in the Lorde, neither wyll she holde her to her God. Her rulers within her, are as roryng lyons: her iudges are as wolues in the euenyng, which leaue nothing behynd them till the morowe. Her Prophetes are lyghte persons and vnfaythfull men: her priestes vnhalowe the Sanctuarye, and do wronge vnder the pretence of the lawe. But the iust Lorde that dothe no vnryght, was amonges them, euery morowe shewyng them his lawe clerely, and ceased not. But the vngodly wil not learne to be ashamed. Therfore wil I rote out this people, and destroye their cytyes: yea and make their stretes so voyde, that no man shall go therin. Their cityes shall be broken downe, so that no body shal be left, ne dwell there any more.

I sayd vnto them: feare me, and be content to be reformed, that their dwellinge be not destroyed, and that there happen vnto them none of these thynges, wherwith I shal visite them. But neuertheles, they haue dylygently folowed the fylthynesse of their owne ymaginacions. Therfore ye shall wayte vpon me sayth the Lorde, vntil the time that I stand vp to: I am determined to gather the people, and to bring the kyngdomes together, that I may poure out myne angre, yea all my wrathfull displeasure vpon them. For all the worlde shal be consumed with the fire of my gelousy. And then wil I clense the lyppes of the people, that they may euery one call vpon the name of the Lorde, and serue him with one shoulder. Such as I haue subdued, and my children also which I haue scatred abroade, shall bring me presentes beyonde the waters of Ethiopia.

In that time shalt thou be no more confused vnto vnrighteousnesse of all thy ymaginacions, wherin thou hast offended me: for I wil take away the proude boastes of thyne honour vnto the, so that thou shalt no more triumphe by cause of my holy hyl. In the also wil I leaue a small poore lyuynge people, which shal trust in the name of the Lorde. The remnaunt of Israel shal do no wickednesse, ne speke lyes neither shall any disceytfull tonge be founde in their mouthes. For they shall be fedde, and take their rest, and no man shall make them afrayed. Syng thankes, O doughter Syon, be ioyful, O Israel: reioyce and be glad from thy hole hert, O doughter Jerusalem/ for the Lorde hath taken away thy punyshement, and turned backe thyne enemyes. The kyng of Israel, euen the Lorde him selfe is with the, so that thou needest no more to feare any misfortune.

In that tyme it shal be sayd to Jerusalem: feare not, and to Syon: let not thyne eyes be slacke, for the Lorde thy God is with the, he is the that hath power to saue: he hath a special pleasure in the, and a meruaylous loue towarde the: yea he reioyceth ouer the with gladnesse. Suche as hathe ben in penynesse, wyl I gather together, & take out of thy congregacio: yea and the shame and reproch that hath ben layde vpon the, shall be farre from the. And lo, in that tyme wyll I destroye all thole that vexe the: I wyll helpe the lame, and gather vp the cast away: yea I wyl get them prayse and honoure in all landes, where they haue ben put to shame. At the same tyme wil I bring you in, and at the same time wil I gather you. I wyll get you a name and a good reporte amonge all people of the earthe, when I turne backe your captiuitie before your eyes, sayeth the Lorde. (?)

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Sophony.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE AGGEVS.

¶ The tyme of the prophecye of Aggeus. An exhortacion to buylde the temple agayne.

CAPI. I.

A In the seconde peare of kynge Darius, in the fyrth moneth, the fyrst daye of the moneth, came the worde of the Lorde (by the prophete Aggeus) vnto Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel the prynce of Juda, and to Jesus the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, sayenge: Thus speaketh the Lorde of hoostes, and sayth: This people bothe saye: The tyme is not yet come to buylde vp the Lordes house. Then spake the Lorde by the Prophete Aggeus, and sayd: Ye your selues can fynde tyme to dwell in syled houses, and shall this house lye waste?

B Consydre now youre owne wayes in youre hertes, sayth the Lord of hoostes/ye sow moch but ye bring lytle in: ye eate, but ye haue not ynough: ye drynke, but ye are not fylled: ye decke your selues, but ye are not warme/ and he that earneth any wage, putteth it in a broken purse.

C Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: Consydre youre owne wayes in youre hertes, get you vp to the mountayne, fetche wodde, and buylde vp the house, that it maye be acceptable vnto me, and that I maye shewe myne honour, sayth the Lorde. Ye loked for moch, and lo, it is come to lytle: and thoughe ye bringe it home, yet do I blowe it awaye. And why so sayethe the Lorde of hoostes? Euen bycause that my house lyeth so waste, and ye ren euery man vnto his owne house. Wherfore the heuen is forbydden to gyue you any dewe, and the earthe is forbydden to gyue you encrease. I haue called for a drouthe, bothe vpon the lande, and vpon the mountaynes, vpon corne vpon wyne, and vpon oyle, vpon euery thyng that the grounde bryngeth forthe, vpon men and vpon catell/ yea and vpon all handye labour.

D Now when Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesus the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, with the remnaunt of the people, herde the voyce of the Lorde theyr God, and the wordes of the Prophete Aggeus (lyke as the Lorde their God had sent him) the people did feare the Lorde. Then Aggeus the Lordes aungell sayd in the Lordes message vnto the people: I am with you sayth the Lorde. So the Lord waked vp the spirite of Zorobabel the prynce of Juda, and the spirite of Jesus the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, & the spirite of the remnaunt of all the people, that they came and laboured in the house of the Lorde of hoostes their God.

¶ He sheweth that the goodlynesse of the seconde temple shall excede the fyrste, bycause of the comyng of Christe.

CAPI. II.

E Vpon the .xxiiij. daye of the fyrste moneth in the seconde peare of kynge Darius, the one and twenty day of the seuenth moneth, came the worde of the Lord by the prophete Aggeus, sayenge: Speake to Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel prince of Juda, & to Jesus the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, and to the residue of the people, & say: Who is left amonges you, that sawe this house in her fyrst beauty? But what thinke ye now by it? Is it not in your eyes, euen as thoughe it were nothing? Neuertheles be of good chere O Zorobabel (sayth the Lord) be of good chere, O Jesus thou sonne of Josedech hye preest: take good herte vnto you also, all ye people of the lande, sayth the Lorde of hoostes, and doo accordynge to the worde (for I am with you sayth the Lord of hoostes) like as I agreed with you, when ye came oute of the lande of Egypte, and my spirite shall be amonge you; feare ye not.

F For thus sayethe the Lorde of hoostes: yet ones more wyll I shake heauen and earthe, the see, and the drye lande: yea, I will moue all heathen, and the comforte of all heathen shall come, and so wyl I fyll this house with honoure, sayethe the Lorde of hoostes. The syluer is myne, and the golde is myne, sayethe the Lorde of hoostes. Thus the glorye of the last house shall be greater then the fyrst, sayethe the Lorde of hoostes: and in this place wyll I gyue peax, sayethe the Lorde of hoostes.

G The .xxiiij. daye of the nyneth moneth, in the seconde peare of kynge Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto the Prophete Aggeus, sayenge: Thus sayethe the Lorde God of hoostes: Axe the preestes concernynge the lawe, and saye: yf one beare holye fleshe in his cote lap, and with his lap doo touche the breed, potage, wyne, oyle, or any other meat: shall he be holye also? The preestes answerede and sayd: No. Then sayd Aggeus: Now yf one beyng defyled by a dede carcase, touche anye of these, shall it also be vncleane? The preestes gaue answere and sayd/ yea, it shall be vncleane. Then Aggeus answered, and sayd: euen so is this people and this nacion before me, sayth the Lorde, and so are all the workes of their handes/ yea, and all that they offer is vncleane.

H And now (I praye you) consydre from this daye forthe, and how it hathe gone with you afore, or euer there was layde one stone vpon an other in the temple of the Lord, that whe ye came to a corne heape of twenty bussheles, there were scarce ten/ and that when ye came to the wyne presse for to poure oute fifty pottes of wyne, there were scarce twentye. For I smote you with brede, blastyng and hayle stones in all the labours of youre handes: yet was there none of you that wolde turne vnto me sayth the Lorde.

Consyder

D Consyder them from this daye forth and afore, namely from the foure and twenty daye of the nynneth moneth, vnto the daye that the foundacion of the Lordes temple was layde: marke it wel, is not the seed yet in the barne? haue not the vynes, the figge trees, the pome granates, and olyue trees ben yet vnfruitfull? but from this daye forth, I shall make them to prospere.

Moreouer the foure and twenty day of the moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Aggeus agayne, sayinge: Speake to Zorobabel the prynce of Juda, and say: I wyll shake both heuen and erth, and ouerthrowe the seat of the kyngdomes, yea and vtterly the mighty kyngdome of the heathen. I will ouerthrowe the charettes, and them that sytte vpon them, so that bothe horse and man shall fall downe, euery man through his neyghbours swerde. And as for the, O Zorobabel, (sayth the Lorde of hostes) thou sonne of Salathiel my seruaut: I will take the (sayth the Lord) at the same time and make the as a seale, for I haue chosen the, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Aggeus.

E

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE ZACHARY.

The moueth the people to returne to the Lorde, and to forbeare the wyckednesse of their fathers, he prophesyeth Christe and the Apostles.

CAPI. I.

A The eyght moneth of the seconde yere of kinge Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Zachary the son of Barachias, the son of Addo the Prophete saying: the Lorde hath bene sore displeased at your fore fathers. And saye thou vnto them: thus sayth the Lorde of hostes. Turne you vnto me (sayth the Lorde of hostes) and I will turne me vnto you, sayth the Lord of hostes. Be not ye like your fore fathers vnto whom the Prophetes cryed afore time, saying: thus sayth the Lorde God of hostes. Tourne you from your euil wayes, and from your wicked ymagynacions. But they wolde not heare, ne regarde me, sayth the Lorde.

What is now become of your fore fathers and the Prophetes? are they yet styll alyue? But dyd not my wordes and statutes, which I commaunded by my seruaunces the Prophetes) touche your fore fathers? Vpon this they gaue answere, and sayde: like as the Lord of hostes dewised to vnto vs, according to our owne wayes and ymagynacions, euen so hath he dele with vs.

B Vpon the .xxiiij. day of the xi. moneth, whiche is the moneth Sebath, in the seconde yere of Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Zachary the son of Barachias, the son of Addo the prophet, saying: I sawe by night, and lo, there sate one vpon a red horse, and stode stil among the Myrte trees that were beneth vpon the grounde: and behynd him were there red, speckled, and whyte horses. Then sayd I: O my Lorde, what are these? And the aungel that talked with me, sayde vnto me: I will shewe the what these be. And the man that stode amongest the Myrte trees answered and sayd: These are they whom the Lorde hath sent to goo thorowe the worlde. And they answered the aungel of the Lord that stode among the Myrte trees, and sayd: We haue gone thorowe the worlde, and beholde all the worlde dwelt at rest, and are carelesse.

Then the Lordes aungell gaue answere, and sayd: O Lorde of hostes, how long wylt C thou be vnmercyful to Jerusalem, and to the cities of Juda, with whom thou hast ben displeased nowe these .lxx. yeres? So the Lorde gaue a louyngly and comfortable answere vnto the aungell that talked with me. And the aungell that talked with me, sayd vnto me. Crye thou, and speake: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: I am exceedyngly griens ouer Jerusalem and Syon, and sore displeased of the careless people: for where as I was but a lytle angry they dyd their best that I might destroye the. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: I will torne me agayne in mercye towarde Jerusalem, so that my house shall be buylded in it, sayth the Lorde of hostes: yea, and the plommet shall be layde abrode in Jerusalem, sayth the Lorde of hostes. Zacharie. viii. b

D Crye also, and speake: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: My cyties shall be in good prosperite agayne, the Lorde shall yet comforte Sion, and chose Jerusalem. Then lyfte I vp myne eyes and sawe, and beholde, foure hornes. And I sayd vnto the aungel that talketh with me: what be these? he answered me: These are the hornes which haue scatered Juda, Israel, and Jerusalem abrode. And the Lorde shewed me foure carpenters. Then sayd I, what wyll these doe? he answered and sayd: those are the hornes, which haue so strowed Juda abrode, that no man durst lyfte vp his head: but these are come to fray them away, and to cast out the hornes of the Gentyles, which lift vp their horne ouer the lande of Juda, to scatter it abrode.

¶ The renewynge of Jerusalem and Juda.

CAPI. II.

E I Lyfte vp myne eyes agayne and loked, and beholde, a man with a mea. lyne in his hande. Then sayde I: whyther goest thou? And he sayd vnto me, to measure Jerusalem, that I may se how long and how brode it is. And beholde the aungel that talked with me went his way forth. Then went there out an other aungel to mete him and sayd vnto him: Run, speke to this yonge man, and saye: Jerusalem shal be inhabited without any wal, for the very multitude of people and catteil, that shal be therin. Yea I my self, sayth the Lord, will be vnto her a wall of fyre round about and wyll be honoured in her. Ouer stand vpon ye.

F O get you forth, O flee from the land of the North, sayth the Lord, ye whom I haue scattered in to the foure wyndes vnder heuen, sayth the Lord. Saue thy self, O Sion: thou that dwellest with the doughter of Babylon, for thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: with a glorious power hath he sent me ouer to the heathe which spoyled you: for who so toucheth you, shal touche the apple of his own eye. Beholde I wil lifte vp myne hand ouer them, so that they shall be spoyled of those which afore serued them, and ye shall knowe that the Lorde of hostes hath sent me.

G Be glad and reioyce, O doughter of Syon for lo, I am come to dwell in the myddest of the, sayth the Lorde. And the same tyme there shall many heathen cleaue to the Lorde, and shall be my people. Thus wyll I dwell in the myddest of the, and thou shalte knowe that the Lorde of hostes hath sent me vnto the. The Lorde shall haue Juda in possession for his parte in the holy grounde, and shall chose Jerusalem yet agayne. Lette all flesshe be styll before the Lorde, for he is ryssen out of his holy place.

¶ Of the lawe and hyghe estate of Christe, vnder the figure of Jesus the preest. A prophecy of Christ.

CAPI. III.

A Nd he shewed me Jesus the hygh preest standynge before the aungell of the Lorde, and Satan stode at his ryghte hande to resyst him. And the Lorde sayd vnto Satan: The Lorde reproue the (thou Satan) yea the Lorde that hath chosen Jerusalem reproue the. Is not this a brande taken out of the fyre? A Zacha. iii. Iudas.

Now Jesus was clothed in vncleane rayment, & stode before the angel: which answered and sayd vnto those that stode before him take awaye the foule clothes from him. And vnto him he sayd: Beholde, I haue taken awaye thy synne from the, and wyll decke the with chaunge of rayment. He sayd moreouer, set a fayre myter vpon his head. So they set a fayre myter vpon his head, and put on clothes vpon him, and the aungell of the Lorde stode theer. B

Then the aungel of the Lord testifyed vnto Jesus, and spake: thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: If thou wylte walke in my wayes, and kepe my watche: thou shalte rule my house, and kepe my courtes, and I wyll gyue the place among these that stande here. Heare O Jesus thou hye preest, thou and thy frendes that dwell before the, for they are wonderous people. C

Beholde, I wil bring forth the braunche of my seruaunt: for lo, the stone that I haue layd before Jesus / vpon one stone shall be seuen eyes. Beholde, I wyll hewe him oute (sayth the Lorde of hostes) and take away the synne of that lande in one daye. Then shall euerye man call for his neyghboure vnder the vyne, and vnder the fygge tre, sayth the Lorde of hostes. D

¶ The vyson of the golden candelstycke, and the exposityon therof.

CAPI. IIII.

A Nd the aungell that talked with me, came agayne, and waked me vp, as a man that is rayled out of his slepe, and sayd vnto me: What seest thou. And I sayd: I haue loked, and beholde a candelstycke all of golde, and a bolle vpon it ii, and his seuen lampes therin, and vpon euery lampe. vii. tubes. And two olyue trees thereby, one vpo the ryght syde of the bolle, and the other vpon the lefte syde. A

So I answered and spake to the aungell that talked with me, sayinge: O my lorde, what are these? The aungell that talked with me, answered and sayde vnto me: knowest thou not what these be? And I sayd: No my B no my lorde. He aunswered and sayde vnto me: This is the worde of the Lorde vnto Zorobabel, sayinge: Neyther thorowe an hoste of men, nor thorowe strengthe, but thorowe my spirite, sayethe the Lorde of Hoostes. What arte thou, tppon greate mountayne, before Zorobabel? thou shalt be made euen. And he shall bringe vp the fyrste stone, so that men shall crye vnto him: good luche good luche.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: The handes of Zorobabell haue layde the foundamen of this house, his handes shal also finish it, that ye may knowe how that the Lorde of hoostes hathe sente me vnto you.

For he that hath ben despysed a lytle season, shall reioyce, when he seeth the tynne weyght in Zorobabels hand. The seuen eyes are the Lordes whiche goo thorowe the hole worlde. Then aunswered I, and sayde vnto him: What are these two olyue trees vpon the ryghte and lefte syde of the candelstycke? I spake moreouer, and sayd vnto him: what be these two olyue braunches (which thorow the two golden pypes) empeye them selues in to the golde? he answered and sayd: knowest thou not what these be? And I sayd, no my Lorde. Then sayd he: These are the two olyue braunches that stande before the ruler of the hole erth.

¶ The vysion of the flyeing boke, signifyinge the curse of theues and suche as abuse the name of God. By the vysion of the measure, is signified the bondage of Iuda to Babylon.

CAPI. V.

SO I toorned, me lyfteyngt vp myne eyes and loked, and beholde a flyeing boke. And he sayd vnto me: what seest thou? I answered: I se a flyeynge boke of twenty cubytes longe, and ten cubytes brode. Then sayde he vnto me: this is the curse that goeth forth ouer the hole earthe: for all theues shall be iudged after this boke, and all sweters shall be iudged accordynge to the same. I will bringe it forthe (sayethe the Lorde of Hoostes) so that it shall come to the house of the theefe, and to the house of him that falsely sweereth by my name: and shall remayne in his house and consume it, with the tymbre and stones therof.

Then the aungel that talked with me, went forth, and sayd vnto me: lyfte vp thyne eyes and se, what this is that goeth forth. And I sayd, what is it? He answered: this is a measure goynge oute. He sayde moreouer: Euen thus are they (that owe) vpon the hole erth) to loke vpon. And beholde, there was lyfte vp a talent of leade: and lo, a woman sat in the myddest of the measure. And he sayde this is wyckednesse. So he caste her in to the myddest of the measure, and threwe the lompe of lead vp in to an hole.

Then lyfte I vp myne eyes, and loked, and beholde there came out two women, and the wynde was in their wynges (for they hadde wynges lyke the winges of a storke) and they lyfte vp the measure betwixte the erth and the heauen.

Then spake I to the aungell that talked with me: whyther wyll these beare the measure? And he sayd vnto me: in to the lande of Synear, to buylde them an house, whiche when it is prepared, the measure shall be set there in his place.

¶ By the foure charettes, he describeth the prosperyte of the foure kyngdomes.

CAPI. VI.

MOreouer I turned me, lyfteyng vp myne eyes and loked: and beholde there came foure charettes out from betwixt two hylles, whiche hylles were of brasse: In the fyrste charet were reddy horse, in the seconde charet were blacke horse, in the thyrde charet were whyte horse, in the fourth charet were horses of dyuers colours, and stronge. Then spake I, and sayd vnto the aungell that talked with me: O Lorde, what are these? The aungell aunswered and sayd vnto me: These are the foure wyndes of the heauen, whyche be come forthe to stande before the ruler of all the erth.

That with the blacke horse went in to the lande of the North, and the whyte followed them, and the speckled horses went forth towarde the South. These horses were verye stronge, and went oute, and sought to go and take their iourney ouer the hole erth. And he sayd: get you hence, and go thorowe the worlde. So they went thorowe oute the worlde. Then cryed he vpon me, and spake vnto me, saying: beholde: these that go toward the North, shall fyll my wrath in the North countrey.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Take of the prysoners that are come from Babylon: namely Heldai, Tobiah, and Iedaia: and come thou the same daye, and go in to the house of Iosiah the son of Sophony. The take gold and syluer, and make crownes therof, and set them vpon the heed of Iesus the son of Iosedech the hye preest and spake vnto him: thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: Beholde the man whose name is the braunche, and he that shal spring vp after him, shal buylde vp the temple of the Lorde: yea euē he shal buylde the temple of the Lorde. He shal beare the glorye, he shall sit vpon the Lordes trone, and haue the dominacion.

A preest shal be also vpon his trone, and a peaceable counsell shall be betwixte them both. And the crownes shall be in the temple of the Lorde, for a remembraunce vnto Helem, Tobiah, Iedaia, and Hen the sonne of Sophony. And such as be farre of, shall come and buylde the temple of the Lorde, that ye maye knowe how that the Lorde of hoostes hath sent me vnto you. And this shall come to passe, yf ye wyl hearken diligently vnto the voyce of the Lorde your God.

¶ The exhortation of exhortynge without mercye. The helpynge of thaduyse, and the obstinacye of the people.

CAPL. VII.

1 IT happened also in the fourthe yeare of kyng Darius, that the worde of the Lorde came vnto Zacharye, in the fourth daye of the nynethe moneth, whiche is called Caseu, what time as Sarasar and Regemelech and the men that were wt them sent vnto Bethel for to praye before the Lorde: and that they shoulde saye vnto the Priestes whiche were in the house of the Lorde of hoostes, and to the Prophetes, shoulde I wepe in the fyfth moneth, and abstayne as I haue done nowe certayne yeres?

4.Kin.25.a

B Then came the worde of the Lorde of hoostes vnto me sayinge: Speake vnto all the people of the lande, and to the priestes, and saye, when ye fasted and mourned in the fyue and seuenth moneth (nowe this .lxx. yeare and ten yeres) dyd ye fast vnto me? When ye ate also and dronke, dyd ye not eate and drynke for your owne selues? Are not these the wordes whiche the Lorde spake by the Prophetes afore tyme, when Jerusalem was inhabited and welthye, she and the cytyes rounde about her: when there dwelte men, both towarde the South, and in the playne countrey.

Jerem.31.a

C And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Zacharye, sayinge: Thus sayethe the Lorde of hoostes: Execute true iudgement, shewe mercy and louynge kyndenesse, euerye man to his brother. Do the wydowe, the fatherlesse, the straunger, and poore no wronge: and let no man ymagyn euyll agaynst his brother in his herte.

Zachar.vii.a Exod.xxii.d

Neuertheles, they wolde not take hede, but couered theyr backes, and stopped theyr eares, that they shoulde not heare: yea, they made theyr hertes as an Adamante stone, lest they shoulde heare the lawe and wordes, whiche the Lorde of hoostes sent in his holye spirite by the Prophetes afore tyme.

d Prou.21.d

D Wherfore the Lorde of hoostes was verye wrothe at them. And thus is it come to passe that lyke as he spake, and they wolde not heare: euen so they cryed, and I wolde not heare (sayethe the Lorde of hoostes) but skattered them among all Gentyles, whom they knewe not. Thus the lande was made so desolate, that there trauayled no man nor came neither to nor fro, for that pleasaunt lande was vtterly layde waste.

Jerem.xlv.b

¶ Of the returne of the people vnto Jerusalem, and of the mercy of God towarde them. Of good workes. The callynge of the Gentyles.

CAPL. VIII.

2 SO the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thus sayethe the Lorde of hoostes: I was in a gelousye ouer Syon, yea I haue ben verye gelous ouer her in a greate displeasure, thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: I wyll returne me agayne vnto Syon, and wyll dwell in the myddest of Jerusalem: so that Jerusalem shal be called a faythful and true cytye, the hyll of the Lorde of hoostes, yea an holy hyll. Ezech.43

Thus sayethe the Lorde of hoostes: There shall yet olde men and women dwell agayne in the stretes of Jerusalem: yea and suche as goo with staues in theyr handes for very age. The stretes of the cytye also shall be full of younge boyes and damoselles playinge vpon the stretes.

B Thus sayethe the Lorde of hoostes: yf the residue of this people thynche it to be impossible in theyr dayes, shoulde it therfore be vnpossible in my syghte, sayethe the Lorde of hoostes? Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: Beholde, I wyl deliuer my people from the lande of the Easte and Weste, and wyll bringe them agayne, that they maye dwelle at Jerusalem. They shall be my people, and I wyll be theyr God in truthe and righteousnesse. Jerem.xxxi.a Esay.xi.a

Thus sayethe the Lorde of hoostes: lette your handes be stronge, ye that nowe heare these wordes by the mouthe of the prophetes whiche be in these dayes, that the foundacyon is layde vpon the Lorde of hoostes house, that the temple maye be buylded. For why? before these dayes, neyther men ne catell coulde wynne any thynge, neither myght anye man come in and oute in rest, for trouble: but I let euerye man goo agaynst his neyghbour. Agge.i.b

Neuertheles, I wyll now intreate the residue of this people no more as afore tyme, sayethe the Lorde of hoostes, but they shall be a seede of peace. The vyneyarde shall gyue her fruite, the grounde shall gyue her increase, and the heauens shall gyue theyr dewe: and I shall cause the remnaunte of this people to haue all these in possession. And it shall come to passe, that lyke as ye were a curse amonge the Heathe (O ye house of Juda and ye house of Israel) euen so wyll I deliuer you, that ye shall be a blessyng: feare not, but let your handes be stronge.

For thus sayethe the Lorde of hoostes: lyke as I bethought to punysshe you, what tyme as your fathers prouoked me vnto wrath, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes, and spared not. Euen so am I determyned now in these dayes, for to do wel vnto the house of Juda and Jerusalem, therfore feare ye not. Nowe the thinges that ye shall do, are these: Speake euery man the truth vnto his neyghbour, execute iudgement truelye, and peaceablye within your gates, none of you ymagyn euyll in his herte against his neyghbour, and loue no false othes: for all these are the thynges that I hate, sayethe the Lorde. C Ephe.iiii.b Zachar.viii.b

And the worde of the Lorde of hoostes came vnto me, sayinge: thus sayth the Lord of hoostes: The fast of the fourth moneth, the fast of the fyfth, the fast of the seuenth, and the fast of the tenth, shall be ioye and gladnesse, and prosperous dayes vnto the house of Iuda: Onely, loue the truth and peace.

D Thus sayth the Lord of hoostes: There shall yet come people, and the inhabiters of many cytyes: and they that dwell in one cyte shall go to an other, sayinge: Go, let vs go, & praye before the Lorde, let vs seke the Lorde of hoostes, I will go with you: yea many people and mighty Nations shall come and seke the Lord of hoostes at Ierusalem, and to praye before the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: In that tyme shall ten men (owte of all maner of languages of the Gentyles) take and kewe by the brymme of his garment, & saye: we will go with you, for we haue herd, that God is amonge you.

¶ The conuersion of the Gentyles. The sorowe of Chyrste spronge on an Asse.

CAPI. IX.

S The worde of the Lorde shall be verye-fyed at Hadrach, and Damascus shall be his offringe: for the eyes of all men & of the tribes of Israel shall loke vp vnto the Lorde. The borders of Hemath shal be ioyned thereby, Tyrus also and Sidon, for they are very wyse.

Tyrus shall make her selfe stronge, heape vp syluer as the sande, and golde as the claye of the stretes. Beholde the Lorde shall take her in, & haue her in possession: he shal smyte downe her power in to the se, and she shall be consumed with fyre. Thus shall Asralon se and be afrayde. Gaza shal be very sory, so shall Accaron also, because her hope is come to confusion. For the kinge of Gaza shall perishe, & at Asralon shall no man dwell.

B Straungers shall dwell at Asdod, and so for the pryde of ỹ philistines, I shall rote it out. Their blouds wyl I take owap frō their mouth and their abhominacions from amōges their teeth. Thus they shall be lefte for our God, yea they shal be as a prince I Iuda, & Accaron like as Iebuse. And so wyll I compasse my house round about with my men of warre goynge to and fro: that no oppressour come vpon them any more. For that haue I sene nowe with myne eyes.

C Reioyce thou greatlye, O doughter Sion be glade. O doughter Ierusalem. For lo, thy kinge commeth vnto the, euen the righteous and Sauyoure: Lowly and symple is he, he rydeth vpon an asse, and vpon the foole of an asse. I wyll rote out the charettes from Ephraim and the horse from Ierusalem, the battel bowes shall be destroyed. He shall gyue ỹ doctrine of peace vnto the heythen, and his dominyon shall be frome the one se to the other, and frome the flouddes to the endes of ỹ worlde.

Thou also thorowe the bloude of thy coue naunt shalt let thy prysoners out of the pitte wherin is no water. Turne you nowe to the stronge holde, ye that be in prysō, and longe soye to be delyuered: And this doye I pronoūce the warne, that I wyll restore the double vnto you. For Iuda haue I bent out as a bowe for me, and Ephraim haue I fylled. Thy sonnes (O Sion) wyl I rayse vp amonge ỹ Gretians, and make the as a gorgeous sworde: the Lorde also shal be seue ouer them, and his dartes shall go forthe as the lightenynge. The Lorde God shall blowe the trompette, and shall come forthe as a whirle wynde of the south.

D Esaie. xl. d & xlix. g & lxvi. d

The Lorde of hoostes shal defende them, they shall consume and deuoure, and subdue them with sprage stones. They shall swelte and rage, as it were thorowe wyne. They shal be fylled lyke the basons, and as the hornes of all the aulter.

The Lorde their God shall deliuer them in the daye, as the flocke of his people: for they of his Sanctuarye shall be set vp as his iewels. O howe prosperous and goodly a thinge shall that be! The corne shall make the yonge men chearefull, & the wine make the maydens.

¶ The people is moued to requyre the destroyer of rayne of the Lorde. The Lorde promyseth to bryng and multiplye the house of Iuda.

CAPI. X.

P Aske the Lorde rayne in the latter season. So shall the Lorde make cloudes, and geue you rayne ynough for all the corne of the felde: for Idoles & the southsayers of Idolis.

The false prophetes & lyers, and tell but vayne dreames: the comforte that they geue, is no thinge worth. Therefore go they astraye like a flocke of sheepe, & are troubled, because they haue no shepherde.

My wrathfull displeasure is moued at the shepherdes, and I wyll visyte the goates. For the Lorde of hoostes wyll graciously visite his flocke, the house of Iuda, and make them as a goodly horse here in the battayle. Owte of Iuda shall come the hetmet, the nayle, the bataylbowe, and all the princes together.

Ezech. xxxiv. a

Ezech. xxxix. b Gene. xlix. b

They shall be as the gyauntes, which in the battayle trede downe the myre vpon the stretes. They shall fyght, for the Lorde shall be with them, so that the horsmen shall be confounded.

I will comfort the house of Iuda, and yet saue the house of Ioseph. I will turne the also, for I pytye them: and they shall be like as they were, when I had not cast them of. For I the Lord am their God, and wyl heare them.

Ephraim shall be as a gyaunte, and their herte shall be cheareful as thorowe wyne: yea their children shall se it, and be glade, & reioyce their hert shall reioyce in the Lorde. I wyll blow for them and gather them together, for D I wyll redeme them. They shall increase, as they increased afore. I will sowe them amõg the people, that they maye thinke vpon me in farre countreyes: they shal lyue with their children, and turne agayne. I wyll bryng the agayne also from the lande of Egypte, and gather them out of Assiria. I wyl take them into the lande of Galaad and to Libanus y they shall want nothynge. He shall go vpon the see of trouble, and smyte the waues: so that all the deepe floudes shal be dryed vp. The Matth.11 proude boastinge of Assur shall be cast downe

Zach.10. and the scepter of Egypt shal be take away.
I wyll comforte them in the Lorde, that they maye walke in his name, sayth the Lorde.

¶ The destruction of the temple. The care of the faythfull is compared to Libanus, by the father.
Is grieuous vprore against Jerusalem and Juda.

CAPI. XI.

A OPen thy doores, O Libanus, that the fyre maye consume thy Cedre trees.
Howle ye Fyrre trees, for the Cedre is fallen, yea all the proude are wasted awaye: Howle O ye oke trees of Basan (for y migh-tye strong wod is cut downe. Wen may heare the shepherdes mourne, for their glory is destroyed. Wen may heare the lyons whelpes roore for the pryde of Jordane is wasted awaye.

Thus sayth the Lorde my God: Fede the shepe of the slaughter, which shall be slayne of suche that possesse the, yet they take it for no sinne, but they that sell them saye: The Lorde be thanked, I am rich: yea their owne shepherdes spare them not. Therfore will I no more spare those that dwell in the lande (sayth the Lorde) but lo, I will delyuer the people, euery man in to his neighbours hãd and in to the hande of his kinge: that they maye smyte the lande, and out of their han-des will not I delyuer them.

B I my selfe fed the slaughter shepe (a poore flocke verely) and toke vnto me two staues:
the one I called louinge mekenesse, the other I called woo, and so I kepte the shepe. Wre shepherdes destroyed I in one moneth, for I Matth.xxiii.c might not away with the, neither had they any delyte in me. Then sayde I: I wyll fede you no more, the thinge that dyeth, let it dye: and that wyll perysshe, let it perysshe, and let the remnaunte eate, euery one the fleshe of his neyghbour. I toke also my louing wekenesse and brake it, that I mygh disanull the counenaunt, which I made with al people. And so it was broken in that daye.

C Then the poore symple shepe that gaue a respecte vnto me, knewe therbye, that it was the worde of the Lorde. And I sayd vnto the Mat.xxvii.a ye thinke it good, bringe hyther my payre:
ye no, then leaue. So they waied downe xxx syluer pens, the value that I was pryced at.
And the Lorde sayd vnto me: cast it y the pot fer (a goodly pryce for me to be valued at of them) and I toke the xxx syluer pens, and cast them to the potter in the house of the Lorde.
D Then brake I my other staffe also (namelye woo) that I mygh sowse the brotherhede be-twyxte Juda and Israel. And the Lorde sayd vnto me: Take to the also the staffe of a fo-lysh shepeherde: for lo, I wyl rayse vp a shep herde in the lande, whiche shall not seke after the thynges that be losse, ne care for suche as go astraye: he shal not heale y wounded, ne shal not norysh the thing that is hole: but he shall eate the flesh of suche as be fat, & teare their clawes in peces.

O Idolles shepherde, that leaueth the Zacha.xi.
flocke. The swerde shall come vpon his arme and vpon his eyghte eye. His arme shall be cleane dryed vp, & his eyghte eye shall be for blynded.

¶ Of the destruction and buylduge agayne of Jerusalem.

CAPI. XII

THe burden whiche the Lorde hath layed for Israel. Thus sayth y Lorde, which spred the heuens abrode, layde the foundacion of the earthe, and gyueth man the breath of lyfe: Beholde, I wil make Jerusalem a cuppe of surfet, vnto all the people that are round about her: Yea Ju da shall lyke also shall be in the siege agaynst Jerusalem. At the same tyme wyll I make Je rusalem an heuy stone for all people, so that all suche as lyft it vp, shal be torne and rent, and all y people of the earth shal be gathered togither agaynste it.

In that daye, sayth the Lorde, I will make D all horses adaffled, and those that ryde vpon them, to be out of their wyttes. I wyll open mine eyes vpon the house of Juda, and smite all the horses of the people with blyndnesse.
And the princes of Juda shal say in their hartes: The inhabiters of Jerusalem shall gyue me consolacion in the Lorde of hostes their God. In that tyme wyll I make the princes of Juda like an hote burning ouē with wod, and lyke a cresset of fyre amonge the strawe, so y they shal consume all the people rounde about them, both vpon the right hande and the left. Jerusalem also shall be inhabited a-gayne namely, in the same place where Jeru salem standeth.

The Lorde shall preserue the tentes of Ju E da lyke as afore tyme: so that the glorye of the house of David and the glorye of the ry-chens of Jerusalem, shall be but lyttle regarded, in comparison of the glory of Juda. In y daye shall the Lorde defende the citizens of Jerusalem: so that the weakest shal amõges them shal be as David: and the house of Da uid shall be lyke as Gods house, and as the angel of the Lorde before them.

At the same tyme wyll I go about to de-stroye all suche people as come agaynste Jeru salem. Moreouer, vpon the house of David and vpon the citizens of Jerusalem, wyll I poure

poure out the spirite of grace and prayer, so that they shall loke vpon me, whome they have pearsed: and they shall be wepe him, as men mourne for their onely begotten sonne: yea and be sory for him, as men are sory for their first childe.

D Then shall there be a greate mournynge at Jerusalem, lyke as the lamentacion at Hadrimmon in the felde of Maggadon. And the lande shal bewayle euery kinred by them selues: The kynred of the house of David them selues alone, and their wiues by them selues. The kinred of the house of Nathan them selues alone, and their wiues by them selues: The kinred of the house of Leui them selues alone and their wyues by them selues: The kynred of the house of Semei them selues alone, and their wyues by them selues: In like maner, all the other generacions, euery one by them selues alone, & their wyues by them selues.

¶ Of the well of grace and truthe Christe. Of the cleane ryddaunce of Idolatrye, and of the false prophetes.

CAPI. XIII.

I N that tyme shall the house of Dauid & the citezens of Jerusalē have an open well to wash of sinne and vnclennes. And then (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) I will destroye the names of Idolles oute of the lande: so that they shall no more be put in remembraunce.

As for the false prophetes also and the vncleane spirite, I shall take them out of the lande: so that yf any of them prophecye any more, his owne father and mother that begat him, shall saye vnto him: Thou shalte dye, for thou speakest lyes vnder the name of the Lord, yea his owne father and mother that begat him, shall wounde him, when he prophecyeth.

And the shall those prophetes be confounded euery one of his vision when he prophecyeth neither shall they were sackclothes any more, to deceyue men withal. But he shal be fayne to saye: I am no prophete: I am an husbande man, for so am I taught by Adam fro my youth vp.

And yf it be sayde vnto him: Howe came these woundes then in thine hādes? He that answere: Thus am I wounded in the house of myne owne frendes.

L Awake, O thou sword, vpon my shepherde, and vpon the pleate of my people, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: Smyte the shepherde, & the shepe shall be scattered abrode, and so will I turne myne hande to the lytle ones. And it shall come to passe (sayeth the Lorde) that in all the lande two partes shall be cutte out, but the thirde parte shall remayne therin.

And the same thirde parte will I bringe thorow the fyre, and will clense them as the siluer is clensed, & trye them like as golde is tryed. Then shall they call vpon my name and I will heare them: I will say: It is my people. And they shall say: Lorde my God.

¶ The walkynge of the churche vnder the figure of Jerusalem. Of the kyngdome of the Lorde.

CAPI. XIIII.

B Holde, the daye of the Lorde cōmeth, that thou shalte be spoyled and robbed for I gather together all the heithen, to fyght agaynste Jerusalem: so that the cytye shall be won, the houses spoyled, and the women defyled. The halfe of the cytye shall go awaye into captyuytye, and the residue of the people shall not be caryed out of the cytye. After that shall the Lorde go forthe to fyghte agaynste those heithen, as men vse to fyghte in the day of battayle. Then shal his fete stād vpon the mounte Oliuete, that lyeth vpon the east syde of Jerusalem. And the mount Oliuete shall cleaue in two, eastwarde, & westwarde, so that there shall be a greate valley: and the halfe mounte shall remoue towarde the north, and the other towarde the south. And ye shal flee vnto the valley of my hilles for the valley of the hilles shall reche vnto Azal. Yea ye shal flye, like as ye fled for the earth quake in the dayes of Osiah kinge of Juda. And the Lorde my God shall come, and all sayntes with him. In that daye shall it not be lyght, but colde and frosty. This shall be that specyall day, which is knowne vnto the Lorde: neither daye ne nyght, but about the euenyng tyme it shal be lyght. In that tyme shall these waters of lyfe runne oute fro me Jerusalem: the halfe parte of them towarde the east see, and the other halfe towarde the vttermost see, and shall continue both sommer and winter. And the Lorde him selfe shall be kinge ouer al the earth.

At that tyme shall there be one Lorde and his name shall be but one. Men shall go about the hole earth, as vpon a felde: from Geba to Remmon, & from the south to Jerusalem. She shall be set vp, and inhabited in her place: from Ben Jamin vnto the place of the fyrste porte, and vnto the corner porte: and from the tower of Hananeel, vnto the kinges wine pressis. Then shall men dwell, and there shall be no more cursing, but Jerusalem shall be safely inhabyted. This shall be the plage, wherwith the Lorde will smyte al people, that haue fought agaynste Jerusalem: Namely, their flesh shal consume awaye, though they stande vpon their fete: their eyes shal be consume in their holes, and their tunge shall consume in their mouth.

In that daye shal the Lorde make a great frication amonges them, so that one shal take an other by the hande, & laye his handes vpon the handes of his neyghboure. Juda shall fyght also agaynste Jerusalem, and the goodes of all heithen shall be gathered together rounde about: golde and siluer and a very greate multytude of clothes. And so shall this plage go ouer horses, mules, camels, asses, and all the beastes that shall be in the house, lyke as yonder plage was. Euery one that remayneth then of all ỹ people, wch the came agaynst Jerusalem, shall go vp eatly, to worshyp the kinge (euen the Lorde of hostes) and to kepe the feast of tabernacles. And loke what generacion vpon earth goeth not vp to Jerusalem, for to worshyppe the kinge (euen the Lorde of hostes) vpon the same shall come no rayne. If the kynred of Egypt go not vp, and come not, it shall rayne vpon the neither.

D This shall be the plage wherwith ỹ Lord wyll smyte all heithen, that come not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles: yea this shall be the synne plage of Egipt and the synne plage of all people, that go not vp to kepe ỹ feaste of tabernacles.

At that tyme shal the rydynge gere of the horses be holy vnto the Lorde, and the kettels in the Lordes house shall be lyke ỹ basens before the aulter. Yea all the kettels in Jerusalem and Juda shall be holy vnto the Lord of hostes: and all they that haye offrynges, shall come take of theym, and dighte theym therin. And at that tyme there shal be nó mo Chanaanites in ỹ house of the Lord.

¶ The ende of the prophecy of Zachary.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE MALACHI.

¶ He complayne agaynst Israel and her preistes.

CAPI. I.

THe heuy burthen, which ỹ Lord shewed agaynst Israel by Malechy. I haue loued you (saith the Lorde) yet ye saye: wherin hast thou loued vs? Was not Esau Jacobs brother, (sayeth the Lorde?) yet haue I loued Jacob and hated Esau: yea I haue made his hilles waste, and his herytage a wildernes for dragons. And though Edom sayde wel, we are destroyed, we wyl go buylde vp agayne the places that be wasted: yet (saith the Lord of hostes) what they buylde, that brake I down: so that it was called a cursed lande, and a people, whom the Lorde hath ouer bene angrye withall. I

Your eyes haue sene it, and ye youre selues must confesse, that the Lorde hath honoured the land of Israel to greate honoure. Should not a sonne honoure his father, ỹ a seruaunt his master? If I be nowe a father, where is myne honoure? If I be the Lord, what am I feared? (sayth the Lorde of hostes. II

Now to you preistes, that dispise my name. And ye saye: wherin haue we dispysed thy name? In this, ỹ ye offre vncleane bred vpon myne aulter. And ye wyl saye: wherin haue we offred any vncleane thinge vnto the? In this that ye saye: the aulter of the Lorde is not to be regarded. If ye offre the blynde, is not that euyll? And if ye offre the lame and seche, is not that euyll? Yea offre it vnto thy prynce, shall he be content with the, or accepte thy persone, sayth the Lorde of hostes?

And nowe make youre prayer before God that he maye haue mercye vpon vs: for such thinges haue ye done. Shall he regarde youre persones, thinke ye, (sayth the Lorde of hostes)? Yea what is he amonge you, that wyll be so mercyfull as to shut the doore, or to kindle the fyre vpon myne aulter for nought? I haue no pleasure in you, sayth the Lorde of hostes, nor lyke the meate offringe, I wyll not accepte it at youre handes. For from the vprysinge vp of the sonne vnto the goinge downe of ỹ same, my name is greate amonge the Gentyles: yea in euerye place shall there sacrifyce be done, and a cleane meate offringe offred vp vnto my name: for my name is greate among the Heithen, sayth the Lorde of hostes. But ye haue vnhalowed it, in that ye saye, the aulter of the Lord is not to be regarded, and the thinge that is set thereupon, not worthye to be eaten. III IV

Now say ye: It is but labour and trouble

and

and thus haue ye thought skorne at it (saith the Lorde of hoostes) ye haue robbery, yea the lame and the sycke. Ye haue brought me in a meate offring. Shulde I accept it of your hand (saith the Lorde)? Cursed be the deceaueare, which hath in his flocke one that is male, & when he maketh a vowe, offereth a sycke vnto the Lorde. For I am a greate kynge (saith the Lorde of hoostes) & my name is feare full amonge the heithen.

¶ The reasonynges against the spoyled lyinge lyuinges of the people,

CAPI. II.

A nd nowe (O ye prestes) this commaundement concerneth you: yf ye will not heare it, ne regarde it, to geue the glorye vnto my name, (saith the Lorde of hoostes) I will sende a curse vpon you, & will curse your blessynges: yea curse them will I yf ye be not take hede. Beholde, I shall reprue your seede, and cast dounge in your faces: euen the dounge of your solemne feastes: and it shall cleue fast vpon you. And ye shall knowe that I haue sent this commaundement vnto you: that my couenaunt (which I made with Leui, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes.

B I made a couenaunde of lyfe and peace vnto him: this I gaue him, that he myght feare me in a me of mekenes & he did feare me, and bare my name in reuerence. The lawe of truthe was in his mouth, and there was no wickednes found in his lippes. He walked with me in peace and equyte, and dyd shewe many one ware from their synnes. For the prestes lippes shulde be full knowinge, that men maye seke the lawe at his mouth, for he is a messenger of the Lorde of hoostes. But as for you, ye are gone cleane out of the waye, and haue caused the multitude to be offended at the lawe: ye haue broken the couenaunt of Leui (sayeth the Lorde of hoostes). Therfore will I also make you to be despysed, and to be of no reputacion amonge all the people: because ye haue not kept my wayes, but been partiall in the lawe.

C Haue we not all one father? Hathe not one God made vs? why doth euerye one of vs then beleyue his owne brother, & so breake the couenaunt of oure fathers? Loue hath Iuda offended: yea & abhominacion is done in Israel and in Ierusalem, for Iuda hath defyled the holynesse of the Lorde, which he loued, & hath kept the doughter of a straunge God. But the Lorde shall destroye the man that doth this (yea both the master and the scholer) out of the tabernacle of Iacob, with him that offereth vp meate offerynge vnto the Lorde of hoostes.

Eftsones haue ye brought it to this poynte against & the syde of the Lorde to couerde with teares wepynge and mournynge: in so that I will no more regarde the meate offryng, nether will I receyue or accepte any thinge at your handes. And yet ye saye: wherfore? Euen because that where as the Lorde made a co- D uenaunt betwyxte the & the wyfe of thy youth thou hast beleued her: yet is she thyne owne companyon and maryed wyfe.

Did not the one, and yet had he an excellent spirite. What byd then the one? The seede of the godly procured of God. Therfore take heed to your spirite, and let no man beleue the wyfe of his youthe. If thou hatest her put her awaye (sayeth the Lorde God of Israel) and cast her a clothing for the iniurye (sayeth the Lorde of hoostes). Take heed then to your spirite, and beleue not. Ye greeue the Lorde with your wordes, and yet ye saye: wherewith haue we greued him? In that that ye saye: All that do euell are good in the sight of God, and haue pleasse hym. Or elles where is the God that punysheth?

¶ Of the messenger of the Lorde, Iohn Baptyste. Of the daye of the Lorde, and of Christ.

CAPI. III.

B Beholde, I will sende my messenger, whi- E che shall prepare the waye before me: Matth.xi.b and the Lorde whome ye seeke haue, Marke.i.a shall sodenly come to his temple, yea euen the Luke.vii.c messenger of the couenaunte whome ye lyste Ioh.i.a after.

Beholde, he commeth, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes. But who maye abyde the daye of his comynge? Who shal be able to endure whe he appeareth? For he is like a goldfyneres fyre, & like washers sope. He shall sit downe to fyre and to clense the syluer, he shall purge the children of Leui, and purify them lyke as gold and syluer: that they may bringe vnto the Lorde in righteousnes. Then shall the offrynge of Iu- F da and Ierusalem be acceptable vnto the Lorde lyke as in the beginninge and in the yeres afore tyme.

I will come and punyshe you, and I my self will be a swifte witnesse against the witches against the aduoutrers, against false swe- arers you and against them, that wrongfully kepe backe the hyrelynges money which her the widdowes and the fatherlesse, & oppresse the straunger, and feare not me, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes. For I am the Lorde that chaunge Deut.xxxii. not, & ye (O children of Iacob) will not leaue iiii.Reg.xvii. of: ye are gone away fro myne ordynaunces & fro the tymes of your forefathers haue ye not kept them.

Turne you vnto me, and I will turne me vnto you, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes, ye G saye: Wherin shall we turne? Shulde a mi- Iaba.i.b nister falshed and deceyte with God as ye do? falshed and deceyte with me?

Yet ye saye wherin vse we deceyte with you? In tythes and heaue offrynges. Therfore are Leui.xxvii.b ye cursed with penury, because ye defraude Deut.xiii. me, all the londe of you.

Bryng entreye tithe into my house, that there maye be meate in myne house: & proue me wherwith (sayeth the Lorde of hoostes) yf I wyll not apen the wyndowes of heauen vn to you, and poure you oute a blessinge wyth plenteousnesse. Yea I shall reprouse the consu mer for your sakes, so ꝓ he shal not cate vp ꝓ fruite of your ground, neyther shall the vyn yarde be barren in the felde, sayth the Lorde of hostes: And so moche that all people shal say that ye be blessed, for ye shall be a pleasaunt lande, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

Ye speake harde wordes agaynst me, sayth the Lorde. And yet ye say: What haue we spo ken agaynst the? Ye haue sayde

P It is but lost labour, to serue God: What profyte haue we for kepinge his commaundē mentes, and for walkinge humbly before the Lorde of hostes? Therfore maye we say, that the proude are happy, and that they wycked braue wyth vngodlynesse, are set vp: for they tempte God, and yet escape.

Then they that feare God, say thus one to an other: the Lorde considereth and heareth it. Yea it is before him a memoryal boke wri ten for suche as feare the Lorde, and remem bre his name. And in ꝓ day that I wyl make (sayth the Lord of hostes) they shal be myne owne possession: and I wyll sauoure them, lyke as a man sauoureth his owne son, that doth him seruice. Turne you therfore, and cō syder what difference is betwyxte the righ teous & vngodly: betwyxt him that serueth God and him that serueth him not.

Malachias

For marche, for beholde the day commeth that shall burne as an ouē and all the proude, yea and all suche as do wickednesse, shall be stubble: and the daye that is for to come, shall burne them vp (sayth the Lorde of hostes) so that it shall leaue them neyther rote ne braunche.

But vnto you that feare my name, shall that Sonne of ryghteousnesse arise, & healthe shall be vnder his wynges: ye shall go forth & multyply as the fat calues. Ye shal treade downe the vngodlye: for they shall be lyke the asshes vnder the soles of your fete, in the daye that I shall make, sayth the Lorde of hostes. Remembre the lawe of Moyses my seruaunte whiche I commytted vn to him in Oreb for all Israel, with the statutes and or dy naunces. Beholde I wyll sende you Elyas the Prophete, before the commynge of the day of ꝓ great & fearful Lorde. He shall turne the hartes of the fathers to their children and the hertes of the children to their fa thers, that I come not & smyte the earth with cur singe ¶ Josias holdeth passouer. After his death is Jechonias his sonne made kynge in his stede: whom the kynge of Egypte putteth oute, and setteth in his brother Joachim. Jerusalem is destroyed, and Jechonias taken.

CAPI. I.

AND Josias helde the feaste of Easter in Jerusalē vnto ꝓ Lorde and slewe the passouer the fourtenth daye of ꝓ fyrst moneth. He set the priestes also in ordre (according to their dayly courses) beinge arayed in long garmentes in the temple of the Lord. And he spake vnto the Leuites the holy ministers of Israel, that they shulde hallowe them selues vnto the Lorde, to set the holy arcke of the Lord in the house that kinge Salomon the sonne of David had buylded and sayde: Ye shall no more beare the arcke vpon your shoulders. Now serue your Lorde, and take the charge of his people of Israell, after your dyllages and your tribes: according as kynge David the kynge of Israell hath ordeyned, and according as Salomon his son hath honourably prepared: yea loke that ye all doo seruice in the temple, according to the ordeyning and distribution of the principall men, whiche are appoynted out of the tribes, to wo seruice for the children of Israel. Kyll the passouer, and prepare offrings for your brethren, and do according to ꝓ commaundement of the Lord, which he gaue vnto Moses. And vnto the people that was found, Josias gaue .xxx. thousand shepe, lambes, kydes and gotes, and fyue thousand oxē. These the kynge (of his princely liberalitie) gaue vnto the people, according as he had promised: and to the priestes for ꝓ passouer he gaue two thousande shepe, and an hundred oxen. Moreouer Jechonias and Semeias, and Nathanael brethren, and Salabias, Jehiel, and Jozabad gaue therym to the passouer, fyue thousande shepe, and fyue hundred bullockes.

And when these thinges were brought to passe, the priestes and the Leuites stode goodly in their ordre, and had the vnleuened breed after wont the tribes. And after the ordeyning of the principall men in the tribes, they offered vnto the Lorde in the sight of the people, according as it is written in the boke of Moses, and so they roosted the Easter lambe, as according was. So for the thankeoffrings and the other, they bayled them in kettels and pottes, and set them before the people with good will, and afterwarde before them selues, and the priestes. For the priestes offred the fatte, vntyll the tyme was expyred, but the Leuites prepared for them selues and for their brethren the children of Aaron. The singers also the children of Asaph, stode in their order, according as David had limited. So did Asaph, Zacharye and Jouthum, whiche were appointed by the kinge. Moreouer the porters and wai keepers stode by the wais and that diligently, so that none went out of his dooing and seruice for their brethē (the Leuites) prepared for them. Thus were all thinges performed, that belonged to the offringe of the Lorde. In that day they held the passouer, and offred thankeoffringes beside the sacrifice of the Lord, according to the commaundement of kyng Josias.

So the children of Israel which were then present, held an honourable passouer, and ꝓ feast of vnsowre bread seuē dayes long. Yea such a passouer was not kept in Israel from the time of the Prophet Samuel. And all the kynges of Israel held not such an Easter as this which kyng Josias helde, and the priestes, the Leuites, the Jewes and all Israell, of all the that were at Jerusalem. And in the .xviij. yere of the raigne of Josias was this passouer kept. And with a perfect hert did kyng Josias order all his workes before the Lord, and the thinges that were wrytten of him in tymes past, concerninge those that sinned and were vngodly against the Lorde before all people, and that sought not the worde of the Lorde vpon Israel.

After all these actes of kynge Josias, Pharao the king of Egypt went vp and came toward Carcamis by Euphrates, & Josias went to mete him. Then sent the kyng of Egypt vnto Josias, saying: what haue I to do with the, O king of Juda? I am not sent of the Lorde to fight against the, for my warre is vpō Euphrates, go than thy waye home again in al the haste. And Josias would not turne again vpon his charet, but vndertoke to fyght against him, and harkened not vnto the worde of the Prophete, whiche he tolde him oute of the mouth of God, but prepared a battayle against him in the felde of Mageddo. And the princes preased to kyng Josias. Then sayd the kyng vnto his seruauntes: Carye me awaye out of the battayle, for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruauntes tooke him away out of the front of the battayle. And he sat vpon the seconde charet, came to Jerusalē, died, and was buried in his fathers sepulcre. And in all Jury they mourned for Josias, yea the rulers also with their wyues made lamentacion for him vnto this daye. And this was done euer more in Israel.

These thinges are wrytten in the boke of the storyes of the kynges of Juda, namely all the actes and workes of kynge Josias, his power royall and manlyne, his vnderstandynge in the lawe of God, and what he did, yea thinges whiche are not wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israell and Juda. And the people toke Jechonias the sonne of Josias, and made him kynge in stede of Josias his father, when he was xxiij. yere olde.

Aaa And

ſhuld be raigned ouer Iſrael .iij. monethes. And the kyng of Egypt put him downe, & he ſholde not raigne in Ieruſalem, and layed vp a taxe of the people: namely an hundred talentes of ſyluer and, one talent of golde. The kynge of Egypt alſo made Joachim his brother kynge of Juda and Ieruſalem. Als for them of ſ kynges counſell with the kinge him ſelfe and Zacheries his brother, he toke them & caried them away priſoners in to Egypt. Fifte and twenty yere olde was Joachim, when he was made kyng in the lande of Juda and Ieruſalem, & he did euil before the Lorde. After this Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon came vp, bounde him with bandes of yron, & caried him vnto Babylon. Nabuchodonoſor alſo toke all the veſſels that were halowed in the temple of the Lord, and all the iewels, & caryed them vnto Babylon, and broughte them in to his owne temple at Babylon. Of his vnclennelie and vngodlynelie it is written in the boke of the actes of the kynges. And Joachim his ſon raigned in his ſtede. He was made kyng being xviij. yere old, and raigned but thre monethes and .x. dayes at Ieruſalem, and did euil before the Lorde. Vpo after a yere Nabuchodonoſor ſent and cauſed him be broughte vnto Babylo with the holy veſſels of the Lorde, and made Sedechias his brother kynge of Juda and Ieruſalem, when he was .xxj. yere olde, and he raigned .xj. yere.

2. Reg. xxiij.

Jere. xxxvij.

And he did euil alſo in the ſight of ſ Lord, and cared not for the wordes that were ſpoke vnto him by the Prophete Jeremye, at the mouth of the Lorde. And where as he hadde made an othe vnto kyng Nabuchodonoſor, he manſwore him ſelf, and fel from him, hauing a ſtiffe necke and hert, and tranſgreſſed all the ſtatutes and ordinaunces of the Lord God of Iſrael. The rulers alſo and prieſtes of the people of the Lorde did mocke euil, & became vngodly more then the heathen, being defiled in all maner of abhominacions: yea and vnclen the holy temple at Ieruſalem. And the God of their fathers ſent his meſſengers vnto the, to turne them backe and to call them againe from their ſynnes, for he wold fayne haue ſpared them, for his holy tabernacles ſake. Neuertheleſſe they had his meſſengers in mocke, and lokt what God ſpake vnto them by his prophetes, they made but a ſkorne of it. Thus dyewes on ſo longe, til the Lorde was wroth with his people for their vngodlynelie, and til he cauſed the kynges of the Caldees to come vp, which ſlew their yong men with ſ ſworde yea euen in the compaſſe of their holy temple and ſpared no body, neyther yonge man nor olde, neyther mayden nor youngе man: but they were al deliuered in to the power of the kynges of the Caldees, and of the holy veſſels of the Lorde, and the kynges treaſoure toke they, and caryed them vnto Babylon. So ſay the houſe of the Lorde they burnt it, & made bowne the walles of Ieruſalem, ſet fyre vpo her towres, deſtroyed all her noble buyldynges, and broughte them to nought, and the people that were not ſlayne with the ſworde, they caryed vnto Babylon.

Thus became they priſoners and bondemen of the kynge of Babylon, tyll they were deliuered and rayſed for them ſelues, & when the wordes of the Lorde were fulfylled, whiche he promiſed them by the mouth of the Prophete Jeremye, and tyll the lande had her reſte: namely all the tyme that it lay waſte, hauyl it reſte and quyetneſſe. lxxij. yeres.

* Jere. xxv.

¶ Cyrus geueth leeruse to the Jewes to returne to Ieruſalem, and reſtoreth them the veſſelles of the temple. After that are there letters ſende to Artaxerxes, whiche accuſe the Jewes for buyldynge of the cytye: and ſo is the buyldynge ſtyrred of, vntyl the ſeconde yere of Darius.

CAPI. II.

NOw when kynge Cyrus raigned ouer the Perſians, and when the Lorde wolde perfourme the worde that he had promyſed by the mouth of the Prophete Jeremye: the Lorde rayſed vp the ſpirite of Cyrus the kynge of Perſians, ſo that he cauſed this wrytynge to be proclaymed throwe out his hole realme, ſaying: Thus ſayth the kyng of Perſians: the Lorde of Iſrael the hye Lorde hathe made me kynge of the lande and commaunded me to buylde him an houſe at Ieruſalem in Jurye. Yf there be anye now of your people, the Lorde be with him, and goo vp with him to Ieruſalem. And all they that dwell rounde about the place, ſhal helpe them, whether it be with golde, with ſyluer, with gyftes, with hoſſe and neceſſarye catell, and all other thynges that are broughte with a free will to the houſe of the Lorde at Ieruſalem.

A

Then the princypall men oute of the tribes and lygage of Juda and Ben Jamin rose vp, ſo did the prieſtes alſo and the Leuites (whom the Lorde had moued) to goo vp and to buylde the houſe of the Lorde at Ieruſalem. And they that were about them, helped them with all maner of golde, and ſyluer, and catell alſo, and with many ſpecial gyftes, & also dyd many one, whoſe mynde was ſtered vp thereto. * Kyng Cyrus alſo broughte forth the veſſels and ornamentes that were halowed vnto the Lorde (whiche Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon had caryed clenne from Ieruſalem, and conſecrated them to his goddes) and deliuered them to Mithridates his rendare, and by him they were deliuered to Sanabaſſar the captayne of Jurye. And this was the nombre of them: Fyue ſpoonfulles and foure hundred golden bolles, ſyluer bolles lykewiſe, nyne and twenty knyues, fyue and thirty golden ſpoonfulles and foure hundred and ten ſyluer, and a thouſande beſyde. All the veſſelles of golde and ſyluer were fyue thouſande eight hundred and .lx. Theſe were caryed with Sanabaſſar, and them that were come againe with him to Ieruſalem out of the captiuite of Babylon. Now in the tyme of Artaxerxes the kynge of Perſia, there wrote Beelemus, and Mithridates, Tabellius, Rhe-thimus, Balthemus, Semellius the scribe, and other that dwelte in Samaria and in other places vnder the dominion therof, wrote a letter vnto kynge Artaxerxes, wherin they complayned vnto the kynge of them in Jury and Jerusalem. The letter was made after this maner.

E Oure thy seruauntes, Rathimus the storye wryter, Babellius the scribe, and other iudges of the counte in Celosyria, and Phenices. Be it knowen and manifest to our Lorde the kyng, that the Jewes whiche are come vp hyther vnto vs into the rebellyous and wycked cyte, begyn to buylde it agayne, and the walles aboute it, and to set vp the temple a new. Nowe yf this cyte and the walles therof be set vp agayne, they shall not onely refuse to gyue tributes and tares, but also rebell vtterly agaynste the kyng. And for so moch as they take this in hande now about the temple, we thought it reason, to thynke no scorne of it, but to shewe it vnto our Lorde the kyng, and to certifye him therof: to thintent that yf it please the kynge, he maye cause it be soughte in the bokes of olde, and thou shalt fynde suche warning written, and shalt vnderstande that this cyty hath alway ben rebellious and disobedient, that it hath subdued kynges & cities, and that the Jewes which dwel therin, haue euer ben a rebellyous, obstinate, vnfaythful, and fighting people, for the which cause this cyty is walled. Wherfore now we certifye our Lord the kyng, that if this cyty be vnbuilded & occupied agayne, and the walles therof set vp new, thou canst haue no passage in to Celosyria, and Phenices.

D Then wrote the kynge to Rathimus the storye wryter, to Balthemus, to Babellius the scribe, and to the other officers and dwellers in Samaria and Phenices, after this maner: I haue red the epystle whiche thou sentest vnto me, and haue commaunded to make diligent searche, and haue founde that the cyte hathe euer rebelled kynges, that the same people are disobedient, and haue caused much warre, and that mygtye kynges haue raygned in Jerusalem, whiche also haue receyued tares of Syria and Phenices. Wherfore I haue commaunded those people that they shall not buylde the cyte, that they make no more in it, and that they procede no further with the buylding: for to moche as it might be the cause of warre and displeasure vnto kynges.

Some when Rathimus and Babellius the scribe, and the rulers in the londe herde this wrytynge of kynge Artaxerxes, they sent them forthe, and came in all haste to Jerusalem, with an hoste of horsemen, and many moche people of warre, and began to buylde. And in that lyke tyme began the buylding of the temple, vnto the seconde yere of kynge Darius.

CAPI. III.

KYnge Darius made a greate feast vnto his seruauntes, vnto all his coute, and to all the officers of Medea and Persia, yea to all the deputyes and rulers that were vnder him from India vnto Ethiopia, an hundred and xxvii countreys. So when they had eaten and dronken, being satisfied, and were gone home agayne. Darius the kynge went in to his chambre, layde him downe to slepe, and so awaked. A

Then the thre younge men that kepte the kynges person, and watched his bodye commoned amonge them selues, and spake one to an other: let euerye one of vs saye some thynge, and loke whose sentence is wyser and more excellent then the other, vnto him shall kynge Darius gyue great gyftes, and clothe him with purple. He shall gyue him vessels of golde to drynke in, clothes of golde and coueringes, he shall make him a costly charret, and a bridle of golde, he shal gyue him a bonet of whyte lynke, and a cheyne of golde about his necke: yea he shall be the seconde and principall next vnto kyng Darius, and that because of his wisdome, and shal be called the kinges kynsman. B

So euerye one wrote his meanynge, sealed it, and layd it vnder the kynges pyllowe, and sayd: when the kynge sleepeth, we wyll gyue him oure wrytynges, and loke whose wordes the kynge and his chefe lordes iudge to be the most wysely spoken, the same shall haue the victorye. One wrote: Wyne is a strong thyng. The seconde wrote: The kyng is stronger. The third wrote: Women haue yet more strengthe, but aboue all thynges the truth beareth awaye the victory. Now when the kynge was risen vp, they toke their wrytynges, and deliuered them vnto him, and so he red them. Then sent he forth to call all the chefe Lordes, all the deputyes and rulers of the countreyes of Medea & Persia. And when they were set downe in the counsell, the wrytynges were red before them. And he commaunded to call the young men, that they might declare their meanynges of their wrytynges by mouth. So when they were come in, the kyng spake vnto them: Syrres go and make vs to vnderstande what the strongest are that ye haue written. C

Then began the first (which spake of the strengthe of wyne) and sayd: O ye men, what a mighty thyng wyne is? it causeth all men to erre that drynke of it: it maketh the mynde and thoughts of the kynge and the fatherles all one: of the bonde man and the free: of the poore and the ryche: it turneth also all thoughtes into myrth and pleasure, so that a man remembreth neyther sorowe nor dette: it maketh euery hart riche, so that a man remembreth neyther kynge nor prince: it maketh to speake all thynges by talentes: and when men sytte at the table, and are dronken, they laye their handes faste vpon their neyghbours, and then they thynke they speake nothynge amysse. O ye men, is not wyne the strongest, that forceth vs to do thus? And when he had thus spoken, he left of and held his peace. D Plutarch. lib. 1. apud.

The seconde began to speake, (which had spoken of the strength of the kynge) O ye men, are not men the strongest, that haue rule ouer the sea and lande, and all thynges therin? But the kynge is stronger: for he is lorde ouer them all, and ruleth them, and whatsoeuer he commaundeth them to do, that they do. If he commaunde them to fyght one against an other, they do it: yea if he sende them forthe against their enemyes, they go, and ouerthrowe all before them, and subdue all vnder their power. They that obey not him, shall be ouercome and destroyed. Then

Moreouer, when men are dronkynge, they forget all frendshyp, all brotherly fayrefulnesse and loue: but as sone as they are dronken, they drawe out the swerde and wil fyght: and when they are sayd downe frō the wyne, and to stirre vp agayne, they can not tell what they dyd: iudge ye now, is not wyne the first gest? For who wolde els take in hande to do suche thynges? And when he had spoken thus he helde his tonge.

¶ The declaracyon of the two last fraternes of the yonge men, propounded in the Chapter before: of whiche the last, that is, that veryte beareth the victorye of all thynges, is well commended and alowed. Darius wryteth letters to all the rulers vnder him, that they holde of the Zorobabel in the buyldynge of Jerusalem.

CAPI. IIII.

The kynge. ¶ THen the seconde (whiche had sayde that the kynge was stronger) began to speke sayinge: O ye men, are not they the first gyft and moste excellent, that conquere the lande and the se, and all that is in the se, & in the earthe? Now is the kynge lorde of all suche thinges, and hath dominion of them all: and lothe what he commaundeth, it is done. Yf he sende his men forth a warefare, they goo, and breake downe pyles, walles, and towres. They are slayne, and slee (other men) them selues, and ouer passe not the kynges worde. Yf they get the victory, they bryng the kyng all the spoyle. Lykewyse the other that medle not with warres and fyghtyng, but tyll the grounde: when they haue tylyd they bryngе tribute to the kynge. And yf the kynge alone do but commaunde to kyll, they kyll. Yf he commaunde to forgyue, they forgyue. Yf he commaunde to smyte, they smyte. Yf he bydde awaye, they byde awaye. Yf he commaunde to buylde, they buylde. Yf he commaunde to breake downe, they breake downe. Yf he commaunde to plante they plante. The common people and the rulers are obedient vnto him. D And the kyng in the meane season syttyth him downe, eatyth and drynketh, and taketh his rest: then kepe they watche rounde about the kynge, and not one of them dare gette him out of the waye to do his owne busynesse, but muste be obedient vnto the kynge at a worde. Iudge ye nowe, O ye men, how stoute are not they aboute, vnto whom men are thus obedient? And when he had spoke this, he held his tonge.

The thyrde, whose name was Zorobabel, whiche had spoken of women and of truthe, began to saye after this maner: O ye men, it is not the great kyng, it is not the multitude of me, neither is it wine that excelleth. Who is it then that hath the lordshyp ouer them? Women. Haue not women borne the kynge and all the people that rule those thinges? Haue not women borne them, & brought vp, that plante the vines wherout the wine commeth? They make garmentes for all me, they gyue honour vnto all men, & without women can not men lyue. Yf they gather gold and syluer, & all precious thinges, and se a fayre welfauoured woman, they leaue all togyther and turne their eyes onely vnto the woman, & gape vpon her and haue more mynde vnto her, then vnto syluer and gold, or any maner of precious thyng. A man leaueth his father that brought him vp he leaueth his own natural countrey & cleaueth vnto the wyfe, yea he forgyueth how lefe he the woman, and remembreth neither father, nor mother, ne countrey. By this ye muste nedes know that women haue the dominion ouer you. ¶ Doth it greue you? A man taketh his swerde, and goeth his waye to stele, to spill, to murther, to sayle vpon the se, and ryde vpon, and goeth in the barehowse: and when he hath stollen, pyllyed and robbed, he bryngeth it vnto his loue. Agayne, a man loueth his wyfe better then father or mother: yea, many one there be that renne oute of their wyttes, and become bondemen for their wyues sakes: many one also haue perished, and haue bene slayne, and haue synned by cause of women.

And nowe by leue me, I knowe a kynge, whiche is great in his power, and all landes stande in awe of him, and no man dare laye hand vpon him: yet did I se that Apame (the doughter of the great kynge Wartacus) the kynges concubyne, sat beside the kynge vpon his ryght hande, and toke of his crowne from his hede, and set it vpon her owne hed, and smote the kynge with her lefte hande. Moreouer the king loked vpon her & open mouth: D yf she laughed vpon him, he laugheth also: but yf she take any displeasure with him, the kynge was fayne to flatter her, and to gyue her good wordes, tyll he haue gotten her fauour agayne.

O ye men, are not women then stronger? Great is the earth, and hye is the heuen that do their thinges. Then the king and the princes loked one vpon an other. So he began to speke of the truth. O ye men, are not women stronger? Great is the erth, hye is the heuen, swyfte is the course of the sunne, he compasseth the heuen rounde about, and fetcheth his course agayne to his owne place in one daye. Is he not excellent that hath this? Yea great is the truthe, and stronger then all thynges. All the erth calleth vpon the truth, the heuen praiseth it, all workes shake and tremble at it, and with it is no vnrighteous thyng. Wine is vnrighteous: the kyng is vnrighteous, women are vnrighteous, all the children of men are vnrighteous, yea all their workes are vnrighteous, and there is no truthe in them, in their vnrighteousnesse also shall they be destroyed and perysshe. As for the truthe, it endureth, and is alwaye stronge: it liueth and conquereth, for euermore liueth without ende.

The truthe accepteth no persones, it putteth no difference betwene ryche or poore, betwyxte the mighty or symple, but doth ryght vnto euery man, whether they be euyll or good, and all men are lyuingly dealt with all in the workes of it. In the iudgement of it there there is no vnrighteous thynge, but strength, kingdom and power, & mainly for euermore. Blessed be the God of truth.

And with that he held his tonge, and al the people cried and sayd: Great is the truthe, and above all. Then sayd the kyng vnto him: Aske what thou wylt, more than is appointed in the writynge, and I shall geue it the, for thou art founde wyser then thy companyons: thou shalt sit nexte me, and be my kynsman. Then sayd he vnto the kynge: Remembre thy promyse and vowe which thou hast vowed and promysed (in the daye when thou camest to the kyngdome) to buylde vp Jerusalem, and to sende againe all the vessels and iewels that were taken away out of Jerusalem: which Cyrus separated whē he offered in Babylon, and wolde haue restored them againe vnto there. And thy vowe was to buylde vp the temple, which the Edomites brent when Jerusalem was destroyed by the Caldees. This onely (O kynge) is the requyre that I requyre, this is the masterye, which I desyre and aske of the: that thou performe the vowe which thou with thyne owne mouth hast made vnto the kyng of heuen.

Then Darius the kyng stode vp, and kissed him, and wrote a letter vnto all the rulers and officers, to all the Lordes and nobles, that they shulde conuey him forth, & all them that wolde goo vp with him. He wrote a letter also vnto all the officers that were in Celesyria and Phenices, & vnto Lybanus, that they shulde drawe Cedre trees from Lybanus vnto Jerusalem, to buylde the city withall. Moreouer he wrote vnto all the Jewes that were gone out of his realme in to Jury, touchyng of the freedome, that no officer no ruler nor officer, shold come to their house: and that all their landes which they had conquered, shold be free and not tributary. And that the Edomites shold giue ouer the cities and villages of the Jewes which they had taken: yea and that they shulde yerely giue.xx. talentes to the buyldyng of the temple, vntil it were finished, and to the dayly beholdyng of the vyctoryngs (as it is commaunded) ten talentes yerely also: and that al they which come from Babylon to buylde the city shold haue fre libertie, they and their children and all the priestes.

He wrote the greatnesse also and commaunded that the holy garment shulde be geuen them wherein they ministred, and wrote that commaundmentes shold be geuen to the Leuites vntil the day that the house were finished. & Jerusalem buylded vp: and commaunded that al they that watched the city shold haue their portions and wages.

He gaue ouer also al the vessels that Cyrus had separated from Babylon, and al that Cyrus had geuen in commaundment, the same charged he also that it shold be done and sent vnto Jerusalem. Now when this younge man was gone forth, he turned his face toward Jerusalē, and praysed the kyng of heuē and said: Of the comest the victory, of the comest wysdome & glorie, and I am thy seruaunt. Blessed art thou whiche hast geuen me wysdome: the wyll I praise, O Lorde, thou God of our fathers.

And so he rode the fastest, and came vnto Babylon, and whē he come there, he told this vnto all his brethren that were at Babylon, and they praysed the God of their fathers, that he hadde geuen them releasynge and libertie to goo vp and to buylde Jerusalem, and the temple (which is yet called after the name of the Lorde) and they reioyced with instrumentes and gleemens many dayes longe.

¶ They that returne to Jerusalem are numbred. They begyn to layē the foundacyon of the temple, but are let by the aduersaries, and so is the buyldynge hyndred by the space of two yeres.

CAPI. V.

After this were the principal men of al the villages, chosen in the tymes of kynges, that they shold go vp with their wyues and children, with their seruauntes and maydens, with all their catell and substaunce. Of the preestes that executed the office of the preesthode, and were not found: the sonnes of Obia, the sonnes of Achilos, the sonnes of Abdin, which maryed one of the doughters of Phargelen, and were named after him. Vnto the sith Nehemias & Athanas, that they sholde haue no porcion in the Sanctuarye, till there rose vp an hye preest, that were well instruct in the playne clerenesse and truth. There came people also of other countreys, & the heathen out of all landes to set vp ỹ and dwelt in his place, and offred sacrifices and burnt

offringes vnto the Lorde in the mayninge. And so they holde the feast of tabernacles as it is commaunded in the lawe: And beyng after they an offrynge vnto the sacrifyces appoynted, the offrynges also of the Sabbothes and of the newe Mownes, & all holy feastes. And all they that vowed offringes vnto the Lorde, begonne at the newe Moone of the seuenth moneth to offer vnto God, for the temple of the Lorde was not yet buylded. And they gaue vnto ꝑ masons & carpenters, money, meate, and drynke with clothe. Vnto them of Sidon also and Tyre they gaue corne, that they sholde carye Cedre tree owte of Libanon vnto Ioppa and Seames, and that they shulde make Rafters in the Seames of Ioppe, accordynge as it was appointed and ordeyned by Cyrus kinge of the Persians.

And in the seconde yere they came in to the temple of God at Ierusalem. In the seconde moneth begonne Zorobabell the Sonne of Salathiel, and Iesue the Sonne of Iosedec & them brethren the prestes and Leuites, and all they that were come vnto Ierusalem out of the captyuyte of Babylon, and layde the foundacion of the temple, in the newe moone of the seconde moneth in the seconde yere that they were come in to Iewry and Ierusalem. And they appointed the Leuites (that were above .xx. yere old) vnto the ouerse of the Lorde: & Iesue and his Sonnes and his brethren all the Leuites ꝯ to gyther, and perfourmed the lawe and ordynnance in the house of the Lorde.

And the prestes stode, and had their garnementes and trompettes, and the Leuites the Sonnes of Asaph hadde Cymbalis to, accordynge thanckes and prayse vnto the Lorde, accordynge as Dauid the kinge of Israel had ordeyned. And they apoynted

lers of the worke. And they gaue, as this answerynge are the seruauntes of ꝑ Lorde, which make dwelle and erth: and as for this house it hath bene buylded & set vp afore tyme by ꝑ great and myghtye kynge of Israel. But whē our fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, and synned agaynst the God of Israel, he gaue them ouer in to the power of Nabuchodonoso for kynge of Babylon the kynge of the Chaldees, which brake downe the house, and brent it, and caryed awaye the people prysoners vnto Babylon. Neuertheles, in the fyrst yere that kynge Cyrus raygned at Babylon, Cirus the kynge wrote and commaunded to buylde vp this house agayne: and all the ornamentes that Nabuchodonoso caryed away from Jerusalem vnto Babylon, and appropriated vnto his own tēple: shall bryngē Cyrus forth agayne, & deliuered the to Zorobabel ꝑ to Balmanasar the vnder Byrut commaundynge them that they shulde bring those same ornamentes agayne to Jerusalē in to the tēple, & to begyn this ꝑ tyme forth, to build ꝑ temple agayne in his own place. The Balmanasar layde the foundacion of the Lordes house at Jerusalem, and euer sence haue they buylded, & yet is it not ended. And therfore, O kynge, yf thou thynke it good, let it be sought in the Lybraryes and rolles of kinge Cyrus: yf it be founde them, that it is done with ꝑ counsell and consent of kinge Cyrus, and yf our Lorde the kynge be so myndyd, let him wryte vnto vs therof.

Then commaunded kyng Darius, to serche in the Lybraries: and so at Ebbathanis in a tyrie cytye in Medea there was founde such a writynge: In the fyrste yere of the raygne of Cyrus the same kynge Cyrus commaunded that the house of the Lord at Jerusalem shulde be buylded agayne (and oblacions to be made there cōtynually vnto the Lord) whose heyght shall be .x. cubytes, and the breede .xl. cubytes, and .iii. square with thre newe stones, with a lofte of tymbre of the same toll euery, yea with a newe lofte, and the expenses therof to be geuen of the house of kinge Cyrus.

And the ornamētes of golde and syluer, ꝑ Nabuchodonoso toke out of the house of ꝑ Lorde at Jerusalem, shall be set agayne in ꝑ temple at Jerusalem, where they were afore. Dilcuers also the vnder Byrut in Syria and Phenices, the princes and theyr compayons, and the other that be heade rulers in Syria & Phenices, shall not medle nor haue any thing to do with that place.

Cirus haue commaunded also, that they shall buylde the house of the Lorde hole vp, and haue ordeyned them, to helpe those that be come alle of captyuyte: tyll the house of the Lord be fynyshed: and out of the tribute and taxinge that is yerely payed vp in Syria and Phenices, diligently to geue them a certayne summe to the offrynge of the Lord and the same to be deliuered vnto Zorobabel ꝑ officers: that he therwith may offeryng ofen, rammes, lambes, and corne, salte, wyne and oyle, and that contynually curyge vpon after the prestes whiche the prestes that be at Jerusalem, shewe to be made daylye: this shall be geuen vnto them without delaye ꝑ they may offre sacrifices daylye to the lyuynge God, for the kynge and for his frendes, and to praye for their lyues. Let it be proclaymed also on euery syde, that whosoeuer hereafter breketh or breparyth this commaundement of ꝑ kynge, shall be hanged vpon a galowe (made of his owne good) and all his goodes shalbe confounded vnto the kinge.

The Lorde almyghty (whose name is there called vpon) roote out and destroye all the kynges and people, that vnderfake by myght to hynder the same, or to make vnright rought with the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem. I Darius the kinge haue ordeyned, that these thynges shall be done with all dylygence.

¶ The temple is fynyshed and dedicate: and the frall of vnleuened breed is holden.

CAPL. VII.

Then Esdras the sonne of Seloyna, and Phenees, and the other Landlordes with theyr companyons, obeyed the thinges that kynge Darius had ordeyned, were dylygent in the holy worke and were fayne helpers with the olde rulers of the Jewes. And so the worke of the Sanctuary went forth and prospred, when Aggeus and Zacharye prophecyed.

And they perfourmed all thinges thorow the commaundement of the Lorde God of Israel, and after the mynde of Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerxes kinges of perse.

And thus was ouer house fynyshed vnto the .xxiij. daye of the moneth Adar in the .vi. yeare of kynge Darius. And the children of Israel the prestes and the Leuites, and the other that were come out of captyuyte, and such as were ioyned vnto them, dyd accordynge as it is wrytten in the boke of Moyses. And in the dedicacion of the temple they offred an hundred oxen, an hundred rammes, .iii. hundreth lambes, and .xii. gootes for the synnes of all the people of Israell, after the nombre of the tribes of Israel. The prestes also & the Leuites stode aseyde in theyr garmentes, after the tribes, ouer all the workes of the Lorde God of Israel accordynge to the boke of Moyses, and the porters by all the dores.

And the children of Israel (with those that were come out of captyuyte) helde the passouer the xiiij. daye of the fyrste moneth, when the prestes and the Leuites were sanctyfyed. They that came out of captyuite, were not all sanctifyed together: but the Leuites were all sanctifyed together. Also all they that came out of captyuite, kylled ꝑ calfe lambe, for theyr brethren, for the prestes and for theselues. And the children of Israel that came out of captyuite, eate of it and escaped from all the abhominacyons of ꝑ Heathē, sought the Lord, and kepte the feaste of vnleuened bread .vij.

Esdras confyrmeth the people to assemble and come together, and them reherseth them the lawe. Chap. the fyrst of Esdrenadas.

CAPI. VIII.

AND after him, when Artaxerxes the kinge of the Persians raygned, there wente vpon him Esdras the sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Ezechias, the sonne of Helchiah, the sonne of Salum, the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amarias, the sonne of Ezechias, the sonne of Boccas, the sonne of Abdia, the sonne of Phinees, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the hyest preest. This Esdras went vp from Babilon for he had good vnderstandinge in the lawe of Moyses, that was geuen of the Lord God of Israel, to be taught and lerne in Iuda. And the kinge fauoured him, and dyd him great worshyp and honoure, after all his desyre. There went vp with him also certayne of the chyldren of Israel, of the preestes of ỹ Leuites, of the syngers, porters and ministers of the temple at Jerusalem.

In the .vij. yeare of the raygne of kinge Artaxerxes, in the .v. moneth, that is in the vij. yeare of the raygne, they wente from Babylon in the newe moone of the fyfth moneth, and came the fyrste daye to Jerusalem after his commaundement, lyke as the Lorde had gouerned their iourney. For Esdras had gotten great auctorite that he durst leaue none of the chyldren behynde, whiche are in the lawe and commaundementes of God. And he taught Israel all ryghteousnes and iudgement.

Then came the Secretaryes of kynge Artaxerxes, and deliuered the lettres (that were come from Artaxerxes the kinge) to Esdras the preste and reder of the lawe of the Lorde: And this is the coppy of the letter. Kynge Artaxerxes sendeth his greetynge vnto Esdras the preste and reder of the lawe of the Lorde: Of fyrsthyng and good will I haue ordeyned and chaunged, yf there be ought of the Iewes, of the prestes and Leuites in my realme, which desyreth and is contente to go with the vnto Jerusalem, that he may be fre. Therfore yf any be mynded to beare the company, let them come together, to go with the (lyke as I am content and my seuen fryndes my counsaylers) to se what they do at Jerusalem and in Iewry, and bere the thynges accordynge as thou hast in the lawe of the Lorde and to bynge the gyftes vnto God ỹ Lord of Israel, that I and my frendes haue promysed to Jerusalem, and all the syluer & golde that is in the country of Babylon, vnto the Lord to Jerusalem, with the thynge that is geuen by the people in the Lordes temple at Jerusalem: Yea that the same may well be gathered, and geuen at euen, thynge and gotes and other that be longe to their thinges: and that they myght offer vpon vnto the Lorde, vpon the aulter at Jerusalem.

And what so euer them and thy brethren will doo with syluer and golde, that doo after the wyll and after the commaundement of the Lord thy God: & put vnto with all the syluer vessels, that are geuen the for ỹ seruyce of the house of the Lord thy God at Jerusalem, and whatsoeuer is needfull for the to chaunce of the temple, that shal be geuen ỹ of the kynges treasure. And I also, euen I Artaxerxes the kynge commaunde all the treasurers beyonde the water, that whatsoeuer Esdras the preste and reder of the lawe of the God of heuen shall require of you, that it be done dylygently vnto the summe of an hundreth talentes of syluer, and lykewyse of wheate vnto an hundreth measures, and vyll an hundreth vessels of wyne, and other plenteous thynges without nombre. Let all thynges be done after the lawe of the hyghest God, that ỹ wrath of God come not in the realme of the kynge and of his sonnes. I commaunde you also, that ye receyue no tol ne tribute of the preestes, Leuytes syngers, and ministers of the temple, ne of the lauers: and that no man haue auctorytye to worke any wronge against thē. But ye (O Esdras) set thou iudges and ordynaryes in the holy lande of Syria and Phenyce, after the wysedome of God: and learne all such as are ignorauntes in the lawe of God thy Lorde, & let all them that offende against the lawe be punysshed: whether it be in dethe bodely payne, to be condemned in money, or to be banyshed.

Then spake Esdras the wyse. Blessed be the God of our fathers, that hath geuen in ỹ hert of the kynge to magnifye his house that is Jerusalem, and hath made me to be honored in the syght of the kynge, of his counsayll, of his frendes and of his nobles.

And so I was boldned in my mynde, strengthyned as the hand my God helped me, and I dyd out men of Israel to go vp with me.

And these are the prynces (after their kynredes and bandes of their fathers) that went vp in the kynge Babylon, out of the kingdome of Artaxerxes: Of the sonnes of Phares, Gedsamus. Of ỹ sonnes of Ithamath, Amsamus. Of the sonnes of Dauid, Sarra, ỹ sonne of Zebbia.

Of the sonnes of Phares, Zacharyas with him there ranne ouer an hundreth and fyfty men. Of the sonnes of the captayne of Moabyten, Eliu, and with him .ij. hundreth and .l. men. Of the sonnes of Zathoes, Jechonias, Zacharyas, with him .ccc. and .l. men. Of the sonnes of Adamantha ỹ, Sothelyas, .lxx. with him. Of ỹ sonnes of Zaphetia, Zaraias Michael, with him .lxx. Of the sonnes of Joab, Abdias Jehiel, and with him .ccxij. men.

twelue men. Of the sonnes of Banis, Lalimoth the son of Iosephus, & with hym an. C & lx. mē. Of the sonnes of Beet, Zachary, Bebei, and with him. xxviij. C. and lxij. men. Of the sonnes of Elcad, Johannes Elcelan, & with hym. C. & lxx. men. Of the sonnes of Adonikam those that were the last, and these are theyr names: Eliphalam the sonne of Jebell and Jemaias, and with him. lxx men. All these called I together by the water Ahia, where we pytched oure tentes thre dayes, and there I mustered them.

D As for the sonnes of the prestes and Leuites, I founde none there. Then sent I vnto Eleazar, and Ezeelom, and Maalman, and Maloham, and Ethathan, and Hamen, and Zorobimathan, Eunagan, Zachary, Mosollamum, these were the leders and men of experience, and I sent them worde, that they shulde come vnto Loddeus, which was by the place of the treasurye, and commaunded them that they shulde speake vnto Loddeus and to his brethren and to those that were in the treasurye, to sende vs suche men, as myght execute the prestes office in the house of the Lorde oure God. And with the myghtye hande of our Lorde God, they brought vnto vs men of good experience, frome amonges the sonnes of Mooli the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel, Sebebeiam and the sonnes and his brethren Asbin and Anin, of whō there were thre. From amōges the children of the sonnes of Eenaneus, and their sonnes were xx. men. And of them that serued in the temple, whom Dauid had ordeyned, and the principall men that ministred for the worke vnto the Leuites in the temple two. C. and twentye men, whose names are all rehersed by in writynge.

Then commaunded I a fastynge vnto the ponge men before the Lorde, that I myght prayse of him a prosperous iourney & a good waye for vs, yea for vs, for our children, and for the catel, because of the layenges awaite, and I durst not require of the kynge men of warre and of horse, to conueye vs safely against oure enemyes, for we had sayd vnto the kynge, that the power of the Lorde our God shuld be with them, that seke hym with their hole herte. And therefore we besought God oure Lorde earnestlye because of these thynges, & he was mercyfull vnto vs, and hearde oure prayer. And I separated from amonge the rulers of the people, and fro the prestes of the temple. xij. men, & Hebeia and Asania, and ten men of their brethre with them. And I weied them the golde & the syluer and all the precyous ornamentes of the house of our God, which the kyng & his counsel, and his princes, & hole Israel had geuen. And whē I had weyed it, I gaue the an. C. & l. talētes in syluer, & C. talentes of syluer vessell, an. C. talētes of golde, & of golde vessell lxxx tymes twentye, & vessels of other metall (yea of good metall) xij. glystynge as the golde, & sayd vnto them: ye also are holy vnto the lorde, & the vessels are holy, & the golde and the syluer is promysed vnto the lorde God of our fathers. Be diligent nowe and kepe it, vntyll the tyme that ye delyuer it to the rulers of the people, to the prestes, to the Leuites, and to the principall men of the cytyes of Israell in Jerusalem, and in the chambre of the house of our God.

So the prestes and the Leuites which receyued of me the golde, the syluer and the vessell, brought it to Jerusalem into the temple of the Lorde. And from Ahia we brake vp the xij. daye of the fyrst moneth, & so we came to Jerusalem. And when the thyrde day was past, the weyed golde & syluer was delyuered in the house of the Lord the fourth daye, vnto Meremoth the sonne of Ure the preste, and with him was Eleazar the sonne of Phineas, and with them were Josabdus the sonne of Jesue, Nodias and the sonne of Banus, and certayne of the Leuites to the nombre and to the weyght: and the wayght of them were wrytten vp the same tyme. As for those that were come out of captyuyte, they offred sacrifice vnto the Lorde the God of Israel: euen xij. oxen for all Israel. lxxxij. rammes lxxvj. sheep. xij. goates for synne all dyne for a thankesgyuyng, all to ſ sacrifice of the Lorde. And the kynges commyssion delyuered they vnto the Stewardes and debtes of the kyng, and to the vnder rulers in Celosyria and Phenices.

Nowe when these thynges were done, the rulers came vnto me, and sayd: The generacyon of Israel, the princes, the prestes and Leuites, the straunge people and inhabiters of the land, haue not put awaye their abhominacyons, from the Cananites, Hethites, Pherezites, from the Moabytes, Gergesens and Cosmytes.

For both they and their sonnes haue mengled them selues with the doughters of them, and the holy sede is myxte with the outlandyshe Heathen, and sens the begynnynge of their raygne haue the rulers and heades ben partetakers of their wickednesse.

¶ As soone as I had hearde these thynges immediatly I rente my holy garmentes, and pulled out the heares of my heade & my berd, & sat me downe sorowfull & heuy. And all they that were moued thorow the word of ſ God of Israel, came vnto me: & I sat styll full of heuynesse vntyll the euenyng sacrifice. Then rose I vp frō my fastyng, hauyng rente clothes and the holy garmēt, kneled downe vpon my knees, helde out my handes vnto the Lorde, & sayde: O Lorde, I am confounded & ashamed before thy face, for oure synnes are become many vpon our heades, and our wickednesse are exalted vnto the heuē for sence the time of our fore fathers, we are in great syn vnto this day. And for the synnes of vs & our fathers, we with our brethren and with oure prestes haue ben deliuered vnto the kynges of the erth, in to the sworde, and in to captiuite, and became a spoyle with confusion & shame vnto this daye. And now, O Lord God, how greate is the mercye that we haue gotten of the: in that thou hast left vs a roote & name in the place of thy Sanctuarye, to discouer oure

lyght in the house of the Lorde oure God, & ryuen vs meate at al tymes of our mynystracion. And when we were in captyuyte, we were not forsaken of the Lorde our God: but he made the kinges of Persia gracious and fauourable vnto vs, so that they gaue vs victayles and meate, yea and leaue to vnylde vp the temple of oure Lorde God agayne, to repayre the walled places of Iuon, & to dwell in Iewry and Ierusalem. And nowe, O Lorde, what shall we saye, hauinge all these thynges in possession? For we haue broken thy commaundementes, whyche thou gauest vnto vs by the hãde of thy seruauntes the prophetes, sayinge: The land that ye go vnto, and that is ryuen you for an heritage to haue in possession, is defyled with the vnclennes and filthynesse of the heithen, and with their abominacion haue they polluted it all together. Therfore shall ye not ioyne your doughters vnto their sonnes ne marry your sonnes vnto their doughters: Moreouer, ye shal neuer seke to make peace vnto them, that ye may increase & eat the best in the lande, that ye may dyuyde the inheritaunce of the lande vnto your children for euermore. As for the thinge that nowe happeneth vnto vs, it commeth all for our wycked workes & great synnes, yet hast thou geuen vs suche a rote, that we are come agayne into our owne lande: and we are so wycked that we haue broken thy statutes and commaundementes agayne, & mengled our serues with the vnclennes of the outlandyshe heathen. O Lorde, arte thou angrye with vs? wylte thou rote vs cleane out, that our rote and name remayne no more? O Lorde God of Israell thou arte true, for our rote endureth yet vnto this present daye. And beholde, nowe are we before the in our synnes, nowe can we not stande before the in them.

And when Edras with this prayer had knowledged the synne, weppynge, and lyenge flatte vpon the grounde before the temple, there gathered vnto hym from Ierusalem a great multytude of men and women, of yonge men & maydens, for there was a very greate weppyng and mournyng in the congregacyõ. So when Iechonias the sonne of Iezelions of the chyldren of Israel cryed, he sayd vnto Edras: we haue synned agaynst the Lorde, because we haue maryed outlandyshe wemẽ of the heathen. Nowe arte thou ouer all Israel. We wyll sweare an othe therfore vnto the Lorde, that we shall put awaye all oure wyues, whyche we haue taken of the heathe with theyr chyldren: ryse agayn, for vnto the apperteyneth the before our fore elders. Stande vp then, open thou it, and declare it playnly vnto vs, acordynge to the lawe of the Lorde: for the matter belongeth vnto the, & we wyll helpe the, quyte thy selfe manly. So Edras arose, and toke an othe of the rulers of the preestes and of the Leuites, and of Israel, to do after these thynges: and they swore.

¶ After Edras had redd the lawe, the people put away their straunge wyues: and then reherseth euery man merely vnto his owne dwellynge.

CAPI. IX.

Then Edras rose vp from the fount of the temple with out, & went in to the chamber of Ionathas the son of Elisabus, and remayned there, and eat no meate nor dronke drynke, for the multytude of the wyckednes of the people. And there was made a proclamacyon in al Iewry and at Ierusalem, for all suche as were gathered at Ierusalem out of captyuyte, that whosoeuer came not to Ierusalem within two or .iii. dayes at myndyng to the iudgement of the olde lorde of councell) his goodes shulde be taken from him, and he excluded from the congregacyon of the captyuyte. And in the dayes were all they of the trybe of Iuda and Ben Iamin gathered together at Ierusalem, the .xx. daye of the .ix. moneth. And the hole multytude satte tremblynge in the courte of the temple, for it was winter. So Edras arose vp, and sayd vnto them: ye haue done vnryghteously, in that ye haue taken outlandyshe wyues to marrage, and so to encrease the synnes of Israel. And now knowledge the same, and giue prayse vnto the Lorde God of our fathers, and performe his wyll, departynge from the heathen of the lande, and from the outlandyshe wyues. Then cryed the hole multytude with loude voyce, and sayd: ye be as thou hast spoken, so wyll we do: but for so moche as the people are many, and the wynter here, we may not stãd without the house agayne, this worcke is not a thynge, that can be fynyshed in a daye or two, for we be many that haue synned in these thynges: Ordeyne therfore, that the rulers of the multytude & all they that dwell with vs, and as many as haue outlandyshe wyues, the gyestes also and iuges of euery place may stande in the tyme appointed, tyl they lose vp the wrath of the Lorde in his behalfe.

Then Ionathas the sonne of Oseli, and Ezias and Thecam reuened ye charge of this matter, & Mossolamus, and Leuis and Sabathaeus helped them therto. After this, all they stode vp that were come out of captyuite. And Edras the preest chose vnto him the principall men from amonge the fathers acordynge to theyr names, & in the new mone of the tenth moneth they satte together, to examen this matter. And so the matter was a determynge (concernyng the men that had outlandyshe wyues) vntyll the newe mone of the first moneth. And of the preestes that had wyues them selues with out lawfull wyues, there were founde: of the sonnes of Iesua the sonne of Iosedech and his brethren, Maaseas, Eleazar, Ioribus, and Ioadenus. Whyche offred them selues to put away their wyues, and to offre a ram for their ignorãce. And of the sonnes of Emmeri, Ananias, and Elias, and Zerech, Azarias. Of the sonnes of Phaseta, Limelias, Ismaen, Nathanea, Iudis, Iobus and Tatias. And of the Leuites Iosabdus, Semeis, and Colius, Calcias, Patheas, Coinas, and Elnatas. Of the syngers of the Sanctuary, Eliasib, Zacharias. Of the porters kers, Hallumus and Tolbaues. And of Jsrael, of the chyldren of Foro, Ost. and Remias, a Seddias, and Melchias, Michelus, Elezarus, Jemmichias, and Bannas. And of the chyldren of Jolaman, Chamus, Zachari, Jezrelus, Joddius, Ezimoth and Elias. And of the sonnes of Jothoin, Elisdas, Liasamus, and Mathias, Nathmoth, Habdis and Tebedias. And of the sonnes of Zebee, Johannes, Amarias, Zabdias, and Emmeus. And of the sonnes of Bannus, Olammus, Mauchus, Jedbus, Jasub, Asebus & Jemoth. And of the sonnes of Addin, Naatus, and Mooslas, and Caleus, and Baanas, Masiuas, Mathathias, Bezi, Bannus and Manasses. And of the sonnes of Nasu, Nonce, Aleas, Melchias, Hameas, Simon, Benjamin, Malchus and Martas. And of the sonnes of Alom, Carlamus, Mathathias, Banous, Eliphalach, Manasses, Semei. Of the sonnes of Bannus, Jeremy, Moodias, Adzamas, Jobel, Banees, Drlaar, Jona, Martmoth, Ethaid, Mathenens, Elialis, Ozias, Dielus, Semebius, Tambris and Joseph. Of the sonnes of Nobrus, Jodius, Mathathias, Sabadus, Zecheus, Jedmi, Jelleus, and Banees. All these had taken outlandyshe women to maryage, and they put the away with theyr chyldren. The preestes and Leuites, and all they that were of Jsrael, dwelt at Jerusalem and thoroweut all the lande, in the newe moone of the.vij. moneth and & chyldren of Jsrael were in theyr dwellinges. And & hole multitude came togethre vpon the floore at the east syde of the holy porte of the temple. And they spake vnto Esdras the hye preest and reader, that he wolde bringe the lawe of Moses, whiche was geuē of the Lorde God of Jsrael. Ho Esdras the hye preest brought the lawe vnto the hole multitude, to man and woman, and to all preestes, that they myght heare the lawe, in the newe moone of the.vij. moneth. And he red in the floore that is before the holy porte of the temple, from the morowe early vnto the euenyng, before men and women. And they applyed their mynde all vnto the lawe.

II. Esd. viii. a
I. Esdr. viii. a

And Esdras the preest and reader of the lawe stode vp vpō a scaffolde of wood, which was made therefore: and vpō his right hand there stode by him Mathathias, Samus, Anamias, Azarias, Urias, Hrechias, and Malsamus: Vpō his left hād stode Faldeus, Mysael, Melachias, Adnseas, Habus, Hasbadias and Zachary. Then toke Esdras the boke before the hole multitude, for he was the principall, and had in moost honour of them all. And when he had red out the lawe, they stode all streyght vpon theyr fete. So Esdras praysed the Lorde the moste hygh God, the almyghty God of hostes. And all the people answered: Amen: and held vp their handes, fell downe flat vpō & earth, & prayed & Lord. And Jesus, Beneas, Harchias, Jaddinus, Accubus, Sabbathcus, Calithes, Azarias, Jozabus, Ananias, and Phelias the Leuites lyfte vp theyr handes vpwarde, and bowed theyr faces to the grounde, and prayed the Lorde: Those were they which taught & lawe of the Lorde, and red the lawe of the Lorde in the congregacyō: and euery man set those before that vnderstode the lawe. Then spake Atharates vnto Esdras the hye preest and reder, and to & Leuites that taught the multytude, sayinge: This daye is holy vnto the Lorde: & all they that heard the lawe, wepte. So Esdras said: Departe your way the, and eat the best and drynke the swetest, and sende gyftes vnto them that haue nothynge: for this daye is holy vnto the Lorde, and be not ye sorye. Then wente they theyr wape euerychone, ate and dronke, and were merye, and sent rewardes vnto them that had nothyng that they myght also eat with gladnesse: for they were exceadyngly restored, thoroweh the wordes that were red vnto them in & lawe.

And so they were all gathered together at Jerusalem to holde & feast, accordynge to the couenaunt of the Lord God of Jsrael.

CAP. I.

THe seconde boke of the Prophet Esdras / the sonne of Saraias, the son of Azarias, the son of Helchia, the sonne of Sallum, the son of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amerias, the sonne of Azarias the sonne of Maraioth, the son of Haahias, the sonne of Ussi, the sonne of Boccus, the sonne Abisu, the sonne of Phinees, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron, of the tribe of Leui: which was prysoner in the land of Medes, in the raygne of Artarexres king of Persia.

And the word of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: go thy waye, and shew my people their synfull dedes, and their children their wickednesses, which they haue done against me, that they maye tell their children children the same: for the sinnes of their fathers are increased in them. And why? they haue forgotten me and haue offred vnto straunge goddes. Am not I euen he, that brought the out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage? But they haue prouoked me vnto wrath, and despised my counsels. Pull thou out then the heer of thy heade, and cast al e-uill ouer them, for they haue not bene obedient vnto my lawe.

It is a people without ierurye and nourture. How longe shal I forbeare them vnto whom I haue done so moche good? Many kynges haue I destroyed for their sakes: pharao with his seruauntes and all his power haue I smytten downe and slayne: All the nations haue I destroyed and rooted oute before them, euen the east haue I brought two landes and people to nought, euen Tyre & Sydon, and haue slayne al their enemyes. Speake thou therfore vnto them, sayinge: Thus sayethe the Lorde: I ledde you thorowe the see, and gaue you sure stretes since the begynnynge. I gaue you Moses to be your captayne, and Aaron to be the priest. I gaue you lyght in a pyller of fyre, & greate wonders haue I done amonge you: yet haue ye forgotten me, sayth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the almyghty Lorde: I gaue you quayles to eate, and fludes for your foode: Neuertheles ye murmured, and afterd not the victory of your enemyes vnto my name: yea this same daye do ye yet murmoure. Where are the benefites, that I haue done for you? When ye were hongry in the wylderne, dyd ye not crye vnto me: Why hast thou brought vs into this wylderne, to kyll vs? It had bene better for vs, to haue serued the Egiptians, then to die in this wylderneße. Then had I pitie vpon your mourninges, and gaue you Manna to eate. Ye ate angels fode. When ye were thurstye, dyd not I bowe the harde stone, I caused water to flowe therout? for the heate I couered you with the leaues of the trees. A good plentyfull lande gaue I you: I cast oute the Cananites, the Pherezites and Philistines before you. What shall I doo more for you, sayeth the Lorde. Exp. 17.

Thus sayeth the almyghty Lorde: When ye were in the wylderneße, in the water of the Amorytes, beinge a thyrste and blaspheminge my name: I gaue you not fyre for your blaspheinyes, but caste a tree in to the water, and made the ryuer swete. What shal I doo vnto the, o Jacob? O thou Juda wolbest not obeye me. I wyll bowne me to an other people, and vnto those wyll I gyue my name, that they maye kepe my statutes. Seynge ye haue forsaken me, I wyll forsake you also. When ye desyre me to be gracious vnto you, I wyll haue no mercye vpon you: when ye call vpon me, I wyll not heare you. For ye haue defyled youre handes with blonde, and youre feete are swyfte to commyt manslaughter. Ye haue not forsaken me (in a maner) but your owne selues sayeth the Lorde. Exp. 1.8

Thus sayethe the almyghtye Lorde: haue I not prayed you, as a father his sonnes, as a mother her doughters, and as a nurse her younge babes, that ye wolde be my people, and I shoulde be youre God: that ye wolde be my children, and I shoulde be your owne father? I gathered you together, as an henne gathereth her chyckens vnder her wynges. But nowe what shall I doo vnto you? I shall cast you oute fro my face. When ye offre vnto me, I shall turne my face from you: for your solemne feaste dayes, your newe moones, and your circumcisions haue I forsaken. I sente vnto you my seruauntes the Prophetes, whom ye haue taken and slayne, and torne their bodies in peces, whose blood I wyll requyre of youre handes, sayethe the Lorde. Mat. xxiii. Exp. 4.b Ezay. 65.

Thus sayeth the almyghtye Lorde: youre house must be desolate. I wyll caste you oute as the wynd doth the strawe: your children shall not be frutefull, for they haue despysed my commaundement, and doone the thynge that is euyll before me. Youre houses wyll I gyue vnto a people that shall come, and they that neuer herd me, shal bileue in me: & they vnto whome I neuer shewed token, shal doo the thynge that I commaunde them. They haue sene no Prophetes, yet shall they call their synnes to remembraunce, and knowlege them. I repose me vnto the grace, that I wil do for the people which is to com, whose children reioyse in gladnesse: and though they haue not sene me with bodyly eyen, yet in spirite they byleue the thynge that I saye.

And

And now brother, beholde what grete worshyp and se the people that cometh from the East, vnto whom I wyll gyue the kyngdom of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, of Osee, Amos, and Michias: of Joel, Abdi, Jonas, Nahum, and Habacuc: of Sophony, Aggeus, Zachary, and Malachi, which is called also an aungell or messenger of the Lorde.

¶ The Synagoge fyndeth faulte with her owne children. The Gentyles are called.

CAPI. II.

THus sayth the Lorde, I haue brought this people out of bondage. I gaue the my commaundementes by my seruauntes the Prophetes, whome thou wouldest not heare, but despysed my counceils. The mother that bare them, sayth vnto them: Goo your waye you children, for I am a wydow and forsaken: I brought you vp with gladnesse, but with sorowe and heynesse haue I lost you: for ye haue synned before the Lorde your God, and done the thynge that is euil before him. But what shall I nowe doo vnto you? I am a wydowe and forsaken: goo your waye, o my children and aske mercye of the Lorde. As for me, o father, I call vpon the for a wytnesse ouer the mother of these children, whiche wolde not kepe my couenaunt: that thou bringe them to confusion, and their mother to a spoyle, that she beare no more. Let their names be scatred abrode amonge the heathen, let them be put oute of the erth, for they haue thought scorne of my couenaunt.

Woo be vnto the Assur, thou that hydest the vnrighteous by the. Thou wicked people, remembre what I dyd to Sodome & Gomorre whose lande is turned to pytche and asshes. Euen so also wil I do vnto all them that beare me not, sayth the almighty Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde vnto Esdras: tel my people, that I wil gyue them the kyngdom of Jerusalem which I wold haue gyuen vnto Israel: their glory also will I take vnto me, and giue the the euerlastynge tabernacles, whiche I had prepared for them. Genes. xlii. c

The tre of lyfe shall be vnto them a swete smellynge oyntment: they shall neyther laboure nor be werye. Goo ye your waye, and ye shall receyue it. Praye for your selues a fewe dayes, that they maye dwelle therin. Rowe is the kyngdome prepared for you, therfore watche, take heuen and erth to witnesse, for I haue broken the euil in peces, and created the good, for I lyue sayth the Lorde. Mother embrace thy children, and bringe them vp with gladnesse: make theyr fete as fast as a pyller, for I haue chosen the, sayth the Lorde. B

And those that be dede wyll I rayse vp agayne from their places, and bring them out of the graues, for I haue knowen my name in Israel. Feare not thou mother of the children, for I haue chosen the sayth the Lorde. And for thy helpe, I shal send the my seruauntes Eley and Jeremy, after whose counsel I haue sanctified and prepared for the twelue trees with dyuers frutes, and as manye welles flowynge with mylke and hony, and seuen mountaynes, wherupon there grow roses and lylyes, wherin I wyll fyll my children with ioye.

Execute iustyce for the widow, be iudge for the fatherlesse: giue to the poore, defende the comfortlesse, clothe the naked, heale the wounded & sicke, laught not a lame man to scorne, defende the cripple, and let the blynde come in to the syghte of my clerenesse. Kepe the olde and yonge within thy walles, where so euer thou fyndest the dede, couer them, and bury them, and I shall gyue the the fyrst place in my resurrection. Holde stil, o my people, and take thy rest, for thy quietnesse is come. Fede thy children, o thou good nurse, stablish their fete. As for the seruauntes whom I haue gyuen the, there shall not one of them perysshe, for I wyll seke them from thy nombre, were not thy trust. Esay

For when the daye of trouble and heynesse commeth, other shall wepe and be sorowfull, but thou shalte be merye and plentyous. The heathen shall be gelous, but they shall be hable to doo nothynge agaynste the, sayth the Lorde. My handes shall couer the, so that thy children shal not se the fyre euerlastynge. Be ioyfull, o thou mother with thy children, for I wyll deliuer the, sayth the Lorde. Remembre thy dede children, for I shall bringe them out of the erth, and shewe mercy vnto them, for I am mercyfull sayth the Lorde almyghty. C

Embrace thy children vntyl I come, and shew mercy vnto the, for my welles run ouer and my grace shall not fayle.

I Esdras receyued a charge of the Lorde vpon the mount Oreb, that I sholde go vnto Israel. But whe I came vnto Israel they set me at nought, & despised the commaundemet of the Lorde. And therfore I saye vnto you, o ye heathen, that heare & vnderstand: Looke for your shepeherde, he shall gyue you euerlastynge rest: for he is nye at hande that shall come in the ende of the worlde. Be redy to the rewarde of the kyngdom, for the euerlastynge lyght shal shyne vpon you for euermore. Flee the shadowe of this worlde, receyue the ioyfulnesse of youre glorye. I testifye my sauyoure openly: O receyue the gyft that is gyuen you, and be glad, gyuynge thankes vnto hym, that hathe called you to the heauenly kyngdome.

Aryse vp and stand fast: beholde the nombre of those that be sealed in the kynde of the Lorde which are departed from the shadow of the worlde, and haue receyued gloryous garmentes of the Lorde. Take thy nombre, o Sion, and shut vp thy purified, which haue fulfilled the law of the Lorde. The nombre of thy children whom thou longedest for, is fulfylled: beseche the power of the Lorde that thy people, whiche haue ben called from the begynnyng, may be hallowed. D

I Esdras

I Esdras sawe vpon the mounte Syon a greate people, whome I could not numbre, and they al prayed the Lord with songes of thankesgyuynge. And in the myddes of them there was a yong man of an hye stature, more excellent then all they, and vpon euery one of their heades he set a crowne, and was euer hygher and hygher, whiche I marueyled at greatly. So I asked the aungell and sayde: Syr what are these? he answered and sayde vnto me: These be they that haue put of the mortall clothynge, and put on the immortal, and haue confessed and knowledged the name of God. Nowe are they crowned and receyue the rewarde.

Then sayd I vnto the aungel: what yong person is it that crowneth them, and giueth them the palmes in their handes? So he answered and sayd vnto me: It is the sonne of God, whome they haue knowleged in the worlde. Then began I greatly to commende them, that stode so stedy for the name of the Lorde. And to the aungell sayd vnto me: Go thy waye and tell my people what maner of thinges, and how great wonders of the Lorde thy God thou hast seene.

¶ The wonderous workes whiche God dyd for his people are rehersed. Esdras marueyleth that God suffreth the Babylonians to haue rule ouer his people, whiche yet are synners also.

CAPI. III.

IN the thyrtye yere of the fall of the cyty, I was at Babylon, and laye troubled vpon my bedde, and my thoughtes came vp ouer my herte: for I sawe the desolacyon of Syon, and the plenteous wealth of them that dweite at Babylon, and my spirite was sore moued: so that I began to speake fearefull wordes to the hyghest, & sayd: O Lorde, Lorde, thou spakest at the begynnyng, when thou plantedst the earth (and that thy selfe alone) and gauest commaundement vnto the people, and a bodye vnto Adam, whiche was a creature of thy handes, and hast breathed in hym the breth of lyfe: and so he lyued before the, and thou ledest him in to Paradyse, whiche garden of pleasure thy ryghte hande hadde planted or euer the earthe was made. And vnto hym thou gauest commaundement to loue thy waye, whiche he transgressed, and immediatly thou appoyntedst death in hym, and in his generacions. Of hym came nacyons, trybes people and kynredes out of nombre. And euery people walked after their owne wyll, and dyd nyce thynges before the, but thy commaundementes they despised. And in processe of tyme, thou broughtest the waterfloude vpon those that dweite in the worlde, and destroyedst them. And as the deathe was in Adam, so was the waterfloude also here. Neuertheles one of them thou lefteste, euen Noe with his housholde, of whome came all ryghteous men. And it happened, that when they that dweite vpon the earth began to increase, and hadde gotten many chyldren, and were a greate people, they began to be most vngodly then the fyrst. Nowe when they all lyued so wyckedlye before the, thou dyddest chose the a man amonge them, whose name was Abraham. Hym thou louedst, and to him onely thou shewedst thy wyll, and madest an euerlastynge couenaunte with him, promysynge hym thou wouldest neuer forsake his seed. And vnto hym thou gauest Isaac, vnto Isaac also thou gauest Jacob and Esau. So by Jacob, thou dyddest chose him, and put backe Esau. And so Jacob became a greate multitude. Gene. xxi.d

And it happened that when thou ledest his seed out of Egypt, thou broughtest them vp to the mount Syon, bowynge downe the heauens, settynge fast the earthe, mouynge the grounde, makynge the depthes to shake, and troublynge the worlde: and thy glorye went thorowe foure portes of fyre, and earthquakes, and wyndes, and colde: that thou myghtest gyue the lawe vnto the seed of Jacob, and diligence vnto the generacion of Israel. And yet tokest thou not away from them that wycked herte, that thy lawe myght bring forth frute in them. For the fyrst Adam bare a wycked herte, transgressed, and was ouercome, and so be all they that are borne of him. Thus ormayned weyknesse with the lawe in the herte of the people, with the wyckednesse of the roote: so that the good departed away, and the euyll abode styll. So the tymes passed away, and yeres were brought to an ende. Then raysedst thou vp a seruaunte called David, whome thou commaundedst to builde a cyty vnto thy name, and to offer vp incense and a sacrifyce vnto the therin. This was doone nowe manye yeres. Then the inhabytantes of the cyty forsoke the and in all thinges did, euen as Adam and all his generacions had wont: for they also had a wicked herte. Gene. viii.d Rom. viii.d 1. Reg. xi. 2. Reg. v.d

And so thou gauest thy cyte ouer in to the handes of thyne enemyes. Are they of Babylon then better and more ryghteous then thy people, that they shall therfore haue the dominion of Syon? For when I came there, and sawe their vngodlynesse, and so greate wyckednesse that it coulde not be numbred: yea, when my soule saw so many euyll doers in the thirty yere, my herte fayled me: for I saw how thou sufferedst them in such vngodlynesse, and sparedst the wycked doers: but thyne owne people hast thou rooted out, and preserued thyne enemies, and this hast thou not shewed me.

I can not perceyue howe this happeneth. Doo they of Babylon then better then they of Syon? Or is there any other people, that knoweth the fauynge the people of Israel? Or what generacion hath so beleued thy couenauntes, as Jacob? And yet their rewarde appeareth not, and their labour hath no frute. For I haue gone here and there thorowe the heathen, and I se they be ryche and welthye, and thynke not vpon thy commaundementes.

Abb. ij. Wepe

Weye thou therfoze our wicked dede now in the ballaunce, and thens also that dwelle in the woride, and so shall thy name be no where founde, but in Israell. Oz where is there a people vpon earthe, that hathe not hyned before the? Oz what people hathe so kepte thy commaundements? Thou shalte fynde that Israell by name hathe kepte thy preceptes, but not the other people and heathen.

¶ The Aungel reproueth Esdras, bicause he feared to enter in to the profounde iudgement of God.

CAPL IIII.

¶ And the aungell that was sente vnto me (whose name was Uriel) gaue me an answere, and sayd: Thy hert hath taken to moche vpon it in this worlde, and thou thynkest to compasse the waye of the hyest. Then sayde I: Yea my Lorde. And he answered me and sayde: I am sent to shewe the thre wayes, and to set forth thre symilitudes before the: wherof yf thou canst declare me one, I will shewe the also the waye that thou desyrest to se, and I shal shewe the where thy wicked herte commeth. And I sayd: Tell on my Lorde. Then sayd he vnto me: Go thy waye, weye me the weyghte of the fyre, oz measure me the blast of the wynde, oz call me agayne the daye that is past. Then answered I and sayd: What man borne is able to do that? Why requyrest thou suche of me? And he sayd vnto me: Yf I should aske the, how depe dwellinges are on the see? Oz how great water springes are vpon the firmament? Oz how great water springes are in the begynnynge of the depe? Oz whiche are the out goynges of Paradyse? Peradventure thou wouldest saye vnto me: I neuer went downe yet in to the depe nor hel, neither dyd I euer clymme vp in to heuen. Neuertheles now haue I asked the but onely of fyre and wynde, and of the daye thorowe whiche thou hast trauayled, and from whence thou canste not be seuered: and yet canst thou gyue me no answere of them.

He sayd moreouer vnto me: Thyne owne thynges, and such as are growen vp with the can thou not knowe: how shoulde thy bedell then be able to compasse the way of the hyest, and now outwardly in the corrupte worlde to vnderstande the corrupcion that is euident in my syghte? Then sayde I vnto him: It were better we were not at al, then we shold lyue in wickednesse, and suffer, & not to knowe wherfoze. He answered me and sayd: I went in a wod, and the trees toke such a counsel and sayd: Come let vs go, and fyght agaynst the see, that it maye depart awaye before vs, and that we may make vs yet moze woddes. The flouddes of the see also in like maner toke this counsel and sayd: Come let vs go vp and fyght agaynst the trees of the wodde, that we may make our lande the wyder. The thought and counsel of the wodde was but vayne, and nothynge worthe, for the fyre came and consumed the wodde: The thought of the flouddes of the see came likewyse to noughte, for the land flode vp and stopped them. Yf thou were iudge now betweene these two, whom woldest thou iustifye, oz whom woldest thou condemne? I answered and sayd: Verely it is a foolysh thought that they bothe haue deuised. For the grounde is gruen vnto the wod, and the see also hath his place to beare his flodes. Then answered he me and sayd: Thou hast gruen a ryghte iudgement, why iudgest thou not thy selfe also? For lyke as the ground is gruen vnto the wodde, and the see to his flooddes: euen so they that dwell vpon erth maye vnderstande nothyng but that which is vpon erth: and he that dwelleth aboue the heuen, maye onely vnderstande the thynges that are aboue the heuens.

Judith 8.b
1. Para. 28.c

Elias. Jeremias. Esdras.

Then answered I and sayd: I beseche the O Lorde, let me haue vnderstandynge: for it was not my mynde to be curious of thy high thinges, but such as we dayly medle withal/ namely, wherfore that Israell is blasphemed of the heathe, and for what cause the people (whome thou euer hast loued) is gruen ouer to be punished of vngodly nacions: and why? the law of our fathers is brought to noughte, and the written couenaunces come to none effect, and we passe away out of the worlde as the grashoppers, and our lyfe is a very feare, & we are not worthy to obteyne mercy. What wyll he do then vnto his name, which is called vpon ouer vs? Of these thynges haue I asked question.

Then answered he me and sayd: The more thou serchest, the more thou shalt maruayle, for the worlde hasteth fast to passe awaye, and can not compryse the thynges, that are promysed for the ryghteous in tyme to come, for this worlde is full of vnryghteousnesse and wickednesse.

But as concernynge the thynges wherof thou askest me, I will tell the. The euyll is sowen, but the destruction therof is not yet come. Yf the euyll nowe that is sowen, be not couered vpfyde downe, and yf the place where the euyll is sowen, passe not awaye, then can not the thynge come that is sowen with good. For the corne of euyll seede hathe ben sowen in the herte of man frome the begynnyng, and how moche vngodlynesse hath he brought vp vnto this time? and how moche shall he yet bringe forth vntyll he come in to the barne?

1. Esdr. 8.c

Ponder nowe by thy selfe, when the corne of euyll seede is cut downe, how great a barne shall it fyll? I answered an sayd: How and when shal these thinges come to passe? Wher for are ours yeres fewe and euyll? And he answered me, sayinge: Haste not thou to moche vpon the hyest, for thy hastynesse is but vayne, thou makest to moche ado. Dyd not the soules also of the righteous aske question of these thynges in their bedernesse, sayinge: How longe shall I hope of this lacion? When commeth the fruite of my barne, and my rewarde? and vpon this Jeremiel miel the Archaungel gaue them answere, and sayde: Euen when the nombre of the seden is fylled in you: for he hath weyed the worlde in the balance: in measure and nombre hath he measured the tyme, and maketh it not, vntyll the same measure be fulfylled. Then answered I and sayde: O Lorde Lorde, now are we all full of tyme, and for our sakes peraduenture it is not that the barne of the righteous shall not be filled, because of the synnes of them that dwell vpon the erth.

So he answered me and sayde: Goo thy waye to a woman with chylde, and aske of her when she hath fulfylled her nyne manthes/yf her chylded mayde kepe the byrth any longer within her. Then sayd I: No Lord that can she not. And he said vnto me: In the secrete places of soules are lyke the pury chambre of a woman. For lyke as a woman that trauaileth, maketh haste when the time and necessitie of the byrthe is at hande: Euen so vnto the haste to deliuer it that is committed vnto her. Loke what thou desyrest to se, it shal be shewed the from the beginnyng. Then answered I and sayde: Yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syght, and yf it be possible, and yf I be mete therfore, shewe me thi whether there be more to come then is paste, or more paste then is for to come? What is paste I knowe: but what is for to come, I knowe not.

And he sayd vnto me: Stande vp vpon the eight syde, and I shall expounde the symilytude vnto the. So I stode, and beheld, an hote burnynge ouen went ouer before me: and it happened that when the flambe was gone by, the smoke habde the vpper hande. After this there went ouer before me a watery cloude, and sent down moche rayne with a storme: and when the stormy rayne was past, the droppes remayned styll. Then sayde he vnto me: Lyke as the rayne is more then the droppes, and as the syze excedeth the smoke: euen so the measure of the thynges that are paste, habe the vpper hande. Then went the droppes and the smoke aboue: and I prayed and sayde: Shall I lyue (thynkest thou) vntyll that tyme? Or what shall happen in those dayes? He answered me, and sayde. As for the tokens whereof thou askest me, I may tell the of them in a parte: but as touching thy lyfe, I may not shewe the, for I am not sent therfore.

¶ Esdras and the Aungel commen togyther.

CAPI. V.

NOwe herkyn, ouer consernyng the tokens marke this. Beholde, the dayes shall come, that they which dwell vpon erth shal be taken in a great nombre, and the way of the truth shall be hyd, and the lande shall be barryn from faythe, but iniquite shal haue the vpper hande, lyke as thou hast seen now, and as thou hast herde long ago. And the lande that thou seest now to haue rule, shalte then shortly be waste. But yf God graunte the to lyue, thou shalt se after the thirde trompet, that the sunne shall sodenly shyne agayn in the nyght, and the mone thre tymes in 6 day, and bloude shall drop out of wod, and the stone shall gyue his voyce, and the people shall be vnquiet: and euen he shall rule, whome they hope not that dwell vpo erth, and the fowles shal sle, and the Sowrwilde see shall cast out his fish, and make a noyse in the nyght, which many shal not knowe, but they shall all heare the voyce therof.

There shal be a confusion also in many places, and the fire shall be ofte sent agayne, and the wylde beastes shall go their way, and vnclenne women shal beare monsters, and salt waters shall be found in the sweete/and frend shall fight agaynst an other/then shal all wit and vnderstandyng be hyd and put aside in to their secrete place, and shall be sought of many, and yet not be founde: then shall vnrighteousnesse, and vnsupportablenesse haue the vpper hande vpon earthe. One lande also shall aske an other and saye: Is righteousnes gone thorow the? And it shall say, no. At the same tyme shall men hope, but nothynge obteyne: they shall labour, but their wayes shall not prospere.

To shewe the suche tokens I had leue, and yf thou wilt pray agayne, and wepe as nowe, and fast fowr dayes, thou shalt heare yet greater thinges. Then I awaked, and a fearefulnesse went thorow all my body, and my mynde was feble and carefull. So that I almost sowned withal. So the aungel that was come to talke with me, held me, comforted me, & set me vp vpon my fete.

And in the seconde nyght it happened, that Salathiel the Capitayne of the people came vnto me, sayinge: Where habe thou bene? and why is thy countenance so heuy? Knowest thou not that Israell is committed vnto the in the lande of their captiuitie? Go then and eat, and forsake vs not, as the shepherde that leaueth his flocke in the handes of wycked wolues. Then sayd I vnto him: Go thy waye fro me, and come not nye me: and he herd it/and as I sayd, so went he his waye fro me.

And so I fasted seuen dayes, mourninge and weppinge, lyke as Uriel the aungel commaunded me. And after seuen dayes, it happened that the thoughtes of my herte were harpe grieuous vnto me agayne, and my soule receyued the spirite of vnderstandynge, and I begaune to talke with the moofte hyghest agayne, and sayd: O Lorde, Lorde, of euery woode of the erthe, and of all the trees therof, thou hast chosen the one onely vyneyarde, and of all landes of the hole world thou hast chosen the one pyt: and of all flowres of the ground, thou hast chosen the one lily: and of all the depthes of the se, thou hast fylled the one ryuer/and of all buylded cityes thou hast halowed Syon vnto thy selfe: and of all the soules that are created, thou hast named the one wut/and of al the cattel that are made thou hast prouided the one seruy, and among all the multytudes of folkes, thou hast gotten the one people, and vnto this people whō thou louedst thou gauest a lawe that is proued of all.

And nowe, O Lorde, why hast thou geuen this one people ouer vnto manye? and vpon the one roote thou hast prepared other, and why hast thou scattered thy one onely people amonge many? Whiche treade theym downe, yea whiche haue ouer withstande thy promyses, and neuer beleued thy commaundes? And though thou werest angrye vnto the people yet shouldest thou punyshe them with thyne owne handes.

¶ Now when I had spoke these wordes, the angel that came to me the nyght afore, was sent vnto me and sayde vnto me: Heare me & hearken to the thynge that I saye, and I shall tell the more. And I sayd: Speke on my Lorde. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou art sore vexed and troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou the people better than hym that made them? And I sayd: No Lorde, but of verye greate compassion haue I spoken. For my synnes parne me euery houre, bycause I wolde haue experience of the waye of the moost hyest, & to take out part of his iudgement. And he sayde vnto me: that thou mayst not. And I sayd: wherfore Lorde? Wherevnto was I borne then? Or why was not my mothers chylded then my graue? Or had I not seen the misery & trouble of Iacob, and the tranayle of my people of Israel.

And he sayd vnto me: nombre me the thinges that are not yet come / gather me togyther the droppes that are skatered abrode: make me the flowres grene agayne that are wythered: open me the thynge that is closed: and bynge me forthe the wyndes that are shutte vp: & shewe me the ymage of a voyce, & then shall I declare the, the thynge that thou labourest to know. And I sayd: O Lord, Lord who maye knowe these thynges, but he that hath not his dwellynge with men? As for me I am vnwyse: howe maye I then speake of these thynges wherof thou askest me. Then sayd he vnto me: lyke as thou canst do none of these thynges that I haue spoken of, euen so canst thou not fynde out my iudgement, or in the ende the loue that I haue promysed vnto my people.

And I sayd: beholde, O Lorde, yet art thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: and what shall they do that haue dene before me, or we that be nowe, or they that shall come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I will lykē my iudgement vnto a ryngē. Lyke as there is no slacknes of the last, euen so is there no swiftnes of the fyrst. So I answered and sayde: Couldest thou not make shorte (that haue bene made, and that be nowe, and that are for to come) in one, that thou mightest shewe thy iudgement the sooner? Then answered he me and sayde: The creature maye not passe aboue the maker, neyther maye the worlde holde them at ones, that shall be created.

And I sayde: Howe hast thou sayde then vnto thy seruaunte, that thou lyuynge maker, hast made the creature lyuynge at ones, and the creature bare it? euen so might it now also beare them that be present at ones. And he sayde vnto me: Aske the chyldebedde of a woman, and saye vnto her: If thou bryngest forthe chyldren, why doest thou it not togyther, but one after an other? Shape her therfore to byrng forth ten chyldren at ones. And I sayd: She can not, but muste do it one after an other.

Then sayd he vnto me: Euen so haue I geuen a chyldebed vnto the earthe, for thole that be sowen vpon it by processe of tyme. For lyke as a yonge chylde maye not bynge forthe the thynges that belonge to the aged, euen so haue I ordeyned the worlde which I made.

And I aſked and sayde: Seinge thou hast nowe geuen me awaye, I will speake before the: for our mother of whom thou hast tolde me, is yet younge, and nowe she draweth nye vnto age. He answered me and sayd: Aske a woman that beareth chyldren, and she shall tell the. Saye vnto her: wherfore are not they (whome thou hast nowe brought forth) lyke thole that were before the, but lesse of stature: and she shal answere the: They that be borne in the youthe of strength, are of one facyon: and they that are borne in the tyme of age (when the chyldbed fayleth) are other wyse. Consyder nowe thy selfe, howe that ye are lesse of nature then thole that were before you, and so are they that come after you lesse then ye, as the creatures whiche nowe begyn to be olde, and haue passed ouer the strengthe of youthe. Then sayde I: Loude I beseche the, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syghte, shewe thy seruaunte, by whome doest thou vysyt thy creatures?

¶ The Angel instructeth Esdras, and giueth him answere to his questyons.

CAPI. VI.

And he sayde vnto me: In the begynnynge when the grounde was made: before the worlde stode, or euer the wyndes blewe, before it thondered and lyghtened, or euer the foundacions of Paradyse were layde, before the fayre flowres were sene, or euer the mouable powers were stablished, before the innumerable multytude of aungelles were gathered togyther, or euer the hyghnesse of the ayre were lyfted vp, afore the measures of the firmament were named, or euer the chyualrye in Syon were here, and or the present yeres were fassyoned ones, and or euer the imaginacions of them that nowe synne were put abrode, before they were sealed that nowe gather fayethe for a treasure: then dyd I consyder and ponder all these thynges, and they all were made thorowe me, and thorowe me made other, by me also they be ended, & by none other.

Now

Then answered I and sayde: whiche shal be the partynge asunder of the tymes? Or when shall be the ende of the fyrste, and the begynnynge of it that foloweth? And he said vnto me: From Abraham vnto Isaac, when Jacob and Esau were borne of him, Jacobs hande helde fyrst the hele of Esau: for Esau is the ende of this worlde, and Jacob is the begynnynge of it that foloweth. The hande of man betwixte the hele and the hande. Other question (Esdras) aske thou not.

I answered then, and sayde: O Lorde Lorde, if I haue founde fauoure in thy sight I beseche the, shewe thy seruaunt the ende of thy tokens, whereof thou shewedest me parte the last nyght. So he answered and sayd vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete, and heare the perfecte voyce and sounde. There shall come a greate mocion, but the place where thou standest shall not be moued. And therfore when thou hearest the worde, be not afrayde: for of the ende shall the worde and foundacio of the earth be vnderstande. And why? the worde therof trembleth and quaketh for it knoweth, that it muste be chaunged at the ende. And it happened, that whe I had herd it, I stode vp vpon my fete, and herked: and beholde there was a voyce that spake, & the sounde of it was lyke the sounde of many waters, and it sayde. Beholde, the dayes come, that I will begynne to drawe nyghe, and to vysette them that dwell vpon earth, and will begynne to make inquisicio of them, what they be that hurt equyte with vnrighteousnes, and when the lowe estate of them shal be fulfylled: and when the worlde that shall vanysh awaye, shal be ouercome, then will I do these tokens.

The bokes shall be opened before the firmament, and they shall be all togither, & the childe shall of a yere olde shal speake with their voyces: the women with childe shall bring forth vntymely children of thre or foure monethes olde, and they shall lyue, & be ruled vp: & sodenly shal the sowne places appeare as the wilowne, the ful store houses shall sodenly be found emptye, and the trompet shal geue a sounde, whiche when every man heareth they shall be hastily afrayde. At y time shall frendes fight one against an other like enemyes, and the earth shall stande in feare with them.

The springes of the welles shall stande styll, and in thre houres they shal not renne. Moreouer remayneth yet all these thinges that I haue told the, shall escape, and be my sauiacion, and the ende of power worlde. And the men that are preserued, shall se it, they that haue not tasted death frome theyr byrthe: and the hert of the inhabyters shal be chaunged, and turned into another meninge: for euyll shall be put out, & bitternes shall be quenched: as for vayth, it shall florysshe, rotrepcio shalbe ouer come: and the truth, whe she hath bene so longe wit out fruite, shalbe declared. And it happened when he talked to me, that I loked benerely vpon him, before whom I stode, and herde worde sayde to me:

Beholde, I come to shewe the the tyme of y nyght for to come.

If thou wilt praye yet more, and fast seuen dayes agayne, I shall tell the more thinges, and greater then before: for thy voyce is hearde before the hyghest: for why? the myght hath sene thy righteous dealynge, he hath sene also thy chastite, whiche thou hast had euer sence thy youth: and therfore hathe he sent me to shewe the all these thinges, and to saye vnto the: Be of good comfort, & feare not, and haste not with the tymes that are past to thynke vayne thynges, and make not haste of the latter tymes.

And it happened after this, that I wepte agayne, and fasted seuen dayes in lyke maner that I myght fulfyll the thre wekes, whiche he tolde me. In the eyght night was my hert vexed within me agayne, and I begame to speke before the hyghest: for my spirite was greatly set on fyre, and my soule was in distres. And I sayde: O Lorde, thou spakest vnto thy creature fom the beginninge (euen the fyrste daye) and sayedest: Let heauen and erth be made, and thy worde was a perfecte worde. And then was there the spirite, and the darknesse were set on euery syde, and silence: there was no mans voyce as yet there. Then commaundest thou a fayre lyghte to come forth out of thy creatures, that thy worke myght appeare and be sene.

Upon the seconde daye thou madest the spirite of the firmament, and commaundedst it to parte a sunder, and to make a deuision betwixt the waters, that the one part might remayne about, and the other benech. Upon the thyrde day thou commaundest that the waters were gathered in the fourth part of the earth: three partes hast thou dryed vp and kept them, to thentent that men myght sowe and occupye husbandrye therin. Assoone as thy worde went forth, the worche was made. For immediatly there was great innumerable fruite, and many pleasures and bestyes of temptacion. Flowers of chaungeable colour and smell, and this was done the thyrde daye.

Upon the fourth day thou commaundedst that the sonne shulde gyue his lyght, and the moone her lyght: the starres to be set in order, and gauest them a charge to do seruice vnto mankynde that was for to be made. Upon the fyfte day thou spakest vnto the fourth parte, where the waters were gathered, that they shulde bryng forth the liuyng beastes, foules, & fyshes. And so it came to passe, that the dum waters & vnfruteful, brought forth liuynge beastes at the commaundement of God, that all people myght prayse thy wonderous workes. Then didest thou preserue two seades, the one called Enoch and the other Lemuchus, & by them sparedst the one fyft the generacion for the fourth parte (namely, before the waters were gathered together) myght not drowne them both. Agayne thou gauest one grayne, whiche was dryed vp the thyrde daye. That he shulde dwell in the fourth parte, wherin are a thou-

lande lyues. But vnto Lemuchon thou gauest the fourth pace, namely the moyst, and, best kepte hym to bewayle what thou wylt and whan. Vpon the fyfte daye thou gauest commaundement vnto the earth, that before the xi thoulde bringe forth beastes, catel, and all that crepe, and (beſydes this) Adam also whom thou madest lorde of al creatures: Of hym come we all, and ye people also, whō thou hast chosen specially vnto thy self. All this haue I sayd nowe and spoken before the, that I myght shewe, how that the worlde is made for our sakes. As for the other people which also come of Adam, thou hast sayde that they are nothyng, but be lyke a spettle, & hast lykened the aboundaunce of them vnto a droppe (that falleth) from the tote of the bouke.

And nowe, O Lorde, the heathen whiche haue ben reputed as nothynge, haue begonne to be Lordes ouer vs, and to deuoure vs: but we thy people (whome thou hast called the fyrst borne, thy only begotten, and thy feruent louer) are geuen into their handes & power. If the worlde nowe be made for ours sakes, why haue we not the inheritaunce in possessyon with the worlde? How longe shal this endure?

¶ The Angell sheweth Esdras many thynges to come.

CAPI. VII.

ANd it happened after that I had spoke our these wordes, there was sent vnto me an aungell, whych habde ben by me alle the nyghtes afore, and he sayd vnto me: Up Esdras, and heare the wordes that I am come to tell the. And I sayde: speake on Lorde my God. Then sayd he vnto me: The fyre is sette in a wyde place, that it myght be deepe and great: but the entraunce is narrow and small lyke a pyller. For who wolde goo into the fyre, to loke vpon it, and to rule it? If he wolde not shewe the narrowe, howe myght he come into the wyde?

Item an other: A cyte is buylded and sette vpon a wyde fylde, and is full of goodes: the entraunce is narrowe and sodeyn, lyke as yf there were a fyre at the ryght hande, and a depe water at the left, and as it were onlye one steapte path betwyxte them bothe, soo smal that there coulde but one man goo there.

If this cyte nowe were geuen to an heyre, & he neuer went thorowe the perilous waye, howe wolde he receyue his enheritaūce? And I sayde: it is so Lorde. Then sayd he: Euen so is Israel also a portyō. And why? for they sakes haue I made the worlde: and when Adam trāsgressed my statutes, then was the thynge moged that was done. Then were the entraunces of the worlde made narrow, full of sorowe and trauayle: They are but fewe and euell, full of perils and labeure. For the entraunces of the fore worlde were wyde and sure, and brought immortal frute: If ther now which entreth in this worlde maye not vnderstande these greate and large thynges, muche lesse may they vnderstande the secrete thynges: Why disquieteth thou thy selfe then, seynge thou arte but a corruptible man? And what wouldest thou knowe, where as thou arte but mortall? And why hast thou not enquyred as to thyne owne perte the thyng that is for to come, but that to pertein?

Then sayd I: O Lorde Lorde, thou hast ordeined in thy lawe, that ye vnrighteous shulde inherite these thynges, but that the vnfaythfull and vngodly shulde perysshe. Neuertheles the righteous shall make greate thynges and hope for wyde: for they that haue lyued vngodly and vnlawe greate thynges, shal not se the wyde.

And he sayd vnto me: There is no iudge aboue God, ne none that hath vnderstandinge aboue the hyest. For there be many that perysshe, because they despyse the lawe of God that is sette before them. For God hath geuen strayte commaundement to suche as come, that they know what they do, and how they shulde lyue: and yf they kept this they shulde not be punysshed.

Neuertheles they were not obedyent vnto hym, but spake agaynste hym: ymagined vayne thynges, and purposed to frame, & sayd moreouer that there was no God, and that God regarded it not. His wayes haue they not knowen: his lawe haue they despysed, & dempted his promyses: in his statutes and ordynaunces haue they not ben faythfull and vnfaynte, and haue not perfourmed his workes.

And therfore Esdras, vnto the full, plenty, and to the empty, emptynesse. Beholde, the tyme shall come, that these tokens which I haue tolde the, shall come to passe, and the bryde shall appeare: and the earth that now holdeth awaye, shall be shewed: and whosoeuer is delyuered from the foresayd euylles, shall se my wonders. For my sonne Jesus shalbe openlye declared, with those that be with hym: and they that remayne, shall be merry in foure hundred yeares.

After these same yeares shall my sonne Christe dye, and all men that haue lyfe, and the worlde shalbe tourned into the olde syleuce. vij. dayes, lyke as in the fore iudgmentes so that no man shall remayne. And after. vij. dayes, the worlde that yet awaketh not, shal be raysed vp, and shall dye corrupte. And the earthe shall restore those that haue slepte in her, and so shall the dust those that dwell in syleuce, and the secrete places shall delyuer those that be committed vnto them. And the moste hyest shall be openlye declared vpon ye seate of iudgement, and all mysery shall be nyghe awaye, and longe sufferynge shalbe gathered together. But the iudgment shall abyde, the truthe shall remayne, and faythe shall waxe stronge, the worcke shall folowe and the rewarde shall be shewed, the righteousnesse shall waxe, and ye vnrighteousnesse shall beare no rule.

Then sayd I: Abraham prayed fyrst for the the habitacion, and thinke for certaine that tyme is at hande, that ryghtousnes is longe, that peace is come for whom we haue prayed, in the name of Iesus and Abrahamus. Dauid for the Ninimites, and Salomon for them that came to the holy temple, and Helias for them that receaued rayne and for the dead, that he might liue: and perchaūce for the people in the time of Ezechias and diuers others in lyke maner, which haue prayed for many.

Euen nowe hathe the vengeaūce to greatly vp, and wyckednes increased, and the ryghteous haue prayed for the ungodly, wherefore shall it not be so nowe also?

He aunswered me, and sayde: Thou preterist wordes is not the end where corruptyon maye haue rome in it, therefore haue they prayed for vs.

But the daye of doome shall be the ende of this tyme, and the beginning of immortalitie for to come, wherein all corruptyon is ouerpassed, all vnfruitfulnes is forgotten, all vnrighteousnes is lessened and vtterly taken away, ryghteousnes groweth, and the veritie springeth vp. Then shall no man be able to saue hym that is destroyed, nor to oppresse him that hath gotten the victorye.

I aunswered then, and sayde: This is my first and last saying: that it had ben better, not to haue geuen the earth vnto Adam: or els whē it was geuen him, to haue hym from hē he should not synne. For what profyte is it for vs men nowe in this present tyme to liue in heapes, and after death to looke for punyshment? O thou Adam, what hast thou done? For though it was thou that synned, thou arte not fallen alone, but we all that come of the. For what profyte were it vnto vs, yf there be promysed vs an immortall tyme, where as we medle with deadly workes? and that there is promysed vs an euerlastynge hope, where as we sure selues are cruell and haughtye that there are laied vp for vs dwellynges of health and freedome, where as we haue lyued cruell? and that the worshyp of the hyest is kepte to be frute them, which haue lyued a peruerse lyfe where as we haue walked in the moste wycked wayes of all? And yf there shalbe shewed a paradyse, whose fruite endureth for euer, wherin is freedome and medecyne, where as we shall not goo in? For we haue walked in vnpleasant places: and that the faces of the which haue abstayned, shal shyne aboue the starres, where as our faces shalbe blacke and darcke? For whyle we lyued and dyd vnryght ousnes, we consydered not, that we should suffer therfore after death?

Then aunswered he me, and sayde: This is the conclusyon & thought of the battayle, which man hath vpon earth: that yf he be ouercome, he shall suffer as thou haste sayde. But yf he gette the victorye, he shall receyue the thynge that I saye. For this is the lyfe, wherof Moyses spake vnto the people, whyle he lyued, saying: Chose the lyfe, & thou shalt lyue. Neuertheles they beleued hym not, neither the prophetes after him. No nor me which haue spoken vnto them, that heauyer shulde not reach vnto them to their destruccyon lyke as feare is for to come vnto those, that haue ben vnthankefull vnto him that gaue them lyfe, & vnto those that haue despised the hyest, & haue set at nought his lawe: and whyle he is present and lyueth in them, they forsake the waye of ryghteousnes, & walke in the wayes of vanitie, & forget his couenaūt, & transgresse his testamentes, & beleue not his promyses, & serue their vnprofytable lustes, & refuse to knowe his wayes, & despise his holynes, & hate them that feare him. Thinke not these thynges (saieth he) which haue ben in tyme paste, to be iudged alone for the: but for vs also which lyue nowe, that our workes be not iudged alone for tyme paste, but for our owne. For what profyte is it vnto vs, that we shall haue hope of a better place, & yet we worke the workes of the worste? Or what profyte is it vnto vs, that we shall receyue rest, which haue walked in the wayes of trauayle? Or what profyte is it vnto vs, that we shall receyue the tyme of health, which haue walked in the wayes of sycknes? Or what profyte is it vnto vs, that we shall see the habitacion of our fathers in rest, in their dwellynges, which haue kepte not my lawe? Or what profyte is it vnto vs, that we shall receyue the glorye of the hyest, which haue not lyued in the waye of ryghteousnes? Or what profyte is it vnto vs, that we shall receyue the promyses of the hyest, which haue not lyued after his lawe? Or what profyte is it vnto vs, that we shall receyue the fruite of the hyest, which haue not lyued in the waye of ryghteousnes? Or what profyte is it vnto vs, that we shall receyue the tyme of health, which haue not lyued in the waye of sycknes? Or what profyte is it vnto vs, that we shall see the habitacion of our fathers in rest, in their dwellynges, which haue not kepte ryghteousnes, nurtureth it in thy lawe, and reioyceth it with thy vnderstandynge, mortifyeth it as thy creature, and maketh it spunge as thy worke. Seynge then that thou destroyest hym, which with so greate labours is created and fashioned after the commaundement, thou couldest lykewise ordeyn, also that the thynge whiche is made, myghte be preserued.

And this I speake nowe of all men in generall, as thou knowest: but of thy people, for whose sake I am sory: and of thy inheritaunce: for whose cause I mourne, and of Israel, for whome I am wofull: and for Jacob, for whose sake I am greued: therfore beginne I to praye before the, for my selfe and for them, for I se the fall of vs, turne of vs, & dwell vpō earth. But I haue herd the swyftnes of the iudge, which is to come: therfore heare my voyce, and vnderstand my wordes, and I shall speake before the.

This is the begynnynge of the wordes of Esdras, before he was receyued: O Lorde, thou that dwellest in euerlastynges, whose eyes are lyft vp in the ayre, whose throne is stedynge bye, whose glorye and maiesty may not be comprehended, before whome the hostes of heauen stand with trembling, whose beckynge is turned in wynde and fyre, whose word is true, whose talkig is stedfast, whose commaundemente is stronge, whose ordynaunce is fearfull, whose lokc dryeth vp the depthes, whose wrath maketh the mountaynes to melt awaye, and whose truth beareth wytnes: O heare the prayer of thy seruaunt, and marke with thyne eares the petycyon of thy creature.

For whyle I lyue, I will speake, and so longe as I haue vnderstandynge, I will answere. O loke not vpon the synnes of thy people, whiche serue in the truthe. Haue no respecte vnto the wicked studyes of the heithen, but to the desyre of those that kepe thy testimonies with sorowes. Thynk not vpon those that haue walked faynedly before the, but vpon them, which wyll haue knowne thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyll to destroy the whiche haue had beastly maners, but to loke vpō them that haue clenly taught thy lawe. Take thou no indignacion at them, whiche are worse then beastes: but loue them, that alway put their truste in thy ryghteousnesse and glorye: for we and oure fathers haue all the same lyckynes and infirmite but because of oure synnes thou shalte be called mercyfull.

For if thou hast mercy vpon vs, thou shalte be called mercyfull, where as the haue no workes of righteousnes: for the righteous which haue layde vp many good workes to gether shal out of their owne receiue reward. For what is man, that thou shuldest take his pleasure at him? O what is the corrupte vile mortal generacion, that thou shuldest be so rough towarde him?

For of a truth there is no man amōge the that be borne, but he hath dealte wyckedly: and amonges the faythful there is none, whi che hath not done amisse. For in this (O Lorde thy ryghteousnesse and thy goodnes shall be prayed and declared, yf thou be mercyfull vnto them, whiche are not rych in good workes.

Then answered he me and sayde: Some thinges hast thou spoken a right, and accordinge vnto thy worde it shall be. For I wyll not directly consydre the workes of the, whiche haue sinned before death, before the iudgment, before destruction, but I wyll reioyce ouer the workes thought of the ryghteous. I wyl remēbre also the pylgremage the holy mahynge and the rewarde. Lyke as I haue spoken nowe so shall it come to passe. For as the husbande man soweth moche sede vpon the grounde, and planteth manye trees, and yet alwaye the thynge that is sowne or planted is not al kept safe, neither doth it al take rote: Euen so is it of them that are sowne in the worlde, they shall not all be preserued.

I answered then and sayd: If I haue found grace, then let me speake. Lyke as the husbande mans sede perysheth, if it receyue not rayne in due season, or if there come to moch rayne vpon it: Euen so perysheth man also, whiche is created with thy handes, and is like vnto thine owne Image & to thy self, for whose sake thou hast made all thinges, and lykened him vnto the husbande mans sede. We not wrath at vs, O Lorde, but spare thy people, and haue mercye vpon thyne owne inheritaunce: O be mercyfull vnto thy creature.

Then answered he me and sayde: Thinges present are for the presents thynges to come for such as be to come. For thou wanteste yet moche, seynge thou mayste loue my creature about me: I haue oft tymes drawne nygh vnto the, but neuer to the vnrighteous. In this also thou art marueylous before the lorde in that thou hast humbled thy selfe as it becommeth the, and hast not reputed thine owne selfe, that thou art had in such honour amonges the ryghteous. Therfore shal great wretchednes and myserye come vpon them, that in the latter tyme shall dwell in the worlde, for they haue walked in great pryde.

But vnderstande thou for thy selfe, & seke out glory for such as be like therfor vnto you is paradyse opened, the tre of lyfe is plāted, the tyme to come is prepared, plenteousnes made redye, a cyte is buylded for you, and rest is prepared, yea perfecte goodnes and wysdome. The rote of euell is stanched from you, the weakenes and moth is hyd the fro, and vnto hell fleeth corrupcion out of your remembraūce. Sorowes are banyshed away, and in the ende is shewed the treasure of immortalyte. And therfore aske thou no more questions, concernynge the multitude of them that perysh. For they haue taken vpon them, despised the byddē, thought scorne of my lawe, and forsaken his wayes.

Moreouer, they haue troden downe thy ryghteous, and sayd in their harte, that there is no

is no God, yea and that wy thynge, for they dye. For lyke as the thynge that I haue spoken of, is made redy for you: Euen so is thrift and payne prepared for them. For it was not the wyll that man shoulde come to naught: but they whiche be created, haue defyled the name of him that made them, & are vnthankfull vnto him, which prepared lyfe for them. And therfore is my iudgement now at hand. These thynges haue I not shewed vnto all men, but vnto fewe: namely vnto the, and suche as be lyke the.

Then answered I and sayde: Beholde O Lorde, now hast thou shewed me the multitude of the tokens, whiche thou wylt begyn to do at the last: but at what tyme and whē thou hast not shewed me.

¶ Esdras hath vysyons shewed vnto hym.

CAPI. IX.

HE answered me then and sayde: Measure thou the tyme diligently in thy self when thou seest that one part of the tokens come to passe, whiche I haue tolde the before: so shalte thou vnderstande, that it is the very same tyme wherin the hyghest wyll begynne to vysyt the worlde, whych he made.

And when there shall be sene earthquake and vproze of the people in the worlde, then shalt thou well vnderstande, that the moost hyest spake of those thynges, from the dayes that were before the, euen from ỹ beginning.

For lyke as all that is made in the worlde, hath a begynnyng and ende, and the ende is manyfest: Out of the tymes also of ỹ hyghest haue playne begynnynges in wonders and sygnes, and the ende in workynge and in tokens. And euery one that shall be saued, and shall be able to escape by his workes and by fayth, wherin ye haue beleued, shall be preserued from the sayde perels, and shall se my sauyour in my lande and within my borders, for I haue halowed me from the worlde. Then shall they be in carefulnesse, whiche now haue auoyded my wayes: and they that haue cast them out despytefully, shall dwell in payne.

For suche as in their lyfe haue receaued benefytes, and haue not knowen me, and they that haue abhorred my lawe, whyle they had yet libertie, and when they had yet open rowme of amendement and conuersyon, and vnderstode not: but despyted it: the same shall know it after death in payne. And therfore be thou nomore curyous: howe the vngodly shall be punished, ỹ how the righteous shall be saued, and whose the worlde is, ỹ for whō the worlde was made, and when it is. Then answered I and sayde: I haue talked before, and now I thinke, and wyll speake also hereafter, that there be many mo of them whiche perysshe, then shall be saued, lyke as the flood is greater then the droppes.

And he answered me, sayenge: Lyke as the fielde is also ỹ frute: as ỹ flowres be so are the colowres also: suche as the worke is, such is also the worke: and as the husbande man is him selfe, so is his husbandrye also, for it was the tyme of the worlde. And when I prepared for them that are now, or euer the worlde was made, wherin they should dwell, then was there no man that withstode me. Now when euery one was, and the maker also in the worlde whiche is now prepared, & the moneth that ceaseth not, and the lawe which is vnsearchable, they manners were corrupte. So I considred the worlde, and beholde, there was peryl, bicause of the thoughtes that were come in to it. And I saw, and spared them greatlye, and haue kepte me a wynebery of the grapes, and a plant from among many generacyons. Let the multitude peryth then, whiche are growen vp in vayne, and let my grape and wynebery be kept: euen my plant: for with great labour haue I made it vp.

Yet wylt thou lefte yf thou wylt take vpon the yet seuen dayes me (but thou shalte not fast in them) go thy waye then into the fielde of flowres, where no house is buylded, and eate only of the flowres of the fielde, fast not flesh, drynke no wyne, but eate flowres onlye, praye vnto the hyest contynually, so wyll I come, and talke with the.

So I went my waye, and came in to the fielde which is called Ardath (lyke as he commaunded me) and there I sate among ỹ flowres and ate of the herbes of the fielde, and the meate of the same satisfyed me. After seuen dayes, I sate vpon the grasse, my herte was vexed within me lyke as afore, and I opened vp mouth, and began to talke before the hyest, and sayde: O Lorde, thou that shewest thy self vnto vs, thou hast declared and opened thy self vnto our fathers in ỹ wylderneſſe, in a place where no man dwelleth, in a barren place, when they came out of Egypte, and thou spakest, sayenge: Heare me O Israel, and marke my wordes thou sede of Jacob. Beholde, I sowe my lawe in you, and it shall bryng frute in you, and ye shall be honoured in it for euer. For our fathers which receyued the lawe, kept not, and obserued not thy ordinaunces and statutes, and the frute of thy lawe was not destroyed: for it ought not, for why? it was thyne. For they that receyued it perysshed, bicause they kepte not the thynge that was sowen in them.

Lo it is a custome when the ground occupyeth frute, as the sede ỹ is sowen, or the shyppe, or the table, meate and drynke, that when it perysheth and is broken, wherin a thyng is sowen, or wherin any thyng is put: the thynges also perysshe in our hondes, which are sowen or put therin. But not so in such wise: but kepte for the thyng that is sowen, and sene therin, remayneth the same, ỹ is sowen, and not perysshed. Behold, I sowed my lawe in you, and it shall not perysshe in you, but remayne in his fulnesse.

And when I considered that thynges of my selfe after this manner, I lifted vp my eyen, and sawe a woman vpon my ryght syde, & Lamentacion. Esdras. Deut. xxxii. Esdras. Esdras. Esdras had ashes upon her heade.

Then let I my thoughtes go, & I was in, and turned me vnto her, & sayde: Wherfore wepest thou, why art thou so sory and discomforted? And she said vnto me: Syr, let me bewayle my selfe and take yet more sorow: for I am sore vexed in my mynde, and brought very lowe. And I sayde vnto her: what ayleth the? Or who hath done any thing to the? tell me. She sayde: I haue bene fruitefull and baren, and haue had an husbande thirty yeres. And these thirty yeres I do nothig els daye & nyght and al houres, but make my prayer to the highest. After thirtye yeares God herde me thy handmayden, loked vpon my myserye, considred my trouble, and gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of him, so was my husbande also, and all my neighboures and we gaue greate honoure vnto the mightye. And I nourished him vp great trauayle. So when he grew vp, and came to the tyme that he shulde haue a wyfe, I made a feaste.

¶ Esdras and the women that appeareth vnto him common together.

CAPI. X.

AND it happened that when my sonne went in to his chambre, he fell downe and dyed. Then ouerthrew we all the lyghtes, and all my neyghboures rose vp to comforte me. Then toke I my rest vnto the second day at nighte: whe they had al rested that they myghte comforte me, I rested also, and rose vp by nyght, and fled, and am come hither in to this felde, as thou seist: and am purposed not to come in the cytye, but to remayne here, and neither to eate ne drinke but continually to mourne and to fast, vntyll I dye.

Then let I my meditations and thoughtes fal, that I was in, and spake to her in displeasure: O thou folyshe woman, seist thou not ours heuynesse and mourninge, & what happeneth vnto vs? how Sion our mother is al wofull and sorye, and how she is clene brought downe and in myserye? seynge we be all nowe in heuynes, and make oure mone (for we be all sorowfull) As for the heuynes that thou takest, it is but for one sonne. Demaunde the earth, and she shall tell the, yt it is she which ought by reason to mourne for the fall of so manye that growe vpon her.

For from the beginninge al men are borne of her, and other shall come: and beholde, they walke almoste all in to destructiō, and many of them shall be roted out

Who shulde then (by reason) make more mourninge, then the earth hath lost so greate a multytude? and not thou, whiche art sory but for one. But yf thou wouldest saye vnto me: My mourninge is not lyke the mourninge of the earth, for I haue lost the frute of my body, whiche I bere with heuines: but the earth is according to the maner of the earthe, the present multytude goeth away into her, as it is come to passe: Then saye I vnto the: lyke as thou hast borne with trauayle and sorowe, euen so the earth also hath the ordynaunce geuen her frute vnto man, for vnto him I made her. And therfore withholde thy sorow and heuynes by thy selfe, and take what happeneth vnto the, beare it stoutely. For yf thou iuggest the matche and take al God to be righteous and good, and receyuest his councell in tyme, thou shalte be commended therin. Go thy way then into the cyty to thy husbande.

And she sayd vnto me: that wyl I not do, I wyl not go into the cyty, but heare wyl I dye. So I admoued more with her, and sayde: Do not so, but be counselled, and sorowe me: for how many falles hath Sion? Be of good cōfort for the sorow of Jerusalem. For thou seist that our Sanctuary is layed waste our aulter broken, our temple destroyed, our playnge of instrumentes and singinge layed downe, the chaunche sowninge put to silence, oure myrthe is banished away the light of oure candelstycke is quenched, & ark of the couenaunte is taken from vs, all oure holy thynges are defyled, and the name that is called vpon oure vs, is dishonored: our children are put to shame our preestes are brente, oure Leuites are caryed awaye in to captyuyte, oure virgins are defyled, and oure wyues rauished, our righteous men spoyled, and our children kylled, our yong me are broughte in bondage, and our stronge worthyes are become weake: and Sion (whiche seale is the greatest of all) is loosed vp from her worshyp for she is deliuered into the handes of them that hate vs.

And therfore shake of thy greate heuynes, and put awaye the multytude of sorowes: that the myghtye maye be mercyfull vnto vs, and that the lyghte may gyue the rest from thy labours and trauayle. And it happened, that when I was talkyng with her, her face dyd shyne and glysten, so that I was afrayde of her, and mused what it might be. And immediately she caste oute a greate voyce, verye fearefull, so that the earth shoke at the noyse of the woman: and I loked, and beholde, the woman appeared vnto me no more: but there was a cyte buylded, and a place was shewed from the ground and foundacion.

Then was I afrayd, and cryed with loude voyce, and sayde where is Uriel the aungel, which came to me at the fyrste? For he hathe caused me to come in many consideracions of hygh thoughtes, and myne rude is turned to corruption, and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakinge these wordes, he came vnto me, and loked vpon me, and I laye as one that had bene dead, and myne vnderstanding was suttered. and he toke me by the ryghte hand & comforted me, & set me vp vpon my fete, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth the? and why is thine vnderstanding troubled and thy vnderstādyng of thy harte, and wherfore art thou sorye? And I sayde: Because thou hast forsaken forsake me, and I have done according vnto thy wordes. I went in to the feld, & there have I fine thinges, that I am not able to expresse. He said vnto me: Stand vp, and be manly, & I shall give the exhortacion.

Then layd I: Speke on to me my Lorde, forsake me not, lest I die in vayn: for I have seene that I knew not, and herd that I be not know. Or shal my vnderstanding be deceyued, and my mynde? But now I beseche the, that thou wilt shew thy seruaunt of this wonder, he answered me then & said: heare me and I shal enformer the, and tell the wherfore I am afrayd, for the hiest hath opened many secret thynges vnto the.

He hath seene that thy way is right, & that thou takest sorow continually for thy people and makest great lamentacion for Sion, and therfore vnderstande the vision which thou sawest a litle whyle agoo after this maner: Thou sawest a woman mourning, and thou hast comforted her. Neuertheles now seest thou the likenes of the woman no more, but thou thoughtest there was a city buylded: & sythe as she tolde the of the fall of her sonne, so is this the answer: the woman whom thou sawest is Sion, and where as she tolde the that she hath ben. xxx. yeres vnfruitful & barren, those are the. xxx. yeres, wherin there was no offring made in her.

But after thirty yeres Salomon buylded her, and offred, and then bare she hym a sonne. And where as she told the that she norysshed him with labour, that was the dwellynge of Jerusalem, but where as the sonne dyed in her chambre, that is the fal of Jerusalem. And thou sawest her fyrcelle how she mourned for her sonne: and what els happened vnto her, I have shewed the. And nowe God seeth that thou art sory in thy mynde, & suffrest from thy hert for her, and so hath he shewed the her clere vselle, and the fayr vselle of her beauty.

And therfore I badde the remayne in the feld, where no house is buylded. For I knewe that the hyghest wolde shewe this vnto the, therfore I commaunded the to goo in to the feld, where no foundacyon nor buyldynge is. For in the place where the hyest wil shew his cite, there shall be no mans buyldynge. And therfore feare not, and let not thy hert be afrayde, but goo thy waye in, and se the glorious and fayre buyldynge, and howe great it is, and howe great thou thynkest it after the measure of thyne eyes, and then shalte thou heare as moche as thyne eares maye comprehende. For thou art blessed a-boue many other, and art called to the hyest, as the fewe. But to morowe at nyghte thou shalt remayne here, and so shal the hiest shewe the visions of the thynges, which he wyl do vnto them that dwell vpon earthe in the last dayes, so I slepte the same nyghte & the as he commaunded me.

¶ In this chapter and in the two next ensuing, he maketh mencion of certayne visions, and of the interpretacion thereof.

CAPI. XI.

Then sawe I a dreame: and beholde, there came vp from the see an Egle, which had twelue wynges and three heades.

And I sawe and beholde, he spred his wynges ouer all the earth, and all the windes of the ayre blewe in them, and he were gathered together against. And I behelde, and out of his fethers there grewe other lytle contrary fethers: the heades rested, the herd in the middest was greater then the other, yet rested it with the residue.

Moreouer I sawe, that the Egle flewe with his wynges, and raigned vpon erth, and ouer all them that dwel vpon the erth: and I sawe that all thynges vnder heuen were subiecte vnto him, and no vnclenes against him no not one creature vpon erth. I sawe also that the Egle rose vp vpon his clawes, and gaue a sounde with his fethers, & a voyce, sayinge after this maner: watche not all togither. Slepe euery man in his owne place, and watche for a time, but let the heades be preserued at the last. Nerthelesse I sawe that the voyce went not out of his heades, but from the myddest of his body. And I nombred his contrary fethers, and beholde there were eyght of them. And I looked, and beholde vpon the right syde there arose one fether, and raigned ouer al the erth. And it happened that when it raigned, the rule of it came, and the place therof appeared no more. And the next following rose and raigned and had a great time: and it happened, that when it raygned, the rule of it came also, lyke as the tyrst, so that it appeared no more.

Then came there a voyce vnto it, and said: Heare thou that hast holden in the earthe so longe, this I saye vnto the before thou begynnest to appere no more. There shal none after the, attayne vnto thy time. Then arose the thyrde, and raygned as the other afore, and appered no more also. So went it with all the residue one after an other, so that euery one raygned, & then appeared no more.

Then I loked, & beholde, in processe of tyme the fethers that followed, were set vp vpon the ryght syde, that they myghte rule also: & some of them ruled, but within a whyle they appered no more: for some of them were set vp, but ruled not.

After this I loked, and beholde the twelue fethers appered no more, and the two wynges: and there was no more vpon the Egles body, but two heades that rested, & sixe fethers. Then sawe I also that the sixe fethers were parted in two, and remayned vnder the herd that was vpon the right side, for the foure continued in their place. So I loked, & beholde, they that were vnder the winges thought to set vp them selues, and to haue the rule. There was there one set vp, but shortly it appered no more, and the seconde was sooner away then the first. And I beheld, and lo, the two thought also by the selues to raigne: & whē they so thoughte: beholde, there waked one of the heades that were at rest, namely, it that was in the middest, for that was the greater of the two heedes. And then I sawe that the two heedes were fitted with him, and the herd was toured with them that were by hym, & ete up the two vnder wynges that wolde haue raigned.

But this heed put the hole erth in feare, & bare rule in it, ouer all those that dweit vpō erth with moch labour, and he had the gouernaunce of the world, ouer all the foules that haue ben. After this I loked, and beheld, the heed that was in the middest, soberuly appered no more, lyke as the wynges: then came the two heedes, which ruled vpon earth, & ouer those dweit therin. And I beheld, and lo, the heed vpon the right syde, deuoured it that was vpon the left syde. And I herd a voyce, which sayd vnto me: loke before the, and consyder the thing that thou seist. Then I sawe, & beholde, as it were a lyon that roreth, ramayng hastely out of the wodde, and he sent out a mannes voyce vnto the Egle, and said: Heare thou, I will talke with the, and the hyest shal say vnto the: Is it not thou that hast the victorye of the foure beastes, whome I I made to raigne vpon erth, & in my world, and that the ende of their tymes might come therow them?

And the fourth came, and ouerwan al the beestes that were paste, and had power ouer the world with great fearfulnesse, and ouer the hole compasse of the erth in the most wicked labour, and so long tyme dweit he vpon the erth with disceyte, and the erth hast thou iudged not with truth. For thou haste troubled the meke, thou hast hurt the peaceable & quiet, thou haste loued lyers, and destroyed the dwellynges of them that brought forthe fruite, and hast cast down the walles of such as did the no harme. Therfore is thy wrongous dealyng and blasphemye come vp vnto the hyest, and thy pryde vnto the myghty. The hyest also hath loked vpon the proud tymes, and beholde, they are ended, and their abhominacions are fulfilled. And therfore appere no more thou Egle, and thy horrible wynges and thy wycked fethers, and thy vngracyous heades, and thy synfull clawes, and all thy hayrie body: that the earth be maye be refreshed, and come agayne to her selfe, when she is deliuered from thy violence, and that she maye hope for the iudgement and mercye of hym that made her.

CAPI. XII.

And it happened when the Lyon spake these wordes vnto the Egle, I sawe, & beheld, the herd that afore had the vpper hande appered no more: neyther dyd the four wingis appere any more, that came to hym, & were set vp to raigne, and their kingdom was smal and ful of vprore. And I saw and beholde, they appered no more, & the hole body of the Egle was hyet, and the erth was in greate feare. Then awaked I oute of the traunce of my mynde, and from great feare, and sayd vnto my spirite: lo, this haste thou geuen me, in that thou serchest out the wayes of the hyest: lo yet am I wery in my mynde, and very weyke in my spirite, & litle strength is there in me, for the greate feare that I receyued this nyght. Therfore will I now beseche the hyest, that he will comfort me vnto the ende: and I sayde, Lorde, Lorde, yf I haue founde grace before thy syghte, and yf I am iustifyed with the, before many other, and yf my prayer be com vp before thy face, comforte me then, and shewe me thy seruaunte the interpretacion and playne difference of this horrible syght, that thou mayst perfectly comforte my soule: for thou haste iudged me worthye, to shewe me the laste of tymes.

And he sayd vnto me: this is the interpretacion of this syght. The Egle whome thou sawest come vp from the see, is the kyngdom whiche was seene in the vision of thy brother Daniel, but it was not expounded vnto him for nowe I declare it vnto the. Beholde, the dayes come, that there shall ryse vp a kyngdome vpon erth, and it shall be feared about all the kyngdomes that were before it. D

In the same kyngdome shall twelue kynges raygne one after an other. For the second shal begyn to raygne, & shal haue more tyme then the other. And this do the twelue wynges signify which thou sawest. As for the voyce that spake, and that thou sawest go out from the heedes, but not from the body, it betokeneth that after the tyme of that kyngdome, there shall aryse great stryuynges, and it shal stand in peryl of fallyng: neuertheles it shal not yet fall, but shall be set in to his begynnyng. And the syght vnder wynges which thou sawest hange vnto the wynges of hym, betoke that in him there shall a tyme syghte kynges, whose tyme shal be but smal, and their yeres swyft, & two of them shall beare. But when the middest time commeth, there shal be foure kept in the time, when his tyme beginneth to come, that it maye be ended, but two shal be kepte vnto the ende.

And where as thou sawest thre heedes resting, this is the interpretacion: In his last shal the hyest rayse vp three kyngdomes, and call many agayne in to them, and they shal haue the dominion of the earth, and of those that dwell therin, with moche labour about all those that were before them. Therfore are they called the heedes of the Egle: for it is they that shall bryng forthe his wyckednesse agayne, and that shal performe and fynyshe his laste. And where as thou sawest that the great heed appeared no more, it signifyeth that one of them shall dye vpon his bedde, and yet with payne, for the two that remayne shal be slayne with the swerde, for the swerde of the one shall deuour the other, but at the last shall he fall therow the swerd hym selfe.

And where as thou sawest two vnderwinges vpō the head that is on the ryght syde, it signifyeth that it is they, whom the hyest hathe kepte vnto their ende: this is a small kyngdom, & ful of trouble. The lyon whom thou thou sawest ryssynge vp out of the wod, and rorynge and speakynge vnto the Egle, and rebukynge hym for his vnrighteousnesse, in the wynde, whiche the hyest hathe kepte for them & for theyr wychednesse vnto the ende: he shall reproue them, and vexe them a fewe before them. For he shall sette them lyuynge before the iudgement, and shal rebuke them: for the residue of my people shall be deliuer with trouble, those that be preserued ouer myne endes: and he shall make the ioyful vntyl the commyng of the day of iudgement, wherof I haue spoken vnto the from the beginning. This is the dreame that thou sawest, and this is the interpretacion. Thou onely hast bene mete to knowe the secrete of the hyest.

Therfore wryte all these thynges that thou haste sene in a boke, and hyde them, and teache them the wyse in whom people, whose hertes thou knowest, maye comprehende & kepe these secretes. But wayte thou here thy selfe yet seuen dayes moo, that it maye be shewed the, what so euer it pleaseth the hyghest to declare vnto the, and with that he wente his wayt.

And when al the people perceyued, that the seue dayes were past, and I not come agayn into the city, they gathered them al togither from the least vnto the most, and came vnto me, & sayd: what haue we offended the? and what euyll haue we done agaynst the, that thou forsakest vs, and sittest here in this place? for of all people thou only art left vs as a grape of the vine, and as a candle in a darke place, and as an haue and hyp preserued from the tempest. Haue we not vis aduersitie ynough, but thou muste forsake vs? Were it not better for vs, that we had ben brent with Sion. For we are no better then they that dyed there: and they wepte with loud voyce. Then answered I them and sayde: Be of good comforte, O Israell, and be not hevy thou house of Jacob, for the hyest hathe you in remembraunce, and the myghty hath not forgotten you in temptacion. As for me, I haue not forsaken you, neyther am I departed from you: but am come in to this place to pray, bicause of the mysterye of Israell, that I myghte aske mercy for the lowe estate of your Sanctuarye. And nowe goo youre waye home euery man, and after these dayes wyll I come vnto you. So the people went their waye in to the citye, lyke as I commaunded them: but I remayned styl in the felde seuen dayes, as the aungell badde me: and I ate onely of the flowres of the felde, and had my meat of the herbes in those dayes.

CAPL. XIII.

And it happened after the seuen dayes, that I dremed a dreme by nyghte. And behold, there arose a wynde from the see, that it moued all the floudes therof. And I loked, and behalde, the man was stronge, & inuyroned with the cloudes of heuen, & when he turned his countenaunce to confyder, all the thinges trembled that were sene vnder him: and when the voyce went out of his mouthe, all they brent that herd him, lyke as the erth when it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe, and beholde, there was gathered togither a multitude of men out of nombre from the foure wyndes of the heuen, to fight against the man that came out from the see. And I loked, and beholde, he graued him selfe a greate mountayne, and flewe vp vpon it. But I wolde haue sene the border or place, wherevnt the hyll was graue, and I coulde not.

I sawe after these, that all they whiche came to fyghte agaynst hym, were sore afrayde, and yet durst they fyght. Neuerthelesse, when he sawe the fearcenesse and violence of the people, he neyther lyfte vp his handes, ne helde in werde nor any weapen: but only (as I sawe) he sent oute of his mouthe as it had ben a blast of fyre, & out of his lyppes the wynde of the flambe: and out of his tonge he caste oute sparkes and stormes, and they were all myxte togyther the blaste of fyre, the winde of the flambes, and the great storme, and fell with a rushe vpon the people whiche was prepared to fight, and brent them vp euerychone: so that of the innumerable multitude there was nothyng sene, but only dust and smoke. When I sawe this, I was afrayde.

Afterwarde sawe I the same man come downe from the mountayne, and callynge vnto hym an other peaceable people: and there came moche people vnto hym: some were glad, some were sore, some of them were bounde, so that they were carryed and brought forth.

Then was I sycke thorowe greate feare, and I awaked, and sayd: thou hast shewed thy seruaunt al thy wonders from the beginnynge, and haste counted me worthye, that thy myghtest receyue my prayer: shewe me nowe yet the interpretacyon of this dreame. For thus I consyder in my vnderstandyng: Wo vnto them that shall be lefte in those dayes: and moche more woo vnto them that are not lefte but yude: for they that were not lefte, were in heuynesse.

Nowe vnderstande I the thynges that are layde vp in the latter dayes, which shal happen vnto them, and to those that are not lefte behinde. Therfore are they come in to great perylles, and many necessities, lyke as these dreames declare. Yet is it rather, that he whiche sustreeth harme, come in these, then to passe awaye as a cloude out of the worlde, and not to se the thynges that shall happen in the last.

Then answered he me, and sayd: The interpretacion of the fyghte shall I shewe the, and I will open vnto the, the thing that thou hast required. For thou haste spoken of them that are lefte behynde, and this is the interpretacion. He that taketh awaye the perill in that tyme hath kepte hym selfe. They that be fallen in to parme, are suche as haue wor-hes end sayth vnto the most mighty. I nowe this therfore, that they which be left behind are more blessed then they that be dead. ¶ This is the meanynge of ỹ vision. Where as thou sawest a man commynge vp from the depe of the see, the same is he which God the hyghest hath kept a great season, whom by his owne selfe shal deliuer his creature, & he shal ordre them that be left behynd. And where as thou sawest, that out of his mouthe there came a blast of wynde, fyre, and storme, & how that he lyfte vp neyther swerde nor weapon, but that the rushyng in of hym destroyed ỹ hole multitude that came to fyght agaynste hym:

it signifieth, that the dayes come, when God wyll deliuer them that are vpon earthe, and in a traunce of mynde shal he come vpon the that dwell in the earth. And one shall vnder-take to fyght agaynste an other, one citye a-gaynst an other, one place agaynst an other, Mach. xxiii. a one people agaynst an other, and one realme against an other. When this cōmeth to passe then shall the tokens come that I shewed the before, and then shall my sonne be declared, whome thou sawest clyme vp as a man. And when all the people heare his voyce, euery man shall in theyr owne lande leaue the batayle that they haue one agaynste an other. & an innumerable multitude shall be gathered togyther, as they ỹ be willynge to come & to ouercom hym by fyghtyng. But he shal stād vpon the top of the mount Syon. Neuerthelesse Sion shall come, and shal be shewed, beynge prepared and buylded for all men, lyke as thou sawest the hyl grauen forth without any handes. But my sonne shal rebuke ỹ peo ple that are come for their wickednes, with the tempest, and for their euyll ymagynacy-ons: and their paynes wherwith they shall be punyshed, are lykened vnto ỹ flambe, and without any labour shall he destroye them, euen by the lawe, whiche is compared vnto
the fyre.

And where as thou sawest, that he gathered an other peaceable people vnto hym:
those are the ten tribes which are caryed away prysoners out of their own land, in the tyme of Osea the kyng, whom Salmanasar the kyng of Assiria toke prisoner and caried them ouer the water, and so came they in to an other lande.

But they gaue them this counsel, that they shold leaue the multitude of the heathē, and to go forth in to a farther countrey, where ne ver mankynde dwelt: that they myght there kepe their statutes, which they never kept in their owne land, and so they entred in at the narow passages of the water of Euphrates, D and God shewed tokens for them, and helde Esdras. 8 still the flood till they were passed ouer: for Iosue. 3 thorow that countrey there was a great way namely of a yere and a halfe iourney, for the same region is called Asareth.

Then dwelt they there vnto ỹ latter time:
and when they come forth agayne, the hyest shall holde styll the springes of the streame ageyne, that they maye go thorowe. Therfore sawest thou the multitude with peace. And they that be lefte behynde of thy people, are thole that be found with in my border. Now when he destroyeth the multitude that is gathered togyther, he shall defende his people ỹ remayne, and then shall he shewe them great wonders.

Then sayd I: O Lorde Lorde, shewe me this, wherfore haue I sene the man comming vp from the depe of the see? And he sayd vnto me: lyke as thou canst neither lerne out nor know these thinges that are in the depe of ỹ see, euen so mayst thou not se my son, or those that be with him, but in the tyme of the day.
This is the interpretacion of the dreme whi che thou sawest, therfore thou onely art here lightened: for thou hast forsake thine owne lawe, and applyed thy diligence vnto mine, and sought it. Thy lyfe hathe thou ordred in wysdom, and hast called vnderstandyng thy mother, and therfore haue I shewed the, the treasure of the hyest. After these dayes I wyl shewe the more, and talke with the at more large, yea hye and wonderous thynges wil
I declare vnto the.

Then went I forthe in to the felde, gyuyng prayse and thankes greatly vnto God because of his wonders whiche he dyd in tyme, and because he gouerneth the same, and suche as is in tyme, and there I sat thre dayes.

¶ God appeareth vnto Esdras in the busshe, and sheweth hym what he shall do.

CAPL XIIII.

VPon the thyrd daye I sat vnder an oke 1 tree, then came there a voyce vnto me out of the bush, and said: Esdras, Esdras? And I said: here am I Lorde, and stode vp vpon my fete. Then spake he vnto me: In the busshe dyd I appere vnto Moses, and tal ked vnto him, when my people serued in Egypt Exo. iii.
and I sent him, and led my people out of Egypt, and brought him vpon the mount Syna where I helde hym by me a longe season, and tolde hym my wonderous workes, & shewed him the secretes of the tymes and the ende, & commaūded him, saying: these worde shalt thou declare, and not hyde them.

And nowe I saye vnto the, that thou laye vp in thyne herte, the dremes that thou hast sene, and the interpretacions whiche I have shewed the: for thou shalt be receyued of al, thou shalt be tourned, and remayne with my counsell, and with suche as be lyke the, vntil the tymes be ended. ỹ for the worlde hath lost his youth, and the tymes begyn to waxe old.
ỹ for the tyme is deuyded in to twelue par-tes, and ten partes of it are gone alredye, and halfe of the tenthe parte: yet remayneth there that, which is after the half of the tenth parte.

Therfore prepare and ordre thy house, & 2
reforme thy people: comfort suche of them B as be in trouble, and tell now of the destruction, let go from the mortal thoughtes, cast away

awaye the burthens of mē, put of the wyghe nature: laye vp in some places the thoughtes that are moost heuy vnto the, and haste to flye from these tymes: for suche cruel and wyckednesse as thou hast nowe true happen, shall they doo yet moche worse. for the weaker that the worlde and the tyme is, the more shall tymne and wyckednesse increase, in them that dwell vpon earthe. for the truthe is fled farre awaye, and leynge is harde at hande. for now hasteth the vision to come, that thou hast sene.

Then answered I and sayde: Beholde Lorde, I will go as thou hast commaunded me, and reforme the people which are present. But they that shal be borne afterwarde who will enbolde or rebuke theym? Thus the worlde is set in darkenesse, and they that dwell therin are without light: for thy lawe is kyndled, bycause no man knoweth the thinges that are done in the, or that shal be done. If I haue founde grace before the, sende the holy ghost in to me, and I shal wryte al that hathe bene doone in the worlde sence the begynnynge, whiche was wryten in thy lawe, that men maye fynde the pathe, and that they whiche will lyue in the latter dayes, maye lyue.

And he answered me, sayinge: Goo thy waye, gather thy people together, and saye vnto the that they seke the not for .xl. dayes, but loke thou gather the mayne bore trees, and take with the Sarea, Dabria, Selemia, Echanus, and Asiell: these fyue whiche are redy to wryte swyftly, and come hyther, and I shall lyghte a candle of vnderstandynge in thyne herte, whiche shall not be put out, tyll the thynges be performed, whiche thou shalte begyn to wryte. And then shalte thou declare some thynges openly vnto the perfecte, and some thynges shalte thou shewe secretly vnto the wyse. To morowe this houre shalte thou begyn to wryte.

Then wente I forthe (as he commaunded me) and gathered al the people together, and sayd: Heare these wordes, O Israell: Our fathers from the begynnynge were straungers in Egypte, from whence they were delyuered, and receyued the lawe of lyfe, whiche they kepte not, whiche ye also haue transgressed after them. Then was this land and the lande of Syon parted among you by lot to possesse. But youre fathers and ye youre selues also haue doone vnrighteousnesse, and haue not kepte the wayes whiche the highest commaunded you. And for so moche as he is a righteous iudge, he toke from you in time the thynge that he had gyuen you. And nowe are ye here, & your brethren amonges you. Therfore yf so be that ye will subdue your owne vnderstandynge, and reforme youre herte, ye shall be kepte alyue, & after deathe shall ye obteyne mercye. For after deathe shall the iudgemente come, when we shall lyue agayne: and then shal the names of the righteous be manyfest, and the workes of the vngodlye with theyr workes, shall be declared. Lette no man therfore come nowe vnto me, ne aske anye questyon of me these fortye dayes.

So I toke the fyue men (as he commaunded me) and we went in to the felde, and remayned there, the nexte daye a voyce called me, sayinge: Esdras, open thy mouthe, and drynke that I gyue the. Then opened I my mouth, and beholde he reached me a full cup which was full of water, but the colour of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it and dranke. And when I had dronken it, my herte habde vnderstandynge, and wysdome grewe in my breste: for my spirite was kepte in remembraunce, and my mouth was opened, and shut no more. The hyest gaue vnderstandinge vnto the fyue men, that they wrote the hye thinges of the nyght, which they vnderstode not. But in the nyght they ate breed: as for me, I spake in the day, and held my tonge by nyght. In fortye dayes they wrote two hundred and foure bokes.

And it happened when the fortye dayes were fulfylled, that the hyest spake, sayinge: The hyest that thou hast written, speake openly, that the worthye and vnworthy maye rede it. But the thre score and ten laste, that thou mayst shewe it onely to suche as be wise amonges thy people. For in theym is the spryngе of vnderstandynge, the fountayne of wysdome, and the streme of knowlege. And I dyd so.

¶ The punyshment the cruell people shall haue, whiche God recommaundeth Esdras to shewe vnto them.

CAPI. XV.

BEholde, speake thou in the eares of my people the wordes of the prophecy, whiche I will put in thy mouthe, sayeth the Lorde, & cause them to be written in a letter, for it is the truth. Feare not the imaginacions against the, let not the vnfaythfulnesse of the trouble the, that speke against the. For as the vnfaythful shal dye in theyr vnfaythfulnes, Beholde, sayeth the Lorde, I will bringe plages vpon the worlde, the sworde, honger, derth and destruction. For wickednes hath the vpper hand in all the erth, and theyr shameful workes are fulfilled.

Therfore sayeth the Lorde: I will holde my tonge no more vnto theyr wyckednesse, whiche they doo so vngodlye: neyther will I suffre theym in the thynges that they beare withall so wyckedly.

Beholde, the innocent bloude of the troubled cryeth vnto me, and the soules of the righteous complayne contynually: and therfore (sayeth the Lorde) I will surely auenge, and receyue vnto me all the innocent bloud from amonges them.

Beholde, my people is led as a flok of shepe to be slayne, I will not suffre them nowe to dwell in Egypte, but will bringe them out with a mighty hande, & a stretched out arme, and smyte it with plagues as afore, and will destroy all the land of it. Egipt shal mourne and the foundacions of it shall be smitten w the plage and punyshment þ God shal bring vpon it.

B They that tyll the ground shall mourne: for they; sides shall be destroyed thorow the hinstrynge and hayle, and an horryble sterre. Wo vnto the wastide, and them that dwell therin, for the swerde and they; destruccion draweth nye, and one people shall stande vp to fyghte agaynste an other, and slaye one them; bonbes. [illegible] of they; doynges and handelynges in they; power. A man shall desyre to go in to the cyte, & shall not be able. For bycause of they; pryde, the cytes shal be brought in feare, the houses shall shake, and men shal be afrayde. A man shall have no pyte vpon his neyghbourre, but one shall prouoke an other vnto battayle to spoyle they; goodes, bycause of of the honger of breed, & bicause of the great trouble.

D Beholde, I gather and cal togyther al the kynges of the earth, which are from the vpersynge from the South, from the East and Libanus, to turne vnto them, and restore the thinges that they have gyuen them. Lyke as they do yet this daye vnto my chosen, so will I do also, and recompence them in their bosome. Thus sayth the Lorde God: my right hand shal not spare the synners, & my swerde shall not cease ouer them that shede þ innocent bloud vpon earth. The fyre is gone out from his wrath, and hath consumed the foundacions of the earthe, and the synners lyke the straw that is kyndled. Wo worth them that synne, and kepe not my commaundementes, sayth the Lorde. I will not spare them. Goo your waye you chyldren of violence, destroye not my Sanctuarye, for the Lorde knoweth all them that synne agaynste hym, and therfore delyuerith he them vnto deathe and destruction. For now are the plages come vpo the worlde, and ye shal remayne in them, for God shall not delyuer you, bycause ye have synned against him.

E Beholde, an horrible vision commeth from the East, where generacions of Dragons shall come out, and the people of the Arabes, with mayne charettes, and the multitude of them shall be as the wynde vpon earthe, that all they whiche heare them ragynge in their wrathe, maye feare and be afrayde: and as the wylde beastes out of the woode, so shall they goo oute, and with greate power shall they come, and fyghte togyther with them, and shall waste the porcyon of the lande of the Assirians.

And then shall the Dragons have the vpper hande, not remembrynge they; byrthe, and shall course about swearynge togither in greate power, to persecute them. But these shall be afrayde, and hope vyolence at they; power, and shall flee: and one oute of the lande of the Assirians shall besiege them, and consume one of them, and in they; hostes shall be feare and dysdayne, and sleyght amongest they; kynges.

Beholde the cloudes from the East and from the South vnto the Southe, and they are very horryble to loke vpon, full of wrathe and storme. They shall smyte one vpon an other, and they shal smyte al the grounde stones vpon earthe and they; sweate, and the blodde shall be seene the swetnes vnto the horse, and the smoke of men vnto the camelles [illegible] and there shall be [illegible]

And then shall there come greate rayne from the Southe, and from the North, and parte from the weste, and from the Sowthwynde from the East, and shall quenche them vp agayne, and the cloudes which he ruleth vp in wrath, and the floode to come downe vnto the East and weste wynde, shal be destroyed: and the great cloudes shall be lyfted vp, and the ayre be cloudes full of wrath, & the sterre, that they may make all the erth afrayde, and them that dwell therin, and that they maye power out ouer all places an horrible sterre, fyre and hayle, and flesshy swerdes, and many waters: that all feldes maye be full, and all ryuers, and they that dwelle betwene the cityes and walles, mountaynes and hylles, all trees, wood, and the grasse of the medowes, & all their fruite. And they shal goo sodeynly vnto Babylon, and make her afrayde, they shall come to her & besiege her, the sterre and all wrath shall they powre out vpon her.

G Then shall the bodie and smoke goo vp vnto the heaven, and all they that be about her, shall be wrayth her: and they that remayne vnder her, shall be frendes vnto them that have put her in feare. And thou silly that comfortest thy selfe vpon the hape of Babylon, and arte a worshyp of her person. Woo be vnto the thou wretche, bycause thou haste made thy selfe lyke vnto her, and hast decked thy doughters in bosome, that they myghte triumphe and pleasse thy louers which have alway desyred to commyxt bodie bome with the: thou hast folowed the abhominable cityes, in all her washes and inuencions.

Therfore sayth God: I will send plages vpon the, widowhod, pouertie, honger, warres, and pestylence, to waste thy houses with destruction and deth, and the glory of thy power shall be dryed vp as a flower, when the heat ariseth that is sent ouer the. Thou shalt be seche as a poore wyfe that is plagid and beaten of women: so that the mygthy and lorde shall not be able to receyue the. Wolde I so hate the, sayth the Lord. If thou haddest not alwaye slayne my chosen, crastynge the strokes of thy hades, and laid ouer their deth, when thou wast dronken: set so, thy the beautie of thy countenance.

The rewarde of thy bosome shal be recompensed in thy bosom, therfore shalt thou be reacquited.

CAPI. XVI.

WHo is this the Babilon apocalips, how was thou the Egypte and Sodom cyte? yow bitter wyse clothen, of mete and drynk, and mourne ffor your shyldren, bicause ye your behouen. ye ar ouerlo. All thynges ar fint upon you, and who shal comfort you? Two thynges ar come to you, a fyre to brenne amongst you, and who shal vnneth of plagen are fint vnto you, & who is he that will spare them among? Thyng and syne ar fint upon you, who shal comfort the? Thy sonnes ar forsaken the fyre in the middle, what is betyd to them? Thyng and tweine ar ouerthe the cyte, that is that of a strange nacion: And another I sayd shall the plagen, and who is he that will spare them alway? The fyre is kyndled and gone fayn in his wrathe, and who is he that will quench it? He shall cast syghtenynges, and who shall not feare? He shall thunder, and who shall not be afrayed? The Lorde shall threaten, and who shall not vtterlye be beaten to powdyr at his gentlenes?

The earth quaketh, and the foundations therof: the sea ryseth vp with waues from the depe, and the flowers of it are vnapperte and the fyshen therof also before the Lorde, and before the glory of his power. For strong is his right hande that bendeth the bowe his arowes that be shuteth are sharpe, and shall not myssa, when they begyn to be shote into the endes of the worlde.

B Beholde, the plagen are fint, and shall not turne agayne, tyl they come upon earth. The fyre is kyndled, and shal not be put out til it consume the foundacions of the earth. Like as an arowe which is shot of a myghty archer, semeneth not backwarde: euen so the plagen that shall be fint upon earthe, shall not turne agayne. Wo is me, wo is me, who will deliuere me in those dayes? The beginning of sorowes, a strong trauayle, and a great tempest. A feruency, euen fyre vntil vpon euery thyng, and ouer all thynges shall come a great heuynes, and a great darkenes vpon all the worlde, and the ayre shall be full of darkenes, and of heuynes, and of the wrathe of the Lorde vpon them. And as in the fyrst plage, so shall it be in the last, and as in the fyrst iudgement, so shall it be in the last, and as in the fyrst tribulacion, so shall it be in the last. Consider these thynges, O Esdras, and if thou hast knowledge, take vnto the of them that ignorantly dwelle vpon earth. Remember my lawes, and be not angry with them that hate me, and put not thy mynde vnto the vnrighteous, for many vnrighteousnes shall be kyndled vpon earth, and long shall it be or it be taken away. Let not thy mynde be ouercome with the euyll that is come vpon thy brethren, for I haue set my hope vpon the, and vpon mercy, saith the Lorde. Behold, the dayes shall come, that I will begyn to destroy the habitacion of them that dwell vpon earth, and to take away the wrathe of the Lorde, and the ende of the worlde, and to quench it: that the thynges that are promised vnto the iuste in the last dayes, may appere. Be of good courage, and loke vp, for your redemer is nye. Feare not, and let not your mynde be faynt, but

and he that buyldeth, as he that shall not dwell therin: he that soweth, as one that shall not reape: he that cutteth the vineyarde, as he that shal not gather the grapes: they that marye, as they that shal get no children: they that marye not, as the widowes: and therfore they that laboure, laboure in vayne. For straungers shall reape their fruites, and spoile their goodes, ouerthrow their houses, and take their children captyue, let in captyuyte and hunger shall they get children. And they ℣ occupye their marchaundyse with robberye, howe longe beche they their cytes, their houses, their possessions, and get sonnes? the more will I punysche them for their synnes sayth the Lorde. Lyke as an hore enuyeth an honest woman, so shall ryghteousnes hate iniquitie, whe she heareth her selfe and shall accuse her to her face, whe he cõmeth that defendeth, which shal make enquision for all synne vpon earth. And therfore be not ye lyke therunto, nr to the workes therof: for as rust is no lõg enquirie shal be taken and put out of the earth, and vnrighteousnesse shall raygne amongest you.

Let not the synner saye, that he hath not synned: for coles of fyre shall burne vpõ his heade, which sayth before the Lorde God & his glory: I haue not synned. Beholde, the Lord knoweth all the workes of men, their ymaginations, their thoughtes & their herte. For he spake but the worde: let the earth be made, and it was made, let the heuen be made and it was made. In this worde were the waters made, and he knoweth the ende of them. He sercheth the groundes of the depe, and the treasures therof: he hath measured the see, & what it conteyneth. He hath shut the see in the myddest of the waters, & with his worde hath he hanged the erth vpõ the waters. He spreadeth out the heauen lyke a bawle, vpon the waters hath he founded it. In the deserte and dyre wyldernes hathe he made springes of water, and poles vpon the toppes of the mountaynes, that the floudes myght powre downe from the stony rockes to water the earth. He made man, & put his herte in the myddest of the body, & gaue hym breath, lyfe and vnderstandynge, yea & the spirite of the almyghtye God, whiche made al thinges, and hath serched the grounde of all the secretes of the earth.

He knoweth your ymaginacyons and inuencions, and what ye thynke when ye syn, and wold hyde your synnes. Therfore hath the Lorde searched and sought out all your workes, and he shall brynge you all. And when your synnes are brought forthe, ye shal be ashamed before men, and your owne synnes shall be your accuses in that daye. What wyll ye do? Or how wyll ye hyde your synnes before God and his Aungels? Beholde, God him selfe is the iudge, leaue him, leaue of from your synnes, and forget your vnrighteousnesse, and make no more with them: so shal God leade you forth, and delyuer you from all trouble. For beholde, the heate of a great multitude is kyndled ouer you, & they shall take awaye captayne of you, and fede the pole with Idols: and they that cõsent vnto them, shall be had in derision, laughed to scorne, and troden vnder foote.

For vnto the places there shall be a place, and in the nexte cytes a greate insurrection vpon those that feare the Lord. They shal be lyke mad men, they shall spare no man: they shall spoyle & waste such as feare the Lorde, their goodes shall they take from them, and shut them out of their houses. Then shall it be knowen who are my chosen, & they shal be tryed as the gold in the fyre. Heare O ye my beloued, sayth the Lorde: beholde, the dayes of trouble are at hande, but I wyll delyuer you from the same. Be not ye afrayed: beleeue not, for God is your captayne.

Who so kepeth my cõmaundementes and precepte (sayth the Lord God) let not your synnes weye you downe, and let not your vnrighteousnesse be lyfte vp. Wo be vnto them that are subdued vnto their synnes, and tangled in their wyckednesse, lyke as a felde is hedged in with bushes, and the barge therof couered with thornes, that no man maye trauayle thorowe: and so to be taken, and cast in the fyre, and burnt.

THE BOOKE OF TOBIAS.

¶ Tobias beynge taken prysoner, forsaketh not to walke after the truth. The mercy and charytye of Tobias, and the maners of hym in his youth. He taketh Hanah to wyfe, by whome he hath a sonne named Tobias. He surmounteth Gabell for money. He and his are farme to flye, but after the death of Sennacherib they returne agayne.

CAPI. I.

TObias was of the trybe and cite of Nephtali, whiche lyeth in the high countreyes of Galile above Naason the waye towarde the west hauyng the cytye of Aphec vpō the left syde.

Though he was taken prysoner in ye dayes of Salmanasar kyng of the Assirians, neuertheleße beynge in captyuitie, he forsoke not the waye of truth: in so moche that whatsoeuer he myghte get, he parted it dayly with his fellow prysoners & brethē, that were of his kynred. And though he were yonger the al in the trybe of Nephtali, yet dyd not he behaue hym selfe childysshly in his workes. And when al the other went to the golden calues, which Jeroboam the kynge of Israel had made, he him selfe alone fled all their companyes, and gat hym to Jerusalem vnto the temple of the Lorde and there worshypped the Lorde God of Israel, faythfully offeryng of all his fruytes and tythes, so that in the thyrde yere he ministred all the tythes vnto the straungers and conuertes. These and such like thynges dyd he accordynge to the lawe of God, whē he was yet but yonge.

But when he was a man, he toke vnto hys owne trybe a wyfe called Anna, and of her he begat a sonne whome he called after his owne name, and taught him frome his youth vp, to feare God, and to refrayne from all synne.

Nowe when he with his wyfe, his sonne and with all his kynred was come in captyuitie vnto Niniue, what tyme as they al ate of the meates of the heithen, he kepte his soule, and was neuer behild in their meates. And for so moche as he was myndfull of the Lorde in all his hert, God gaue him fauoure in the presence of Salmanasar the kyng whi the gaue hym power to go where he wolde, and so habde he lybertye to doo what hym lyst.

So went Tobias vnto al them that were in prysō, and comforted them, and gaue the holsome exhortacions. And when he came to Rages a cytye of the Medes, hauynge ten talentes of syluer (of the thynges wherwith the kynge had honoured him) a fewe amōge a greate co[illegible] of people of his kynred, one Gabelus (which was of his owne tribe) beynge in necessite, he gaue him the fayre weyght of syluer vnder an hand writynge.

After a longe season when Salmanasar the kynge was dead, and Sennacherib his sonne regned in his steade, whiche hated the children of Israel. Tobias went hapyly thorow out all his kynred, and comforted them, and gaue of his goodes to euery one of them as moch as he myght: he fed the hungrye, clothed the naked, and buryed ꝑ dead and slayn. iiii. Reg. xix. D and that diligently.

And when Sennacherib the kynge came agayne and fled out of Jewry (what tyme as God punyshed him for his blasphemy) and in his wrath, slewe many of the children of Israel. Tobias buryed theyr bodyes. But when it was tolde the kyng, he cōmaunded to slaye him, and take away all his goodes. Neuertheleße Tobias with his sonne & with his wyfe, fled his waye, and was hyd naked, for there were many that lowed hym. But after .xlv. dayes, the kynge was slayne of his owne sonnes. Then came Tobias agayne to his houle, and all his goodes restored vnto hym. ii. Esdr. ii.

¶ Tobias hydeth suche of his frendes as feare God, to a basket of fruit. He is reproued of his frendes. He feareth God more then the kynge. He recommendeth dyuide, by the permyssyon and sufferaunce of God. His kynsfolkes mocke hym.

CAPI. II.

AFter these thynges vpon a solemne daye of the Lorde, Tobias made a good frall in his houle, and sayd vnto his sonne: Go thy waye and brynge hyther some of our trybe, suche as feare God, that they maye make merry with vs. And when he was gone, he came agayne, and tolde his father, that one of the cytyzens of Israel laye slayne vpon the strete. And immediatly he lepte from his table, lefte the frall, came fa-stynge to the dead coarse, toke hym and baye hym priuatlye in to his houle, that when the Sonne was downe, he myghte safely burye hym. And when he had hyde the coarse, he ate his meate with mournynge and feare, remembryng the wordes that the Lorde sayth by the prophete Amos: your dayes shalbe turned to sorowe and heuynesse. Amos. viii. D

But when the sonne was downe, he went his waye and buryed him. Then al his neyghbours reproued hym, sayeng: It is not longe, sence it was cōmaunded to slaye the bycause of this matter, and hadde scarce escaped the daunger of death, and buryest thou the dead agayne? Neuertheleße Tobias fearyng God more then the kynge, toke the bodyes of the slayne, dyd them in his houle, and buryed the at mydnyght. Tobi. D

If happened vpon a daye, that he hed buryed the deade, and was wery, came home, and layed him downe by the wall and slept. E

And whyle he was a slepe, there fell downe vpon his eyes warme dunge out of the swalowes nest, so that he was blynde. This temptacion dyd God suffre to happen vnto hym, that they which came after, myght haue an example of his patience, lyke as of holy Job. For in so moche as he euer feared God from his youth vp, and kepte his commaundementes, he was not heuye against God, that the plage of blyndnes chaunced vnto him but remayned stedfast in the feare of God, and thanked God all the dayes of his lyfe.

D For like as dyuerse Job was had in derysion of his frendes, euen so was he full often of his elders and kynsfolkes, which sayde vnto him: where is thy hope, for the which thou hast done almes and buryed the deade? But Tobias rebuked them, and spake: Say not so, for we are the chyldren of holy men, and loke for the lyfe, which God shal gyue vnto them that neuer turn their beleue from him. Anna his wyfe went dayly to the weuynge worke, and sought what lyuyng she coulde get with the labour of her handes, and brought it. And it happened that she toke a kyd and brought it home.

And when her husband herd it crye, he sayd vnto her that it be not stolen, restore it agayne to the owners: for it is not lawfull for vs to eat or to touche any thynge of theft. ¶ The prayer of Tobias. Sara the doughter of Raguell is slaundred of her fathers seruaunt. The prayer and talkinge of Sara: Tobi also the innocency and chastyne of her. The prayers of Tobias & Sara are herde.

CAPI. III.

1 THen Tobias toke it heuyly, and with teares began to make his prayer sayinge: O Lorde thou arte ryghteous, & all thy iudgementes are true, yea all thy wayes are mercy, fayth & truthe and iudgement. And now, O Lorde, be myndfull of me, and take no vengeaunce of my synnes, neither remembre vp my vnlawdes neither the mysdedes of my elders. For we haue not bene obedyent vnto thy commaundementes, therfore are we spoyled & brought in to captyuytie, into deeth, in to derision and shame vnto all nacions, amonges whom thou hast scattered vs. And nowe O Lord thy iudgementes are great, for we haue not done accordynge to thy commaundementes neither haue we walked innocently before the. And nowe O Lorde, deale with me accordynge to thy wyll, and commaunde my spirite to be receyued in peace, for more expedyente were it for me to dye, then to lyue.

Psal.cxviii.b

2 At the same tyme it happened, that Sara the doughter of Raguel at Rages a cytye of the Medes was slaundred of one of her fathers handmaydes, that she shulde haue had fiue husbandes, whiche as soone as they were gone in vnto her, euery slayne of the euyl called Asmodeus. Therfore when she reproued the mayden for her faute, she answered her, sayinge: God let vs neuer se vpon the doughter of the mare vpon earth, thou killest of thy husbandes. Wylt thou slaye me also, as thou hast slayne seuen men? At the laste wordes, Sara went in to an hygh chambre of her house, and thre dayes and thre nyghtes she neyther ate ne dranke, but continued in prayer, and besought God with teares, that he wolde delyuer her from this vnbrake.

3 Upon the thyrde daye it chaunced, that when she had made an ende of her prayer, she praysed the Lorde sayinge: Blessed be thy name O God of our fathers, which when thou art wroth, shewest mercy, and in the tyme of trouble thou forgyuest the synnes of the, that call vpon the. Vnto the O Lorde turne I my face, vnto the lyfte I vp myne eyes. I beseche the O Lorde, loose me out of the bondes of this vnbrake, or els take me presently away from of the earth. Thou knowest Lord, that I neuer had delyte vnto man, and that I haue kepte my soule cleane from all vnclenly lust. I haue not kepte company with them that passe their tyme in sporte, neyther haue I made my self partaker with the that walke in lyght behauour. Neuertheles, an husbande haue I obteyned to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare.

Now peraduenture eyther I haue bene vnworthy of them, or els were they vnmete for me, for thou happily hast kepte me to an other husbande. For why? thy counsell is not in the power of man. But who so euer loueth the, and seruyth the a ryghte, is sure, that yf he be tempted and proued, it standeth in the reuenger: and yf he endure in patience, he shall haue a rewarde and be dyuyne crowned, and yf he be in trouble, that God (no doubte) shall delyuer him: and yf his lyfe be in chastening, that he shall haue leaue to come vnto thy mercy.

For thou hast no pleasure in our damnacion: and why? after a storme thou makest the wether fayre and styll: after weepynge and bewaylynge, thou gyuest great ioye. Thy name O God of Israell, be praysed for euer. At the same tyme were both their prayers heard in the syght of the magesty of the hyghest God. And Raphael the holy Aungell of the Lorde was sent to helpe them both, whose prayers came together before God.

CAPI. IIII.

SO when Tobias thought his prayer to be herde, that he myght dye, he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias: and sayd vnto hym: My sonne, braue the wordes of my mouthe, and laye them in thyne herte as a foundacion. When God taketh away my soule, shalt burye thou my body, and holde thy mo ther in honour all the dayes of her lyfe. For thou oughtest to remember, what and howe great perils she suffered for thee in her wombe.

And when she also hath finished the tyme of her lyfe, burye her by me. Feare God in thy thought all the dayes of thy lyfe, and be ware, lest at any tyme thou consent vnto hy, and lest thou lye vp the commaundements of the Lorde our God.

Gyue almes of thy goodes, and turne no wer thy face from the poore: and so shall it come to passe, that the face of the Lorde shal not be turned away from the. Be mercyfull after thy power. If thou hast much, gyue plen teously: yf thou hast lytle, be thy beneuolence gladly to gyue of that lytle. For so gatherest thou thy selfe a good rewarde in the day of necessitye. For almes deliuereth fro death and suffereth not the soule to come in darkenes.
A greate comforte is almes vnto all them
God, vnto all them that do it.

My sonne, kepe the well from all horedome, and (before thy wyfe) let no fawte be knowen of the. Let neuer pryde haue rule in thy mynde nor in thy wordes, for in pryde began all destruction.

Whatsoeuer worketh anye thynge for the, immediatlye gyue hym his hyre, & loke that thy hyred seruaunte wages remayne not by the nyght. Loke that thou neuer do vn to an other man, the thynge that thou wol dest not an other man shuld do vnto the. Gyue thy bred with the hungry and poore, and cloth the naked with thy clothes. Set thy bred and wyne vpon the buryal of the vngodlye, and doo not thou eate and drynke therof with the synners. Alwaye counsayle at wyse.

Be alwaye thankfull vnto God, and be seche him, that he wyll order thy wayes, and that whatsoeuer thou beginnest or takest in had it may remayne in him. I certefy the also my sonne, that (when thou wast yet but a babe)
I deliuered ten talentes of syluer vnto Ga belus, at Rages a cytye of the Medes, and his handwrytynge haue I by me. And there fore seke some meanes, how thou maist come by hym, and declare of him the sayd wrytynge of syluer, and gyue him his handwrytynge agayne.

My sonne, be not afrayde: truth it is, we leade here a poore lyfe: but greate good shal we haue, yf we feare God, and departe from all synne and be well.

¶ The obedience of ponge Tobias to his father, whose he sendeth to Rages. An angell accompanyeth with him in his iourney.

CAPI. V.

Then answered Tobias his father, and sayde: father all that thou hast co maunded me, wyll I do, & that dylye
tly. But how I shal require this money I ca not tell. Neither hath he knowe me, as I him.
What token shall I gyue him? Shal so I be more certayne, I must knowe it. Then gat fa ther and mother him, and sayde: I beare the this wytnesse by me, whether I send thine vnto him, accordyng to that shall gyue me. Now go thy wayes warde, and get the some honest man to go with the for an hyre, that then mayst receyue the money, whyle I am yet lyuynge.

Then went Tobias out, and when he came, he found a fayre young man standyng, girded vp, and as it were redy to take his iourney. [illegible] an Angell of God, but wyste it not, and sayde: From whence art thou, thou good young man? he answered: Of the chyldren of Is rael.

And Tobias sayde vnto hym: knowest thou the ways that leadeth vnto the countreye of the Medes? He answered: I knowe it well, and all those maters haue I gone oft tymes, and haue lodged with our brother Gabelus that dwelleth in Rages, a cytie of the Me des, whiche lyeth vpon the mounte Epba tanis. Tobias sayde vnto hym: I praye the tary for me, tyll I haue tolde my father ther tydynges. Then went Tobias in, and tolde his father all. At the whiche his father marue yled, and prayed that he wold come in vnto
hym.

Now when the Angell came in, he salu ted hym and sayde: Ioye be vnto the for euer more. And vnto Tobias sayde: what ioye can I haue that lye here in darkenes, and se not the lyght of heauen? The younge man sayde vnto hym: Be of good cheare, God shal help the shortly. And Tobias sayde vnto him: Call thou hyrynge my sonne to Gabelus, vnto the cytye of Rages in Medea? And when thou comest agayne, I shall paye the thy hyre.
And the Angel sayde vnto hym: I shal leade thy sonne, and bryng him to the agayne.
Then Tobias answered hym: tell me I pray
the, of what house, or of what tribe art thou?
The Angell Raphael sayde vnto hym: Al beit thou after the hyred of an hyrelyng, or seruaunt thou e gayde for thy sonne to go with hym? But that I make the not carefull, I am Azarias the sonne of greate Ananias.
And Tobias answered: thou arte come of a greate kynred: but I pray the be not displea sed that I desyred to know thy kynred. The Angel sayde vnto hym: thy sonne shal I leade forthe safelye, and bryng hym hole to the agayne.

Then answered Tobias, and sayd: well goo on youre waye, and God be in youre iourney, and his Angell bearе you cōpanye.
So when they had prepared all thynges, y
they wolde take with them in their iourney:
Tobias bad his father and his mother fare well, and they went on their waye both to gether. Now when they were gone, his mo ther began to wepe, and sayd: The staffe of our age hast thou taken awaye, and shut him from ba.

Wolde God tha: money had neuer bene, for the

for the whiche thou hast sent hym awaye. If we had bene content with our pouerte, this had bene great ryches vnto vs, that we sawe our sonne here. Then sayd Tobias vnto her: wepe not, our sonne shall come to be agayne safe and sounde, and thyne eyes shall se hym. For I trust, that the good Aungell of God shall beare hym company, and ordre well all the thynges that he doeth: so that he shall come to be agayne with ioye. At these wordes his mother ceased of from weppynge, and helde her tongue.

Cyounge Tobias is deliuered from the fysshe, by the Angell. The Aungell exhorteth Tobias to take Sara to his wyfe.

CAPI. VI.

SO Tobias went on his waye, and a dog folowed hym, and the fyrst nyght they rested by the water of Tygris. Then wente he out to wasshe his fete, and beholde, there came forth an horrible fysh to deuoure him. Of whom Tobias was afrayed, and cryed with a lowde voyce, sayinge: Lorde, he commeth vpon me. And the Aungell sayde vnto hym: Take hym by the chefe blade, and drawe hym to the. And he dyd so, and drewe hym vpon the lande. And the fysh began to leape at his fete.

Then sayd the Aungell vnto hym: Take out the bowels of this fysshe, and ke for the herte, the gal, and the liuer, kepe them by the. For these thynges are necessary and good for mannes vse. Tobias dyd so, and roosted the fish, & they toke hym with them in their iourney, the reste but they salted, as muche as was sufficient for them, tyll they came to Rages.

Then Tobias asked the Aungell, & sayde vnto hym: I pray the brother Azarias, tell me wherto are these thynges good of the fysshe, that thou hast bydden me kepe?

The angell answered hym and sayde: If thou layest a pece of the herte vpon the coles, the smoke therof driueth awaye all maner of euyll spirites, whether it be from man or from woman, so that from thence forth that same shal come no more vnto them. The gal is good to anoynt or to stroke the eyes withal, where an euyll is any bleamyth in them, so that they be hole.

And Tobias sayde vnto him: where wylt thou that we remayne? The angel answered and sayde: here is a nygh kynsman of thyne, one Raguel by name, which hath a daughter called Sara, & hath neither sonne ne daughter but her. All his good belongeth vnto the, and thou must marry his daughter: and therfore desyre her of her father, and he shall geue her the to wyfe. Then answered Tobias & sayde: As I vnderstand, she hath bene maryed vnto seuen husbandes, and they al are dead and I haue herde say, that the deuyll slewe them. I am afrayde therfore, lest such thynges happe vnto me also: which if it come to passe (sayinge I am the onely sonne of my father & my mother) I shulde bringe them in their age with sorow to their graues.

Then sayd the Aungell Raphael vnto him: Heare me, and I wyll tell the what they be, of whom the deuyll hathe power. Namelye, they that receyue maryage of such a fashyon, that they shut God out from them and from their hert, & geue them selues to their euyll lust, euen as it were an horse and mule, which haue no vnderstandyng, vpon suche hath the deuyll power. But when thou takest her, and art come in to the chambre, withholde thy self from her three dayes, and geue thy diligence vnto nothynge but vnto prayer with her.

And in the fyrst nyght, roll the liuer of the fysshe, and the deuyll shall be driuen awaye. The seconde nyght, shalte thou be receyued in to the companye of the holye patriarches. The thyrde nyght, shalte thou obtayne the blessynge of God, so that hole chyldren shal be borne of you. After the thyrde nyght take the mayden in the feare of God, and more for the desyre of chyldren, then for any fleshly lust, that in the sede of Abraham thou mayest obtayne the blessynge in chyldren.

Cyounge Tobias and the Aungell come to the house of Raguel. He requyreth Ragueles doughter to wyfe, and obtayneth her.

CAPI. VII.

THen wente they in to Raguell, whiche receyued them ioyfully. And when Raguel loked vpon Tobias, he sayde vnto Anna his wyfe: how lyke is this yonge man vnto my brothers sonne. And when he had spoken this, he sayd: whence be ye good brethren? They sayd: Of the tribe of Nephthaly out of the captyuyte of Ninyue. Then sayde Raguel vnto them: know ye my brother Tobias? They sayd: yea, we know hym well. And when he had spoken much good of him, the Aungell sayde vnto Raguel: Tobias of whom thou askest, is this yong mans father. Then Raguel boweth him selfe downe, and wepte, toke him about the necke and kyssed hym, and sayd: O ye blessyng bene thou my sonne, for thou arte the sonne of a good vertuous man. And Anna his wyfe and Sara his doughter wepte also.

Now when they had eaten together, Raguel had kyll a wether, and to make a feast. And when he prayed them to sye downe to dynner, Tobias sayd: I wyll neither eate ne drynke here this daye, except thou first graunte me my petition, and promyse me to geue me thy doughter Sara. When Raguel hearde this, he was astonyed, for he knewe what had happened vnto the other seuen men that went in vnto her: and he began to feare that it should chaunce vnto him also in lyke maner.

And whyle he stode so in doubte, and gaue the young man no answere, the Aungell sayd vnto him: Feare not to geue him thy doughter, for vnto this man that feareth God, belongeth thy doughter to wyfe, therfore might none other haue her.

Then sayd Raguel: I doubt not, but God hathe accepted my prayers and teares in his sight: and I trust he caused you to come vn to me for the same intent, that this doughter of myne myght be maryed in her owne kynred, accordynge to the lawe of Moses. And nowe doubte thou not, but I will gyue her vnto the: And he toke the ryght hande of his doughter, and gaue her in to the ryght hande of Tobias, and sayd: The God of Abrahā, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, be with you: ioyne you togyther, and fulfyll his blessynge in you. And they toke a letter and made a wrytynge of the marryage. And then made they merry, and prayed God. And Raguel called Edna his wyfe vnto hym, and bad her prepare an other chambre, and thyther he brought Sara his doughter, and she wepte. Then sayde he vnto her: Be of good cheere my doughter, the Lorde of heuen gyue the ioye, for the heuynesse that thou hast suffered.

¶ The Aungell byndeth the deuyl. Tobias exhorteth his wife to prayer, and they praye three dayes before they lye togyther.

CAPI. VIII.

NOw after that they hadde supped, they brought the yong man in to her. Then thought Tobias vpon the wordes of the aungell, and toke out of his bagge a pece of the liuer of the fysh, and layd it vpon the hote coles. And the aungell Raphael toke hold of the deuyl, and sent him awaye, and bad him in the wildernes of vpper Egypte. Then sayde Tobias vnto the virgin, Sister Sara, let vs make our prayer vnto God today, to morow, and ouermorow: for these three nyghtes will we reconcile our selues vnto God: and when the third holy night is past we shall ioyne togyther in the duty of marriage. For we are the children of holy men, and we may not come togyther as the heathen that know not God.

Then rose they vp both togither, and besought God earnestly that he wolde preserue them. And Tobias sayde: O Lorde God of our fathers, prayed be thou of heauen and earth, of the sea, welles, and floudes, and of all the creatures that be therin. Thou madest Adam of the mould of the erth, and gauest him Eua for an helper. And now Lorde thou knowest, that it is not because of voluptuousnes that I take this syster of myne to wyfe, but onely for the loue of children, in whome thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara sayde: haue mercy vpon vs, o Lorde, haue mercy vpon vs and let vs both come hole and sounde to a good age.

And about the cocke crowe, it happened that Raguel called his seruantes, and they went with him to make a grane. For he sayd: it is counseled vnto him peraduenture, as it did vnto the other yong man, that wente in vnto her. Now when they had made the graue, Raguel came againe to his wyfe, and sayd vnto her: sende one of thy maydes to loke yf he be dead, that I may bury hym afore it be ryght daye. And she sente a mayden to se, which when she came in to the chambre, she founde them hole and sounde slepyng togyther. And so she came againe, and brought good tydynges. Then Raguel and Edna his wife, prayed God and sayd: prayed be thou, o Lorde God of Israel, for it is not happened vnto vs as we thought. For thou hast mercifully wisshed vs, and put away from vs the enemy that persecuted vs, and hast shewed mercye vnto vs and two beloued. O Lorde cause them to magnify the more perfectly, and to offre the the sacrifice of thy praise and of their helth: that al people may know, that thou only art God in all the earth.

And immediatly Raguel commaunded his seruauntes to fill the graue or they had made with erth afore it was ryght: and bade his wyfe prepare a feast, to make redy al thynges that were necessary for meate, to suche as shuld be by the waye. He caused two fat kyne also, and fourr wethers to be slayne, and meates to be prepared for all his nere frendes, and Raguel charged Tobias to remayn with him two wekes. As for all the good that he had, he gaue Tobias therof, halfe of it, and made this writing, that the halfe which remayned, shoulde fall vnto Tobias after their death.

¶ The Aungell goeth to Gabelus, at the desyre of Tobias, which deliuereth the letter, and receyueth the money.

CAPI. IX.

THen Tobias called vnto him the aungell, whome he thought to haue ben a man, and sayd vnto hym, Brother Azarias, I pray the harken vnto my wordes: yf I shulde gyue my selfe to be thy seruaunte, I shall not deserue the prouidence. Neuertheles I beseche the, that thou wylte take the beastes and the seruauntes, and go vnto Gabelus in Rages the citye of Medes, and deliuer hym his bande wrytynge, and receyue the money of hym, and praye hym to come to my marryage. For thou knowest thy selfe, that my father telleth the dayes: and yf I tary one day to longe, he will be sorye in his mynde. Nowe seest thou how earnestly Raguel hath requyred me, so that I can not say hym naye.

Then toke Raphael four of Raguels seruauntes and two camels, and went vnto Rages the citye of the Medes: and when he had founde Gabelus, he gaue him his hand wrytyng and receyued all the money. He told hym also of Tobias the son of Tobi, how all thynges had happened, and caused hym to come with him to the marriage. Now when he came in to the house of Raguel, he found Tobias sitting at the table: and he lept vp, and they kyssed one an other, and Gabelus wepte, and prayed God and sayd: the blessing of the God of Israel bere thou, for thou art the sonne of a right vertuous and iust man, and of one that feareth God, and gyueth grete almes. And blessyng haue thy wife, and your children that ye may se your children and your children children, vnto the thyrde and fourthe generacion, and that your sede maye be blessed of the God of Israell, whiche reygneth worlde without ende. And when they had sayde: Amen, they wente to the feaste, but with the feare of the Lorde, helde they the feast of the mariage.

Dod Israel

¶ Tobias and his wyfe are sad for the tarryance of their sonne. Raguel sendeth agayne Tobias with his wyfe.

CAPI. X.

NOwe whyle yonge Tobias made long tarryinge by reason of the mariage his father was full of care and beyrnesse, and thought what shoulde be the cause, that my sonne caryeth so longe? Or why shoulde he be kepte so long there? peraduenture Gabelus is dede, and no man wyll gyue hym the money. Thus began he to be very sorowfull he sayde his wyfe with him, and began to wepe bothe togyther, because their sonne was not come agayne vnto them at the daye appoynted: he for his mother, she wept with discomfortable teares, and sayd: Wo is me, my sonne why haue we sended the away in to a straunge countrey, thou lyght of our eyes, staffe of our age, comforte of our lyfe, thou hope of our generacion: Seyng all the thynges that we haue ben ouely of the, we sholde not haue sent the away from vs.

Then Tobias comforted her, and sayd: holde thy tonge, and be not discomforted, our sonne is hole and sounde: the man that we sent him with is faythfull ynoughe. Neuertheles she myght in no wyse be comforted: but daylye went out, loked about, and went about all the streetes, whereby she thought he sholde come agayne, that if it were possible, she myght se him comming a farre of.

Then sayd Raguel vnto his sonne in law: O tary here, and I shall sende a messenger vnto thy father Tobias, to tell hym that thou art in good helth. Tobias sayd vnto him: I am sure that my father and my mother count euery daye, and their houres are sory.

So when Raguel prayed Tobias with many wordes, and wolde in no wyse haue hym, he delyuered Sara vnto hym, and the halfe parte of all his good: in seruauntes, and handmaydens, in shepe in camels, and in kyne, and moche money, and so sente hym awaye from him with peace and ioye, and sayd: the holye aungell of the Lorde be with you in youre iourney, and bryng you forth safe and sounde, that ye maye fynde all thynges in good case with youre children, and that myne eyes maye se youre children afore I dye. So the fathers embraced their doughter, kyssed her, and let her go, exhortynge her to honour her father and mother in lawe, to loue her husband, to rule well her household, to kepe her house in good order, and to shewe her selfe faythfull.

¶ Yonge Tobias leuyng his wyfe and household in the myd waye, commeth before with the Aungel. ¶ He dreame of his mother, lokyng after her sonne. He is ioyfully receyued of his father and mother. ¶ And commeth fourth dayes after.

CAPI. XI.

AS they nowe were goynge homeward agayne, vpon the. xi. daye they came to Charra, whiche lyeth in the halfe waye towarde Ninine. And the aungel sayd: Brother Tobias thou knowest howe thou hast left thy father: therfore yf it please the we two wyll go before, and let the household with thy wyfe and the catell come softe and fayre after vs. And when Tobias was content that they sholde go before, Raphael sayd vnto hym: Take of the gall of the fish with the, for it shal be necessary. So Tobias tooke of the gall, and they wente their ware. But Anna the mother of Tobias sat dayly by the waye lyde vpon the top of an hylle, from whence she myght se farre about her. And whyle she was wayteynge there for his comming, she loked afarre of, and anone she perceyued her sonne comming, and ran and told her husband, sayeng: Beholde, thy sonne cometh. And Raphael sayde vnto Tobias: As soone as thou commest in to the house, immediatly worshyp the Lorde thy God, and gyue thankes vnto hym: then goo to thy father & kysse hym, and strayght his eyes ouer with the gall of the fysh, that thou hast brought with the. For be sure that his eyes shal straight way be opened, and thy father shall se the lyghte of heuen, and shal reioyce at the lyght of the. Then the dogge that had ben with them in their iourneye, ranne before, and came as a messenger, and wagged with his tayle for gladnesse.

So the blynd father arose, and began to renne and bombled with his fete, and gaue a seruaunt his hande, ran to mete his son, receyued hym and kyssed hym and his wyfe, and began to wepe for ioye.

Now when they had worshiped & thanked God, they sat downe. Then toke Tobias of the fisches gall, & anoynted his fathers eyes: and tarryed half an hour, and then began the bleamyth to go out of his eyes, like as it had ben the whyte skyn of an egge, which Tobias toke and drew from his eyes, and immediatly he receyued his syght.

Then they prayfed god, he and his wife, and al they that knew him. And Tobias sayd: O Lorde God of Israel, I gyue the prayse and thankes, for thou haste chastened me, & made me hole. And lo, nowe do I se my son Tobias. After seuen dayes came Sara his sonnes wyfe also hole and sound, with all the household and catell, with camels & moche money of his

of his wyues, and with ꝑ money that he had receyued of Gabelus: and he told his father and mother al the benefytes, which God had doone for him, by the man that ledde hym. Achior also and Nabath Tobias systers sõnes came, and were glad, and reioyced with hym, by reason of al the good, that God had shewed vnto hym. And so for ꝑ space of fyue dayes they made merye, and were ryght ioyfull euery chone.

¶ Younge Tobias rechenyth vp vnto his father the pleasures that the Aungell dyd vnto hym. He offeryth vnto the Aungell halfe the goodes that he brought with hym.

CAPI. XII.

Then Tobias called his son vnto him, & sayd: what may we gyue this holy mã that wolt with the? Tobias answered his father, and sayd: father what rewarde shal we gyue him? or what thyng can deserue his benefytes? he hathe bene my gyde, and brought me safe agayne: he receyued the money for Gabel, he caused me to get my wife he droue the euil spirit from her, he hath ben an occasyon of gladnesse to her father & mother, he delyuered me, that I was not deuoured of the fysh, he hath made the to se ꝑ light of heuē, yea we all haue receyued great good of hym. How shold we worthely deserue these thinges vnto hime But I pray the my father that thou wylt desyre him, yf happely he wil vouchsafe to take with hym the halfe of all ꝑ we haue brought.

So the father and the sonne called hym, & tokē him aside, and began to pray him, that he wolde be content to take in good worthe the one halfe parte of all that he hadde brought. Then sayd he secretly vnto them: Prayse ye God of heuen, and gyue thankes vnto hym, before al men lyuyng, for he hath shewed his mercy vnto vs. It is good for vs to hyde the kynges secrete, but to shew and to prayse the workes of God, it is an honourable thynge. Prayer is good with fastynge, and to gyue almes, is better then to hoord vp treasures of golde, for almes delyuereth from deathe, cleanseth synne, and causeth to fynde euerlastyng lyfe. But they that do synne & vnrighteousnesse, are the enemyes of their owne soules.

Wherfore I tell you the truth, & wyl hyde nothing from you. Whē thou prayedst with teares, and buryedst the dead, and lefte thy dyner, and hyddest the dead in thy house vpō the daye tyme, that thou mygtest bury them in the nyght, I offred thy prayer before the Lorde. And bycause thou was accepted and beloued of God, it was necessary that temptacion shold trye the. And now hath the Lord set me to heale the, & to deliuer Sara thy sonnes wyfe from the euyl spirite. For I am Raphael an aungel, one of ꝑ seuen that stand before God.

Whē they herd this, they were sore afrayd and trembled, and fel downe vpon their faces vnto the ground. Then sayd the aungel: Peace be with you, fear not. Wher as I haue ben with you, it is ꝑ wyl of God, giue prayse and thankes vnto him.

You thought that I did eate and drynke w you, but I vse meat that is inuisible, & drynke that can not be seen of men.

Now therfore is the tyme ꝑ I myste turne agayne vnto him ꝑ sent me: but be ye thankfull vnto God, and tel out all his wōderous workes.

And when he hadde spoken these wordes, he was taken awaye out of their syghte, so that they sawe him no more. Then fell they downe flatte vpon their faces by the space of thre houres, and prayed God: and when they rose vp, they tolde all his wonderous workes.

CAPI. XIII.

Then olde Tobias opened his mouthe & prayed the Lorde, and sayd: great art thou, o Lorde, for euermore, and thy kyngdome, worlde without ende: for thou scourgest and healest, thou leadest vnto hell, and bringest out agayne, and there is none ꝑ may escape thyne hande. O gyue thankes vnto the Lorde ye children of Israell, & prayse hym in the syght of the heathen. For among the heathen whiche knowe hym not hath he scatred you, to thentent that ye shulde shewe forth his marueilous workes: and cause the for to knowe, that there is none other God almyghtye but he. He hathe chastened vs for our myscedes, and for his owne mercy sake shall he saue vs.

Consider then how he hath delt with you, and praise him with feare and drede, and magnifye the euerlastynge kynge in your workes. I wyl prayse hym, euen in the lend of my captiuitie, for he hath shewed his maiesty vnto a synfull people. Turne you therfore, O ye sinners, and do righteousnesse before God, and be ye sure that he wyll shewe his mercye vpon you. As for me and my soule, we wyll reioyce in God. O prayse the Lorde al ye his chosen, holde the dayes of gladnesse, and be thankfull vnto hym. O Jerusalem thou cyty of God, the Lorde hath punished the for the workes of thyne owne handes. O prayse the Lorde in thy good thinges, and gyue thankes to the euerlastynge God, that he may builde vp his tabernacle agayne in the, that he may call agayne vnto the, all suche as be in captiuitie, and that thou mayste haue ioye for euermore. With a fayre light shalt thou shine and all the endes of the worlde shall honour the. The people shall come vnto the fro far, they shall bryng gyftes, & worshyp the Lord in the, and thy land shal they haue for a Sanctuary, for the shall call vpon the great name in the.

Cursed shall they be that despyse the, and all that blaspheme the, shall be condemned:

but blessed shal they be that buyld the vp. So for thy, thou shalte reioyce in thy chyldren, for they all shall be blessed and gathered together vnto the Lord. Blessed are they all þ loue the, & be glad of thy pear. Prayse thou the Lord, o my soule, for the Lorde our God hath delyuered his city Jerusalem from all her troubles. I will counte my selfe happye yf my sede remayne to se the clerenesse of Jerusalem.

Apoc. xxi. The gates of Jerusalem shall be buylded with Saphyre, & Smaragde, and al the compasse of her walles with precious stones. All her stretes shal be paued with whyte marble stone, and in all her stretes shall Alleluya be song. Prayse de the Lord, which hath exalted her, that his kyngdome may be vpon her for euermore. Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his talkynge.

¶ Tobias prophecyeth the destruction of Niniue. His sonne returneth to Ragual, after the deeth of the father and mother.

CAPI. XIIII.

Tob. xiiii. Iohel. ii. b. AND after that Tobias had gotten his syght agayne, he lyued. xlii. yeres, and sawe his nephewes chyldren. Howe when he was an hundred and two yere olde, he dyed: and was buryed honourably in Niniue. For when he was fyue and fyftye yeres of age, he lost his syght of his eyes, and when he was three score yere olde, he gat his syght agayne. The residue of his life led he in ioy, and increased well in the feare of God, and departed in pear.

B But in the hourr of his death he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias, and seuen younge syrynges his sonnes chyldren, and sayde vnto them: The destruction of Niniue is at hand, for þ woorde of the Lord can not fayle, and our brethren that are scatred oute of the lande of Israell, shall come thyther agayne, Esdr. ii. Sophon. ii. c and the hole lande of it that be th ben waste, shal be filled, and the house of God that was brent in it, shal be buylded agayne, & all suche as feare God, shal return thither: the heathen also shall forsake their idols, & come to Jerusalem, & dwell there, and all the kynges of the erth shall be glad of her, and worshyp the Lorde God of Israel.

And therfore my chyldren, beare your father: Serue the Lorde in faythfulnesse, & c Deute. vi. i. Reg. xii. Iosue xxiiii. do after his will, and do the thing that pleaseth hym. Commaund your chyldren that they do right, & yue almes, be myndfull of God, and euer to be thankfull vnto hym in truthe and with all their power. Heare me therfore my chyldren, & abyde not here: but in what day so euer ye haue buryed youre mother beside me, gette you frome hense. For I se, that the wickednesse of it shal bring it to destruction and ende.

After the deth of his mother, Tobias de- D parted awaye from Niniue, with his wyfe & chyldren, and with his chylders chyldren, and came agayn to his father and mother in law and found them hole and in a good age, and toke the care of the. And he closed their eyes and was heyre vnto all Raguels goodes, & sawe the fyfth generacion and chylders chyldren. And when he was. xcix. yere of age, he dyed in the feare of the Lorde, and his kynsfolkes buryed hym: And all his posterite continued in a good life, and holy conuersacion: so that they were loued and accepted bothe of God and men, and of al the people of the lande.

¶ The ende of the boke of Tobias.

THE BOKE OF IVDITH.

¶ The kynge of Egbathanis. The ordre of Nabuchodonosor against Arpharat. The messengers of Nabuchodonosor are despysed.

CAPI. I.

ARpharat the kynge of the Medes, submoued many people vnto his dominion, and builded a noble stronge cytye, which he called Egbathanis. The walles of it made he of fre stone, foure squared, fourtye cubytes hye, & thirty cubites brode. He made towres therupon of an hundred cubites hye. But vpō the .iiii. corners, euery fyue was .xx. fote brode. He made the portes in the heygthe like as the towres. This kinge trusted in his mighty host, and in his glorious charettes.

So in the twelfth yere of his raygne, it happened that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of the Assyrians (which raygned in the great cytye of Ninive) fought against Arpharat, and ouercame him in the greate felde called Regau beside Euphrates and Tigris, and Jadason, in the felde of Erioth the kynge of the Elimes.

Then was the kyngdome of Nabuchodonosor exalted, and his herte was lyfte vp: and he sent vnto all them that dweite in Cilicia, in Damascus, in Libanus, and vnto the heathen that dweite in Carmel, and Cedar, and to suche as dweite in Galile in the greate felde of Esdrelon, to all them that were in Samaria, and beyonde the water of Jordane vnto Jerusalem, and the hole lande of Jesse, vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia. Vnto all these dyd Nabuchodonosor the kynge of the Assyrians sende messengers. But they all with one consente wolde not agree vnto hym, and sente the messengers agayne empty, and put them away without honoure. Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge toke indignacyon at all that landes, and swore by his trone, and by his kyngdome, that he wolde be auenged of all those countreyes.

¶ Holofernes is sent of Nabuchodonosor, to subdue all the weste. The preparation & purueiaunce of Holofernes.

CAPI. II.

IN the thyrteenth yere of kynge Nabuchodonosor, vpon the .xvii. daye of the fyrste moneth, it was deuised in the court of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of the Assyrians, that he wolde defende him selfe. So he called vnto hym all the elders, all his capitaynes, & men of warre, and shewed them his secrete counsell, and tolde them that his purpose was to bringe the hole earthe vnder his dominion. Nowe when they were all content with his saying: Nabuchodonosor the kynge called Holofernes the chefe capitayne of his warres, and sayd vnto him: goe thy waye forth agaynst all the kyngdomes of the weste, and specially agaynste those that haue despysed my commaundement. Thou shalte spare no treatme, all stronge cities shalt thou bring in subiection vnto me.

Then Holofernes called togyther all the capitaynes and rulers of all the power in Assyria, and mustred the souldyers vnto the host (lyke as the kynge commanded hym) namely an hundred and twentye thousande fyghtynge men vpon foote, and twelue thousande archers vpon horsebacke. All his ordinaunce sente he before with an innumerable multitude of camelles, so that the hoste was wel prouyded for with corn and smal catel, and that without nombre. He caused corn to be prepared oute of all Siria for his hoste. Moche golde and syluer also toke he oute of the kynges house. So he toke his iourney, he and all his host, with charettes, horsemē, and archers: of whom there were so many, that they couered the ground of the land, lyke the grashoppers.

And when he was gone past the borders of the Assyrians, he came towarde the greate mountaynes of Ange, whiche lye towarde the left syde of Cilicia: and so he went vp to all theyr castels, and wanne euery stronge hold. As for the welthy city of Scirthus, he brake it downe, and spoyled all the children of Thartis and the Ismaelites, whiche laye towarde the wyldernesse, and vpon the south syde of the land of Chelon. He went ouer Euphrates also, and came in to Mesopotamia, and brake downe al the hye cities that were there, from the brooke of Mambre, til a man come to the see: & he toke the borders in Cilicia, vnto the coostes of Japhet towarde the southe. He carried away all the Madianites, and spoyled all theyr goodes: & who so euer withstode him, he slew them with the swerde. After this he went downe in to the felde of Damascus in the time of harueste and brente vp all the corne and all the trees, and caused the vynes to be cut downe. And the feare of him fell vpon all them that dweit in the earth.

¶ Syrians become willyngly subiect to Holofernes. The [illegible] and ceremonyes of hym.

CAPI. III.

SO the kynges and princes of all cities, & landes sent their embassadours, namely they of Syria & Mesopotamia, Syria Sobal, and Lybia, and Cilicia, whiche came to Holofernes, and sayde: Lette thy wrathe cease towarde vs: It is better for vs to serue the greate kynge Nabuchodonosor with ours, and to be subiecte vnto the.

but blessed shal they be that buyld the vp. For lo; the, thou shalte reioyce in thy children, for they all shall be blessed and gathered together vnto the Lord. Blessed are they all ſ loue the, & be glad of thy peace. Prayse thou the Lord o my soule, for the Lorde our God hath destroyed his city Jerusalem from all her troubles. I will counte my selfe happye yf my sede remayne to se the clerenesse of Jerusalem.

Apoc. xxi. The gates of Jerusalem shall be buylded with Saphyre, & Smaragde, and al the compasse of her walles with precious stones. All her streetes shal be paued with white marble stone, and in all her stretes shall Alleluya be song. Prayse be the Lord, which hath exalted her, that his kyngdome may be vpon her for euermore. Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his talkynge.

¶ Tobias prophecyeth the destruction of Nineue, & commaundeth to Raguel, after the death of his father and mother.

CAPI. XIIII.

AFter that Tobias had gotten his syght agayne, he lyued .xlii. yeres, and sawe his nephewes children. Lowe when he was an hundred and two yere olde, he dyed: and was buryed honourably in Nineue. For when he was fyue and fyftye yeres of age, he lost his syght of his eyes, and when he was three score yere olde, he gat his syght agayne. The residue of his life led he in ioy, and increased well in the feare of God, and departed in peace.

Not alone Nineue but a

But in the houre of his death he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias, and seuen younge spryngoldes his sonnes children, and sayde vnto them: The destruction of Nineue is at hand, for ſ woorde of the Lord can not fayle, and our brethren that are scatred oute of the lande of Israel, shall come thyther agayne.

Psalm. xxi. Sophon. ii.

And the hole lande of it that hath ben waste, shal be filled, and the house of God that was brent in it, shal be buylded agayne, & all suche as feare God, shall returne thither: the heathen also shall forsake their falce, & come to Jerusalem, & dwell there, and all the kynges of the erth shall be glad of her, and worshyp the Lorde God of Israel.

And therfore my children, beare your father: Serue the Lorde in trueth & righte, & after his will, and do the thing that pleaseth hym. Commaund your children that they do ryght, gyue almes, be myndfull of God, and euer to be thankfull vnto hym in truethe and with all their power. Heare me therfore my children, & abyde not here: but in what day so euer ye haue buryed youre mother beside me, gette you fromc hence. For I se, that the wickednesse of it shal bring it to destruction and ende.

After the death of his mother, Tobias departed awaye from Nineue, with his wyfe & children, and with his children children, and came agayn to his father and mother in law and found them hole and in a good age, and toke the care of the. And he closed their eyes and was heyre vnto all Raguels goodes, & sawe the fyfth generation and children children. And when he was .xcix. yere of age, he dyed in the feare of the Lorde, and his brusfolkes buryed hym: And all his posterite continued in a good life, and holy conuersation: so that they were loued and accepted both of God and men, and of al the people of the lande.

THE BOKE OF IVDITH.

¶ The kyngdome of Ephatanie. The pryde of Nabuchodonosor, ageynst Arpharat. The messengers of Nabuchodonosor are despysed.

CAPI. I.

ARpharat the kinge of ye Medes, subdued many people vnto his dominion, and builded a noble stronge cite, which he called Ephatanis. The walles of it made he of fre stone, four squared, seuentye cubytes hye, & thirty cubites brode. He made towres theryon of an hundred cubites hye. And vpō the. iiii. corners, euery fote was. xx. fote brode. He made the portes in the heygthe like as the towres. This kinge trusted in his mighty host, and in his glorious charettes.

So in the twelfth yere of his raygne, it happened that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of the Assyrians which raygned in the great cite of Ninive, fought ageynste Arpharat, and ouercame him in the greate felde called Ragau beyde Euphrates and Tigris, and Jadason, in the felde of Erioth the kynge of the Elimes.

Then was the kyngdome of Nabuchodonosor exalted, and his herte was lyfte vp: and he sent vnto all them that dweite in Cilicia, in Damascus, in Libanus, and vnto the peaches that dweite in Carmel, and Cedar, and to suche as dweite in Galile in the greate felde of Esdrelon, to all theym that were in Samaria, and beyonde the water of Jordane vnto Jerusalem, and the hole lande of Jesse, vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopie. Vnto all these dyd Nabuchodonosor the kynge of the Assyrians sende messengers. But they all with one consente wolde not agree vnto hym, and sente the messengers ageyne empteye, and put them awaye without honoure. Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge toke indignacyon at all those landes, and swore by his trone, and by his kyngdome, that he wolde be auenged of all those countreyes.

¶ Holofernes is sent of Nabuchodonosor, to subdue all the worlde. The preparation and purueyance of Holofernes.

CAPI. II.

IN the thyrtenth yere of kynge Nabuchodonosor, vpon the. xxii. daye of the fyrste moneth, it was deuised in the court of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assyrians, that he wolde defende him selfe. So he called vnto hym all the elders, all his capitaynes, & men of warre, and shewed them his secrete counsell, and tolde them that his purpose was to bringe the hole earthe vnder his dominion. Nowe when they were all content with his saying: Nabuchodonosor the kynge called Holofernes the chefe capitayne of his warres, and layd vnto him: goo thy waye forth ageynst all the kyngdomes of the weste, and specially ageynste those that haue despysed my commaundement. Thou shalte spare no realme, all stronge cities shall thou bring in subiection vnto me.

Then Holofernes called together all the capitaynes and rulers of all the power in Assyria, and mustred the souldyers vnto the hoste (lyke as the kynge commaunded hym) namely an hundred and twentye thousande fyghtynge men vpon fote, and twelue thousande archers vpon horsebacke. All his ordinaunce sente he before with an innumerable multitude of camelles, so that the hoste was wel prouyded for with oren and other cattel, and that without nombre. He caused corne to be prepared out of all Cilicia for the hoste. Syluer and golde also toke he out of the kynges house. So he toke his iourney, he and all his host, with charettes, horsemen, and archers: of whom there were so many, that they couered the ground of the land, lyke the grashoppers.

And when he was gone past the borders of the Assyrians, he came towarde the greate mountaynes of Ange, whiche lye vpon the left syde of Cilicia: and so he went vp into all their castels, and wanne euerye stronge hold. As for the wethy city of Scelothus, he brake it downe, and spoyled all the children of Thersis and the Jsmaelites, whiche laye towarde the wyldernesse, and vpon the south syde of the land of Chelon. He went ouer Euphrates also, and came in to Mesopotamia, and brake downe al the hye citees that were there, from the brooke of Mambre, til a man come to the see: & he toke the borders in frō Cilicia, vnto the coostes of Japhet towarde the southe. He carryed awaye all the Madianites, and spoyled all their goodes: & who so euer withstode hym, he slew them with the swerde. After this he went downe in to the felde of Damascus in the tyme of haruestе and brente vp all the corne and all the trees, and caused the vynes to be cut downe. And the feare of hym fel vpon al them that dweit in the earth.

¶ Kynges become willyngly subiect to Holofernes. The tyrannye and crueltye of hym.

CAPI. III.

SO the kynges and princes of all [illegible] sendes sente their embassadours [illegible] ly they of Syria and Mesopotamia, Siria Sobal, and Lybia, and Cilicia, whiche came to Holofernes, and sayde: Lette thy wrathe cease towarde vs: It is better for vs to serue the greate kynge Nabuchodonosor with oure lyues, and to be subiect [illegible] the.

then that we shulde dye, and be slayne, & receyue greater hurte. All our cityes and possessyons, all mountaynes and hylles, all feldes great, and smal catel, shepe, gotes, boyes and camels, all our goodes and housholdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subiection be it all togyther. We owre selues also and our children wyll be thyne owne, come vnto vs a peaceable Lorde, and vse our seruyce at thy pleasure.

20 Then came Holofernes downe frome the mountaynes with horsemen and greate power, and conquered all stronge fenced cytyes, and all that dwelt in the land. And out of all cytyes he toke stronge men, and suche as were mete for the warre, to helpe hym.

Iudith. 2. There came such a feare also vpon those countreys, that the inhabiters of all the cytyes, the princes and rulers, and the people togyther wente forthe to mete hym as he came, and receyued him honourably with garlandes and torches, with daunces, tabrettes, & pypes.

Neuertheles they dyd this, yet might they not swage his rigorous stomach but he destroyed their cityes, & hewed downe their woddes. For Nabuchodonosor the kinge had commaunded hym, that he shulde roote oute all the goddes of the lande: to the intent that he onely might be called and taken for God of the nations, whiche Holofernes with his power brought vnder him. So wet he thorowe Syria Sobal, and thorowe all Cappadocia, and all Mesopotamia, came to the Idumeans, in the lande of Gabea, and Scythopoly, and toke they cytyes, & remayned there thyrtye dayes, wherin he caused al the hole multytude of his hoste to be gathered togyther.

¶ Iheut reporteth helpe of God, agaynste Holofernes. They fast and praye.

CAPI. IIII.

1 When the children of Israel that dwelt in Iurye herde this, they were sore afrayd of him. There came suche tremblynge also and feare vpon them, that they forsoke he holde vnto the cityes of Ierusalem and the temple of the Lorde, as he had done to other cityes and their temples. So they lent in to all Samaria round about vnto Iericho, tokē in and occupied all the toppes of the mountaynes, made fast & towers with walles, and prepared corne for them a gaynst the battayle.

Eliachim also the preest wrote vnto all them that dwelte towarde Esdrelon (which is ouer agaynst the great felde by Dothaim) and vnto all those by whome men myghte haue passage vnto them, that they shulde take in the wayes of the mountaynes wherby there myghte be any waye and passage to Ierusalem, and that they holde bold 2 diligent watche where any straute way was betwyxte the mountaynes. And the children of Israel dyd, as Eliachim the preest oxth: Lorde had commaunded them. And all the people cried crueltly, and humbled their soules with fastynges and prayers, they & they wyues. The preestes put on heryr clothes, and layde the younge babes before the temple of the Lorde, and couered the aulter of the Lorde with an heryr clothe. And with one accorde they cryed vnto the Lord God of Israel, that their children shulde not be gyuen in to a pray, & their wiues in to a spoyle, that they cityes shoulde not be layde waste, and that their Sanctuary shulde not be vnhalowed, and so they to be a shame and rebuke vnto the Heathen. Exod. 32.

Then Eliachim the hye preest of the Lorde C went rounde about all Israell, and spake vnto them, sayinge: Be ye sure, the Lorde wyll heare youre peticyons, yf ye continue stedfast in fastinges and prayers in the syghte of the Lorde. Remembre Moyses the seruaūt of the Lorde, whiche ouerthrew the Amalechites (that trusted in they myghte and power, in they hoste, in they shyldes, in they charettes and horsemen) not with weapons, but with holy prayers. Euen so shall all the enemyes of Israel be, yf ye continue in this worke that ye haue begon. So vpon this exhortacyon, they continued in prayer before the Lorde. In so moche that they which offered hyemte sacrifyces vnto the Lorde, offered the offerynges vnto the Lorde, beinge arayed in heryr clothes, and had ashes vpon they heades. And they all besoughte God from they hole herte, that he wolde vysyte his people of Israel. Exodus ¶ Holofernes is displeased with the Iewes. Achior shewth vnto Holofernes the maruels of God, done vnto the Iewes, for whose synne, the rulers vnder Holofernes were very angry with him.

CAPI. V.

And word came to Holofernes the prince of the warres of the Assyrians, that C the children of Israell prepared them selues to make resystaunce, and howe they had stopped the wayes betwyxte the mountaynes. Then was he exceedyng wrothe, and called all the princes of Moab, and the capitaynes of Ammon, and sayd vnto them: tell me, what people is this that dwelleth in the mountaynes? or what maner of cityes are they? what is they power? or what maner of hoste haue they, who is their capitayne? And why do they despyse vs (more then all those that dwell in the East) and come not forthe to mete vs, that they myght receyue vs in peace? Iudith. 5.

Then Achior the capitayne of all the Ammonites, answered and sayde: Syr, yf it please the to heare me, I wyll tell the trueth before the concernyng this people that dwell in the mountaynes, and there shall no lye goo out of my mouth. Iudith. 5.

This people is of the generacion of the D Caldees, they dwelte fyrst in Mesopotamia, for for they wold not folow the goddes of their fathers that were in the lande of the Chaldees, & so forsoke they the customes of their forefathers (whiche had many goddes) and worshipped one God, that made heauen and earth: which also commaunded them þ they should go from thence, and dwell at Haran. Now when there came a derth in to the holelande, they went downe to Egypt, and there they dwelt foure hundreth yeres, in the whiche they multiplyed so greatlye, that their host might not be nombred. And when þ king of Egypt oppressed them, and subdued them in bondage of his cytyes, with makynge of claye and bryche, they cryed vnto God their Lorde, which punyshed the holelande of Egypt, with diuers plagues.

Now when the kynge of Egypt let them go their way, and the plage ceassed, and they followed after them, to take them, & to bryng them agayne in to his seruyce, whyle they were fleynge awaye, the God of heauen opened the see, so that the water stode fast, vpon bothe the sydes as a wall, and their weute thorow the bottom of the see: dryc shod. In the which place, when an innumerable people of þ Egyptians folowed vpon them, they were so ouerwhelmed with the waters, that there remayned not one, to tell them that came after, how it happened. So when this people was passed thorowe the red see, they came vnto the wyldernes of the mount Synai, wher neuer man myght dwell afore, and where the sonne of man had neuer rested.

There were the bytter waters made swete for them, that they myght drynke, and forty yeres had they meate from heauen. Where so euer they went (without bowe and arowe, without buckler or swerde) there God fought for them, and caused them to haue the victory. Yea no man was able to hurte this people, except it were so, that they departed vnfaythfullye fromе the worshyppynge of the Lorde their God. But as oft as they worshypped any other beside their God, he gaue them ouer to be spoyled, to be slayne, and to be put to confusyon. Neuertheles as oft as they were sory for departyng from the worshyp of their God, the same God of heauen gaue them power and strength to withstand their enemyes.

Moreouer they slewe the kyng of the Cananites, Iebusites, Pherezites, Hethites, Cimites, and Amorites, and all the myghtye in Hesebon, and toke their landes and cytyes in possessyon: and so long as they synned not in the syght of their God, it wente well with them, for their God hateth vnrighteousnesse. Yea in the tymes past when they wente out of þ waye, which God had geuen them, that they shulde walke in it, they were destroyed in diuerse battayles of manye nacyons: and many of them were caryed alwaye prisoners vnto a straunge countrey. But now lately they haue turned them selues agayne vnto the Lorde their God, and are come together agayne out of the countreys where they were skatred abrode: and thus haue they conquered their mountaynes, and dwell ther in: and as for Jerusalem where their Sanctuary is, they haue it agayn in possession.

And therfore my Lord, make byrygent inquysyon, yf this people haue done wyckednesse in the syght of their God, then let vs go vp agaynst them, for doubtlesse they God shall delyuer them into thy handes, and subdue them vnto thy power. But if their people haue not displeased their God, [illegible] not be able to withstande the[m] God shall defend them, and so [illegible] shame to all the worlde.

Judithyus

Now when Achior had spoken out their wordes, all the pyrnces of Hol[illegible] were wroth and thoughte to slay him, and sayde one to an other: what is he this, which dare say that the chyldren of Israel are able to withstande Nabuchodonosor the kynge and his host? where as they are an vnwarpeare people, without strength as touchyng armynge of the states of war? That Achior therfore may knowe that he hath deceyued vs, we wyll go vp in to the mountaynes: and whe the myghtye men of them are taken, he also shall be slayne with the swerde, that all people may know, that Nabuchodonosor is the God of the earth, and that there is none other without him.

Achior is committed into the handes of the Iewes by Holofernes. He is tied to a tre, but releassed of the Iewes. The prayer of the people. Achior is receyued of the Iewes.

CAPI. VI.

SO when they had lefte of speakyng, Holofernes toke fyre indignacion, and sayd vnto Achior. For so much as thou hast prophecyed vnto vs, sayenge: that the people of Israell shall be defended of their God, I wyll shewe the, that there is no God but Nabuchodonosor. Yea when we slee them all as one man, thou also shalte perysh with the thorow the swerde of the Assyryans, and all Israel shall be distroyed with the, and then shalt thou fele, that Nabuchodonosor is the Lord of the hole earth. Then shal the sworde of my knyghthod go thorow thy sydes, and thou shalte fall downe slayne amo[illegible] wounded of Israel, and shalte not [illegible] thy selfe agayne, but be vtterly de[illegible] them.

Judithyus

But yf thou thynkest thy prophe[illegible] true, why dost thou then chaunge thy [illegible] why art thou afrayed? Thynkest thou t[illegible] my wordes are not able to be performed? But that thou mayst knowe, that thou shalte fele these thynges with them, beholde, from this house to the wyll I sende the vnto yonder people, that when the punishment of my swerde (whiche they haue worthelye deserued) falleth vpon them, thou mayst be punished with them.

So Holofernes commaunded his seruauntes to take Achior, and to cary him vnto Bethulia, ourselues wylyngly vnto the people of Holofernes: for better it is that we be captyue and prayse the Lorde with our lyues, then to be slayne and perysshe, and to be laugers to scorne and shame of euery man, when we be oute wyues and chyldren dye before oure eyes. We take heauen and earth this daye to recorde, and the God of our fathers (whiche punysheth vs according to the deserynges of oure synnes) and grue you warnynge, that ye grue vp the cyte newe in to the power of Holofernes hoste, that oure sodayne be worse with the swerde, whiche he shall rubure lowne, for wante of water and for thyrste.

When they had spoken out theyr wordes, there was a great wepynge and howlyng in the hole congregacyon, and that of euery man, and they cryed an hole houre long vnto God with one voyce, saying: We haue synned with oure fathers, we haue done amysse, we haue dealte wyckedly. Vpon that ou[r] gracyous, haue mercy vpon vs, punysshe oure wickednesse with thyne owne scourge, and grue not thou other that knowledge the, vnto a people which knowe[th] the not, lest they saye amonge the Heythen: where is theyr God.

And when they were so wepe with this cryinge and wepynge, that they beside theyr tunges: Ozias stode vp with wacrye eyes, and sayde: O take good herten vnto you, (deare brethren) and be of good cheare, and let vs wayte yet theyr fyue dayes for mercy of the Lorde: peraduenture he shall cut away his indignacyon, and grue glory vnto his name. But yf he helpe vs not wythin theyr fyue dayes are paste, we shall do as ye haue sayde.

¶ Of the vertuous woman Judith, which reproued Ozias and the rulers of the people, because they tempted the Lorde. She also exhorteth them to encourage and better the people, and she warneth her counsell against the enemyes of the Jewes.

CAPI VIII.

A And it happened when these wordes came to the eares of Judith, a wydowe, whiche was the doughter of Merary, the sonne of Ioor, the sonne of Joseph, the sonne of Oziah, the sonne of Elai, the sonne of Tammoy, the sonne of Israel, the sonne of Raphaym, the sonne of Arioch, the son of Melchia, the sonne of Enam, the son of Nathania, the sonne of Salathiel, the son of Simeon, the sonne of Ruben. And her husbande was called Manasses, whiche dyed in the dayes of the barly harueste.

For whyle he was bindynge the sheues together in the felde, the heate came vpon his head, and he dyed at Bethulia his cyte, and there was he buried beside his fathers. Now was Judith his wedlocke wyfe, a wydowe .iii. yeres and .vi. monethes. And in the vpper partes of her house, she made her selfe a pryue chamber, where she dwelte, beynge closed in with her maydens. She wore a smocke of heer, and fasted all the dayes of her lyfe, except the Sabbothes, and newe moones and the solemne dayes that the people of Israel kepte. She was a very fayre and bewtyfull person. Her husbande also had lefte her great ryches, a plenteous housholde, greate possessions and many castell. This Judith was a woman of a very good report with euery one, for she feared the Lorde greatly, and there was no body that spake an yll word of her.

When this Judith herde, how Ozias had promysed the people, that after the fifth day he wolde graue vp the cyte vnto the Assirians for the space Chamos and Chamos and when they came to her he sayde: what tyynge is this, wherin Ozias hath consented that yt God helpe not within fyue dayes, he will graue ouer the cyte vnto the Assirians? What are ye, that ye tempt the Lorde? This beware apeareth no mercy of God, but prouoketh him vnto wrath & indignacion. Wyll ye set the mercye of the Lorde a tyme and appoynte him a dayes after your wyll? Judith. viii.a

Neuertheles for so much as the Lorde is patyent, let vs rather amende oure selues, penaunce vnto hym, and beseche hym of grace. For God threatneth not as a man, neyther wyll he be prouoked vnto wrath as the chyldren of men. And therefore let vs humble our selues before him, and serue him with a meke spyryte, and with wepynge eyes saye vnto the Lorde, that he deale with vs according to his owne wyll and mercye: that like as our herte is now bowed, and brought low, euen so the pryde of them, al may be cast ouer throwen thorow his goodnesse so much as we sinned not the synnes of oure fathers, whiche forsoke their God, and worshypped other gods: for the which synne they were delyuered with the swerde, were spoyled and brought to shame of all their enemyes. As for vs, we knowe none other God but onelye hym, for whose sake we trust we shall not be dysdayned. Jeremy. xviii.a and xxvi.a

Deut.

Therefore deare brethren, forget not the commaundementes and ensyes of the people of God, vnto whom all the people haue respect, and vpon whome the lyf of the people standeth, lyste vp them vnto myndfulnesse and remembraunce that they may call to remembraunce, how our fathers also in tymes past were tempted, that they myght be proued, yf they worshypped their God a ryght. They ought to remember, howe our father Abrahame beynge tempted, and tryed thorowe many tribulacions, was founde a louer and frende of God. So was Isaac, so was Jacob, so was Moyses, and all they that pleased God beynge tryed thorow many troubles, were fedde stedfast in faith. Against they that refused not their temptacions with the feare of God, but put theyr selues forth with impatiency & murmuringe against Deut. viii.a

And therfore shuld not we vnderstande to be auenged, for ꝑ thyng that is done vnto vs: but to confyrme, that all their punyshmentes are fewer lesse then our synnes and myslordes. Wherbyynge also that this correction commeth vnto vs (as to the seruauntes of God) for amendment, & not for our destruction.

C Then sayd Ozias and the elders vnto Judyth: All that thou speakest, is true, And no man can reproue thy wordes. Praye thou for vs now therfore vnto God, for thou art an holy woman, and feareth God. And Judyth sayd vnto them: Seinge ye knowe, that my wordes are of God, then prouse my counsell and deuise, yf it be of God and beseche God, that he wyll dyrecte my counsell to good ende.

Thou haue I desyred: Ye shall stande this nyght before the porte, and I wyll go forthe with Abra my mayden: Praye ye therfore vnto God, that he wyll graciously remembre his people of Israel, within fyue dayes, as ye haue sayde. As for the thynge that I go in hande withall, aske ye no questyon of it, tyl I open it vnto you my self. be ye nothyng els but praye vnto the Lorde your God for me. Then Ozias the prynce of the people of Juda sayde vnto her: Go thy wayes in peace, the Lorde be with the, that we maye be auenged of our enemyes. And so they wente from her againe.

C The prayer of Judyth for the victory.

CAPI. IX.

NOw when they were gone theyr waye, Judyth went in to her oratory, put on hearye sherte, strowed asshes vpon her hed, fell downe before the Lorde, and cryed vnto him, sayng: O Lorde God of my father Symeon, whiche gauest him a swerde for a defence agaynst that enemyes, that vsed violence and wylfulnesse, and that rauyshed the virgyn, and put her to dishonesty. Thou that gauest theyr wyues in to a praye, and theyr doughters in to captyuitye, & all theyr ꝓye for a ꝓye vnto thy seruauntes, which bare a zele vnto the, helpe me wyddowe, O Lorde my God, I beseche the. For thou hast done all thynges from the begynnynge, and and lohe what thou hast taken in hand, is be wyfed, it came cure to passe. For all thy wayes are ꝓpared, and thy iudgementes are done in thy eternall wyse foreknowledge. O lohe now vpon the armyes of the Assyryans, lyke as it was thy pleasure sometyme to lohe vpō the hoste of the Egyptians, when they beynge weaponed, persecuted thy seruauntes, and put theyr trust in theyr chorreses horsemen, and in the multitude of theyr men of warre. But thou lokedst vpon theyr hoste, sendynge a thycke darkenes before them: and when they came in to the depe, the waters ouerwhelmed them.

Exod.xiiii.c

Turne so Lorde let it go with these, that trust in ꝑ power and multitude of theyr men of warre, in their charettes, arowes and speares, and knowe not, that thou onely art our God, whiche destroyest warres from the beginnynge, and that thou arte the Lorde. O lyfte vp thyne arme now lyke as euer from the beginning, and in thy power bryng these power to nought, cause they: myght to fall in thy wyath.

Psalm.

They make their boost, that they wyll vnhalow and defyle thy Sanctuary, & to waste the tabernacle of thy name and to cast downe the horne of thyne aulter with their swerde. Bryng to passe (O Lorde) ꝑ ꝑ pryde of ꝑ enemy may be cut downe with his own swerd, that he maye be taken with the snare of his eyes in me and that thou mayst smite him with ꝑ lippes of my lone. O giue me a stedfast mynde that I maye destroye hym and his strength, and that I maye destroy hym.

This shal bynge thy name an euerlastinge remembraunce, yf the hande of a woman ouerthrow him for. For thy power (O Lorde) standeth not in the power of men, neither hast thou any pleasure in the strength of horses. There was neuer proude persone ꝑ pleased the, but in the prayer of the humble and meke hast thy pleasure bene euermore.

C Judith. and xi. Psalm. Judith. Psal.xx.

O thou God of the heauens, thou maker of the waters, and Lorde of all creatures, heare me poore woman, callyng vpon the, & putynge my trust in thy mercye. Remembre thy couenaunt, O Lorde, and myne swete wordes in my mouth, and stablyshe this deuyse in my hert, that thy house may contynue tyl in dayes, and that all the Heithen maye knowe and vnderstande, that thou art God and that there is none other but thou.

C Judith wicketh her self to go to Holofernes. The blessynge that the Elders gaue Judith. Holofernes is in loue with Judith.

CAPI. X.

ANd when she had left of cryinge vnto the Lorde, she rose vp from the place, where she had lyen flat before ꝑ Lorde and called her mayde, went downe in to her house, layde the hearey cloth from her, put of the garmentes of her widdowhode, washed her body, anointed her self ꝑ precious thinges of swete sauour, dressed & platted her hert, set an hoode vpon her heade, and put on such apparel as belongeth vnto gladnes, slippers vpon her fete, armelettes, spanges, earynges fynger ryngs, and decked her self with all her best araye. I Judith

The Lorde gaue her also a specyall beautye and fayrenesse (for all this deckynge of her self was not done for any voluptuousnesse, and pleasure of the flesh, but of a right discretion & vertue, therfore dyd the Lorde increase her beauty) so that she was exceding amiable and wel fauoured in al mens eyes.

She gaue her mayde also a bottel of wine a pot

a pot with oyle, potage, cake bred and chese, and went her waye.

D Howe when she came to the poste of the cytye, she founde Olias and the elders of the cytie wayting there. Which when they sawe her, they were astonyed, and meruciled greatly at her bewty, neuertheles they asked no question at her, but let her go, sayenge: The God of oure fathers graut the his grace, and with his power perfourme all the deuyce of thy herte: that Jerusalem maye reioce ouer the, and that thy name maye be in the nombre of the holye and ryghteous. And all they that were there, sayd with one voyce: so be it, so be it. Judith made her prayer vnto the Lorde, and went out at the poste, she and her mayde.

And as she was goinge downe the mountayne, it happened that about the spryuge of the daye, the spyes of the Assirians met with her, and toke her, sayenge: whence commest thou? Or whither goest thou? She answered: I am a doughter of the Hebrues, and am fled from them, for I knowe, that they shall be geuen vnto you to be spoyled: because they thought scorne to yelde the selues vnto you, that they myght fynde mercy in youre syght. Therfore haue I deuysed by my selfe after this maner: I will go before the prynce Holofernes, and tell hym all theyr secretes, and will shew him, how he maye come by them, and wynne them, so that not one man of his host shall perysh.

And when these men had herde her wordes, and conlydred her fayre face, they were astonnyed (for they wondred at her excellent bewty) and sayd vnto her: Thou hast saued thy lyfe by hyndryge oute this deuyce, that thou woldest come downe to our Lorde: and be thou sure, that when thou commest vnto hym, he shall entreate the well, & thou shalte please hym at the best. So they brought her in to Holofernes pauylion, and tolde hym of her. Now when she came in before hym, immedyatlye he was ouercome and taken with her bewtye. Then sayd his seruauntes: who wolde despyse the people of the Jewes, that haue so fayre women? Shuld we not by reason fyght agaynst them for these? So when Judith saw Holofernes syttyng in a canapy, that was wrought of purple, sylke, golde, smaragde and precyous stones, she loked fast vpō hym, and fell downe vpon the earthe. And Holofernes seruauntes toke her vp agayne, at theyr Lordes commaundement.

¶ Holofernes requyreth of Judith the cause of her commynge, whiche gyueth hym a lubryl answere.

CAPI. XI.

THen sayd Holofernes vnto her: Be of good chere, and feare not in thyne hert, for I neuer hurte man, that wold serue Nabuchodonosor the kynge. As for thy people, yf they had not despysed me, I shulde not haue lyft vp a spere agaynst them. But tell me now what is the cause that thou art departed frome them, and wherfore arte thou come vnto vs.

And Judith sayde vnto hym: Syr, vnderstande the wordes of thy handmayden: for yf thou wylt do after the wordes of thy handmayden, the Lorde shall bringe thy matter to a prosperous effecte. As surely as Nabuchodonosor a Lorde of the land lyueth, & as truly as his power lyueth, whiche is in the to the punyshment of all men that go wyde all men shal not onely be subdued vnto him thorow the, but al the beestes also of ye feld. For all people speake of thy prudente actyuytie, and it hath euer bene reported, howe thou onely art good and myghtye in all his kyngdome, and thy discretion is commended in all landes.

The thynge (s manyfest also, that Achior spake, and it is wel knowen what thou commaundedst to be vnto him. For this is playne and of a suertye, that oure God is so wroth with vs (by the reason of oure synnes) that he hathe shewed by his prophetes vnto the people, how that for theyr synnes he wyl wyuere them ouer vnto the enemye. And for so moch as the children of Israel know that they haue so displeased theyr God, they are sore afrayde of the. E Judith. 5.

They suffer greate honger also, and for want of water, they are dead powre in a maner. Moreouer they are appoynted to slaye all theyr catell, that they maye dyncke the bloude of them: and are purposed to spende al the holy ornamentes of their God (which he hath forbydden them to touche) for corne, wyne and oyle. Seynge nowe that they do these thynges, it is a playne case, that they must nedes be destroyed. Which when I thy handmayden perceyued, I fled frome them, and the Lord hath sent me vnto the, to shewe the these thynges. For I thy handmayden worshyp God, euen day nowe beside the, and thy handmayden shall go forthe, and I will make my prayer vnto God, and he shall tell me, when he will reuenge them of theyr synne: then shall I come and shewe the and bringe the thorowe the myddest of Jerusalem, so that thou shalt haue al ye people of Israel as the sheepe without a shepherde, there shal not so moch as an one dog barck agaynst the. For these thynges are shewed me by the prouydence of God: and for so moche as God is displeased with them, he hath sente me to tell the the same.

These wordes pleased Holofernes and al his seruauntes, which maruyled at the wysdome of her, and sayd one to an other: there is not suche a woman vpon earthe, in beauty and discretion of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath done well, that he hath sent the hither before thy people, that thou mayste geue them into our handes. And for so moche as thy prompte is good, yf thy God perfourme it, vnto me, he shalbe my God also, and thou shalte be exceldent and greate in the courte of Nabuchodonosor, & thy name shall be spoken of in all the lande.

Holofernes

¶ Holofernes commaundeth that Judith be well intreated. She desyreth licence to go out in the nyght season to prare, and obtayneth it. Vagao is sent vnto her, to moue her to come in to Holofernes to a banket, and she commeth. Holofernes is dronken.

CAPI. XII.

¶ Then cõmaunded he her to go in, where his treasure laye, and charged that she shoulde gaue her dwellynge there, and appoynted what shoulde be geuen her from his table. Iudith answered hym, and sayde: As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to gyue me, I maye not eat of it as now, lest I displease my God: but will eate of suche as I haue brought with me. Then sayd Holofernes vnto her: If these thynges þ thou hast brought with the sayle, what shal we do vnto the? And Judith sayde: As truly as thou lyuest my Lorde, thy handemayde shall not spende all this, tyll God hathe brought to passe in my handes, the thynges that I haue deuised.

¶ So his seruauntes brought her in to the tent, where as he had appoynted. And as she was goynge in, she desyred that she myghte haue leaue to go forthe by nyght and before daye, to her prayer and to make intercession vnto the Lorde. Then commaunded Holofernes his chamberlaynes, that they shulde go out and in at her pleasure to prayse God these thre dayes.

And so in the night season she went forth in to the valley at Bethulia, and washed her selfe in the well water. Then went she vp, & besought the Lorde God of Israel, that he wolde prospere her waye, for þ deliueraunce of his people. And so she went in, and remained alone in her tent, tyll she toke her meate in the euenynge.

¶ Vpon the fourth daye it happened, that Holofernes made a solempne supper vnto his seruauntes, and sayd vnto Vagao his chamberlayne: Go thy waye, and entyse this Hebrue, that she maye be wyllynge to consent to kepe chaunge with me. For it were a shame vnto all the Assyrians, that a woman shoulde so laugh a man to scorne, that she were come from him vnlayne with.

Then went Vagao vnto Judith, and sayd: Let not þ good doughter be afrayed, to come vnto my Lorde, that she maye be honoured before hym, that she maye eate and drynke wyne, and be merye with him. Vnto whom Judith answered: Who am I, that I shulde saye my lordes naye? what so euer is good before his eyes, I shall do it: and loke what is his pleasure, that shall I thynke well done, as longe as I lyue.

¶ So she rose vp, and decked her selfe with her apparell, and went in, and stode before hym. And Holofernes herte was thorowlye smytten, so þ he burnt in desyre towarde her. And Holofernes sayde to her: Dryncke now and syt downe, and be merye, for thou haste founde fauoure before me. Then sayde Judith: Syr, I wyll dryncke, for my myndes is meryer to daye, then euer it was in all my lyfe. And she toke and ate and dranke before hym the thynges that her mayden had prepared for her. And Holofernes was merye in her, and dranck more wyne, then euer he dyd afore in his lyfe.

¶ Holofernes sleyeth for very dronckennes, and Judith cutteth of his heed, & goeth therwith to her owne people: of whom she is receiued with ioye. They gyue thankes vnto God, for their deliuerraunce. Judith speaketh vnto Achior, which maruayleth at her treatie done to Holofernes.

CAPI. XIII.

NOwe when it was late in the nyghte his seruauntes made haste euery man to his lodgynge. And Vagao shut the chãbre doores, and went his waye, for they were all ouerladen with wyne. So was Judith alone in the chambre. As for Holofernes he lay vpon the bed all dronken, & of very dronkennes fell a slepe.

Then commaunded Judith her mayde, to stande with without before the doore and to wayte. And Judith stode before the bed, makyng her prayer with teares, and moued her lyppes secretlye, and sayde: Strengthen me O Lorde God of Israel, and haue respect vnto the workes of my handes in this houre, that thou mayste set vp thy cytye of Jerusalẽ lyke as thou hast promysed: O graunt that by the I may perfourme the thynge, which I haue deuised thorow þ beleue that I haue in the.

And when she had spoken this, she went to the bedstrade, and loosed the swerde that hanged vpon it, and drewe it out. Then toke she holde of the heery lockes of his heade, & sayde: Strengthen me O Lord God in this houre: & with that, she gaue hym two strokes vpon the necke, and smote of his heade. Then toke she the canapy away, and rolled the heade bodye alyde. Immedyatly she gat her forth, and deliuered the heade of Holofernes vnto her mayden, and bad her put it in her wallet.

And so these two went forth togyther after theyr custome, as thoughe they wolde praye, and so passed by the hoost, and came thorowe the valley vnto the porte of the cyty. And Judith cryed a farre of vnto þ watchmen vpon the walles: Open the gates (sayd she) for God is with vs, which hath shewed his power in Israel. And when they hearde her voyce, they called the elders of the cytye togyther. And they came al to metre her litle and greate, yonge and olde, for they thoughte not that she shulde haue come so soone. So they lyghted candels, and gathered about her euerychone: but she went vp into an hye place and caused silence to be proclaymed.

When euery man nowe helde his tonge, Judith sayde: O prayse the Lord our God, ¶ for he hath not despyred, nor forsaken the a-that put their trust in hym, & in me his handmaiden he hath performed his mercy, which he promised vnto the house of Israel: yea in my hande this same night hathe he slayne the ennemy of his people.

And with that she toke forthe the heed of Holofernes out of the wallet, and shewed it them, saying: Beholde the heed of Holofernes the capitayn of the Assirians, and this is the canapy wherin he lay in his drunkennes: where the Lord our God hath slayne him by the hand of a woman.

But as truly as the Lorde liueth his angel hath kept me, going thyther, remaining there, and comming hither agayn from thence. And the Lord hath not suffred me his handmaide to be defiled, but without any filthynesse of syn hath he brought me agayn vnto you, and that with grete victory, so that I am escaped and ye deliuered. O giue thankes vnto hym euerychone, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer.

So they prayfed the Lorde all togither, & gaue thankes vnto hym. And to her they said: The Lord hath blessed the in his power, for thorow the he hath brought our ennemyes to nought. And Ozias the chiefe ruler of ꝑ people of Israel, sayd vnto her: Blessed art ꝑ of the Lorde the hyghe God, aboue all women vpon earth.

Blessed be the Lorde, the maker of heuen & erth, which hath guyded the aright, to smyte and to smyte of the heed of the capitayne of our ennemyes. For this day he hath made thy name so honourable, that thy prayse shal neuer come out of the mouth of me, which shal alway remembre the power of the Lord, seing thou hast not spared thine owne self, but put the in ieopardy, considringe the anguysh and trouble of thy people, and so hast holpen their fal before God our Lorde. And all the people said: Amen, Amen.

Achior also was called, and he came. The sayd Judith vnto him: The God of Israell vnto whom thou gauest witnesse, ꝑ he wolde be auenged of his enemyes, euen he hath this night thorow my hand smitten of the heed of all the vnfaythfull. And that ꝑ mayst se that it so is, behold this is the heed of Holofernes which in his presumptuous pryde, despised ꝑ God of the people of Israel, & threatned the with destruction, saying: whē the people of Israel is take, I shal cause ꝑ also to be sticke with the swerd. When Achior saw Holofernes heed he fell downe vpon his face to the grounde for very anguish and feare, so that he swowned withall. But after ꝑ he was come agayn to him selfe, he fel downe before her, & prayfed her saying: Blessed art thou of thy God in all the tabernacles of Jacob, for all the people that hear of thy name, shal prayse the God of Israel because of the.

Judith sayd vnto al the people: Brethren hear me. Stick vp this heed vpon our walles, and when the sunne ariseth, take euery man his weapon, and sal out violently: not as though ye wold go beside them, but to ren vpon them with violence. When the spies in the tentes se this, they shal of necessite be compelled to flie backward, and to raise vp their capitayn to the battayle. So whē their capitaynes come in to Holofernes pauylion, and fynde the heed bodye wrapped in the blonde, fearfulnes shal fall vpon them, and when ye perceyue that they flie, followe them without all care, for God shal deliuer them vnto you to be destroyed.

Then Achior seinge the power of God, which he had shewed vnto the people of Israel, fell of from his heathenish byleue, and put his trust in God, and let him selfe be circumcised: and so was he numbred among ꝑ people of Israel, he and all his posteritie vnto this daye.

Now as soone as it was daye, they sticke vp Holofernes heed vpon the walles, and euery man toke his weapon, and so they went oute with an horrible crye. When the spyes sawe that, they ranne vnto Holofernes tent. And they that were within the tente, came before his chaumbre, and made a greate rushing to wake him vp, because they thought with the noyse to haue raysed hym. For there durst not one of the Assirians knocke, go in, or open.

But when the Capytaynes and Princes and all the chyefe in the kynge of the Assyrians hoste came togither, they sayde vnto the chamberlaynes: Goo your waye in, and wake hym vp, for the myce are crepte out of their holes, and dare prouoke vs vnto battayle.

Then wente Bagao in to his chamber, stode before the bedde, and clapped with his handes, for he thought he had ben slepyng with Judith.

But when he had hardened perfectly with his eares and could perceyue no stering, he went nere to the bed, and lyft it vp, and then sawe he the deed bodye of Holofernes lyeng there without a heed, welterd in his blonde, vpon the earthe. Then cryed he with loude voyce, and with weppynge rente his clothes, and went in to Judiths tent, and founde her not: And so he lepte out vnto the people and sayd one woman of the Jewes hath brought all Nabuchodonosors people to shame. For lo, Holofernes lieth vpon the ground, & hath no heed.

When the chief of the Assirians hoste herd that, they rent their clothes, and there fel an intollerable feare and trembling vpon the, so that their myndes were sore afrayd. And there was an exceding great crye in the hole hoste.

¶ The counsell of Judith. Achior beyng an heathen man, turneth to God. The Assyrians are affrayed of the Jewes.

¶ The flyght of the Assyrians. The pursute of Israel after them. Israel becommeth ryche, by the spoyles of the Assyrians. Judith is prayfed of Joacim and of the people.

CAPI. XV.

NOw when all the hoste herde that Holofernes was herded, they: myude and counsell fell from theym: and suche a feare came vpon them, that they vndertoke to defende them selues by fleing away: one spake not to an other, but hāged downe their heades, left all behinde them, and made haste to escape fro me the Hebrues: for they herde that they were hastynge to come after with they: weapōs, and so they fled by the wayes of the feldes, and thorow all the fotpathes of the dales.

And when the childzen of Israel sawe that they fled, they folowed vpon them, and wēt downe with trompettes, blowyng and makyng a great crye after them: As for the Assirians they had no ordre, and kept not them selues togyther, but fled their waye. Neuertheselle the childzen of Israel fell vpon them with one company and ordre, and discomfeted as many as they mygbte get. And Olias sent messengers vnto all the cityes and countreys of Israel.

B So all the regions and euery city sent out their best men after them in harnesse, & smote them with the sword, tyl they came to the vttermost part of their borders. And ꝑ other ꝑ were in Bethulia came in to the tentes of the Assirians, and toke all that they which were fled had left behynd them, and so they found great good. And they that came agayn to Bethulia from the battayle, toke with the suche thinges as had ben theirs: there was no nōbre of the catell, and of all costlye iewels, so that from the lowest to the hyest, they were all made ryche of the spoyles of them. And Joachim the hye prest at Jerusalem came to Bethulia with al the elders, that they might se Judith.

Nowe when she came out vnto them, they began all to prayse her with one voyce, sayinge: thou worshyp of the city of Jerusalem thou ioye of Israel, thou honour of our people, thou haste doone manly, and thy herte is comforted, bycause thou haste loued clenlynesse and chastitie, and hast knowen no man but thyne owne husband: therfore hath the hand of the Lorde comforted the, and blessed shalt thou be for euer. And al people sayd: so be it, so be it.

L In thyrtye dayes coulde the people of Israel scarce gather vp the spoyles of the Assirians. But all that belonged vnto Holofernes, and had ben his specyalty (whether it were of gold, of syluer, of precious stones clothyng and all ornamētes) they gaue it vnto Judith. And all the people reioyced, bothe women, maydens, and yong people, with pipes and harpes.

¶ The songe of Judith for the victory. After the victorye obteyned, the people commeth to Jerusalem, to worshyp and prayse God.

CAPI. XVI.

THen songe Judith this songe vnto the Lorde: Begin vnto the Lorde vpon ꝑ tabretes, syng vnto the Lorde vpō the cymbales. O sing vnto him a newe songe of thankelgyuing, be ioyfull and call vpon his name. It is the Lorde ꝑ destroyeth warres, euen the Lorde is his name. Which hath pitched his tentes in the middest of his people, ꝑ he mygbt deliuer vs from the hand of al our enemyes. Assur came out of the mountayns in the multitude of his strengthe. His people stopped the water brookes, and their bodies couered ꝑ valeys. He purposed to haue brent vp my lande, and to slee my yonge men with the swerde. I

The wolde haue carped awaye my childzen and virgyns in to captyuitie, but the almygbty Lorde hurt hym, and delyuered him in to the hādes of a woman, whiche brought hym to confusyon. For they: mygbtye was not destroyed of the yonge men. It was not the sonnes of Titan that slewe him, neyther haue the greate grauntes set them selues agaynst hym: but Judith the doughter of Merari with her fayre beauty haue discomfeted hym, and brought hym to nought. For she layd awaye her wydowes garment, and put on the apparell of gladnesse in the reioysing of the childzen of Israell. She annoynted her face, and bounde vp her heere in an haue, to begyle hi. Her slyppers rauisshed his eyes, her beautye captyuated his mynde, with the swerde smote she of his neche. The Persiās were astonyed at her stedfastnesse, ꝑ the Medes at her boldnesse. Then howled ꝑ armies of the Assirians, when my symple appeared, braye of thurst.

C The sonnes of the doughters haue perced them thorowe, and slayne them as fugityue childzen: they perysshed in the battayle, for the very feare of the Lorde my God. Let vs synge a songe of thankelgyuynge vnto the Lorde, a newe songe of prayse wyll we syng vnto our God. Lord Lord, thou art a great God, myghty in power, whom no man maye ouercome. All thy creatures shoulde serue the: for thou spakest but the worde, and they were made, thou sentest thy spirite, and they were created, and no man can withstand thy voyce. The mountayns shal moue from the foundacyons with the waters, the stony roches shal melt before the like ware. But they that feare the, shall be greate with the in all thynges. Woo vnto the people that ryse vp agaynste my generacion, for the almyghtye Lorde wyll auenge hym selfe of them, and in the daye of iudgement wyl he visyt them. For he shal gyue fyre and wormes in to their flesshe, that they may burne and fele it for euermore.

After this it happened that after the victo ryc, all the people came to Jerusalem to giue prayse & thankes vnto the Lorde. And when they were purified, they offred al their brent sacrifices, and their promysed offrings. And Judith offred all Holofernes weapons, and all the iewels that the people had gyuen her, and the canapye that she toke from his bed, and and hanged them vp vnto the Lorde. The people was ioyful as the vse is: and this ioy by reason of the victorye with Judith, endured thre monethes.

So after these dayes, euerye man wente home agayne, and Judith was in great reputacion at Bethulia, and ryght honourablye taken in al the land of Israel. Vnto her vertue also was chastitie ioyned, so that after her husbande Manasses died, she neuer knewe man all the dayes of her lyfe. Vpon the hye solemne dayes she went out with great worshyp. She dwelte in her husbandes house an hundred and fyue yere, and lefte her handemayden free and dyed, and was buryed beside her husbande in Bethulia. And all the people mourned for her seuen dayes. So longe as she lyued, there was none that troubled Israell, and manye yeres also after her deathe.

The daye wherin this victorye was gotten, was solemnely holden and reckened of the Iewes, in the nombre of the holye dayes, and it is yet greatly holden of the Iewes euer sence, vnto this daye.

The dreame of Mardochus.

CAPI. XI. After the 10 tyme.

MArdocheus the son of Jair, the sonne of Semei, the sonne of Cisei of the tribe of Benjamin, a Jewe, whiche hadde his dwellynge in Susis, a man of greate reputacion, and excellent amonge all them that were in the kynges courte. (Neuertheles, he was one of the prysoners whō Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon had caryed awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babylon with Jechonias ꝑ kyng of Juda.) In the seconde yere of the raygne of greate Artaxerxes, in the fyrst daye of the moneth Nisan, hadde this Mardocheus suche a dreame: he thoughte he herde a greate tempest, horrible thonderclappes, erthquakes, and greate vproze in the land: and that he sawe two great dragons redy to fyght one against an other. Theyr crye was greate: At the whiche royng and crye, all heathen were ꝑpared to fight agaynste the ryghteous people. And the same daye was full of darcknesse, and vncleane, ful of trouble and anguysh, yea a great fearefulnesse was there in all the land. The ryghteous were amased, for they feared the plage and euyll that was deuysed ouer them and were at a poynte with thē selues to dye. So they cryed vnto God, & whyle they were crying, the lytle wel grewe in to a great ryuer, and in to many waters, and with that it was daye, and the sunne rose vp agayne. And the lowly were exalted, and deuoured ꝑ glorious and ꝑoude.

Now whē Mardochē had sene this dreame he awoke, and mused stedfastly in his herte, what God wold do: & so he desired to know all the matter, and his mynde was therupon vntyll the nyght.

Mardocheus letteth the treason deuysed against the kynge, and is therfore rewarded of him.

CAPI. XII.

AT the same tyme dwelt Mardocheus with Bagatha and Tares the kynges chamberlayns and porters of the palace. But when he herde their deuyce, and had diligently consydred theyr ymaginacyons, he perceyued that they wente about to laye theyr cruel handes vpon the kynge Artaxerxes, and so he certified the king therof. Then caused the kynge to examyn the two gelded with tormentes. And when they had graunted it, they were put to deth.

¶ This the kyng caused to be put in the Cronicles for an euerlastynge remembraunce, & Mardocheus wrote vp the same matter. ¶ To the kyng commaunded þ Mardocheus shold do seruyce in þ court, & for this faythfulnes of his, he gaue him a reward. But Aman the sonne of Amadathu the Agagite, which was holde in great honour & reputacion in þ kings court vndertoke to hurt Mardocheus & his people, bycause of þ two chamberlaynes that were put to deth.

¶ The coppye of the letters of Artaxerxes, agaynst the Iewes. The prayer of Mardocheus.

CAPI. XIII.

¶ The great kyng Artaxerxes which raygneth from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and .xxix. landes, sendeth his frendly salutacion vnto all the princes and deputyes of the countre, & which be subiect vnto his dominiõ. Whe I was made lorde ouer many people, and had subdued the hole erth vnto my dominion, my mynde was not with cruelte and wronge to exalte my self by the reason of my power: but purposed with equite alwaye and gentlenesse, to gouerne those that be vnder my iurisdiction and holly to set them in a peaceable life, and therby to bringe my kyngdome vnto tranquillite, that men myght lefully go! ouerowe on euery syde, and to renue peax agayne, whi che all men desyre.

Hest.6.a
a.Hest.viii.a

Now when I asked my counsellers howe their thynges myght be brought to a good ende, there was one by vs excellent in wysdome, whose good wyll, truthe, and faythfulnesse hathe ofte bene shewed and proued, (which was also the principall and next vnto the kyng) Aman by name: which certyfyed vs, howe that in all landes there was crepte in a rebellyous folke that make statutes and lawes against al other people, and haue alwayes despysed the proclaymed commaundementes of kynges, and how that for this cause it were not to be suffred that such rule shoulde contynue by you, and not to be put downe.

Kynge now we perceyue the same, þ this people alone are contrarye vnto euery man, vsyng straunge and other maner of lawes, & withstand our statutes and doynges, and go about to stablish lewde matters, that our kyngdome shold neuer come to good estate and stedfastnesse: Therfore haue we commaunded, that al they that are appointed in writing, & shewed vnto you by Aman which is ordeyned and set ouer all oure busynesse, and the most principall next vnto the kyng, and in mener as a father) shall with their wyues and chyldren be destroyed and rooted out with the swerde of their enemyes and aduersaryes: and that there shal be no mercy shewed, and no man spared. And this shal be done in þ fourtenth day of the moneth called Adar, of this yere that they which of old (and nowe also) haue euer bene rebellyous, maye in one daye with violence, be thrust downe in to the hell, to the intent that after this maner our empyre maye haue peax and tranquillitie.

But Mardocheus thought vpon all the D
workes and noble actes of the Lord, & made his prayer vnto hym, saying: O Lord Lord thou valyaunt and almyghty kynge, for all thynges are in thy power, and yf thou wylte helpe and delyuer Israel, there is no mã that can withstãde ne let the: for thou hast made heuen and erth, and what wonderous thyng so euer is vnder the heuen: thou arte Lorde of all thynges, and there is no man that can resyst the, o Lorde. Thou knowest all thynges, thou wotest Lorde, that it was neyther of malice, ne presumpcion, nor for any desire of glorye, that I wolde not bowe downe my selfe, nor worshyp yonder proude presumptuous Aman (for I wolde haue bene contente, and that with good wyll, yf it myght haue done Israel any good, to haue kyst euen his fotesteppes) but þ I dyd it bycause I wolde not set the honoure of a man in the stede of the glorye of God, and bycause I wolde worshyp none but onely the my Lorde. And this haue I done in no pryde ne presumpcion.

And therfore, O Lorde, thou God and kynge, haue mercy vpon thy people, for they E ymagin how they may bringe vs to nought, yea, they: mynde and desyre is to destroye, and to ouerthrowe the people that hathe euer ben thyne inheritaunce of olde. O despyse not thy portion whiche thou hast deliuered and brought out of Egypte for thyne owne selfe. Heare my prayer, and be mercyful vnto thy people, whom thou hast chose for an heritage vnto thy selfe. Turne our complaynt and sorowe in to ioye, that we maye lyue, O Lorde, and prayse thy name. O Lord, suffre not the mouthes of them that prayse the, to be destroyed.

All the people of Israel in like maner cryed as cruelly as they could vnto the Lorde, for their death and destruction stode before their eyes.

¶ The prayer of Esther, for the delyuerance of her and her people.

CAPI. XIIII.

Queene Esther also being in the batell A of deth, reforted vnto the Lord, layd alwaye her gorgyous apparell, & put on the garmentes that serued for sighyng and mournyng. In the stede of precious oyntment, she scatred asshes and dong vpon her heed: and as for her body, she humbled it and brought it very low. All þ places where she was wont to haue ioye afore, those filled she with the tearyng of her heere. She prayed also vnto the Lorde God of Israell, with these wordes.

O my

O my Lorde, thou only art our kyng, helpe me desolate woman, whiche haue no helper but the, for my mysery & destruction is hard at my hād. Fro my youth vp I haue herd out of the kynred of my father, that thou tokest Israel from amonges al people, and so haue our fathers of their fore elders, þ they shold be thy perpetuall inheritaunce, & lokest what thou byddest prompte them, thou hast made it good vnto them.

Nowe, wel Lorde, we haue synned before the, therfore hast thou geuen vs in to the handes of oure ennemyes, bycause we worshypped theyr goddes. Lorde thou art ryghteous. Neuertheles it satisfyeth them not, that we are in bytter and heuye captiuitie, and oppressed amonges theym, but thou hast layde theyr handes vpon the handes of theyr goddes: so that they begyn to take awaye the thynge that thou with thy mouth hast ordeyned and appoynted: to destroye thyne enheritaunce, to shut and to stop the mouthes of them that prayse the, to quenche the glorye & worshyp of thy house and thyne aulter, and to open the mouthes of the heathē, that they maye prayse the power and vertue of þ goddes, and to magnifye the flesshely kynge for euer.

L O Lorde, geue not thy scepter vnto them þ be nothynge, lest they laugh vs to scorne in our mysery and fall: but turne their deuice vpon them selues, and punysh hym that hath begon the same ouer vs, and set hym to an ensample. Thynke vpon vs, o Lorde, and shew thy selfe in the tyme of oure distresse, and of oure trouble. Strengthe me, o thou kynge of goddes, thou Lorde of al power, geue me an eloquent and pleasaunt speche in my mouthe before the lyon. Tourne his herte in to the hate of our ennemye, to destroye hym, and al suche as consent vnto hym. But deliuer vs with thy hand, and helpe me desolate woma whiche haue no defence nor helper but onely the. Lorde thou knowest all thynges, thou wotest that I loue not the glory and worship of the vnrighteous, and that I hate & abhorre the bedde of the vncircumcysed, and of all heathen.

Thou knowest and wotest my necessitie, D that I hate the token of my preemynence, and worshyp, whiche I beare vpon my herd, what tyme as I muste shewe my selfe and be seue, and that I abhorre it as an vncleane clothe, and that I weare it not when I am quyet and alone by my selfe. Thou knowest also that I thy handemayden haue not eaten at Amans table, and that I haue had no pleasure nor delyte in the kynges feaste, that I haue not dronke the drynkofferynges, and that I thy handemayden haue hadde no ioye sence the daye that I was broughte hyther, vnto this daye, but onely in the o Lorde. O thou God of Abraham, O thou myghtye God aboue al: heare the voyce of them that haue none other hope, and deliuer vs oute of the hande of the wycked, and deliuer me out of my feare.

¶ Mardocheus moueth Hester to go in to the kynge, and make intercessyon for her people, and the prelormeth his request.

CAPL. XV.

AND vpon the thyrde daye it happened that Hester layd awaye the mourning garmentes, and put on her glorious apparell, and decked her selfe goodly (after that she had called vpon God, whiche is the beholder and sauyoure of all thynges) toke two maydes with her: vpon the one she leaned her selfe, as one that was tender: the other folowed her, and bare the trayne of her vesture. The shyne of her beautye made her face rose coloured. The symilitude of her face was cheretull and amiable, but her hert was sorowfull for greate feare. She wente in thorowe all the doores, and stode before the kynge. The kynge sate vpon the throne of his kingdome, & was clothed in his goodly araye all of golde, and set with precyous stones, and he was very terrible. He lyfte vp his face that shone in the gleremelle, and loked grymly vpon her. Then fell the quene downe, was pale and faynt, leaned her selfe vpon the herd of the mayde that went with her.

Neuertheles God tourned the kynges mynde, that he was gentle, that he lepte out of his seat for feare, and gat her in his armes and holde her vp, tyll she came to her selfe agayne. He haue her louyng worses also, and layd vnto her: Hester, what is the matter? I am thy brother, be of good chere, thou shalt not dye: for our commaundement toucheth the commons, not the. Come nye. And with þ he held vp his golden wand, and layd it vpō her neche, and embraced her frendly, & sayd: talke with me. Then sayd she: I sawe the, o Lorde, as an aungell of God, & my hert was troubled for feare of thy maiesty and clerenesse. For excellent and wonderful art thou, o Lorde, and thy face is ful of amitie. But as she was thus speakynge vnto hym, she fell downe agayne for faintnes: for the whiche cause the kynge was afrayde, and all his seruauntes comforted her.

¶ The copye of the letters of Artaxerxes, whereby he reuoketh those which he erste sent forth.

CAPL. XVI.

THE great kinge Artaxerxes, which raygned from India vnto Ethiopia ouer an hundred and. xxvij. landes sendeth vnto the princes & rulers of the same landes suche as loue hym, his frendly salutacyon. There be many þ for the sondry frendshippes and benefytes, whiche are dyuerse done vnto theym for theyr worshyp, be euer the more proude and lye minded, and vndertake not onely to hurte oure subiectes, for plenteous benefytes maye they not suffre, and begyn to ymagyn some thynge agaynste thole

Eee.iij. that that do them good, and take not only all vnthankfulnes away from men, but in pryde & presumpcion (as they that be vnmindful and vnthankful for ꝑ good dedes) they go about to escape the iudgement of God that seith al thinges, which (iudgement) hateth and punisheth all wickednesse. It happeneth oft also, that they whiche be set in office by ꝑ hyer power, and vnto whom the busines and causes of the subiectes are committed to be handled warr proude, & defile them selues with shedding of innocent bloude, which bringeth the to intollerable hurte. Which also with falsit and disceytfull wordes, and with lyinge tales, disceyue and betraye the innocent goodnesse of princes.

B Now is it profitable ꝑ good, that we take hede, make serch therafter, and consider not onely what hathe happened vnto vs of olde, but the shameful, vnhoneft, & noysom thinges that the deputies haue now taken in hand before our eyes, and therby to beware in tyme to come, ꝑ we may make the kyngdom quyet and peaceable for al men, and that we might somtyme draw it to a chaunge: and as for the thing that now is present before our eyes, to withstande it, and to put it downe, after the most frendly maner.

(Hester iii a) What tyme nowe as Aman the sonne of Amadathu the Macedonian (a straunger verily of the Persians bloude and farre from ourr goodnesse) was come in amonge vs as an alyaunce, and hadde obteyned the frendshyp that we beare towardes all people, so that he was called our father, and hadde in hye honoure of euerye man, as the nexte and principall vnto the kyng, he coulde not forbeare him selfe from his pryde, hath vndertaken not onely to rob vs of the kyngdome, but of our lyfe.

With manyfolde disceyte also hath he desyred to destroy Mardoche our helper and C preseruer, whiche hathe done vs good in all thynges: and innocent Hester the lyke partaker of our kyngdome with all our people. For his mynde was (when he had take them out of the way, & robbed vs of them) by this meanes to translate the kyngdom of the Persians vnto the of Macedonia. But we fynde that the Jewes (whiche were accused of the wicked, ꝑ they might be destroyed) are no euildoers, but vse reasonable and right lawes, & that they be the children of ꝑ most hye liuing God, by whom the kyngdome of vs, and our progenitours hath ben weldred hytherto. Wherfore as for the letters and commaundementes that were put forth by Aman ꝑ son of Amadathu, ye shal do wel yf ye hold them of none effect: for he ꝑ set them vp and inuented them, hangeth at Sulis before the porte, with all his kynred, and God (which beeth al thinges in his power) hath rewarded him after his deserueng.

And vpon this ye shal publish and set vp ꝑ copy of this letter in all places, ꝑ the Jewes D maye freely and without hinderaunce holde them selues after theyr owne statutes, & that they maye be helped, and that vpon the xiii. day of the xii. moneth Ader, they may be auenged of them, which in ꝑ time of their anguish and trouble, wolde haue oppressed them. For the God that gouerneth all thinges hath turned to ioye the day wherin the chosen people shold haue perished.

Moreouer among the hye solemne dayes ꝑ ye haue, ye shall hold this daye also with all gladnesse: that now, and in time to come, this day may be a remembraunce to good, for all suche as loue the prosperitie of the Persians: but a remembraunce of destruction to those ꝑ be sedicious vnto vs.

All cities and landes that do not this shal horribly perysche and be destroyed with the swerde and fyre, and shall not onely be no more inhabyted of men, but be abhorred also of the wylde beastes and foules.

¶ The ende of the rest of the boke of Esther.

THE BOOKE OF VVYSDOME.

¶ How we ought to searche and enquyre after God, and whome thole that fynde him. Of the holy ghost. We ought to flye from backbityng and murmuryng &c.

CAPI. I.

LOue your affection vpon wysdome, ye that be iudges of the erath. Haue a good opynyon of the Lord and fynde him in the singlenesse of hertes. For he will be found of them that tempt him not, and appeareth vnto such as put their trust in him. But the frowarde thoughtes they seperate from God, and power (if it be alowed) reboumeth the vnwyse. And why? wysdome shall not entre in to a frowarde soule, ne dwell in the body that is subiect vnto synne. For the holye ghost abhorreth fayned nurtoure, and withdraweth hym self from the thoughtes that are wit hout vnder standynge: and when wickednesse hath the vpperhande, he fleeth from thence. For the spirite of wysdom is louyng, gentle and gracious, and will haue no pleasure in him that speaketh cuyll with his lyppes. For God is a wytnesse of his reynes, a true sercher oute of his herte, and an hearer of his tonge. For the spirite of the Lorde fylleth the rounde compasse of the worlde, and the same that vpholdeth al thynges, hath knowledge also of the voyce.

Therfore he that speaketh vnrygh teous thynges, can not be hyd, neyther maye he escape the iudgement of reprofe. And why? inquision shall be made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the reporte of his wordes shall come vnto God, so that his wickednes shalbe punyshed. For the eare of gelousy heareth all thynges, and the noyse of the grudgynges, shall not be hyd. Therfore beware of murmuryng, whiche is nothyng worth and refrayne youre tonge from sclaundre. For here is no worde so darcke and secrete, that it shal go for nought: the mouth that speaketh lyes, slayeth the soule.

Seke not your owne death in the errour of your lyfe, destroye not your selues thorow the workes of your owne handes. For God hath not made death, neither hath he pleasure in the destruction of the lyuynge. For he created all thinges, that they myght haue their beynge: yea all the people of the earth hath he made that they should haue health, that there should be no destruction in them, and the kyngdome of hell shoulde not be vpon earth (for rygh teousnesse is euerlastynge and immortall, but vnrygh teousnesse bringeth death.) Neuertheles, the vngodly call her vnto them, bothe with wordes and workes, and whyle they thynche to haue a frende of her, they come to nought: for the vngodly that are confederate with her and take her parte: are worthy of death.

¶ The mysgouernaunce and behaues of the vngodly, and they; counsell agaynst the righteous.

CAPI. II.

FOr the vngodly talke and reasen thus among them selues (but not ryght) The tyme of our life is but shorte and tedyous, and when a man is once gone, he hath no more ioye ne pleasure, neither know we any man that returneth agayne from death for we are borne of nought and we shall be hereafter as though we had neuer bene. For our breth is a smoke in our nosterie, and the worde as a sparcke to moue our herte. As for our body, it shall be very ashes that are quenched, and our soule shall vanyth as the soft ayre. Our lyfe shall passe away as the trace of a cloude, and come to nought as the mysle that is dryuen away with the beames of the sunne, and put downe with the heate thereof. Our name also shall be forgotten by lytle & lytle and no man shal haue our workes in remembraunce.

For our tyme is a very shadow that passeth away, and after our ende, there is no returnynge, for it is fast sealed, so that no man commeth agayne. Come on therfore, let vs enioye the pleasures that be present, and let vs soone vse the creature lyke as in youth. We will fyll oure selues with good wyne and oyntment, there shall no floure of the tyme go by vs. We will crowne oure selues with rose buds ere they be withered. There shall be no fayre medow, but oure lust shal go therin it. Let euery one of you be partaker of oure voluptuousnesse. Let vs leaue some token of oure pleasure in euery place, for that is oure portyon, & is get we nothyng. Let vs oppresse the poore righteous, let vs not spare the widdow ne old man, let vs not regarde the heres that are gray for age.

Let the lawe of rygh teousnesse be oure auctoryte, for the thynge that is feble is nothynge worth. Therfore let vs defraude the righteous, and why? he is not for our profyte, yea he is cleane contrary to our doynges. He chydeth vs for offendynge agaynste the lawe, and sclaundreth vs as transgressoures of all nurture. He maketh his boaste to haue the knowledge of God, yea he calleth hym self Gods sonne. He is the beholder of our thoughtes: It greueth vs also to loke vpon him, for his lyfe is not lyke other mens, his wayes are of an other fashyon. He counteth vs but bayne persons, he withdraweth him self from oure wayes as from fylthynesse: he commendeth greatly the latter ende of the iust, and maketh his boaste that God is his father. Let vs se then yf his wordes be true, let vs proue what shall come vpon him: so shall we knowe what ende he shall haue.

For yf he be the true sonne of God, he will

wyll receyue hym and delyuer hym from the handes of his enemyes. Let vs examen hym with despytefull rebuke and tormentynge, ℘ we may knowe his dignite, and proue his patience. Let vs condempne hym with the moste shamefull death: for ryght as he hath spoken, so shall he be rewarded.

Suche thynges do the vngodly ymagyn, and go astraye, for theyr awne wyckednesse hath blynded them. As for the mysteryes of God, they vnderstand them not: they neither hope for the rewarde of ryghteousnesse, ne regarde the worshyp that holy soules shall haue. For God created man to be vndeflowred, yea after the ymage of his owne ydentite made he hym. Neuertheles, throwe enuye of the deuyll, came death vnto ℘ worlde, and they that holde of his syde, do as he doth.

¶ The conseruacyon and assurance of ℘ ryghteous. The rewarde of the ℘ryghtfull.

CAPI. III.

BVt the soules of the ryghteous are in ℘ hande of God, and the payne of deathe shall not touche them. In the syght of the vnwyse they appeare to dye, and theyr ende is taken for hurt destruction. The waye of the ryghteous is iudged to be vtter destruction, but they are in rest. And thoughe they suffer payne before men, yet is theyr hope full of immortalyte. They are punyshed but in fewe thynges, neuertheles, in many thynges shall they be well rewarded. For God proueth them, and fyndeth them mete for hym selfe: yea as the golde in the fornace doeth he trye them, and receyueth them as a brute offrynge, and when the tyme commeth: they shall be loked vpon.

The ryghteous shall shyne as the sparkes that ren thorow the red bulrishe. They shall iudge the nacyons, and haue dominion ouer the people, and theyr Lorde shall raygne for euer. They that put theyr trust in him, shall vnderstande the truthe, and suche as be ℘ faythfull, wyl agree dwell him in loue: for his chosen shall haue grace and peace. But the vngodly shall be punyshed accordynge to theyr owne ymaginacyons, for they haue despysed the ryghteous, and forsaken the Lorde.

Who so despyseth wysedome and nurture, he is vnhappye, and as for the hope of suche, it is but vayne, theyr labours vnfruteful, and theyr workes vnprofitable. Theyr wyues are vndiscrete, and theyr chyldren moste vngodly. Theyr creature is cursed. Blessed is rather the baren and vndefyled, whiche hathe not knowen the synfull bedde: she shall haue frute in the rewarde of the holy soules. And blessed is the gelded, whiche with his handes hath wrought no vnryghteousnesse, ne ymagined wycked thynges agayne God. For vnto hym shall be gyuen the specyall gyfte of fayth, and the most acceptable porcyon in ℘ temple of God. For glorious is the frute of good labours, and the rote of wysdome shall neuer fade awaye.

As for the chyldre of aduoutrers, they shal come to an ende, & the sede of an vnryghteous bed shall be roted out. And though they lyue longe, yet shall they be nothynge regarded and theyr last age shall be without honoure. Yf they dye hastely, they haue no hope, neyther shall they be spoke to in the day of knowledge. For horrible is the death and ende of the vnryghteous.

¶ Of the chaste generacyon of the ℘yghtfull, and of theyr fruytfulnesse. Of the death of the ryghteous and of the condempnacion of the vnfaythfull.

CAPI. IIII.

O howe fayre is a chaste generacyon in vertue? The memoryall therof is immortall, for it is knowen with god men. When it is present, men take example therat: and yf it go away, yet they desyre it. It is alway crowned and holden in honour and wynneth the rewarde of the vndefyled battayle. But ℘ multytude of vngodly children is vnprofytable, and the thynges that are plated with bastardome, shal take no depe rote, ne laye any fast foundacion. Thoughe they be grene in the braunches for a tyme, yet shal they be shaken with the wynde: for they stand not fast, and thorow the behemence of the wynde they shall be roted out. For the vnperfect braunches shall be broken, theyr frute shal be vnprofytable and lowre to eat, yea mete for nothynge. And wyfull all the children that are borne of the wicked, must beare recorde of the wyckednesse agaynste theyr fathers and mothers, whe they be asked. But though the ryghtous be ouertaken in death yet shall he be in rest.

Age is an honourable thynge. Neuertheles it standeth not only in the length of tyme ne the multytude of yeares: but a mans wisdome is the graye heer, and an vndefyled life is the olde age. He pleased God, and was beloued of him: so that where as he lyued amonges synners, he translated him. Yea sodenly was he taken away, to the intent that wickednesse shulde not alter his vnderstandynge, and that ꝓcurednesse shulde not begyle his soule. For the craftye bewytchyng of vyces make good thynges darcke, the vnstedfastnesse also and wickednesse of voluptuous desyre turne awaye the vnderstandynge of the symple. Though he was soone dead, yet fulfylled he moch tyme. For his soule pleased God therfore hasted he to take hym awaye from amonges the wycked. This the people se and vnderstande it not: they lay not vp such thynges in theyr hertes, how that the louing fauour and mercye of God is vpon his saintes, and that he hath respecte vnto his chosen.

Thus the ryghteous that is dead, condempneth the vngodly whiche are lyuynge: and the youth that is soone brought to an ende, the longe lyfe of the vnryghteous. For they se the ende of the wyse, but they vnderstand not what God hath deuised for hym, & wher-

for

foꝛ the Lorde hath taken hym awaye. And why? they ſe hym and beſpyte hym, therfore ſhall God alſo laugh them to ſcorne: And they them ſelues ſhall dye hereafter (but without honoure) yea in ſhame amonge the dede foꝛ euermoꝛe. Foꝛ withoute any voyce, ſhall he burſt thoſe that be put vp, & remoue them from the lofdacyons, ſo that they ſhal be layed waſte vnto the hyeſt. They ſhall mourne, and theyr memoryall ſhall perysſhe. So they bryng a frayed ſhall remembre theyr ſynnes, and theyr owne wyckednelle ſhall bewraye them.

¶ The conſtauntnelle of the ryghteous before their perſecuters. The hope of the vnfaythfull is vnſtable and vayne. The vnkyndnelle and vnfortunatenelle of the layuntes and godly.

CAPI. V.

THey ſhall the ryghteous ſtande in greate ſtedfaſtnelle, agaynſte ſuche as haue dealt extremely with them, and taken awaye theyr laboures. When they ſe it, they ſhall be vexed with horrible feare, and ſhall wonder at the haſtynelle of the ſodayn helth: gronyng foꝛ very deſtreſſe of mynde, and ſhal ſaye within them ſelues, vayuage inwarde ſoꝛow, and mourning foꝛ very anguyſſhe of mynde.

Theſe are they, whom we ſometyme had in derilyon, & iefted vpon. We fooles thought theyr lyfe very madneſſe, and their ende to be without honoure. But lo, now they are coũted among the chyldren of God, and their portyon is amonge the layntes. Therfore we haue erred from the way of truth, the lyghte of ryghteouſnelle hathe not ſhyned vnto vs, and the ſunne of vnderſtandyng, roſe not vp vpon vs. We haue wearyed our ſelues in the waye of wyckednelle and deſtruction. Tedious wayes haue we gone: but the way of the Lorde we haue not knowen.

What good hath our pryde done vnto vs? Oꝛ what profyte hath the pompe of ryches brought vs? All thoſe thynges are paſſed awaye lyke a ſhadow, and as a meſſenger retynyge beſore: as a ſhyp that paſſeth ouer the waues of water, whiche when it is gone by, the trace therof can not be founde, neither the path of it in the ſtoudes. Oꝛ as a byrde that flyeth thoꝛow the ayre, and no man can ſe ony token where ſhe is flowen, but only heareth the noyce of her wynges, beatynge the lyght wynde, partynge the ayre thoꝛowe the vehemence of her flyghte, and ſtreth on ſhakynge her wynges, where as afterwarde no token of her waye can be founde. Oꝛ lyke as when an arrowe is ſhot at a marcke, it parteth the ayre, whiche immediatly commeth togyther agayne, ſo that a man can not knowe where it went thoꝛow. Euen ſo we in lyke maner as ſoone as we were borne, began immediatlye to waſte to our ende, and haue ſhewed no token of vertue, but are conſumed in our owne wyckednelle.

Such wordes ſhall they that haue ſynned ſpeake in the hell: foꝛ the hope of the vngodly is lyke a thyn chaffe flowre (or duſt) ſo blowen awaye with the wynde: lyke as thyn ſcum that is ſcattred abrode with the ſtorme, lyke as the ſmoke whiche is diſperſed here and there with the wynde, or as the remembraunce of a ſtraunger that taryeth foꝛ a daye, is then departed. But the ryghteous ſhall lyue foꝛ euermoꝛe: their reward alſo is with the Lorde: and their remembraunce with the hyeſt. Therfore ſhal they receyue a glorious kyngdome and a beautyfull crowne of the Lordes hande: foꝛ with his right hãd ſhall he couer the, and with his owne arme ſhall he defende them. Hys geloufy alſo ſhall take harneſſe, and ſhall arme the creature to be auenged of the enemyes. He ſhall put an ryghteouſneſſe foꝛ a breſt plate, and take ſure iudgemẽt in ſtede of an helmet. The inuincible ſhylde of equytie ſhall he take, his cruell wrath ſhall he ſharpen foꝛ a ſpeare, and the hole compaſſe of the worlde ſhall fyght with hym agaynſt the vnwyſe.

¶ The callinge of kynges, Princes, and Iuges: whyche are alſo exhorted to ſeeke wyſdome.

CAPI. VI.

WYſdome is better then ſtrength, and a man of vnderſtandynge is more worth then one that is ſtronge. Heare therfore (O ye kynges) and vnderſtande: O learne ye that be iudges of the endes of the earthe. Gyue eare ye that rule the multytudes, and delyte in moche people. Foꝛ the power is geuen you of the Lord, & the ſtrength from the hyeſt: whiche ſhall trye youre workes & ſerche out youre ymaginacions. Now that ye beynge officers of his kyngdom, haue not executed true iudgement, haue not kepte the lawe of ryghteouſnes, nor walked after his will. Horribly and that ryght ſoone ſhal he appeare vnto you: foꝛ an harde iudgemente ſhall they haue that beare rule. Mercye is graunted vnto the ſymple, but they that be in auctoryty ſhal be foꝛ puny ſhed. Foꝛ God whiche is Lorde ouer all, ſhall excepte no mans perſon, neither ſhal he ſtande in awe of any mans greatneſſe: foꝛ he hathe made the ſmall and greate, and careth foꝛ all alike. But the myghtye ſhal haue the ſoꝛer punyſhment.

Vnto you therfore, O ye kynges, do I ſpeake speake, that we may learne wysdome and not go amysse: for they that kepe ryghteousnesse, shall be ryghteously iudged: and they that are learned in ryghteous thynges, shall fynde to make answere. Wherefore set your hert upon my wordes, and loue them, so shall ye come by nourture. Wysdome is a noble thyng, and neuer fadeth away: yea she is easely sene of them ꝑ loue her, and fownd of such as seke her.

L She preuenteth them that desyre her, that she may fyrst shew her selfe vnto them. Who so awaketh vnto her betymes, shall haue no great trauayle, for he shall fynde her sytting vnto his dores. To thynke vpon her, is parfect vnderstandyng, and who so watcheth for her, shall be sure, and that soone. For she goeth about, seking such as are mete for her, sheweth her selfe cheerefully vnto them in theyr goynges, and meeteth them with all diligence. For the vnfayned desyre of nourtoure is her begynnynge: to care for nurture is loue, and loue is the keppynge of her lawes. Now the keppyng of lawes is perfection and an vncorrupte lyfe, and an vncorrupt lyfe maketh a man familyer with God. And so the desyre of wysdome leedeth to the kyngdome euerlastynge.

Wisd. vi. b

D If youre desyre be then in royall seates and cryers (O ye kynges of the people) let your full ꝑfit be wysdome, that ye may raygne for euer more. O leue the lyght of wysdom, all ye that be rulers of ꝑ people. As for wysdome what she is, and howe she came vp, I will tell you, and will not hyde the mysteryes of God from you: but will seke her out from the begynnynge of the natyuytye, and bringe the knowledge of her in to lyght, and will not kepe backe the truthe: Neither wyl I haue to do with consumyng enuye, for such a man shall not be partaker of wysdome. But the multitude of the wyse, is the welfare of the worlde, and a wyse kynge is the vpholdyng of the people. O receyue nurture the ꝑfore my wordes, & it shal be you good.

A I My selfe also am a mortall man, lyke as all other, and am come of the earthy generacyon of hym that was fyrst made, and in my mothers wombe was I fashioned to be fleshe: In the tyme of ten monethes, was I brought together in blood, ꝑfore the sede of man, and ꝑ commodious appetite of slepe. When I was borne, I receyued lyke ayre as other men, and fell vpon the earth (whiche is my nature) crying and weppyng at the fyrst, as all other do. I was wrapped in swadyng clothes, and brought vp with greate care. For there is no kyng that hath had any other begynnyng of byrth. All men then haue one entrynge vnto lyfe, and one goynge out in lyke maner.

Iob. i. Eccl. xl. b

Wherfore I desyred, and vnderstandynge B was gyuen me: I called, & the spirite of wysdome came into me. I set more by her then by kyngdomes and royall seates, and counted ryches nothynge in comparyson of her. No ꝑcyous stone I compared it not vnto her: for all golde is grauell vnto her, and syluer shall be counted but claye before her syght. I loued her aboue welfare and beauty and purposed to take her for my lyghte, for her shyne can not be quenched. All good thynges came to me with her, and innumerable ryches ꝑfowre her handes. I was glad in them all, for this wysdome went before me, and I knewe not that she is my mother of al good thynges. Howe as I my selfe learned vnfaynedly, so do I make other men partakers of her, and hyde her ryches from no man, for she is an infynyte treasure vnto men, whiche who so vse, becom partakers of the loue and frendshyp of God, and are ꝑcepted vnto hym for the gyftes of wysdome.

In his hande are we and oure wordes, yea all oure wysdome, oure vnderstandynge and knowledge of al oure workes. For he hath gyuen me the true sycence of these thynges: so that I knowe how the worlde was made, and the powers of the elementes the begynnynge, endyng and myddest of the tymes: howe the tymes alter, how one goeth after an other, and how they are fulfilled the course of the yeare: the ordynaunces of the starres: the natures and kyndelle of beastes: the furyousnes of beastes: the power of the wyndes ꝑ the ymagynacyons of men: the dyuersitye of ponge plantes, the vertues of rotes, and all such thynges as are secret and not loked for, haue I learned. ¶ The effectes of wysdome.

CAPI VIII.

A Wysdome reacheth from one ende to an other mygtyly, and louyngly ordeth she all thynges. I haue loued her and labowred for her euen fro my youth vp: I bid my diligence to marry my selfe with her, suche loue had I vnto her beautie. Who is hath the company of God, commendeth her nobilitie, yea the Lorde of all thynges him selfe, loueth her. For she is the scholemaistresse of the nurture of God, and the chefer out of his workes. If a man wold desyre ryches in this life: what is richer then wysdome, that worketh all thynges? Thou wylt saye: vnderstanding worketh. What is it among all thynges, that worketh more then wysdome? If a man loue vertue and ryghteousnesse, let hym labour for wysdome, for she hathe greate vertues. And why? she teacheth sobrenesse and prudence, ryghteousnesse and strength, whiche are suche thinges as men can haue nothynge more profytable in theyr lyfe.

B If a man delyte moche knowledge, she can tell the thynges that are past, and discerne thynges for to come: she knoweth the subtyltyes of wordes, and can expounde darke sentences. She can tell of tokens & wonderous thynges, as euer they come to passe, and the endes of al tymes & ages. So I purposed after this maner: I wyll take her vnto my company, and cõmen louingly with her: me thynke, she shall gyue me good counsell, and speake comfortably vnto me in my carefulnesse and greefe. For her sake shall I be wel and honestly taken, amonge the cõmens and lordes of the cõsell. Though I be young, yet shall I haue sharpe vnderstandynge, so that I shall be meruelous in the syght of greate men, and the faces of Princes shall wonder at me. When I holde my tonge, they shall byde my leasure: when I speake, they shall loke vpon me: and yf I talke moch, they shal laye theyr handes vpon theyr mouth.

Moreouer by the meanes of her, I shall obtayne immortalytye, and leaue behynde me an euerlastyng memoriall, amonge them that come after me. I shall set the people in order, and the nacyons shall be subdued vnto me. Horrible tyrauntes shal be afrayed, whe they do but heare of me: amonge the multitude I shall be counted good, and mygbtye in battayl. When I come home, I shal finde rest with her: for her companye hath no bytternes, & her frendshyp hath no tedyousnesse, but myrth and ioye.

Now when I consydered these thynges C by my selfe, and pondered them in my herte, how that to be ioyned vnto wysdome is immortalytye, a great pleasure to haue her frendshyp: how that in the workes of her handes are infynyte ryches: how that, whosoeuer hopeth chpany with her shall be wyse: and that he whiche talketh with her, shall come to honoure: I went about seking, to get her vnto me. For I was a chylde of a type wit, and had a good vnderstandynge.

But when I grew to more vnderstanding I came to an vnderfyled body. Neuertheles when I perceyued that I could not kepe my selfe chaste, except God gaue it me (and that was a poynt of wisdom also to know whose gyfte it was) I stepte vnto the Lorde, and besought hym, and with my hole herte I layd after this maner. CAPI. X.

1 WYsdome preserued the fyrst man, whom God made a father of the worlde, whē he was created alone, brought him out of his offence, take hym out of the moulde of the earth, & gaue hym power to rule all thinges. When the vnryghteous wente away in his wrath from this wysdome, the brother hed perished thorow the wrath of murther. Agayne, when the water destroyed the hole world, wysdome preserued the ryghteous thorowe a poore tree, whereof she was gouerner her selfe. Moreouer when wickednesse had gotten the vpper hande, so that the nacyons were ruled vp with pryde. She knewe the ryghteous, preserued him faultelesse vnto God, and kepte vp sure mercy for his children. 2 She preserued the ryghteous, when he fled frome the vngodly that perished, what tyme as ꝑ fyre fell downe vpon the fyue cyties: Ashe as yet this daye ꝑ vnfruteful, waste, and smokyng lande gruetly testimony of thy wycked dnelle: yea the vnrype and vnfrymely frutes ꝑ grow vpon the trees.

And for a token of a remembraunce of the vnfaythfull soule, there standeth a pyller of salt. For all such as regarded not wysdom gat not only this hurte, that they knewe not the thynges whiche were good, but also lefte behynde them vnto men a memoriall of their foolyshnesse: so that in the thynges wherin they synned, they coulde not be hyd. But as for such as take hede vnto wysdome, she shal 3 deliuer them from sorow.

When the ryghteous fled because of his brothers wrath, wysdome led him the ryght waye, shewed hym the kyngdome of God, gaue him knowledge of holy thynges, made hym ryche in his laboures, and broughte to passe the thynges that he wente about. In the disceytfulnesse of suche as defrauded hym, she stode by hym and made hym ryche. 4 She saued hym from the enemyes, and defended him fro the deceyuers. She made him strong in battayll, and gaue hym the victorye, that he myght knowe, how that wysdome is stronger then all thynges. When the ryghteous was solde, she forsoke hym not, but deliuered him from synners. She went downe with him in to ꝑ dongeon, and forsoke him not in the bandes: tyll she had brought him the sceptre of ꝑ realme, and power agaynst those that oppressed hym. And those that had accused hym, she declared themes be lyers, and brought hym to perpetuall worshyp.

5 She deliuered the ryghteous people and faultles sede, frome the nacion that oppressed them. 6 She entred into the soule of the seruaunt of God, and stode by hym in wonders and tokens agaynste the horryble kynge. 7 She gaue the righteous the rewarde of their laboures, and led the forthe a meruaylous waye: on the daye tyme she was a shadowe vnto them, & a lyght of starres in the nyght season. 8 She brought them thorow the rede see and carted them thorow the great water. 9 She drowned their enemyes in the see, and brought them out of the depe. 10 So the ryghteous toke the spoyles of the vngodly, & prayse thy holy name, O Lorde, and magnyfyed thy victorious hande with one accorde. For wysdom openeth the mouth of the dom, and maketh the tonges of babes to speake.

¶ The myracles done for Israel. The vengeaunce of synners. The great power and mercy of God.

CAPI. XI.

11 She ordred their workes in the handes of the holy prophete: so that they went thorowe the wyldernesse that was not inhabyted, & pitched their tentes in the waste desert. They stode agaynste their enemyes and were auenged of their aduersaryes. 12 When they were thirsty, they called vpon the, and water was gyuen them out of the rocke, and their thyrst slakened out of the harde stone. For by the thynges, where thorowe their enemyes were punyshed, were they holpen in their nede. For vnto the enemyes thou gauest mans bloude in stede of ryuyage water. And where as they had scarcenes in ꝑ drouhe when the chyldren were slayne, thou gauest vnto thyne owne a plentyous water vnlooked for declarynge by the thyrste that was at ꝑ tyme, how thou wouldest punyshe thyne owne vnto honoure, and slaye their aduersaryes.

13 For when they were tryed and nourtured with fatherly mercy, they knewleged how the vngodly were iudged, and punished thorow ꝑ wrath of God. These hast ꝑ exhorted as a father, & proued them: but vnto the other thou hast bene a boysterous kynge, layd harde to their charge, and condemned them. 14 Whether they were absent or present, their punyshment was sighe. For their grefe was double: namely, mournynge, and the remembraunce of thynges past. But when they perceyued that their punyshmentes hyd them good, they thought vpon the Lorde, & wondered at the ende. For at the last they beheld moch of hym, of whome in the oute castyng they thoughte scorne, as of an abiecte.

15 Neuertheles the ryghteous hyd not so whē they were chefly: but euē like as the thoughtes of the foolish were, so was also their wyttednes. Where as certayne men nowe (thorow errour) hyd worshyp dome serpentes & bayne beastes, thou sendest a multytude of domme beastes vpon them for a vengeaunce that they myght know that wherewith a man (hath)

¶ All thynges be vayne, except the knowledge of God. Idolatrers and Idols are mocked.

CAPI. XIII.

1 VYne are all men, whiche haue not the knowlege of God: as were they that out of the good thinges, which are sene knewe not hym, that of hym selfe is substancyall. Neyther toke they so moche regarde of the workes ꝑ are made, as to knowe who was the craftesman of them: but some toke the fire, some the wind or ayre, some ꝑ course of the starres, some the water, some toke sun and moone, or the lyghtes of heauen, whiche rule the earth for goddes. But thoughe they had suche pleasure in their beauty, that they thought them to haue ben goddes, yet sholde they haue knowen howe moche more fayrer he is that made them: for the maker of beauty hath ordeyned all these thinges. Or if they maruceled, at the power and workes of them they sholde haue perceyued therbye that he whiche made these thinges is myghtyer then they.

2 For by the greatnes and beauty of the creature, ꝑ maker therof may plainly be knowē. Notwithstandyng they are the lesse to be blamed that sought God, and wold haue found him, and yet missed, and whye? for in as moche as they went about in his workes, & sought after them, it is a token that they regarded & held moche of his workes that are sene, howbe it, they are not holly to be excused. For yf their vnderstandinges and knowlege was so great, that they coulde discerne the world & the creatures, why dyd they not rather fynd out the Lorde therof.

But vnhappy are they, and among ꝑ dead is their hope that call them goddes, whiche are but the workes of mens handes: golde, syluer, and the thing that is found out by cunnyng, the similitude of beestes, or any vayne stone that hath ben made by hand of old. Or as when a carpenter cutteth downe a tree out of the wod, and pareth of the barke of it cunnyngly, and so with the out parte maketh a vessel to be vsed, and dresseth meete with the residue. As for ꝑ other part that is left, whiche is profitable for nothing (for it is a croked pece of wod and full of knobbes) he carueth it diligently thorow his vanitie, and according to the knowlege of his cunninge, he giueth it some proporcion, facioneth it after ꝑ similitude of a man. or maketh it like some beest, ferdeth it ouer with red, and paynteth it, and loke what foule spot is in it, he casteth some colour vpon it.

Then maketh he a conuenient tabernacle for it, setteth it i the wal, and maketh it fast with yron, prouiding so for it, lest it happen to fall, for it is well knowen that it can not helpe it selfe. And why? it is but an ymage, & must of necessitie be holpen.

Then goeth he and offereth of his goodes vnto it, for his children, and for his wife, he feareth not to speke vnto it that hath no soule. For helth: he maketh his peticion vnto him that is sycke. For life: he prayeth vnto him that is dead: he calleth vpon him for helpe, that is not able to helpe hym selfe, & to send hym a good iourney, he prayeth hym ꝑ maye not go. And in all the thynges that he taketh in hande (whether it be to obteyn any thyng or to worke) he prayeth vnto him that can do no maner of good.

¶ The detestacion and abhominacion of ymages. A curse of them and of him that maketh them. The cupis that come of Idolatrye.

CAPI. XIIII.

1 AGayne, an other man purposyng to sayle, and begynnyng to take his iourney thorow the ragyng see, calleth for helpe vnto a stocke that is farre weyker the the tree that beareth him. For as for it couetousnesse of money hath founde it out, & the craftesman made it with his cunnynge. But thy prouydence, o father, gouerneth all thynges from the begynnyng: for thou hast made a waye in the see, and a sure pathe in the middest of the waues: declarynge therby, that thou hast power to helpe in all thynges, yea thoughe a man went to the see without shyp. 2 Neuertheles that the workes of thy wysdome sholde not be vayne, thou hast causted an arke to be made, and therfore do men commyt their lyues to a small pece of wod, passynge ouer the see in a shyppe, and are saued.

3 For in the olde tyme also when the proude giauntes perished, he in whom the hope was left to encrease the world went in to ꝑ shyp which was gouerned thorow thy hand, and so lefte sede behynde him vnto the world. For happy is the tree where thorow ryghteousnes commeth: but cursed is the ymage of wod, ꝑ is made with handes, yea both it and he that made it. 4 He bycause he made it: and it, bycause it was called God, where as it is but a fraylie thynge. For the vngodly and his vngodlynesse are bothe like abhominable vnto God. 5 Yea so the worke and he that made it also shall be punyshed togyther. 6 Therfore shall there a plage come vpon the ymages of the heathen, for oute of the creature of God they are become an abhominacion, a temptacion vnto the soules of men, and a snare for the fete of the vnwyse. 7 And why? the inuyng out of ymages is the begynnyng of whoredom and the byrynge vp of them is the destruccion of lyfe. For they were not from the beginning, neither shal they continue for euer. 8 The welthy ydlenesse of men hath founde the out vpon erth, therfore shall they come shortly to an ende.

9 When a father mourned for his son ꝑ was taken away frō hym, he made him an ymage (in al the hast) of his dead son, and so began to worshyp him as a God, whiche was but a dead man, & ordeyned his seruauntes to offre vnto hym. 10 Thus by processe of tyme, & thorow lynneth, by ꝑ same also shall he be punished.

For vnto the almyghty hand, that made the worlde of nought, it was not impossible to send among them an heape of beres, or wod lyons, or cruell beestes of a straunge kynde, suche as are vnknowen, or spout fyre, or cast out a smokyng breth, or shote horrible sparkes out of their eyes, which myght not only destroy them with hurtyng, but also kyll the with their horrible syght. Yea without these beastes myght they haue ben slayne with one wynde, beyng persecuted of their owne workes, and scatred abrode thorow the breth of thy power.

Neuertheles thou hast ordred al thinges in D measure nombre and weight: for ꝑ hast euer had great stregth and might, and who may withstand ꝑ power of thine arme? And whyle like as the smal thing that the balaūce weyeth, so is the world before the: yea as a drop of the morning dewe, that falleth downe vpon the erth. Thou hast mercy vpon al, for thou hast power of al thinges, ꝑ makest the, as though thou sawest not the synnes of men, bycause they sholde amende. For thou louest al ꝑ thinges that are, and hatest none of them whome thou hast made: neither biddest thou or beyn or make any thyng of euyl wyll.

How might any thinges endure, yf it were not thy wyll? Or how coulde any thynge be preserued, except it were called of the? But thou sparest al, for al are thine, o Lord, thou louer of soules

¶ The mercye of God towarde synners, the workes of God are vnreprouable. God gyueth leysure to repent vs.

CAPI. XII.

O Lorde, how gracious and swete is thy spirite in all thynges? Therfore chastenest thou them meraurably that go wrong, & warnest them concerning the thinges wherin they offende: thou speakest vnto them, o Lord, & exhortest them to leaue their wickednes, and put their trust in the. As for thole old inhabiters of thy holy land, ꝑ migh test not away with them, for they committed abhominable workes agaynst the: as witched craft, sorcery and ydolatry: they slew their own children wout mercy, they ate vp mens bowels, and deuoured the blode: yea bicause of such abhominacions, mislikest & offrings, thou slewest the fathers of ꝑ desolat soules by the hades of our fore fathers, that the land which thou louest aboue al other might be a dwelling for the children of God.

Neuertheles thou sparedst them also, as men, & sendest the forerunners of thine host euen hornettes to destroye them out by lytle and lytle. Not that thou wast vnhable to subdue the vngodly vnto the righteous in batel, or with cruell beastes, or with one rought worde to destroye them togyther: But thy mynd was to dryue them out by lytle & lytle, gyuing them time and place to amend, knowing wel that it was an vnrighteous nacio, and wycked of nature, & that their thought myght neuer be altered: for it was a cursed sede from the begynnyng, and feared no man: Yet hast thou pardoned their sines. For who will saye vnto the: why hast thou done that? Or who wil stande agaynst thy iudgement? Or who will come before thy face, an auēger of vnrighteous men? Or who wil blame ꝑ, yf the people perysshe whome thou hast made? For there is none other God but thou, that carest for all thinges: that ꝑ mayste declare how ꝑ thy iudgement is not vnryght: there dare neither kyng ne tyraunt indeby syght re quyre accomptes of them whom thou hast destroyed.

For so moch then as thou art righteous thy selfe, thou ordrest all thynges ryghtously, & punyshest euen hym that daue not deserued to be punished, and takest hym for a straunger and an aliaūt in the land of thy power. For thy power is the begynnyng of righteousnesse: and bicause thou art Lorde of al thinges, therfore art ꝑ gracious vnto all. When men thynke the not to be of a full stregthe, thou declarest thy power, and boldly drisyest them ouer that knowe the not. But thou Lord of power iudgest quyetly, and ordrest vs with great worshyp, for thou maist do as thou wylt.

By such workes now hast thou taught thy D people, that a man also holde be iust and louynge, and hast made thy children to be of a good hope: for euen when thou iudgest, thou gyuest rowme to amend from synnes. For in so moche as thou hast punished, and with such diligence deliuered ꝑ enemies of thy seruauntes which were worthy to dye, wherfore now thou gauest them tyme and place of amendment, that they might turne frō their wicked nesse) with how great diligence then punyshest thou thyne owne children vnto whose fathers thou hast sworn and made couenaūtes of good promyses? so where as thou doest but chasten vs, thou punishest our enemyes dyuers wayes, to the intent ꝑ when we punish, we shold remembre thy goodnesse: & when we our selues are punished, to put our trust in thy mercy.

Wherfore where as men haue lyued ignorantly and vnrighteously thou hast punished them sore, euē thorow the same thynges that they worshipped: for they went astray very long in the way of errour, and held the beastes (which euen their enemyes despised) for goddes, lyuyng as children of no vnderstanding. Therfore hast thou sent a sorowful punishment among them, as among the childre of ignorance. As for suche as wolde not be reformed by thole scornes & rebukes, they felt the worthy punishment of God. For the thinges that they suffred, they bare them vnpatiently, being not content in them, but vnwillyng. And whe they perished by the same thiges that they toke for goddes, they knowleged then that there was but one true God, whome afore they wolde not knowe: therfore came ye ende of their damnacion vpon them.

row longe custome, this errour was kept as a lawe, and tyraūtes compelled men by violence to honour ymages. As for thole ꝑ were so farre of, that men myght not worship thē presently, their pycture was brought frome farre (lyke the ymage of a kynge whom they wolde honour) to the intent that with great diligence they myghte worshyp him, whiche was farre of, as thoughe he had ben presente. Agayn, the syngulier cunnyng of ꝑ craftesmā gaue the ignorant also a greate occasion to worshyp ymages. For the workemā wyllyng to doo him a pleasure that set hym a worke, laboured with all his cunnynge to make the ymage of the best facion. And so, thorow the beauty of the worke, the common people was deceyued, in so moche ꝑ they toke him nowe for a God, whiche a lytle afore was but honoured as a man. And this was the errour of mans lyfe, when men (eyther for to serue their owne affection or to do some pleasure vnto kynges) ascribed vnto stones and stockes the name of God, which ought to be geuen vnto no man.

Moreouer this was not ynough for them that they erred in the knowlege of God: but where as they lyued in the greate warres of ignorance, thole mayne and greate plages called they peas. For eyther they slewe their owne children, and offred them and did sacrifyce in the nyght season, or els helde vnreasonable watches: so that they kepte neyther lyfe ne mariage clene: but eyther one slewe an other to death maliciously, or els greued his neyghbour ꝑ aduoutrye. And thus were E all thynges myxte togyther: bloude, manslaughter, theft, dissimulacion, corrupcion, vnfaythfulnesse, sedicion, periurye, disquietynge of good men, vnthankfulnes, defilling of soules, chaungyng of byrth, vnstedfastnes of mariage, misorder, of aduoutry and vncleanesse. And why? the honourynge of abhominable ymages is the cause, the begynnynge and end of all euil. For they that worship ydols, either they are mad when they are merye, or prophecy lyes, or lyue vngodly, or els lightely forsweare the selues: for in so moche as their trust is in the ydols, which haue neither soul ne vnderstanding, though they sweare falsly, yet they thinke it shall not hurte them.

Therfore cōmeth a great plage vpon the, and that worthely: for they haue an euil opinio of God, geuing hede vnto ydols, swerring vniustly to disceyue, and despisyng righteousnesse: for they? swerynge is no vertue, but a plage of them that synne, & goeth euer with the offence of the vngodly.

¶ The power of the faythfull prayenge the mercye of God, for whose graces sake they serue not Idols.

CAPI. XV.

B Vt thou, o our God, art swete, long suffrynge and true, and in mercye ordrest thou all thynges. Though we synne, yet are we thyne, for we know thy stregthe. Yf we synne not, then are we sure that thou regardest vs. For to know the, is perfecte ryghtousnesse: Yea to knowe thy ryghtousnesse and power, is the roote of immortalitie. As for the thynge that men haue founde out thorowe their euyll sentence, it hathe not disceyued vs: as the paynynge of the pycture (an vnprofytable labours) and carued ymage with dyuers colours, whose syght entyseth the ignorante: so that he honoureth and loueth the pycture of a dead ymage that hath no soule.

Neuertheles they that loue such euil thinges are worthy of deth: they ꝑ trust in them B they that make them, they that loue them, & they that honour them. The potter also taketh and tempereth softe earthe, laboureth it, and gyueth it the facion of a vessell, what so euer serueth for our vse: and so of one pece of claye he maketh some clene vessell for seruyce, and some contrary. But where to euery vessell serueth, that knoweth the potter hym selfe. So with his vayne labour he maketh a God of the same clay: this doth euen he who the a lytle afore was made of erth hym selfe and within a lytle while after, when he dyeth) turneth to the erth agayne.

Notwithstandynge he careth not the more C bycause he shall labour, ne bycause his life is shorte but stryueth to excell goldsmythes, the syluersmythes & coppersmythes, and taketh it for an honour to make vayne thynges. For his hert is ashes, his hope is but vayne erth, and his lyfe is more vyle then claye: for so moche as he knoweth not his owne maker, ꝑ gaue hym his soule to worke, and brethed in Images hym the breche of lyfe. They count our lyfe but a pastyme, and oure conuersacion to be but a market, and that men shoulde euer be getynge, and that by euyll meanes. Nowe he that of earth maketh fraile vessels and ymages and knoweth hym selfe to offende about all other.

All the enemyes of thy people and that D holde them in subiection, are vnwyse, vnhappye, and exceedynge proude vnto their owne soules: for they iudge all the ydols of ꝑ gen Idolatrie then to be goddes, which neyther haue syght to se, nor noses to smell, ne eares to heare, nor fyngers of handes for to grope: and as for their fete, they are to slowe to goo: for man made them, & he ꝑ hath but a borowed spirite facioned them. But no man can make a God like vnto him: for seyng he is but mortal him selfe, it is but mortall that he maketh with vnrighteous handes. He him selfe is better then they whom he worshipped, for he lyued though he was mortal, but so did neuer they. Yea, they worshyp beastes also, whiche are moost miserable: for compare thynges that can not fele vnto them, an they are worse the thost. Yet is there not one of their beastes ꝑ with his sight can beholde any good thyng, neyther haue they gruen prayer ne thankes vnto God.

¶ The punyshment of Idolatres, and the benefytes done vnto the faythfull.

CAPI. XVI.

A FOr these and suche other thynges haue they suffred worthy punyshment, & thorow the multitude of beestes are they tormented oute. In stede of the whiche punyshmentes, thou hast graciously ordred thyne owne people, & gyuen them their desyre & they longed for: a newe and straunge taste, preparynge them quayles to be their meate, to the intent that by the thynges whiche were shewed and sente vnto them, they that were so greedye, might be withdrawen euen from the desire that was necessarye. But these within shorte tyme were brought vnto pouertie, and tasted a newe meat. For it was requisyte that (without anye excuse) destruction shoulde come vpon those whiche vsed tyrannye, and to shewe onely vnto the other, how their enemyes were destroyed. For when the cruell wodnesse of the beestes came vpō them, they perysshed thorowe the stynges of cruell serpentes.

Numē.xxi.a

B Notwithstandynge thy wrath endured not perpetually, but they were put in feare for a lytle season, that they might be reformed, hauing a token of saluacion, to remēbre the cōmaundement of thy lawe. For he that cōuerted, was not healed by the thing that he sawe but by the, o sauyoure of all. So in this thou shewedst thyne enemys, that it is thou whiche delyuerest frome all euyll. As for them when they were bytten with grethoppers & flyes, they dyed, for they were worthy to perysshe by such: But neyther the tethe of dragons nor of venimous wormes ouercame thy chyldren, for thy mercye was euer by theym and helped them. Therfore were they punysshed to remēbre thy wordes, but hastely were they healed agayne: lest they shold fall in to so depe forgetfulnesse, that they myghte not vse thy helpe.

Exodi.viii.d

C Deut.xxxii. & 1.Regum.xvii

It was neyther herbe ne playster that restored them to helth, but thy worde, o Lorde, which healeth all thinges. It is thou, o Lorde, that hast the power of lyfe and deth: thou leddest vnto hethes doore, & bringest vp agayne. But man thorow wickednesse sheddeth his owne soule, & whē his spirit goeth forth, it turneth not agayne, neither maye he call agayne the soule that is taken away: It is not possyble to escape thy hand. For the vngodly & wold not know the, were punished by the stregth of thyne arme: with straūge waters, hayles and rayues were they persecuted, & thorowe fyre were they consumed. For it was a wonderous thyng that fyre myghte do more then water, which quencheth all thinges, but the world is the auenger of the righteous. Sometyme was the fyre so tame, that the beastes which were sent to punysh the vngodly, dred not: and that because they shulde se & knowe that they were persecuted with the punyshment of God. And somtyme brent the fyre in the water on euery syde, that it might destroy the vnrighteous nacion of the earth. Agayne thou hast fed thyne own people with angels fode, and sent them breed redye from heuen, without theyr labour, being very pleasaunt and well gusted. And to shew thy ryches and sweetnesse vnto thy chyldren, thou gauest euery one their desyre, so that euery mā might take what lyked him best. But the snow and yse abode the violence of the fyre, and melted not: that they might know that the fyre burning in the hayle and rayn, destroyed & brute of & enemies, the fire also forgat his stregth agayn, that the rightous might be nourished. For the creature that serueth the (which arte the maker) is fearce in punishing the vnrighteous, but is easy and gentle to do good, vnto suche as put their trust in the. Therfore dyd all thinges alter at the same time, & were all obedient vnto thy grace, whiche is the nurse of all thinges, according to the desyre of the that had nede therof, & thy children, o Lorde, whom thou louest, might know that it is not nature and & growing of frutes that feedeth men, but that it is thy worde whiche preserueth the & put their trust i the: for lode what might not be destroyed with the fire, as sone as it was warmed with a lytle same beame, it melted: that all myght knowe that thankes ought to be gyuen vnto the before the same fyre, and that thou ought est to be worshypped before the day spryngeth: for the hope of the vnthankfull shall melte awaye as the wynter yse, and perysh as water that is not necessarye.

¶ The iudgementes of God vpon the Egyptians.

CAPI. XVII.

GReat are thy iudgementes, o Lorde, and thy counsels can not be expressed, therfore men do erre, that will not be reformed with thy wisdom. For when the vnrighteous thought to haue thy holy people in subiection, they were bound with the bandes of darkenesse and longe nyghte, shut vnder the rofe, thinking to escape the eternall eyng wisdom. And whyle they thought to be hyd in & darknesse of their synnes, they were scatred abrode in the very myddest of the darke couerynge of forgetfulnes, put to horrible fear and wonderously vexed for the corner wher they myghte not kepe them from feare: bycause the sound came down & vexed the: yea manye terryble and straunge visions made them afrayd.

Romā.i.d

Exodi.x.

B No power of & fyre myght gyue the light, neither myght the clere flambes of & sterres lyghten that horrible night: for there appered vnto them a sodeyn fire very dredful. At the which (whē they saw nothing) they were so afraid, that they thought the thing which they saw to be the more fearfull. As for & sorcery and enchauntment & they vsed, it came to confusion, & the proud wysdom was brought to shame: for they that promised to dryue away the fearfulnes and vexe from & weyke soules, were sycke for feare them selues, and that with scorne. And though none of the wonders feared them, yet were they afrayde at the

at the beestes which came vpon them, and at the hyssyng of the serpentes. In so moch that with trembliynge they swowned, and sayde they sawe not the ayre, whiche no man yet may escape.

For it is an heuy thyng, whē a mans owne conscience bereth recorde of his vnkyndnesse & condēneth him. And why? a vexed & wounded conscience, taketh euer cruel thynges in hand. Fearfulnes is nothing els, but a bewrayring that a man lacketh helpe and defence, to answerre for him selfe. And lohe how moche lesse the hope is within, the more is the vncertentie of the mater for the which he is punished. But they that came in the mighty night slept the slepe that fell vpon them for vnder and from aboue: somtyme were they afraid throw the feare of the wonders, & somtime they were so weyke þ they swowned withal: for an hasty & sodeyn fearefulnes came vpon them. Afterwarde, yf any of them had fallen he was kept & shut in prison, but wout cheynes. But if any dwelt in a village, yf it had ben an herd or husbandman he suffred intolerable necessitie: for they were al bound wt one cheyne of darknesse.

Whether it were a blastynge wynde, or a swete song of the byrdes amonge the thycke braūches of the trees, or the vehemence of hasty running watter, or great noyse of the fallyng downe of stones, or the playing and rūnyng of beestes whom they sawe not, or the mighty noyse of rorying beestes, or the sound that answereth agayn in the hye mountaynes, it made them swowne for very feare. For al the erth shyned with clere lyght, and no man was hyndered in his labours. Onely vpon them there fell an heuye vyght, an ymage of darknesse that was to come vpon them. Yea they were vnto the selues the most heuye and horrible darknesse.

¶ Thes ye lyght that the Israelites had in Egypt. The persecution of the faythfull. The Lorde smote all the fyrst borne of Egypt. The syn of the people in the wylderneesse. Aaron stode betwyxte the lyue and the dede, with his censoure.

CAPI. XVIII.

NEuertheles thy holy had a very great lyght (& the ennemyes herd their voyce but they sawe not the figure of them.) And bicause they suffred not þ same thinges, they magnified the, and they that were vexed afore (by cause they were not hurte nowe) thanked the, and besoughte the, o God, that there might be a differēce. Therfore hadde they a burnīng pyller of fyre to lede them in the vnknowen waye, and thou gauest them þ sunne for a free gyft, without any hurt. Reason it was that they sholde want lyght, and be put in the prison of darknesse, which kept thy children in captivitie, by whom the incorrupt lyght of the lawe of the worlde was for to be gyuen.

When they thought to slee the babes of the ryghtous (one being layd out, and preserued to be leader vnto the other) thou broughtest oute the hole multitude of the children, and destroyedst theis in the mightye water. Of þ night were our fathers certified afore, that they knowyng vnto what othes they had gyuen credence, might be of good chere. Thus thy people receiued the helth of the ryghtous but the vngodly were destroyed. For like as thou hast hurt our enemies, so hast thou promoted vs whom thou calledst afore. For the righteous children of the good were offred secretly, and ordred the lawe of rigtousnesse vnto vnite, that the iust shold receiue good and euil in lyke maner, synging prayses vnto the father of all men. Again, there was herd a discordyng voyce of the enemies, and a pitous cry for children that were bewayled. The master and the seruaunt were punyshed in lyke maner. For they al togyther, had innumerable that dyed one deth.

Exodus 12.

Neythers were the liuing sufficient to bury the dede, for in the twinckling of an eye, the noblest nacio of them was destroyed. As oft as God helped them afore, yet wolde it not make them byleue, but in the destruction of þ fyrst borne, they knowleged that it was the people of God. For whyle all thynges were styll, and when the night was in the middest of her course, thy almighty worde, o Lorde, lept down from heue out of thy royal trone as a rough man of warre, in the myddest of the land that was destroyed: and the sharpe sworde perfourmed their strayte commaundemēt, standing and filling al thinges wt deth: yea it stode vpon the erth, and reached vnto the heuen. Then the sight of the euil dremes vexed them sodeynly, and fearfulnesse came vpon them vnawarres.

Exodus 12.

Then laye there one here, an other there, halfe dede, halfe quycke, and shewed the cause of his deth. For the visions that vexed them, shewed them the cause afore: so that they were not ignorāunt wherfore they perysshed.

The temptacion of deth touched the righteous also, and amonges the multitude in the wylderneesse there was insurrection, but thy wrathe endured not longe. For the faultelesse man went in all the haste, and toke the battayle vpon him, broughte forth the weapon of his ministracyon: euen prayer, and the censours of reconcyliynge: set him selfe agaynste the wrath, and so broughte the myserye to an ende: declarynge thereby, that he was thy seruaunte. For he ouercame not the multitude with bodyly power, ne with weapons of myght: but with the worde he subdued him that vexed him, puttyng the in remembraunce of the othe and couenaūt made vnto the fathers. For when the dede were fallen downe by heapes one vpon an other, he stode in the myddest, pacifyed the wrathe, and parted the waye vnto the lyuynge. And why? in his longe garment was all the beautie, and in the foure rowes of the stones, was the glory of the fathers grauen, and thy maiestie was written in the crowne of his heed.

CAPI. XIX.

A For the vngodly, & wrath came vpō the without mercy vnto the ende. For he knew what shold happen vnto the, how that (when they had consented to let the go, & had sent them oute with great diligēce) they wold repent and folow vpon them. For Exodi. xiiii. a when they were yet mourning and mahyng lamentacion by the graues of the dead, they deuyled an other folysshnesse, so that they persecuted them in their flemg, whom they had cast out afore with prayer. Worthy necessitie also brought them vnto this ende. for they had clene forgotten the thynges that happened vnto the afore. But the thynge that was wantyng of their punishment, was requisite so to be fulfylled vpon them with torme̅tes: that thy people might haue a marueilous passage thorowe, and that they myght fynde a straunge death.

B Then was euery creature facioned again of new, according to the wil of their maker, obeying thy commaundemētes that thy children myght be kepte without hurte. For the cloude ouershadowed their tentes, & the drye erth appered, where afore was water: so þ in the red see, there was a waye without impedimēt, and the great depe became a grene feldc, where thorow al the people went that were defended with thy hand, seing thy wonderous and marueylous workes. For as the horses, so were they led, and lepte lyke lambes praysyng the, o Lord, which hadst deliuered them. And why? they were yet myndfull of the thinges þ happened whyle they dwelt in the land: how the ground brought forthe flyes in stede of catell, & how the riuer scrauled with the multitude of frogges in stede of fyshes.

But at the last they saw a new creacion of C Exodi. viii. b of byrdes, what tyme as they were desceyued with lust, and desyred delycate meates. For when they were speakyng of their appetyte, the quayles came vp to them from the see, and punishmentes came vpō the sinners, not without the tokens which came to passe afore by the vehemence of the stremes: for they suffred worthely accordig to their wickednesses, they dealt so abhominably & churlishlye with straungers. Some receyued no vnknowen gestes, some brought the straungers in to bōdage that did the good. Beside all these thinges there were some, þ not only receyued no straungers with their wyles, but persecuted those also, and did the moche ruil, þ receyued them gladly. Therfore were they punished with blyndnesse, lyke as they that were coured with sodeyn darknesse at the dores of the ryghtous, so that euery one sought the entraunce of his dore. iii. Iohan. Genesis xix. b

C Thus the elementes turned in to them selues, like as when one time is chaunged vpon an instrument of musike, and yet all the tyme D dyuersite kepe their melody, which may easely be perceyued by the syght of the thynges þ are come to passe. The dyre land was turned in to a watery, and þ thynges that afore swam in the water, went now vpon the dry ground. The fyre hath power in the water (contrary to his own vertue) and the water forgat his owne kynd, to quenche. Agayne, the flambes of the noysome beestes hurte not the flesh of them that went with them, neyther melted they the yse, which els is melted lyghtly.

In all thynges hast thou promoted thy people (o Lord) and brought them to honoure: thou hast not despysed the, but alwaye and in al places hast thou stand by them.

¶ The ende of the boke of wysdome.

THE BOKE OF IESVS THE SONNE OF SYRACH, VVHICHE IS CALLED IN LATYNE ECCLESIASTICVS.

¶ The prologe of Jesus the sonne of Syrach, vnto his boke.

MAny and greate men haue declared wysdome vnto vs, bute of the lawe, out of the Prophetes, and oute of other that folowed them. In the which thynges Israel ought to be commended, by the reason of doctryne, & wysdom: Therfore they that haue it, and erde it, shulde not onely them selues be wyse therin: but serue other also with teachynge and wrytynge.

After that my graundfather Jesus had gyuen diligent labourre to reade the lawe, the prophetes, & other bokes that were left vs of oure fathers, and had well exercysed hym selfe therin: he purposed also, to wryte some thyng of wysdome, and good maners, to the intent that they which were willyng to lerne and to be wyse myght haue the more vnderstandyng, and be the more apt to leade a good conuersacyon.

Wherfore I exhort you to receyue it louingly, to reade it with dylygence, and to take it in good worth, though oure wordes be not so eloquent as the same Oratours. For the thynge that is wrytten in the Hebrue tonge, soundeth not so well, when it is translated in to an other speache. Not onely this boke of myne, but also the lawe, the prophetes, & other bokes, sound farre otherwise, the they do, when they are spoken in theyr owne language.

Nowe in the .xxxviii. yere when I came in to Egipt, in the tyme of Ptolomy Euergetes, and contynued there all my lyfe, I gat liberte to reade and wryte many good thinges. Wherfore I thought it good and necessary, to bestowe my diligence and trauayle to interprete this boke. And consydrynge that I had tyme, I labourred and dyd my best to perfourme this boke, & to brynge it vnto lyght: that the straungers also whiche are disposed to lerne, myght applye theym selues vnto good maners, and lyue accordynge to the lawe of the Lorde.

¶ Wysdome proceedeth and commeth of God. & prayse of the feare of God. Vnrighteousnesse is a dyssuasion to come by wysdome.

CAPI. I.

ALl wysdome commeth of God the Lorde, and hathe bene euer with hym, and is before all tyme. Who hath nombred the sand of the see, the droppes of the rayn & the dayes of the time? Who hath measured & heyght of heauen, the breedth of the earth, & the depenesse of the see? Who hath sought out the grounde of Gods wysdome, whiche hath bene before all thynges? Wysdom hath bene before all thynges, and the vnderstandyng of prudence from euerlastynge. (Gods worde in the heygth, is the well of wysdom, and the euerlastynge commaundementes are the entraunce of her.) Vnto whom hath the rote of wysdom bene declared? Or who hath knowen her wyt? Vnto whom hath the doctryne of wysdom bene discouered & shewed? and who hathe vnderstande the manyfolde entraunce of her?

a m. Reg. iii. and viii. Iob. xxviii. & Baruch. iii.

There is one: euen the heyghest, the maker of all thynges, the almyghtye, the kynge of power (of whom men ought to stande greatly in awe) which sytteth vpō his trone, being a God of dompmē: He hath created her thorowe the holye ghost: he hath sene her, nombred her, and measured her: He hath poured her oute vpon all his workes, and vpon all flesshe, accordynge to his gyft: he gyueth her richely vnto them that loue hym. The feare of the Lorde is worshipp and triumphe, gladnesse and a ioyfull crowne. The feare of the Lorde maketh a mery herte, gyueth gladnes, ioye and longe lyfe. Who so feareth the Lorde, it shall go well with hym at the last, and in the daye of his death he shall be blessed.

b

The loue of God is honorable wysdome: loke vnto whom it appeareth, they loue it, for they se what wonderous thinges it doth. The feare of the Lorde is the begynnyng of wysdome, and was made with the faythfull in the mothers wombe: it shall go with the chosen women, and shall be knowen of the righteous and faythfull. The feare of ✠ Lord is the ryghte Gods seruyce, that preserueth and fulfilleth the herte, and gyueth myrth & gladnesse. Who so feareth the Lorde, shal be happye: and when he hath made of comfort, he shal be blessed. To feare God is the wysdome that maketh ryche, and bryngeth all good with her. wysdome, and gretly plenteous peace and health. He hathe sene her and nombred her:
knowledge and vnderstandyng of wysdome hath he poured out as rayne: and them that helde her fast, hath he brought vnto honour.

D The feare of the Lorde is the rote of wysdome, and her braunches are longe lyfe. In the treasures of wysdome, is vnderstandynge and deuotion of knowledge, but wysdome is abhorred of synners. The feare of the Lorde driueth out synne, for he that is without feare, can not be made ryghteous, and his wyl full boldenesse is his owne destruction. A pa-tyent man wyll suffre vnto the tyme, and the shall he haue the rewarde of ioye. A good vnderstanding wyl hyde his wordes for a tyme, and many mens lyppes shall speake of his wysdome.

In the treasures of wysdome is the decla-racyon of doctryne, but the synner abhorreth the worshyp of God. My sonne, yf thou de-syre wysdom, kepe the commaundement, and God shall geue her vnto the: for the feare of the Lorde is wysdome and nurture, he hath pleasure in fayth and louyng mekenesse, and he shal fil their treasures therof. Be not obstinate and vnfaythfull to the feare of the Lorde, ne come not vnto hym with a double herte. Be not an ypocryte in the syght of men, and take good hede what thou speakest. Marke well these thynges, lest thou happen to fall, and bryngest thy soule to dishonour, and so God discouer thy secretes, and cast the downe in the myddest of the congregacyon: because thou wouldest not receyue the feare of God, and because thy herte is full of fayned wyle and disceyte.

¶ He exhorteth the seruauntes of God to ryghteous-nesse, loue, vnderstandyng, and patience, and exhor-teth hym that feareth God, to helpe, to hope, and to loue: because God neuer confounded ne forsa-soteth oute the foundacyons. Reioyce not when thy father is reproued, for it is no honour vnto the, but a shame. For the worshyp of a mans father, is his owne worshyp, and where the father is without honour, it is the dishonestye of the sonne. My sonne, make much of thy father in his age, and greue him not as longe as he liueth. And yf his vnderstandyng fayle, haue pacyence with him, and despyse him not in thy strength. For the good dede that thou shewest vnto thy father, shal not be forgotten: and when thou thy self wakest, it shall be rewarded the (and for thy mothers offence, thou shalt not be recompensed with good, yea it shall be founden for the in ryghteousnesse) and in the day of trouble thou shalte be remembred: thy synnes also shall melt away, lyke as the yse in the fayre warm wether.

He that forsaketh his father, shall come to shame: and he that dispyseth his mother, is cursed of God. My sonne, perfourme thy workes with lowng meknesse, so shalt thou be loued about other men. The greater thou art, the more humble thy self (in all thynges) and thou shalt fynde fauour in the syght of God. For great power belongeth only vnto God, and he is honoured of the lowly.

Seke not out the thynges that are about thy capacytie, and serche not the groundes of suche thynges as are to myghtye for the: but loke what God hath cõmaunded the, thynk vpon that alway, and be not curyous in many of his workes. For it is nedefull for the to se with thyne eyen, the thynges that are secrete. Make not thou to moche serche in superfluous thynges, and be not curyous in many of his workes: for many thynges are shewed vnto the alredy, which be above the capacitye of men. The medlyng with such hath begiled many a man, and ledde their wittes in vanytye. How he that loueth perill, shall perysshe therin.

An harde herte shall fare euyll at the last, (an herte that geeth two wayes, shal not prosper: and he that is frowarde of hert, wyl euer be the worst and wayst.) A wycked hert shall be laden with sorowes, and the vngodly synner wyll heape one syn vpon an other. The counsell of the proude hath no health, for the plant of syn shall be rated out in them. The herte of him that hath vnderstandynge shall perceiue hygh thynges, and a good eare wyll gladly herken vnto wysdome. An herte that is wyse and hath vnderstandynge, wyll absteyne from synnes, and increase in the workes of ryghteousnesse. Water quencheth burning fyre, and mercy reconcyleth synnes. God hath respecte vnto hym that is thankfull: he thynketh vpon hym agaynst the tyme to come: so that when he falleth, he shal fynde a strõg holde.

¶ Mercy must be done with all meknesse. The study of wysdome and her fruite. Iudge ought to be mercyfull. An exhortacyon to either we euyll and to do good.

My sonne, defraude not the poore of his almes and turne not away thine eyen from him that hath nede. Despyse not an hungry soule, and betray not the poore in his necessitye: greue not the herte of hym that is helpeles, and withdrawe not the gyft from the nedefull. Refuse not the prayer of one that is in trouble, and turne not alwaye thy face from the nedy. Cast not thyne eyes afore the poore, that thou geue him not ocasyon to speake euyll of the. For yf he complayne of the in the bytternesse of his soule, his prayer shal be heerd: even he that made him, shal heare him. Be courteous vnto the congregacyon of the poore, humble thy soule vnto the elder, and bowe downe thy heade to a man of worshyp. Let it not greue the to bow downe thine eare vnto the poore, but paye thy dette, and geue him a friendly answere, and that with meke nesse.

Deliuer hym that suffereth wronge from the hand of the oppressour, and be not faynteherted when thou sittest in iudgement. Be mercyfull vnto the fatherles as a father, & be in stede of an husband vnto their mother: so shalte thou be as an obedient sonne of the hyghe & and he shall loue the more then thy mother doth.

Wisdome exalteth hyr vnto her children, receyueth them that seke her, and wyll go before them in the way of ryghteousnes. He that loueth her loueth life: and they that seke her diligently, shal haue great ioye. They that kepe her, shall haue the benefyte of hyr: for where she entereth, there is the blessyng of God. They that honoure her, shall be the seruauntes of the holy one: and they that loue her, are beloued of God. Who so geueth eare vnto her, shall iudge the heathen: and he that hathe respecte vnto her, shall dwell safe hye.

He that beleueth her, shall haue her in possession, and his generacyon shall enioye: for when he falleth, he shal go with her, before al. Feare, drede and temptacion shal she bring vpon hym, and tyre hym in her discyplyne, vntyl she haue tryed hym in his thoughtes, & he committe his soule vnto her. Then shall she stablyshe hym, bringe the ryght way vnto hym, make hym a glad man, shewe hym her secretes, and heape vpon hym the treasures of knowledge, vnderstandyng and ryghteousnes. But yf he goe wronge, she shall forsake him, and geue hym ouer in to the handes of his enemy.

My sonne make much of the tyme, eschue the tyme that is euyl, and for thy lyfe, shame not to saye the truth. For there is a shame that bringeth synne, and there is a shame that bringeth worshyp and fauoure. Accepte no persoune after thyne owne wyll, that thou be not confounded to thyne owne decaye. thou hast her, forsake her not. For at the last thou shalt fynde rest in her, and that shall be turned to thy great ioye. Then shall her fetters be a stronge defence for the, and her yoch a glorious rayment. For the bewte of lyfe is in her, and her bandes are the couplynge together of salnacyon. Yea a glorious rayment is it, thou shalt put it on, & the same crowne of ioye shalt thou weare.

My sonne, yf thou wylt take hede, thou shalt haue vnderstandynge: and yf thou wylt applie thy mynde, thou shalt be wyse. If thou wylt bowe downe thyne eare, thou shalt receyue doctryne: and yf thou delyte in hearing, thou shalt be wyse. Stande with the multitude of suche elders as haue vnderstandyng, and consent vnto their wyssome with thyne herte: that thou mayest heare all godlye sermons, and that the worthy sentences of hope the not. And yf thou fynde a man of discrete vnderstandynge, get the soone vnto hym, and set thy foote ted vpō the steppes of his doore.
Let thy mynde be vpon the commaundemen-tes of God, and be contynually occupyed in his lawes: so shall he stablyshe thy herte, and gyue the wysdome at thyne owne desyre.

¶ We must forsake euyll, and set not vnthryfte our selues. The behauioure of the wyfe, towarde her wyfe, her frende, her children, her seruaunte, her father and mother, the prestes, &c.

CAPI. VII.

DO no euyl, so shal there no harme happen vnto the. Departe away from the thynge that is wycked, and no myschefe shall medle with the. My sonne, sowe no euyll thynges in the forowes of vnryghtousnesse, so shalt thou reepe them sixtefolde.
Labour not vnto men for any lordshyp, neither vnto the kynge for the state of honoure.
Iustify not thy selfe before God (for he knoweth the herte) and desyre not to be reputed wyse in the presence of the kynge. Make no laboure to be made a iudge, except it be were, that thou couldest myghtelye put downe wyckednesse: for yf thou shouldest stande in awe of the presence of the myghtye, thou shouldest laye in gyuynge sentence. Offende not in the multitude of the cytye, and put not thy selfe amonge the people. Bynde not two synners togyther, for in one synne shalte thou not be vnpunyshed. Say not: ruth. God wyll loke vpon the multytude of my oblacyons, and when I offre to the hyest God, he wyll accept it.

Be not faynte herted when thou makest thy prayer, neither slacke in gyuyng of almes.
Laughe no man to scorne in the bytternesse of his soule, for God (whiche seeth all thynges) is he that can brynge downe, and sette vp a-gayne. Accept no lesynge agaynst thy brother neither be the same agaynste thy frende. Vse not to make any maner of lye, for ỹ custome therof is not good. Make not many wordes when thou arte amonge the elders: & when thou prayest, make not moche babblynge. Ex-no laboryous worke be tedyous vnto the, neither the husbandrye whiche the almyghtye hath created. Make not thy bode in the mul-tytude of thy wickednes, but humble thy self euen frome thyne herte: and remembre that the wrath shall not be longe in tarynge, and that the vengeaunce of the fleshe of the vngodlye is a very fyre and wrome. Syne not a vre thy hynde for any good, ne thy faythfull brother for the best golde.

Departe not frome a discrete and good wo man, that is fallen vnto the for thy porcyon in the feare of the Lorde, for the grete of her honesty is above golde. Where as thy ser-uaunt worketh trulye, intreat him not cuyl, ne the hyrelynge that is faythfull vnto the.
Loue a discrete seruaunt as thyne owne soule withhold him not of his lyberty, neither leaue hym a poore man. If thou haue catell, loke well to them: and yf they be for thy profit kepe them. If thou haue sonnes, brynge them vp in nourture and learnynge, and holde them in awe frome theyr youthe vp. If thou haste doughters, kepe their body, and shew not thy face chereful toward them. Marry thy dough ter, & so thou shalt perfourme a weyghty mat ter: but gyue her to a man of vnderstanding.
If thou haue a wyfe after thyne owne mynde forsake her not (but commit not thy selfe to the hateful).

Honoure thy father from thy hole herte, and forget not the sorowfull trauayle that thy mother had with the: remembre that thou wast borne therof: & how canst thou recompense them the thinges that they haue done for the? Feare the Lorde with all thy soule, and honoure his preestes. Loue thy maker with all thy strength, and forsake not his seruauntes. Feare the Lorde with all thy soule, and honoure his preestes. Gyue them their porcyon of the fyrst fruites and increase of the earth, lyke as it is commaunded the gyue them the shulders, and their apparell of kynges and fyrstlynges. Reach thyne hād vnto the poore, that God maye blesse the li-beralyte. We ly debt all vnto all men lyuynge, yet let not but be good vnto them that are deade.

Let not them that wepe be without comfort, but mourne with suche as mourne. Let it not greue the to vysyte the sycke, for that shal make the to be beloued. What so euer ỹ takest in hande, remembre the ende, and thou shalt neuer do amysse.

¶ Against thy better in no stryuynge. Of the breach of thyne enemye mayst thou not reioyce, ne beyde thy neyghbourre, ne the workes of the wyse.

¶ Strynt not with a myghty man, lest thou chaunce to fall in to his handes. Make no bargaynce with a ryche man, lest he happen to bynge vp an harde quarell agaynst the. For golde and syluer hath vndone many a man, yea euen the hertes of kynges hathe made to fall. Strynt not with a man that is full of wordes, and leye no stickes vpon his fyre: Kepe no compayne with the vnlerned, lest he gyue thy kynred an euyll reporte. Despyse not a man that turnethe hym self awaye from syn, and call him not in the teeth withall: but remembre that we are frayle euerychone. Thynke scorne of no man in his olde age, for we wax olde also. Be not glad of the dethe of thyne enemye, but remembre that we must dye al the sort of vs (and fayne wold we come in to ioye.) Despyse not the sermons of suche elders as haue vnderstandynge, but acquaynte thy self with the wyse sentences of them: for of them thou shalte lerne wysdome and the doctryne of vnderstandynge, and how to serue greate men without complaynte.

¶ Go not from the doctrine of the elders, for they haue lerned it of theyr fathers. For of them thou shalt lerne vnderstandynge, so that thou mayest make answere in ye tyme of neede. Kyndle not the coales of synners, lest thou be brent in the fyrye flames of theyr synnes. Resyst not the face of the blaspheamer, that he laye not wayte for thy mouth. Lende not vnto hym that is myghtyer then thy self: If thou lendest hym, count it but lost. Be not ouertrye about thy power: yf thou be, then thynke surelye to paye it. Go not to lawe with the iudge, for he wyll iudge accordyng to his owne honoure. Trauayle not by the waye with him that is vnryghtfull, lest he do the euyll: for he foloweth his owne wylfulnesse, and so shalt thou perysh therfore by his folye.

¶ Strynt not with hym that is angrye and cruell, and go not with hym in to the wyldernesse: for bloude is nothynge in his syghte, and where there is no helpe, he shall murther the. Take no counsell at fooles, for they loue no thynge but the thynges that please them selues. Take no counsell before a straunger, for thou canst not tell what wyll come of it. Open not thyne herte vnto euery man, lest he be vnthankfull to the, and put the to reproffe.

¶ The leopardyes of vnchastnesse are to be eschewed. An olde frende is to be preferred before a newe. The glory and pryncelye of synners. Wyghtous men should be prouoked to gyft. Labour is the chefe thyng in a workman, and wysdome in a prynce.

CAPI. IX.

¶ Be not gelous ouer the wyfe of thy bosome, that she we not some wycked poynte of wycked doctryne vpon the. Strut not the power of thy lyfe vnto a woman, lest she come in thy strength, and so thou be confounded. Loke not vpon a woman that is desyrous of many men, lest thou fall in to her snares.

Use not the company of a woman that is a player and daunser, & heare her not, lest thou perysh therow her entysynge. Beholde not a mayden, that thou be not hurt in her beautye. Call not thy mynde vpon harlottes in any maner of thynge, lest thou destroye bothe thy selfe and thyne heritage. Go not about gasynge in cuttye lanes of the cytye, nether wendye thou abrode in the stretes therof. Turne awaye thy face from a beauty full woman, and loke not vpon the fayrenes of other.

Many a man hath perysshed therowe the beautye of women, for therin were the desyre is kyndled as it were a fyre. (An aduoutrous woman shall be troden vnder fote as myre, of euery one that goeth by the waye. Many a man wonderyng at the beauty of a straunge woman, hath bene cast oute, for her wordes kindle as a fyre.) Dyt not w an other mans wyfe by any meanes, lye not with her vpon the bed, make no wordes with her at ye wyne lest thyne hert consent vnto her, and so thou with thy bloude fall in to destruction. Forsake not an olde frende, for the newe shal not be lyke hym.

A newe frende is newe wyne: let hym be olde and thou shalt drynke hym with pleasure. Despyse not the honoure and ryches of a synner, for thou knowest not what destructiō is for to come vpon hym. Delyte not thou in the thynge that the vngodly haue pleasure in, beynge sure that the vngodly shall not be accepted but yll theyr grauē.

¶ Kepe the from the man that hathe power to slaye, so nedest thou not to be afrayde of death. And yf thou commest vnto hym, make no fautt, lest he happē to take away thy lyfe. Remembre that thou goest in the myddest of snares, and vpon the bulwarkes of the cytye. Beware of thy neyghboure as myghte as thou canst, and medle with such as be wyse and haue vnderstandyng. Let iust men be thy gestes, let thy myrth be in the feare of God, let the remembraunce of God be in thy mynde and let all thy talkynge be in the commaundementes of the lyghte. In the handes of craftesmen shall the workes be commended so shall the princes of the people in the wysdome of their talkynge. A man ful of wordes is perylous in his cytye, and he that is temerarious and pas shame in his talkynge, is to be abhorred.

¶ Of kynges and iudges. Pryde, and courtesines are to be auoyded. Labour is praysed.

CAPI. X.

A Wyse iudge wil order his people with discretion, and where a man of vnderstandynge dearth rule, there goeth it well. As the iudge of the people is hym selfe euen so are his officers: and loke what maner of man the ruler of the cytie is, such are they that dwell therin also. An vnwyse destroyeth his people, but where they ye be in auctoryte auctoritie are men of vnderstanding, there the city prospereth.

The power of the earth is in the handes of God, and when his time is, he shal set a profitable ruler vpō it, in the hand of God, is the power of man, and vpon the scribes shal he lay his honour. Remembre no wrong of thy neyghbour, and medle thou with no vnrygh teous workes. Pryde is hateful before God and man, and all wickednesse of the heathen is to be abhorred. Because of vnrighteous dealyng, wronge, blasphemyes, and diuers deceyte, a realme shall be translated from one people to an other.

B There is nothyng worse then a couetous man. Why art thou proude, o thou erth and asshes? There is not a more wycked thynge then to loue money. And why? such one hath his soule to sell: yet is he but eyther longe while he lyueth.

And though the physicion shewe his helpe neuer so longe, yet in conclusion it goeth after this maner, to day a king, to morow ded. For when a man dyeth, he is the heyre of serpentes, beestes and wormes. The beginning of mans pryde, is to fal away from God; & why? his herte is gone from his maker, for pryde is the originall of all syn. Who so taketh hold therof, shal be fylled with curssynges, & at ſ last it shal ouerthrow him. Therfore hath the Lorde brought ſ congregatiō of the wicked to dishonoure, and destroyed them vnto the ende.

C God hath destroyed the seates of proude princes, and set vp the meke in theyr stede. God hath wythered the rotes of the proude heathen, and planted the lowlye amonge them. God hathe ouerthrowen the landes of the Heathen, and destroyed them oute of the grounde. He hathe caused them to wyther away, he hath brought them to nought, and made the memorial of them to cease frō out of the earthe (God hath destroyed the name of the proude, and lefte the name of the humble of mynde.) Pryde was not made for man, neither wrothfulnes for mens children: the sede of man that feareth God shal be brought to honour: but the sede which transgresseth the commaundementes of the Lorde, shal be shamed. He that is ſ ruler amonges brethren is holden in honour among them, and he regardeth suche as feare the Lord. The glory of the ryche, of the honourable, & of the poore is the feare of God.

D Despyse not thou the iust poore man, and magnify not the ryche vngodly. Great is the iudge, & mighty in honour, yet is there none greater then he that feareth God. Vnto the seruaunt that is discrete, shall the lorde be fauorable. He that is wise and well nourtured, will not grudge when he is reformed, and an ignorant body shall not come to honour. Be not proude to do thy worke, and dispayre not in the tyme of aduersitie. Better is he that laboureth, and hathe plentifulnesse of all thynges, then he that is gorgeous and wanteth breed.

E My sonne, kepe thy soule in meekenes, and geue her her due honour. Who shall iustifie him that synneth agaynst him self? who will honour him that dishonourreth his owne life? The poore is honoured for his faithfulnes & truth, but the ryche is had in reputacion, because of his goodes. He that ordereth him self honestly in pouertie, how much more shal he behaue him self honestly in riches? and who so ordereth him self vnhonestly in ryches, how much more shall he behaue hym self vnhonestly in pouertie.

The pryce of humilitye. After the outwarde appearaunce ought we not to iudge. Of why and reall iudgement. The ryche is not without offence. All thinges come of God. Al men are not to be brought in to thy house.

CAPI. XI.

The wysdome of hym that is brought lowe, shal lyfte vp his herd, & shall make hym to syt among great men. Commend not a man in his beautie, neither despise a man in his vtter appearance. The Bee is but a smal beest among the foules, yet is her fruite chefe thynge swete. Be not proude of thy rayment, and exalt not thy self in the day of thy honoure: for the workes of the lorde only are wonderful: yea glorious secrete and vnknowen are his workes. Many tyrannes haue ben forced to syt downe vpon the earth, and the vnlykely hathe worne the crowne. Many mighty men haue ben brought lowe, and the honourable haue ben delyuered in to other mens handes. Condemne no man before thou haue tryed out the matter, & when thou hast made inquisicion, thē reforme right louingly. Geue no sentence before thou hathe herde the cause, but syrste let men tell out their tales.

Stryue not for a mater that toucheth not thy self, and stande not in the iudgement of synners. My son, medle not with many maters: & yf thou wylt be ryche, thou shalt not get it: and though ſ pursue thy mynde alone, yet shalt thou not escape. There is some man who laboureth, and the more he wereth him self, the lesse he hathe. Agayne some man is slouthful, hath nede of help, wanteth strength and hath greate pouertie, & Gods eye loketh vpon hym to good, stretcheth hym vp from his lowe estate, and lyfteth vp his herd, so ſ many men maruell at hym, and geue honour vnto God.

C Prosperitie and aduersitie, life & death, pouertie and riches come of the Lorde. (Wysdome, nurtour and knowinge of the law are with God: loue, and the wayes of good are with hym. Errour and darknesse are made for synners: and they that exalte the selues in euyl, waxe olde in euyl.) The gift of God remayneth for the righteous, and his good wyll shall haue prosperitie for euer. Some man is ryche by lyuyng vngodly, and that is the porcio of his reward, in that he sayth nowe haue I gotten rest, and nowe wyll I eate and drynke of my goodes my self alone.

And yet he consydereth not, that the tyme dyeth nye, that he must leaue all these thinges vnto other men, and dye hym selfe. Stande thou fast in thy couenaunt, and exercyse thy selfe therin, and remayne in the worke vnto thy age. Continue not in the workes of synners, but put thy truste in God, and byde in thyne estate: for it is but an easye thynge in the syght of God, to make a poore man riche, and that sodenly. The blessyng of God hasteth to the rewarde of the ryghteous, and maketh his frutes sone to flo:yshe and prospere. Say not: what helpeth it me? & what shall I haue the whyle? Agayne, saye not: I haue ynoughe, how can I want? When thou arte in welfare, forget not aduersitie: and when it goeth not wel with the, haue a good hope & it shall be better. For it is but a small thynge vnto God in the days of death to rewarde euery man accordynge to his wayes. The aduersitie of an houre maketh one to forget all pleasure: and when a man dyeth, his workes are discouered. Prayse no bodye before his deathe, for a man shal be knowen in his chyldren.

Bryng not euery man in to thyne house, for the deceytful layeth awayte dyuersly. Like as a partrych in a maundr, so is the hert of the proud: and lyke as a spye that lyeth vpō the fal of his neighbour. For he turneth good vnto euil, & sclaundereth the chast. Of one sparke is made a greate fyre, and an vngodly man laieth wayte for bloud. Beware of the discreetfull, for he ymagineth wicked thynges to bryng the in to a perpetual shame. If thou takest an aliaunt vnto the, he shall destroy the in inquietnesse, & dryue the from thyne owne wayes.

¶ Vnto whom we oughte to do good. Enemyes ought to be eschewed.

CAPI. XII.

When thou wylt do good, know to who thou doest it, & so shalt thou be greatly thanked for thy benefytes. Doo good vnto the righteous, and thou shalt fynde great rewarde: though not of hym, yet (no doubt) the Lorde hym selfe shall rewarde the. He standeth not in a good case that is alway occupyed in euyll, & geueth no almes: for the hyest hateth synners, and hath mercy vpon them that do the workes of repentaunce. Gyue thou vnto suche as feare God, and receyue not a synner. As for the vngodlye and synners, he shall recompence vengeaunce vnto them, and kepe them to the day of wrath. Gyue thou vnto the good, and receyue not the synner: do wel vnto hym that is lowly, but gyue not vnto the vngodlye. Let not the bread be geuen hym, that he be not myghtyer then thy selfe therin. For so shalt thou receyue twyse as moche euyll, in all the good & thou hast vnto hym: And why? the hyest hateth synners, and shall rewarde vengeaunce to the vngodly.

In prosperitie a frende shall not be knowen, and in aduersitie an enemy shall not be hyd. For when a man is in welth, it greeueth his enemyes: but in heuynesse and trouble a man shall knowe his frende. ¶ Truste neuer thyne enemye, for lyke as an yron rusteth, so doeth his wyckednes. And though he make moche crouchyng and knelyng, yet kepe wel thy mynde, and beware of hym. Set him not by the, neither let him syt at thy right hond, lest he tourne hym, get in to thy place, take thy rowme and leue thy seate, and so thou at the last remembre my wordes, & be pyched at my sayinges.

Wynde not two synnes togither, for there shal not be one vnpunished. Who wyl haue pity of the charmer that is stinged of the serpent, or of all suche as come nye the beestes? Euen so is it with him that kepeth company with a wycked man, and lappeth hym selfe in his synnes. For a season wyll he byde with the, but yf thou stomble, he tarryeth not. An enemy is sweete i his lyppes, he can make many wordes, and speke many good thynges: Yea he can wepe in his eyes, but in his herte he ymagineth how (to throw the in to the pit, and yf he may fynde opportunitie, he wil not be satisfied with bloude. If aduersitie come vpon the, thou shalt fynde hym there fyrst, & though he pretende to do the help, yet shal he vndermyne the. He shal shake his heed & clap his handes ouer the for very gladnesse, and whyle he maketh many wordes, he shall disguyse his countenaunce.

¶ The companyes of the proude and of the ryche are to be eschewed. The loue of God. Lyke do company with their lyke.

CAPI. XIII.

Who so toucheth pytche, shall be fyled withall: and he that is familyer with the proude, shall clothe hym selfe with pryde. He taketh a burthen vpon hym, that accompanyeth a more honourable man then hym selfe. Therfore kepe no familiaritie w one & is rycher then thy selfe. How agree the kettle and the pot togither? for yf the one be smitten ageynst the other, it shall be broken. The ryche brieth wrongfully, and chydeth withall: but the poore being oppressed and wrongously delt withal, sufferth scarce nede, and geueth fayre wordes. If thou be for his profyte, he vseth the: but yf thou haue nothyng, he shal forsake the. As long as thou hast any thynge of thyne owne, he shall be a good felowe with the: yea he shall make the a bare man, & not be sorye for the. If he haue nede of the, he shall defraude the: and with a pryuy mocke) shall he put & in an hope, and gyue the all good wordes, and saye: what wantest thou? ¶ Thus shall he shame the in his meate, vntyll he haue supte the clene vp twyse or thryse, and at the last shal he laugh the to scorne. Afterwarde whē he seith that thou thou hast nothynge, he shall forsake the, and shake his heed at the.

B Beware thou be not discerned & broughte downe in thy symplenesse. Be not to humble in thy wysdome, lest when thou art brought low, thou be discerned throwe foolishnesse. If thou be called a mightye man, absteyne thy selfe, so shalt be cal the to hym the more ofte. Preache not vnto hym, that thou he not shot out: and go not farre of, lest he forget the. Withdrawe not thy selfe from his speache, but byleve not his manye wordes. For with moche communicacion shall he tempte the, & (with a prcuye moche) shall be questyon the of thy secretes. The vnmercyfull mynde of his shal marke thy wordes, he shal not spare to doo the hurte, and to put the in prylon. Beware, and take good hede to thy selfe, for thou walkest in peryll of thy ouerthrowynge.

C Now whe thou hearest his wordes, make as though thou weerst in a dreme, and wake vp. Loue God all thy lyfe long, & call vpon him in thy nede. Euery beest loueth his like, euen so let euery man loue his neyghbour. All flesh wil resorte to their lyke. And euery mā will kepe companye with suche as he is him selfe. But as the wolfe agreeth w the lambe, so doth the vngodly with & righteous. What felowshyp sholde an holye man haue with a dogge? How can the ryche and the poore agree togyther? The wyld asse is the lyons prayse in the wylderneste, euen so are poore men the meat of the ryche. Like as & proude may not away with lowlynesse, euen so doth the ryche abhorre the poore. If a ryche man fall, his frendes set hym vp agayn, but when & poore falleth, his frendes forsake hym. If a ryche man fall in to an errour, he hathe many helpers, he speketh proude wordes, and yet men iustifye him.

But yf a poore man go wrong, he is punished: yea though he spoke wysely, yet can it haue no place. When the ryche man speketh euery body holdeth his tong, and loke what he sayth, they praise it vnto the cloudes. But yf the poore man speake, they saye: What felowe is this? And yf he doo amysse, they shal destroy him. Ryches are good vnto him that hath no synne in his conscience, and pouertie is a wycked thynge in the mouthe of the vngodly. The hert of mā chaungeth his countenaunce, whether it be in good or euyl. A cheerefull countenaūce is a token of a good herte. for els it is an harde thynge to knowe the thoughte.

¶ The offence of the tonge. Man is but a vayne thynge. Happy is he that continueth in wysdome.

CAPI. XIIII.

1 BLessed is the man, that hathe not fallen with the word of his mouth, and is not prycked with the conscience of synne. Happye is he that hathe no heynesse in his mynde, and is not fallen frome his hope. It becommeth not a courtous man & nygarde to be ryche: and what sholde a nygarde doo with golde? He that with all his carefulnes heapeth togyther vnrighteously gathereth for other folkes, and an other mā shall make good cheere with his goodes. He & is wycked vnto hym selfe, howe sholde he be good vnto other men? How can such one haue any pleasure of his goodes? There is nothyng worse then when one disshonoureth hym selfe, and this is a reward of his wickednesse. If he do any good, he doth it not knowynge therof, & agaynst his wyl, and at the last he declareth his vngracyousnes. A nigard hath a wycked eye, he turneth away his face, and despyseth his owne soule. A courtous mans eye hath neuer ynoughe in the portion of wyckednesse, vntyll he wyther awaye, and haue lost his owne soule. Prou. xxviii. Ecclus.

A wicked eye spareth breed, & ther is scarcenesse vpon his table. My son, do good to thy selfe of that thou hast, and gyue the Lorde his due offrynges. Remembre that deth tarryeth not, and that the couenaunt of the graue is shewed vnto the: for the couenaunte of this worlde shal dye the deth. Do good vnto thy frend before thou dye, and according to thy habilitie, reche out thy hande and gyue vnto the poore. Be not disporyted of & good day, and let not the portion of the good day ouerpasse the. Shalt thou not leaue thy trauayles and labours vnto other men? In the deuiding of the heritage gyue and take, and sanctifye thy soule. Worke thou rychteousnesse before thy deth, for in & pit there is no meat to find. All flesh shal fade awaye as grasse, and lyke a flourishing tree in a greene tre. Some growe some are cast downe: euē so is the generacion of flesh and blond, one commeth to an ende, an other is borne. Eccl. xli. Ecclus. 1. Peter 1. Iacob.

C All transitorye thynges shall fayle at the last, and the worker therof shall go withall. Euery chosen worke shall be iustified, and he that medleth withall, shall haue honoure therin. Blessed is the mā that kepeth hym in wysdome, and exercyseth hym selfe in vnderstandyng, and with discrecion shal he thinke vpon the forknowlege of God. Which considereth the wayes of wysdome in his herte, hath vnderstandig in her secretes, goeth after her (as one that seketh her out) and continueth in her wayes. He loketh in at her windowes, and harkeneth at her doores: he taketh his rest beside her house, and fastened his stake in her walles: He shall pytche his tent nye vnto her hand, and in his tent shall good thinges rest for euermore: He shall set his chyldren vnder her couerynge, and shall dwel vnder her braunches. Vnder her couering shal he be defended frō the heate, and in her glory shal he rest.

¶ The goodnesse which folowyth hym that feareth God. God reuerseth and casteth of the sinner. God is not the autour of euyll.

CAPI. XV.

A HE that feareth God, wyl do good: and he that holdeth the lawe, shall obtayne wysdome. As an honourable mother shal she mete him, and as a virgyn shal she receyue hym. With the breed of lyfe and vnderstanding shal she fede hym, and gyue him the water of holsom wysdom to drynke. If he be constant in her, he shal not be moued: and if he holde him fast by her, he shall not come to confusion. She shal bryng him to honour among his neyghbours, and in the myddest of the congregacion shall she open his mouthe. With the spirite of wysdom and vnderstandyng shal she fyl him, and clothe hym with the garmēt of glory. She shal heape the treasure of myrth and ioy vpon him, and gyue him an euerlastyng name to heritage. Foolish mē wil not take hold vpon her, but suche as haue vnderstandyng, will mete her, for she is far frō pryde and disceyte. Men that go about with lyes, wyl not remembre her: but mē of truth shal be found in her: euē vnto the beholding of God. Prayse is not semely in the mouthe of the vngodly, for he is not sent of the Lord. For of God commeth wisdom, and the prayse shal stand by the wisdom of God, and shalbe plentyous in a faythful mouth, and the Lord shal gyue her vnto him.

B Say not thou: It is the Lordes fault that I am gone by, for thou shalt not do the thing that God hateth. Say not thou: he hath caused me to goo wrange, for he hath no nede of the vngodly. God hateth al abhominacīō of errour, & they that feare God wil loue none suche. God made man at the begynnyng, and left hym in the hand of his counsell. He gaue him his commaundementes and preceptes, if thou wylte obserue the commaundementes, and kepe acceptable faythfulnesse for euer, they shal preserue the. He hath set water and fyre before the, reache out thyne hande vnto which thou wylt. Before man is lyfe & deth, good and euyll: loke what him lyketh, shall be giuen him: for the wisdom of God is great and mighty in power, and beholdeth al men continually. The eyes of the Lord are vpon them that feare hym, and he knoweth all the workes of man. He hath commaunded no mā to do vngodly, neither hath he gyuē any man leue to synne.

¶ Of vnhappy and wycked chyldren. No man can hyde hym selfe from God. An exhortacion to the receyuynge of instruction.

CAPI. XVI.

A DEsyre not thou in the multitude of vngodly chyldren, and haue no pleasure in them, yf they feare not God. Trust not thou to their lyfe, and regarde not their labours: for one sonne that feareth God, is better then a thousande vngodly. And better it is better for a man to dye without chyldren, then to leaue behynde hym suche chyldren as are vngodly. For by one that hath vnderstandyng, may a tole city be vpholde, but though the vngodly be manye, yet shall it be wasted thorow them. Many such thinges hath myne eye sene, and greater thinges then these haue I herde with myne eares. In the congregacion of the vngodlye shall a fyre burne, and amonges vnfaythfull people shal the wrath be kyndled.

C The olde gyauntes obteyned no grace for their synnes which were destroyed, trustyng to their owne strengthe. Neyther spared he them amonges whom Loth was straunger, but smote them and abhorred them bycause of the pryde of their workes. He had no pity vpon them, but destroyed all the people that were so stoute in synne. And for so moche as he ouersawe not the fyre hundred thousande that gathered them selues togither in the hardnesse of their hert, it were marueil yf one being hardnecked shold be free. For mercy and wrath is with him: he is both mighty to forgyue, and to poure out displeasure. Lyke as his mercy is great, euen so is his punishmēt also, he iudgeth a mā according to his workes. The vngodly shall not escape in his spoyle, and the long pacience of him that sheweth mercy, shal not byde behynd. Al mercy shal make place vnto every mā according to the deseruyng of his workes, and after the vnderstandyng of his pylgrymage.

Saye not thou: I wyl hyde my selfe from God, for who wyl thynke vpon me from aboue? I shall not be knowen in so greate a heape of people, for what is my soule among so many creatures? Beholde, the heuen, yea the heuen of heuens, the depe, the earthe, and all that therin is shall be moued at his presence, the mountaynes, the hylles, and the foundacions of the earth shal shake for feare, when God visiteth them.

C Their thynges both no hert vnderstand, but he vnderstandeth euerye herte, and who vnderstandeth his wayes? No man seith his storme, and the most part of his workes are secrete. Who wyl declare the workes of his ryghtousnesse? Or who shall be able to abyde them? for the couenaunt is farre from some, and the tryinge oute of men is in the fulfyllyng. He that is humble of hert, thynketh vpon suche thinges: but an vnwise and erroneous man casteth his mynde vnto foolysh thinges.

My sonne harken thou vnto me, and learne vnderstandyng, and marke my wordes with thyne hert: I wyll gyue the a sure doctryne, and playnly shall I instruct the. God hathe set his workes in good order frome the begynnynge, and parte of them hathe he sundered frome the other. He hathe garnysshed his workes from euerlastyng, and their begynnynges, accordynge to their generacyons. None of them hyndered an other, neyther was anye of them disobedient vnto his worde. After this, God loked vpon the erth, and fylled it with his goodes. With al maner of lyuing beastes hath he couered the grounde, and they all shall be tourned vnto erth agayne.

¶ The

¶ The creation of man, and the goodnesse that God hathe doone vnto him. Of almyghtynesse.

CAPL. XVII.

GOd shope man of the earth, and tourned hym vnto earthe agayne. He gaue hym the nombre of dayes and certayn tyme, yea and gaue hym power of the thynges that are vpon earthe. He clothed hym w̄ strength, and made hym after his owne lyke nesse. He made all flesshe to stande in awe of hym, so that he had the dominion of all beastes and foules. He made out of hym an helper lyke vnto hym selfe, and gaue them discrecion and tonge, eyes and eares, and a hert to vnderstande, & fylled them with instruction and vnderstandyng. He created for them also the knowlege of the spirite, fylled their hertes with vnderstandyng, and shewed the good and cuyl. He set his eye vpon their hertes, declaring vnto them his great and noble workes, that they shold prayse his holy name togyther, reioyse of his wonders, and be telling of his noble actes. Beside this he gaue them instruction and the lawe of lyfe for an heritage.

He made him an euerlastyng couenaunt w̄ them, and shewed them his rightousnesse and iudgmētes. They saw his glory with their eyes, and they: eares herde the maiesty of his voyce. And he sayd vnto them: beware of al vnrygh̄tous thynges. He gaue euery man also a commaundement concerning his neighboure.

Their wayes are euer before hym, and are not hydde fromc his eyes. He hathe set a ruler vpon euerye people, but Israell is the Lordes portion. All their workes are as the sunne in the syghte of God, and his eyes are alwaye lokynge vpon their wayes. All their vnrygh̄tousnesses are manyfest vnto hym, and all their wyckednesses are open in his syghte. The mercye that a man sheweth, is as it were a purse with hym, and a mannes good dede preserueth hym as the apple of an eye. At the laste shall he awake, and rewarde euerye man vpon his head as he hathe deserued, and shal tourne them togyther in to the nethermoost partes of the earthe. But vnto theym that wyll repent, he hathe gyuen the way of rygh̄tousnes. As for such as he weithe he comforteth them, sustereth them, and sturdeth them the porcyon of the veritie.

O tourne thou vnto the Lorde, forsake thy synnes, make thy prayer before the Lorde, doo the lesse offence, tourne agayne vnto the Lord, forsake thyne vnrygh̄tousnes, be an vtter enemy to abhominacion, lerne to know the rygh̄tousnesse and iudgmentes of God, stand in the porcion that is set forth for the, and in the prayer of the moste hyghe God. Goo in to the porcion of the holye worke, with suche as be syngyng, and gyue thankes vnto God.

Who wyll prayse the Lorde in the helle? Abyde not thou in the errour of the vngod-lye, but gyue hym thankes before dethe. As for the dede, thankefulnesse perysheth fromc hym as nothynge. Gyue thou thankes in thy lyfe, yea whyle thou arte syngynge and hole, shalt thou gyue thankes, and prayse God, and reioyse in his mercye. O howe great is the louynge kyndnesse of the Lorde and his mercyfull goodnesse vnto suche as tourne vnto hym? For all thynges may not be in man: And why? the sonne of man is not immortall, and he hathe pleasure in the vanitie of wyckednesse. What is more clere then the sunne? yet shall it fayle. Or what is more wycked then the thynge that flesshe and bloude hathe ymagyned? and that same shall be reproued. The Lorde strith the power of the hye heuen, and all are but earthe and asshes.

¶ The merueilous workes of God, the mystery and wretchednesse of man. Against God ought we not to complayne. Prayer must we continually.

CAPL. XVIII.

HE that lyueth for euermore, made all thynges togyther. God onely is rygh̄tous, & remayneth a victorious kyng for euer. Who shall be able to expresse the workes of hym? Who hath sought oute the groundes of his noble actes? Who shall declare the power of his greatnesse? Or who wyl take vpon hym to tel out his mercye? As for the wonderous workes of ✠ Lord, there may nothyng be taken from them, nothyng maye be put vnto theym, neyther maye the groundes of them be founde out. But when a man hath doone his beste, he muste begyn agayne: and when he supposeth to be comed an ende, he muste goo agayne to his labour. What is man? Wherto is he worthe? What good or cuyll can he do? If the nombre of a mans dayes be almost an hundreth yeres, it is moche.

Like as the droppes of rayne are vnto the see, and as a grauell stone is in comparyson of the sande: so are their fewe yeres to the dayes euerlastynge. Therefore is the Lorde pacient with them, and powreth out his mercye vpon theym. He sawe and perceyued the thoughtes and ymaginacions of their hert, that they were cuyll: therfore heaped he vp his mercyfull goodnesse vpon them, and shewed them the waye of rygh̄tousnesse. The mercy that a man hath, reacheth to his neighbour, but the mercy of God is vpon al flesh. He chasteneth, he teacheth and nourtoureth: yea euen as a shepherde tourneth agayne his flocke, so doothe he all them that receyue chastenynge, nourtoure and doctryne. Mercyfull is he vnto suche that stand in awe of his iudgementes.

My son, when thou doest good, make no grudging at it: and what so euer thou gyuest speake no discomfortable wordes. Shal not the dewe coole the heate? Euen so is a worde better then a gyfte. Is not a frendly worde a good good honest gyfte? but a gracyous man gyueth them bothe. A foole shall cast a man in the teeth, and that roughly, and a gyft of the nygarde putteth out the eyes. Get the rightoustnesse before þ come to iudgement: lerne before thou speake, and goo to physycke ouer thou be sycke: examyn and iudge thy selfe before the iudgement come, and so shalt thou fynde grace in the syght of God. Humble thy self before thou be sycke, and in tyme of thy disease shewe thy conuersacion. Lette not to praye alwaye, and stande not in feare to be reconuerted vnto death, for the reward of God endureth for euer. Before thou pray ett prepare thy soule, and be not as one that tempteth God. Thynke vpon the wrathfull indignacion that shall be at the ende, and the houre of vengeaunce, when he shall turne awaye his face. When thou hast ynought, remembre the tyme of honger, and when thou arte ryche, thynke vpon the time of pouertie and scarcenesse.

From the morynge vntyl the euenynge the tyme is chaunged, and all suche thynges are soone done in the sight of God. A wise man feareth God in al thinges, & in the dayes of trāsgression, he keepeth hym self from synne. A discrete man hath pleasure in wysdome, and he that fyndeth her, maketh moch of her. They that haue had vnderstanding, haue delit wisely in wordes, haue vnderstand the truth and righteousnesse, and haue sought out wyse sentences & iudgementes. Folow not thy lustes but turne the from thyne owne wyl. & for if þ giuest thy soul her desires, it shal make thine enemyes to laugh þ to scorne. Take not thy pleasure in great voluptuousnes, and medle not to moche thall. Make not to great chere of the thynge that thou hast won by auauntage, lerst thou fall in to pouertie, and haue nothyng in thy purse.

¶ Wyne and hoordome dyngeremen to pouertye In thy wordes muste thou vse reuerence. The preference of the wysdome of God and man whereby thou mayest knowe what sin a man. Correction must be vsed without anger.

CAPI. XIX.

A Labourynge man that is geuen vnto dronkennesse, shall not be ryche: and he that maketh not moch of smal thinges, shal fall by lytle and lytle. Wyne & women, make wyse men rennagates, & put men of vnderstanding to reproffe. and he that accompanieth aduoutrers, shal become a witched mā. Mothes and wormes shal haue hym to heritage, yea he shal be set vp to a greater example, and his soule shall be rooted out of the nombre. He that is hasty to geue credence is lyght mynded, and doth against him selfe. Who so reioyseth in wickednesse shal be punished: he þ hateth to be reconuerted, his lyfe shal be shortned: and he that abhorreth babyng of wordes, quencheth wickednes. He that offendeth against his own soule, shal repent it: and he that reioyseth in wickednes shall be punysched.

Reherse not a wycked and churlish word twise, and thou shalt not be hindered. Shewe thy secretes, neyther to frende ne foo, and yf thou hast offended, tel it not out. For he shal harken vnto the and marke the, and when he findeth opportunitie, he shal hate the. Yf thou hast herde a worde against thy neyghbour, let it be herd within the: and be sure þ shalt haue no harme therby. A foole trauayleth in a worde, lyke as a woman þ is payned with trauayl of chylde. Lyke as an arow shot in a dogges thigh, so is a worde in a foles hert. Tell thy frend his fault, lest he be ignorant, & saye: I haue not done it, or yf he haue done it, that he do it no more. Reproue thy neyghbour, that he kepe his tong, & yf he haue spoken, that he say it no more.

Tell thy neyghbour his fault, for ofte tymes an offence is made, and gyue not credence to euery word. A man talketh somtyme with his tonge, but not with his wyll. For what is he that hathe not offended in his tonge? Gyue thy neyghbourē warnyng before thou threaten hym, and gyue place vnto the lawe of the Lorde. The feare of God is all wysdome, and he that is a ryghtous man kepeth the lawe. As for the doctryne of wickednesse it is no wysdome, and the prudence of synners is no good vnderstandynge: it is but wyckednesse and abhominacion, and a blasphemyng of wysdom. A symple man of smal vnderstandynge that feareth God, is better then one that hath moch wysdom, and transgresseth the lawe of the hyest. A craftye subtyll man can be wyse, but he is vnrygh tous, and with grettes he wresteth the open & manifest lawe. A wycked man can behaue hym selfe humblye, and can bowe with his herd, and yet is he but a disceyuer within. He hydeth his face, and disguyseth it: and because he shoulde not be knowen, he preuenteth the.

And thoughe he be so wryght that he can doo the no harme, yet when he maye fynde opportunitie, he shall doo some euyll. A man maye be knowen by his face, and one that hath vnderstandynge maye be perceyued by the lokē of his countenaunce. A mans garment, laughter, and goynge, declare what he is.

¶ Of correction and repentaunce. Of the tyme of the wyse man and of the foole. Of tyme.

CAPI. XX.

SOme man reproueth his neyghbour ofte tymes, but not in due season. Agayne, some man holdeth his tonge, and he is wyse and discrete. It is moche better to gyue warnyng, and to reproue, then to beare euyll wyll: for he that knowledgeth hym selfe openlye, shall be preserued from hurte and destruction. Lyke as when a gelded mā thorowe desyre and lust defyleth a mayden, cum

euen so is it with him that vseth byolence, and bringeth ouselle in the same. O how good a thynge is it, a man that is repooued, to shewe openly his repentaunce, for so shalte thou eschape wylful syn.

Some man hopeth silence, and is founde wyse: but he that is not ashamed what he saythe: is hatefull. Some man holdeth his tonge, bicause he hath not the vnderstaundynge of the language: and some man hopeth silence, wayteynge a conuenient tyme. A wyse man wyll holde his tonge till he se opportunitye, but a wanton and vnshamefte body shal regarde no tyme. He that vseth manye wordes, shall hurte his owne soule: and he that taketh auctoritie vpō hym boysterously shal be hated. Some man hath oft tymes prosperite in wyched thynges: Agayne, some man getteth moche, and hathe losse and losse. There is some gyfte that is nothyng worth: Agayne, there is some gyfte, whose rewarde is double. Some man getteth a fall, for beynge to proude, and some commeth to worshyp from the lowe estate. Some man byeth moch for a litle pryce, and must paye for it seuenfolde.

A wyse man with his wordes maketh him selfe to be loued, but the fauoures of fooles shall be poured out. The gyftes of the vnwyse shall do the no good, for his eyen are seuenfolde: he shall gyue lytle, and laye he gaue moch: he openeth his mouth and inyeth out, as it were one that cryeth out wyne. No thynge he profiteth, to magnifye he selfe of agayne, and suche a man is to be hated. The foole sayeth: I haue no frende, I haue no thanke for all my good deedes: peraduenture they that eate my breed, speake no good of me. O how oft, and of how many shall he be laughed to scorne? the taketh a more perilous fal by suche wordes, then yf he fell vpon the grounde: euen so shall the fallen of wyched men come hastelye. In the mouth of him yt is vnlaught, are many vncommendable and vnmete wordes. A wyse sentence shall not be alowed, at the mouth of the foole, for he speaketh it not in due season.

Some man spareth not, bicause he hath not wherwithall, and in his rest he shall be synged. Some man there is that destroyeth his owne soule with shame, and for an vnwyse bodyes sake, destroyeth he it, and with accepting of persons, shall he vnder him selfe. Some man promyseth his frende a gyfte for verye shame, and getteth an enemye of him for nought. A lye is a wyched shame in a man, yet shall it be euer in the mouth of the vnwyse. A theefe is better then a man that is accustomed to lye, but they bothe shall haue destruction to heritage. The condicyons of lyers are vnhoneste, and their shame is euer with them.

A wyse man shall bringe him selfe to honour with his wordes, and he that hath vnderstaundynge shall be set by amonge greate men. He that tylleth his lande, shall encrease his heape of corne: he that worketh rightcous welle, shall be exalted, and he that pleaseth greate me, shal escape moch euyll. Rewardes and gyftes blynde the eyes of the wyse, and make him dom, that he can not reproue their faultes. Wysdome that is hyd, and treasure that is hoarded vp, what profyte is in the both? Better is he that hideth his ignorance secrete, then a man that hydeth his wysdome.

¶ Of the repentaunce of syenne. We may not holde syenne vpon syenne. The difference of an vnwyse. The ende of synners. Of the fooles ende of the wyse man. Of him that enuieth the deuyll.

CAPI. XXI.

MY sonne yf thou hast synned, do it no more: but praye for thy forsyennes, that they maye be forgyuen the. Flye from syenne, euen as from a serpent: for yf thou commest to nyghe her, she wil byte the. The teeth therof are as the teeth of a lyon, to slee the soules of men. The wyckednes of man is as a sharpe two edged sworde, which maketh suche woundes that they can not be healed.

Stryfe and wrongeous dealyng shal waste alwaye a mans goodes: and therewe pryde a riche house shall be brought to nought: so the eyenes of the proude shall be rooted oute. The prayer of the poore goeth oute of the mouth, and commeth vnto the eares, and his vengeaunce (as before) shall come, and that hastelye. Who so hateth to be reformed is a token of an vngodly person: but he that feareth God, wyll remembre hym selfe. A mighty man is knowne a far of by his tong: but he that hath vnderstaundynge perceyueth that he shall haue a fall.

Who so buyldeth his house with other mens coll, is lyke one that gathereth stones in winter. The congregacion of the vngodly is lyke stubble gathered together, the ende is a flame of fyre. The waye of the vngodly is set with stones, but in their ende is hell, darkenes & payenes. He that kepeth the lawe wyll holde fast the vnderstaundynge, therof and the ende of the feare of God is wisdome. The that is not wyse, wyll not be taughte in good: but the vnwyse wil abounde in wickednesse: and where bitternes is there is no vnderstaundynge. The knowledge of the wyse shall flowe lyke water that neuer soure, and his counsell is lyke a fountayne of lyfe.

The hert of a foole is lyke a broken vessel, he can kepe no wysdome. When a man of vnderstaundynge heareth a wyse worde, he wil commende it, and make moche of it. But yf a voluptuous man heare it, he shall haue no pleasure therin, but cast it behynde his backe. The talkynge of a foole is lyke an heuy burthen by the waye: but to heare a wyse man speake it is a pleasure. Where a rabble is in the congregacyon, it is asked at the mouthe of the wyse, and they shall ponder his wordes in their hertes. Like as a house that is destroyed, euen so is wisdome vnto a foole: So for the knowledge of the vnwyse, it is but [illegible] vnderstaundynge is vnto him that hathe no vnderstandynge, euen as fetters a-boute his fete, and lyke mannacles vpon his eyght hande. A foole lyfteth vp his voyce vñ laughter, but a wyse man shall scarse laughe secretely.

Eccle.xxi.d

Lernynge is vnto a wyse man a tewell of golde, and lyke an armlet vpon his eyght arme. A foolyshe mans fote is soone in his neyghbours house, but one that hath experience, shall be ashamed at the persone of the myghtye. A foole wyll pepe in at the wyndowe in to the house, but he that is well nurtured, wyll stande without. A foolyshe man standeth herkening at the dore, but he that is wyse, wyll be ashamed.

The lyppes of the vnwyse wyll be tellyng foolysh thynges, but the wordes of suche as haue vnderstandynge, shall be weyed in the balaice. The hert of fooles is in theyr mouth, but the mouth of the wyse is in theyr hert. When the vngodly curseth the blasphemer, he curseth his owne soule. A prince accuser of other men shal defyle his owne soule, and be hated of euery man: (but he that keepeth his tonge and is discrete, shall come to pleasure.)

Ecclus.xxi.b

¶ The purgation of the slouthfull. Of the foolysh louue and doughter, we must haue discretion, how and to whom we ought to preache, of lesynges vpon the deed. A foole is not to be moche talked withal. Murtyrers and wrongers do breake frendeshyp and amyte.

CAPI. XXII.

A Slouthfull body is moulded of a stone of claye: he that toucheth him, must wasshe his handes agayn. A misnurtured sonne is the dishonour of the father. A folysh doughter shall be lytell regarded. A wyse doughter is an heritage vnto her husbande: but she that commeth to dishonestly, bringeth her father in to hypocrisie. A doughter that is past shame, dishonoureth bothe her father and her husbande: the vngodly shall regarde her, but they bothe shal dispyse her, the playnge of mustyche is not mete to here heynous is, euen so is the exercation & doctryne of wysdome euer vnpleasaunt vnto fooles.

Who so teacheth a foole, is euen as one B that glueth a pot sherde togyther: as one that telleth a tale to hym that heareth hym not, and as one that rayseth a man out of an heuye slepe. Who so telleth a foole of wysdome, is euen as a man, whiche speaketh to one that is a slepe. When he bathe to tolde his tale, he sayth: what is the matter? When one dyeth, lamentacion is made for hym, because the syght fayleth him: euen so let men mourne ouer a foole: for he wanteth vnderstandynge. Make but lytle weppynge because of the deed: for he is come to rest, but the life of the foole is worse then the death. Seuen dayes do men mourne for hym that is deed, but ℣ lamentacyō ouer the vnwyse and vngodly shulde endure all the dayes of theyr lyfe.

Gene.xxd

L Talke not moch with a foole, and go not with hym that hath no vnderstandynge. Beware of him, lest ye turne the to trauayle, and thou shalt not be defyled with his synne. Departe from hym, and thou shalte fynde rest, & shalt not be wearyed with his foolishnes. What is heuyer then leade? And what thyng a foole be called els but leade? Sande, salt, and a lumpe of yron is easyer to beare, then an vnwyse, foolysh, and vngodly man. Lyke as the bande of wod bounde togyther in the foundacion of the house can not be loosed, euen so is it with the herte that is stablysshed in the thought of counsell. The thought of the wyse, shall neither feare ne be offended at any tyme.

Lyke as a fayre playstered wall in a wynter house, and an vnpolysshed tonge, may not abyde the wynde and stormes: euen so is a foles herte afrayde in his ymagynacion: he fareth as euery tyme, and can not endure. He that nyppeth a mans eye, bringeth forth teares: and he that pyercheth the herte, bringeth forth the meanynge and thought. Who so casteth a stone at the byrdes, fraieth them awaye: and he that blasphemeth his frende breaketh the frendshyp: though thou drewest a swerde at thy frende, yet despayre not, for thou mayest come agayne to thy frende. If he speake lowdely, feare not, for ye maye be agreed togyther agayne: excepte it be that thou blasphemest hym, disdayne him open his secretes & wounde him trayterously for all suche thynges, shall dryue awaye a frende.

We faythfull vnto thy neyghboure in his pouertye, that thou mayste reioyce with hym also in his prosperity. Abide stedfast vnto him in the tyme of his trouble, that thou mayste be heyre with hym in heritage. Lyke as the vapour and smoke goeth out at the ouen before the fyre, euen so euell wordes, rebukes and threatenynges go before bloudshedyng. Be not ashamed to defende thy frende: as for me, I wyll not hyde my face from hym, Psal.xl. though he shulde do me harme. Whosoeuer heareth it shall beware of him. Who shal set a watch before my mouth, & a sure seale vpō my lyppes, that I fall not with theym, and that my tonge destroye me not?

¶ Prayer against pryde, lechery, and gloteny. Of cursed, blasphemy, and of wyse communicacion. Of the three kyndes of synnes. Many synnes procede of slouthe. Of the feare of God.

CAPI. XXIII.

O Lorde, father and gouernour of my lyfe, leaue me not in theyr ymagynacyon and counsell. Oh let me not fal into such errours. Who wil kepe my thoughtes with the scourge, and the doctryne of wysdome in myne herte? that he spare not mine ignorannce, that I fall not with them, lest myne ignorannces increase, that myne offences be not many in nombre, and that my synnes excede not: lest I fal before myne enne-

mies

myes, and so my aduersarye reioyce. O Lorde thou father and God of my lyfe, lene me not in theyr ymagynacyon. O let me not haue a proude loke, but turne away all voluptuousnesse fro me. Take fro me the lustes of the belye, let not the delyces of vncleannesse take hold vpon me, and gyue me not ouer in to an vnshamefast and obstynate mynde.

Heare me (O ye children) I wyll gyue you a doctryne, how ye shall ordre youre mouth: who so kepeth it, shall not perysh thorow his lyppes, ne be hurte thorow wycked workes. As for the synner, he shall be taken in his owne daunsyge: he that is proude and cursed, shall fall therin. Let not thy mouth be accustomed with swearyng, for in it there are many falles. Let not the naming of God be continually in thy mouth: for lyke as a seruaunt whiche is oft punyshed, can not be without some hurt; euen so what so euer he be that sweareth and nameth God, shal not be clene pourged from synne. A man that vseth much swearynge, shall be fylled with wyckednesse, and the plage shall neuer go from his house. If he beguyle his brother, his faute shall be vpon hym: yf he knowledge not his synne, he maketh a double offence, and yf he sware in vayne, he shall not be founde ryghteous, for his house shall be full of plages.

The worde of ꝑ sweater bryngeth death, (God graunte that it be not founde in the house of Jacob.) But they that feare God, eschewe all such, and lye not weltrynge in syn. Vse not thy mouth to vnhonest and fylthye talkig, for in it is the worde of syn. Remembre thy father and thy mother, when thou arte set amonge greate men: lest God forget the in theyr syghte, and lest thou bolynge in thy custome, suffre rebuke, and wysshe not to haue bene vnborne, and so curse the daye of thy natyuyte. The man that is accustomed with the wordes of blasphemye, wyll neuer be reformed al the dayes of his lyfe. To lye twyse is to moche, but the thyrde bryngeth wrath and destruction. An hote stomache can not be quenched (euen lyke a burnynge fyre) tyll he haue swalowed vp somdynge: euen so an vnmortified man hath no rest in his flesshe: tyll he haue kyndled a fyre.

All bread is swete to an horemonger, he wyll not leaue of, tyll he haue his purpose. A man that breaketh wedlock, an regardeth not his soule, but sayth: Tush, who seeth me? I am compassed about with darknesse, the walles couer me, no body seeth me: whom nede I to feare? The hyghest wyl not remembre my synnes. He vnderstandeth not that his eyes se all thynges, for all suche feare of men driueth away the feare of God from hym, for he feareth only the eyes of men, and considereth not that the eyes of the Lorde are clearer then the Sunne, beholdynge all the wayes of men, and the groundes of the depe, and lokynge euen to mens hertes in secrete places. The Lorde God knewe all thynges or euer they were made, and after they be brought to passe also, he loketh vpō them al. The same man shall be openlye punyshed in the stretes of the cytye, and shall be chased a bysshe lyke a ronge horse: and when he thinketh lest vpon it, he shalbe taken. Thus shal he be put to shame of euery man, because he wolde not vnderstande the feare of the Lorde. And thus shall it go also with euery wyfe that leaueth her husbande, and getteth inheritaunce by a straunge maryage. Fyrste she hath bene vnfaythfull vnto the lawe of the hyghest: Secondly, she hath forsaken her owne husband: Thirdly she hath played the hoore in aduoutrye, and gotten her children by an other man. She shall be brought out of the congregacyon, and her children shalbe loked vpon. Her children shal not take rote, and as for frute, her braunches shall bynge forth none. A shameful reporte shall she leaue behynde her, and her dyshonour shall not be put out. And they that remayne, shall knowe that there is nothynge better then, the feare of God: and that there is nothynge sweter then to take hede vnto the cōmaundemētes of the Lorde. A greate worshipp is it to folowe the Lorde, for lyke shalbe rewarded of hym.

¶ A prayse of wysdome proceadynge forthe of the mouth of God. Of her workes and place where she resteth.

CAPI. XXIIII.

WYsdome shall prayse her selfe, and be honoured in God, and reioyse in the myddest of his people: In the congregacyons of the hyghest shall she open her mouth, and tryumphe in the beholdynge of his power: In the myddest of her people shall she be exalted, & wondered at in the holy fulnes: In the multytude of the chosen she shall be commended, and among such as be blessed she shall be prayed, and shall saye: I am come out of the mouth of the hyghest, firstborne before all creatures. I caused the lyght that fayleth not, to aryse in the heauen, & couered all the earth as a cloude. My dwellynge is about in the depth, and my seate is in the pyller of the cloude. I my selfe alone haue gone rounde about the compasse of heauen, and perced the groundes of the depe: I haue walked in the floudes of the see, and haue stande in all landes: my dominyon is in euerye people and in euery nacyon, and with my power haue I troden downe the hertes of all, both lytle and lowe.

In all these thynges also I soughte rest, and a dwellynge in some inheritaunce. So the creatoure of all thynges gaue me a commaundement: and he that made me, appoynted me a tabernacle, and sayde vnto me: Let thy dwellynge be in Jacob, and thyne inheritaunce in Israell, and rote thy selfe amonges my chosen. I was created fromthe begynnynge and before the worlde, and shall not leaue the worlde to come. In the holy habytacyon haue I serued before hym, & so was I stablysshed in Sion.

In the lyke wyse resteth I in the manner: and in Jerusalē was my power, I toke rote in Psal.xxxvii.b in an honorable people, euen in the porcyon of the Lord and in his heritage, and kepte me in the fulnesse of the sayntes. I am set vp on lyke a Cedre vpon Libanus, and as a Cypres tre vpon the mount Hermon: I am exalted lyke a palme tree in Cades, and as a rose plante in Jericho: As a fayre olyue tre in the felde, and am exalted lyke a planteyn tre by the waters syde. I haue gyuen a smell in the streetes, as the Cynamom and Balme, that yelde so good a sauoure: yea a swete odoure haue I gyuen, as it were Myrre of the best.

¶ I haue made my dwellynges to smell as it were of rosyn, Galbanum, Onyches, and Incense, and as Libanus when it is not hewen downe, and myne odour is as the pure Balme. As the Terebint haue I stretched out my braunches, and my braunches are honorable and honest. As the vyne, haue I brought forth frute of a swete sauoure, and my flowres are the frute of honour and ryches. I am the mother of beautye, of loue, of feare, of knowledge and of holy hope. In me is all grace of lyfe & truth: In me is all hope of lyfe and vertue. O come vnto me, all ye that be desyrous of me, and fyll your selues with my frutes: for my spirite is swetter then honye, and is myne inheritaunce more then the honye combe: the remembraunce of me endureth for euermore. They that eate me, shall haue the more hunger: & they that drynke me, shall thirste the more. Who so hearkeneth vnto me, shall not come to confusion: and they that worke in me, shal not offende. They that make me to be knowe, shall haue euerlastynge lyfe.

Iohn.viii.a

All these thynges are the boke of lyfe, the couenaunt of the hyest, and the knowledge of the truthe. Moses commaundeth the law in the preceptes of rygh teousnesse, for an heritage vnto the house of Jacob, and commyted the promyses vnto Israel. Out of Dauid his seruaunt, he ordeyned to sayle vp a moost mygthy kyng, syttyng in the state of honour for euermore. This fylleth with wysdome, lyke as the floude of Physon, and as the floude of Tigris, when the newe frutes are a growynge.

Ecclus.xxiiii.a and.xxxix.a

Psal.cxxxii.b Ecclus.l.b

This bringeth a plenteous vnderstandinge lyke Euphrates: and fylleth it vp as Jordane in the tyme of harueste. This maketh nurture to breake forthe as the lyght, and as the water Gihon in the haruest. The fyrst hath not knowen her perfectlye, nomore shall the last serche out the grounde of her. For her thought is fuller then the see, and her counsell is profounder then the great depe.

Deut.xii.a. and.xxx.b

Iosue.iii.c

I wysdome haue cast out floudes. I am as a great waterbroke out of the riuer. I am as the ryuer Dant, and as a water conduyte am I come oute of the garden of pleasure. I sayd: I wyll water the garden of my younge plantes, and fyll the frute of my lyuely. Lo my water broke became ryuers ynge greate, and my ryuer approches vnto the see. For I make doctrine to be vnto all men, as light as the fayre morninge, and I shall make it to be euer the clearer, I wyll pearse thorow all the lower partes of the earthe, I wyll loke vpon all suche as slepe, and lyghten all them that put their truste in the Lorde. I shall yet poure out doctryne, lyke as prophesy, and leaue it vnto suche as seke after wysdome, and their generacions shall I neuer fayle, vnto the holy euerlastynge worlde. Beholde howe that I haue not labored for my selfe onely, but for all them that seke after the truth.

¶ Of thre thynges which please God, and of thre which he hateth. Of nyne thinges y be not to be inwarde, and of the tenth: chyefly of the malyce of a woman.

CAPI. XXXV.

A Thre thynges there are, that my spirite fauoureth, whiche be also alowed before God and men: The vnyte of the bren, the loue of neighbours, and man and wyfe that agree well to gether.

Gen.xiii.b Rom.xii.a

Thre thynges there be whiche my soule hateth and I vtterly abhorre the lyfe of them. A poore man that is proude. A rich man that is a lyer, and an olde body that doteth, and is vnchaste.

Eccl.xli.b

If thou hast gathered nothynge in thy youth, what wylte thou fynde then in thyne age? O how pleasaunt a thynge is it when graye headed men are discrete, and when the elders can gyue good counsel? O howe comly a thyng is wysdom vnto aged men? yea vnderstanding and counsel is a glorious thing. The crowne of olde men is to haue moch experience, and the feare of God is their worshyp.

B There be nyne thinges, which I haue iudged in my herte to be happye and the tenth wyll I tell forth vnto men with my tonge. A man that wyfe he liueth, hath ioye of his children, and seeth the fall of his enemyes. Well is hym that dwelleth with an housewyfe of vnderstandinge, and that hath not falsed with his tonge, and that hath not bene fayne to serue such as are vnmete for hym. Well is hym, that fyndeth a faythfull frend, and well is hym, whiche talketh of wysdom to an eare that heareth hym.

O how greate is he that fyndeth wysdome and knowledge? Yet is he not aboue hym, that feareth the Lorde. The feare of God hath set it selfe aboue all thynges. Blessed is the man, vnto whom it is graunted to haue the feare of God. Vnto whome shall he be lykened, that hopeth it fast? The feare of God is the begynnynge of his loue, and the begynnyng of fayth is to cleaue fast vnto it. The beynges of the herte is all punishment, and the wyckednes of a woman sorow aboue all. All punyshment and plage is nothynge in comparyson of the plage of the herte, euen so all wyckednes is nothynge to the wyckednes of a woman.

What so euer happeneth vnto a man, is C nothynge in comparyson of it, that his euyll

wilers do vnto hym: and all vengeaunce is nothynge to the vengeaunce of the enemye.

There is not a more wycked herd then the herd of the serpent, and there is no wrath ouer the wrath of a woman. I wyll rather dwell with a lyon and dragon, then to kepe house with a wycked wyfe. The wyckednesse of a woman chaungeth her face, she shal mofe fell her countenaunce as it were a Beer, and as a sack shall she hewe it among the neyghbours. Her husbande is brought to shame amonges his neyghbours, and when he heareth it, it maketh hym to syghe. All wyckednesse is but lytle to the wyckednesse of a woman, the porcyon of the ungodlye shall fall vpon her.

Lyke as to clyme vp a sandye waye is to the fete of the aged, euen so is a wyfe full of wordes to a stylle quyete man. Loke not to narowly vpon the brewsye of a woman, lest thou be prouoked in herlye toward her. The wrath of a woman is dishonoure and greate confusyon. If a woman get the maistrie, then is she contrarye to her husbande. A wycked wyfe maketh a sorye herte, an hevye countenaunce, and a sore wounde. Of the woman came the begynnynge of synne, and thorowe her we all are dede. Gyue thy water no passage, no not a lytle, neyther gyue a wycked woman her wyll. If she walke not after thy hande, she shall confounde the in the syghte of thy enemyes. Cut her of then fro me thy selfe, that she do not alwaye abuse the.

¶ The prayse of a good woman. Of the feare of thre thinges, and of the fourth. Of the lelously and dronken woman. Of two thynges that cause sorowe, and of the thyrde wherby moueth wrath. It is harde to fynde a marchaunt without blemysh, or a tauerner without synne in his songe.

CAPI. XXVI.

1 HAppy is the man that hath a vertuous wyfe, for the nombre of his yeres shall be double. An honest woman maketh her husbande a ioyfull man, and she shal fyll the yeres of his lyfe in peace. A vertuous woman is a noble gyfte, whiche shall be gyuen for a good porcyon, vnto such as feare God. Whether a man be ryche or poore, he maye haue euer a merye herte, and a cheerefull countenaunce, there be thre thynges that my hert feareth, and my face is afraied of the fourth. Treason in a cytye, a seditious people, and mysse conges, all these are heuyer the death. But whe one is grieued ouer his wyfe, it bringeth payne and sorowe vnto the herte: and a woman that telleth ouer all thynges, is a scourge of the tonge. When one hath an euyl wyfe, it is euen as when an vnlyke pase of oxen must drawe togyther, he that getteth her, getteth a scorpion. A dronken woman is a greate plage, for she can not couer her owne shame.

B The bedrome of a woman maye be knowen in the pryde of her eyes, and eyelyddes. If thy doughter be not shamefast, holde her straytlye, lest she abuse her selfe thorow ouermoch lybertie. Be ware of al the bolde lokynge of her eyes, and maruayle not if she be vngentle the. Lyke one that goeth by the waye and is thurstye, so shall she open her mouth, and drynke of euery nexte water that she maye get. By euery hedge shall she sytte downe, and open her quiuer to euery arowe. A louynge wyfe reioyseth her husbande and feedeth his bones with her wysdome. A woman of fewe wordes, is a gyfte of God, and to a well nurtured mynde maye nothynge be compared. Eccles. 36.

An honest and mannely woman is a gyfte C about other gyftes, and there is no weyghte to be compared, vnto a mynde that can rule it selfe. Lyke as the sunne when it ariseth, is an ornament in the hyghe heuen of the Lorde so is a vertuous wyfe the beautye of all her house. Lyke as the clere lyght is vpon the holy candelstyche, so is the beauty of the face vpon an honest body. Lyke as the golden pyllers are vpon the sockettes of syluer, so are the fayre legges vpon a woman that hath a constant mynde. Perpetuall are the foundacions that be layed vpon a hole stony roche, so are the comaundementes of God vpon an holy woman. Gen. 28.

There be two thynges that greue my hert D and in the thyrde is displeasure come vpon me. When an experte man of warre sufferth scarcenes and pouerty. When men of vnder standynge and wysdome are not set by: And when one departeth frome righteousnes vnto synne. Who so doth such, the Lorde hath prepared hym vnto the swerde. There be two maner of chapmen, whiche me thynke to be harde and perylous. A marchaunte can not lyghtly kepe hym frome wronge, neither a tauerner hym selfe from synne. Marchaunt.

¶ Of the poore that wolde be ryche. The prouerbe of the mā that reuerth God. The vnconstauntnes of a foole. The secretes of a frende are not to be reuealed. The wycked ymaginacyon euil, whyche retourneth vpon hym selfe.

CAPI. XXVII.

BYcause of pouertye haue many one offended: and he that seketh to be ryche, turneth aboute. Lyke as a nayle in the wall sticketh fast betwyxte two stones, euen so doth synne sticke betwyxt the byer and seller. If he holde hym not dylygently in the feare of the Lorde, his house shall soone be ouerthrowen. Lyke as when one syfteth, the fylthynes remayneth in the sure: so remayneth there some vncleane thynge in the thoughte of mā. The ouen proueth the potters vessell: so doth temptacyon of trouble tyre ryghteous men. The frute of the selde is knowen by his frute, so is the thought of mans hert knowē by his wordes. E Ecclus. 31. a 1 Peter. iii. b Math. vii. b

Prayse no man ere thou haue herde him, for a man is knowen by his wordes. If thou folowest ryghteousnes, thou shalte get her, ther, & put her vpon the as a fayre garment, and thou shalt dwell with her, and she shall defende the for euer, and in the day of knowledge thou shalte fynde stedfastnesse. The byrdes reioyce vnto theyr lyke, so doethe the truthe vnto them that be occupyed withall. The lyon waytyth for the pray: so do the synnes lurk vpon the workers of wyckednes. The talkyng of him that feareth God, is no thyng but wyldome: as for a foole, he chaungeth as the Moone. If thou be amongst the vnderstandyng, kepe thy worde to a conuenyent tyme, but among suche as be wyse, speake on hardely. The talkynge of fooles is an abhominacion, and theyr spoyle is voluptuousnesse and misnurture. Moch swearyng maketh the heere to stand vp, and to stryue with such, stoppeth the eares.

Ecclesiasti. xxii. b

The stryfe of the proude is bloudshedyng, and theyr blasphemynge is greuous to heare. Who so bewrayeth secretes, loseth his credence, and fyndeth no frende after his wyll. Loue thy frende, and byndt thy selfe in faythfulnesse with him: but yf thou bewrayest his secretes, thou shalt not get him agayne: For lyke as the man is that destroyeth his enemy, so is he also that leseth faythfulnesse in the frendshyp of his neyghbour.

Like as one that letteth a byrde go out of his handes, can not take her agayne: euen so thou, yf thou gyue ouer thy frende, thou canst not get him agayne: For thou canst not come by him, for he is to farre of. He is vnto the as a roo eskaped out of the snare, for his soule is wounded. As for wounded, they may be bounde vp agayne, and an euyll worde may be recompyled: but who so bewrayeth secretes of a frende, there is no more hope to be had vnto him.

Prouer. xxi. b

He that wynketh with the eyes, ymagyneth some euyll, and no man shall take hym from it. When thou art present, he shal lyke commende and prayse thy wordes, but at the laste, he shall chaunge his tale, and slaunder thy sayinge. Many thynges haue I hated, but nothynge so euyll, for the Lorde him self also abhorreth such one.

Eccl. xxii. b

Who so casteth a stone on hye, it shall fall vpon his owne heed: and he that smyteth wyth guyle, woundeth him selfe. Who so byggeth a pyt, shall fall therin: and he that layeth a snare, shall be taken in it him selfe. Who so gyueth a wycked noysome counsell, it shall come vpon hym selfe, and he shall not know from whence. The proud blaspheme and are scornefull, but vengeaunce lurketh for them as a lyon. They that reioyce at the fal of the rygh teous, shal be taken in the snare, anguyth of herte shall consume them before they dye. Anger and ryghteousnesse are two abhominable thynges, and the vngodly hath them both vpon hym.

¶ We ought not to despyse vengeaunce, but to forgyue the offence. Of the byrth of the tonge, & of the daungers therof.

CAPI. XXVIII.

HE that seketh vengeaunce, shall fynd vengeaunce of the Lorde, whiche shall surely kepe hym his synnes. Forgyue thy neyghboure the hurte that he hathe done the, and so shall thy synnes be forgyuen the also, when thou prayest. A man that beareth hatred agaynst an other, how dare he desyre forgyuenesse of God? For he sheweth no mercy to a man whiche is lyke hym selfe, how dare he aske forgyuenes of synnes? If he that is but flesshe, beareth hatred and kepeth it, who wyll intreate for his synnes? Remembre the end, and let enmytye passe whiche sheweth death and destruction, and abyde thou in the commaundementes. Remembre the commaundement, so shalt thou not be ryghteous ouer thy neyghboure. Thynke vpon the couenaunt of the hyghest, and forgyue thy neyghbours ignoraunce. Beware of stryfe, and thou shalt make thy synnes fewer. For an angrye man kyndleth barraunce and the vngodly disquyeteth frendes and putteth discorde amongest them that be at peace. The more wood there is, the more vehemente is the fyre: and the myghtyer the men be, the greater is the wyath: & the longer the stryfe endureth the more it burneth.

An hasty bralynge kyndleth a fyre, and an hasty stryfe sheddeth bloud. If thou blow the sparke: it shall burne: If thou spyt vpon it: it goeth forthe, and both these go out of thy mouth. The slaunderer and dubble tonged is cursed, for many one that be frendes setteth he at barraunce. The thyrde tong hath disquyeted many one, and dryue them from one lande to an other. Strong cytyes hath it broken downe, and ouerthrowen the houses of great men. The thyrde tong hath caste out many an honest woman, and robbed them of their labourres. Who so herkeneth vnto suche, shall neuer fynde rest nether dwell safely. The stroke of the robbe maketh pedders, but the stroke of the tonge smyteth bones in sunder. There be many that haue perysshed with the swerd, but many mo therowe the tonge.

Well is hym that is kepte fromt an euyll tonge, and commeth not in the anger therof whiche drawe not the yoke of such, and is not bounde in the bandes of it. For the yoke therof is of yron, and the band of it of stele. The death, therof is a very cupl death: hel were better for one, then suche a tonge. But the fyre of it maye not oppresse them that feare God, and the flame therof maye not burne them. Such as forsake the Lorde, shal fall therin: and it shall burne them, and no man shall be able to quenche it. It shall fall vpon them as a lyon, and deuoure them as a Leoparde. Thou hedgest thy goodes in thornes: why dost thou not rather make doores and barres for thy mouth? Thou wayest thy golde and syluer: why dost thou not way thy wordes also? & balesse? Beware that thou slyde not in thy tong & so fal before thyne enemyes, that lye wayte for the.

Thou

¶ How we ought to lende oure money, and do almes. Of a faythfull man answeryng for his frende. Of liberalytie and hospytalytie.

CAPI. XXIX.

2 Who so wyll shewe mercy, let hym lende vnto his neyghbour: and he that is able let hym kepe the commaundement. Lende vnto thy neyghboure in tyme of his nede, and pay: thou thy neyghbour agayne in due season. Kepe thy worde, & deale faythfully with him, and thou shalte alway fynde the thynge that is necessarye for the. There haue ben many, that when a thynge was lent them, reckened it to be founde, and made the trauayle and labour that had holped them. While they receyue any thyng, they kysse the handes of suche as gyue them, and for their neyghbours good they humble their voyce. But when they shoulde pay agayne, they kepe it backe, and gyue euyll wordes, & make many excuses by reason of the tyme: and though he be able, yet gyueth he scarse the halfe agayne, and reckeneth the other to be founde. And yf he withholde not his money, yet hath he an enemye of hym, and that vnderserued.

4 He payeth hym with cursyng and rebuke & gyueth hym euyll wordes for his good dede. There be many one whiche are not glad for to lende, not bycause of euyll, but they feare to lese the thynge that they lende. Yet haue thou patience with the symple, and withholde not mercye from hym. Helpe the poore for the commaundementes sake, and let hym not go empty from the bycause of his necessitie. Lese thy money for thy brother and neyghbours sake, and burye it not vnder a stone, where it rusteth and corrupteth. Gather thy treasure after the commaundemente of the hyest, and so shal it brynge the more profyte then golde. Laye vp the almes in the handes of the poore, and it shall kepe the from all euyll. A mans almes is a purse with hym, and shall kepe a mans fauour, as the apple of an eye: and afterwarde shall it aryse, and paye euery man his reward vpon his heed. It shal fyght for the agaynst thyne enemyes, better then the shylde of a gyaunte, or speare of the myghtye.

6 A good honest man is surety for his neighbour, but a wicked person letteth hym come to shame. Forget not the frendeshyp of thy suretye, for he hathe gyuen his soule for the. The vngodly despiseth the good dede of his suretye, and the vnthankfull and ignorant leueth his surety in daunger. Some man promyseth for his neighbour: and when he hath lost his honestly, he shall forsake hym. Suretyshyp hath destroyed many a ryche man, and remoued them as the waues in the see. Mighty people hath it dryuen awaye, and caused them to wandre in straunge countreyes. An vngodly man, transgressynge the commaundement of the Lorde, shall fall in to an euyll suretyshyp: and though he force hym self to get oute, yet shall he fall in to iudgement.

Helpe thy neyghbour out after thy power, & beware that thou thy selfe fall not in suche det. The chiefe thyng that lyeth in the life, is water and breed, clothyng and lodgynge to couer the shame. Ecclesiast.

Better is it to haue a poore lyuynge in a mans owne house, then delicate fare amonge the straunge. Be it lytle or moche that thou hast, hold the content withal, and thou shalt not be blamed as a vacabounde: for a myserable lyfe is it to goo from house to house: and where a man is fremde, he dare not open his mouth. Though one be lodged, and haue meate and drynke, yet shall he be taken as vnworthye, and beare many bytter rough wordes, namely thus: Go thy waye thou straunger, and prepare a table for thy selfe, and fede me also of that thou haste. Awaye thou straunger (so that he regardeth his honoure no more) my brother cometh in to my house, and so he letteth hym the necessitie of his house: these thynges are greue to a man that hathe vnderstandynge: namely the forbyddynge of the house, & that the lender calleth hym in the dethe. Who so enfourmeth and teacheth his sonne, greueth the enemy: and before his frendes he maye haue ioye of hym. E Nurtoured chyldren. Prou. 29. a and 23. b

¶ Though the father dye, yet is he as thoughe he were not dead: for he hath left one behynd hym, that is lyke hym. In his lyfe he sawe him and had ioye in hym, and was not sorye in his deathe, neyther was he ashamed before the enemyes. For he lefte behynde hym an auenger agaynste his enemyes, and a good doer vnto the frendes. For the lyfe of chyldren he shall bynde the woundes together, and his herte is greued at euery crye. An vntamed horse wyl be hard, & a wanton chylde wil be wylfull. Yf thou brynge vp thy sonne delicatly: he shall make the afrayde: and yf thou playe with hym, he shall brynge the to heuynesse. Laughe not with hym, lest thou wepe with him also, and lest thy tethe be set on edge at the last. Deut. 21. 8

Gyue hym no lybertie in his youthe, and excuse not his folye. Bowe downe his necke whyle he is yonge, bet hym vpon the sydes whyle he is yet but a chylde, lest he wax stubborne, and giue no more force of the, and so shal thou haue heuinesse of soule. Teache thy chyld, and be dilig ent therin, lest it b eye B Eccle. 7. b thy shame. Better is the poore being hole & strong, then a man to be ryche & not to haue his helthe. Healthe and welfare is above all golde, and a hole body above all treasure. ¶ There is no ryches above a sound body, and no ioye above the ioye of the herte. Death is better then a wretched lyfe, or contynuall sycknesse. ¶ The good thynges that are put in a close mouth, are like as when meat is layd vpon the grave.

¶ Daniel.xiii.d What good dothe the offeryng vnto an ydoll? for he can neyther eate, taste, nor smell. Euen so he that is chased of the Lorde, and beareth the rewardes of iniquite. He seeth with his eyes, and groneth lyke a gelded man, that lyeth with a virgyn and sygheth. Gyue not over thy mynd in to heynesse, and vexe not thy self in thyne owne counsel. The ioye and cherefulnesse of the hert, is the lyfe of man, and a mannes gladnesse is the prolongynge of his dayes. Loue thyne owne soule, and comforte thyne herte: as for sorowe and heynesse, dryue it farre from the, for heynesse hathe slayne many a man, and bryngeth no profyte. Zeale and anger shorten the dayes of the life: carefulnesse and sorowe, bringe age before the tyme. Vnto a merry herte euery thynge hathe a good taste, that he eateth.

¶ We ought to gyue diligent herde to honestye. Of them that take payne together ryches. The prayse of a ryche man without a faute. we ought to flye dronkennesse, and to folowe sobrenesse.

CAPI. XXXI.

¶ 1 Timot.vi.d Watchynge and carefulnesse for ryches taketh awaye the slepe, and maketh the fleshe to consume. When one lyeth & taketh care, he waketh euer vp, lyke as great sycknes breaketh the slepe. ¶ The ryche hathe greate laboure in gatheryng his ryches together, and then with the pleasure of his ryches, he taketh his rest, and is refreshed: but who so laboureth and prospereth not, he is poore: and though he lene of, yet is he a begger. He that loueth ryches, shall not be iustifyed: and who so foloweth corrupcion, shal haue ynoughe therof. Many one are come in greate myshoptune by the reason of golde, and haue founde their destruction before them. It is a tree of fallynge vnto them that offre it vp, and all suche as be foolysshe fall therin.

Blessed is the ryche which is found without blemysh, and hath not gone after golde, ne hoped in money and treasures. Where is there suche one, and we shall commend him, and cal him blessed, for great thynges dothe he amonges his people. Who so is tried, and founde perfect in suche thynges, shall be commended and praysed. Who myght offende, & hath not offended? who could do evil, & hath not done it? Therfore shal his good be stablished, & the hole congregacion shal declare his almesse. Yf thou syt at a great mans table, open not thy mouthe wyde vpon it, and make not many wordes. Remembre that an evil eye is a shrewe.

What thynge created is worse then a wicked eye? therfore wepeth it before euery mans face: Laye not thyne hande vpon euerye thynge that thyne eye seeth, and stryue not with hym in the dysshe. Ponder by thy selfe what thy neyghbour wolde fayne haue, and be discrete in euerye poynte. Eate thy thyng that is set before the mannerly, as it becommeth a man, and eate not to moche, leest thou be abhorred. Leaue thou of fyrste of all by cause of nourture, leest thou be be whom no man maye satisfye, whiche maye tourne to thy decaye. When thou sytteest amonges many men, reache not thyne hande oute fyrste of all. O howe well contente is a wyse man with a lytle wyne? so that in slepe thou shalt not be sycke therof, nor fele anye payne. A swete holsome slepe shall suche one haue, and fele no inwarde grefe. He ryseth vp bytimes in the morynge, and is well at ease in hym selfe. But an vnsaciable eater slepeth vnquietly, and hath ache and payne of the body. Yf thou feelest that thou hast eate to moch, arise go thy way, cast it of thy stomache, and take thy rest.

¶ My sonne, heare me, and despyse me not: and at the laste thou shalte fynde as I haue tolde the. In all thy workes be diligent and quycke, so shall there no sycknesse happen vnto the. Who so is lyberall in dealynge oute his meate, manye men shall bielle hym, and prayse him with their lyppes: and the same is a sure token of his loue and faythfulnesse. But he that is vnfaythfull in meate, the hole cytye shall complayne of hym: and that in a sure experyence of his infidelitie and wickednesse. Be not thou a wyne bybber, for wyne hath destroyed many a man. ¶ The fyre proueth the harde yron, euen so dothe wyne prowe the hertes of the proude when they be dronken.

Wyne soberly dronken, quyckeneth the lyfe of man. Yf thou drynkest it measurably thou shalt be temperate. What life is it, that maye contynue without wyne? Wyne was made frome the begynnynge, to make men glad, and not for dronkennesse. Wyne measurably dronken, is a reioysynge of the soule and bodye. But if it be dronken with excesse it maketh bytternesse and sorowe vnto the mynde. Dronkennesse fylleth the mynde of the foolish with shame and ruyne, minisheth the strengthe, and maketh woundes. Rebuke not thy neyghbour at the wyne, and despyse hym not in his myrth. Gyue hym no despytefull wordes, and presse not vpon hym with contrary sayinges.

¶ Of the discryption and prayse of the preacher, and of the heare. Of the feare, faith, and contrarie of God.

CAPI. XXXII.

Yf

¶ Yf thou be made a ruler, extoll not thy selfe therin, but be thou as one of the people. ¶ Take diligent care for them, and loke well thereto: and when thou haste doone all thy dutye, syt the downe, that thou mayste be mery with them, and receyue a crowne of honour, take wysely and honestly, for wysdome becommeth the ryght well. Hynder not musyck. Spete not where there is no audyence: and poure not forth wysdome out of tyme, at an inopportunitie. Lyke as the Carbuncle stone thyneth that is set in golde, so dothe a songe garnysshe the wyne feast: and as the Smaragde that is sette in golde so is the swetnesse of musycke by the myght of wyne.

D ¶ Thou yonge man, speake that becommeth the, and that is profytable, and yet scarce when thou art twyse asked. Comprehende moche with fewe wordes. In manye thynges be as one that is ignorannt, gyue eare, & hold thy tong withall. Yf thou be amonges men of hier auctoritie, desire not to compare thy selfe vnto them: and when an elder speketh, make not thou many wordes therin. Before the thonder goeth lyghtenynge: and before nurtoure and shamefastnesse goeth loue and fauour. ¶ Aryse vp betymes, and be not the last, but get the home sone, and there take thy pastyme, and doo what thou wylte: so that thou do no euyl, and despye no man. But for all thynges gyue thankes vnto hym that hath made the, and replenyshed the with his goodes.

C Who so feareth the Lorde, wyll receyue his doctryne: and they that get them to hym betymes, shall fynde grace. He that seketh the lawe, shal be fylled withall: as for him that is but fayned, he wyll be offended therat. ¶ They that feare the Lorde, shall fynde the iudgement, and they: ryghtuousnesse shal be kindled as a lyght. An vngodly man wyll not be reformed, but can dryue hym selfe with the example of other in his purpose. A man of vnderstanding despyseth no good counsel: but a wylde and proude body hath no feare. My sonne, do not hynge without aduysement, so shalt it not repent the after the dede. Go not in the waye where thou mayst fall, ne where thou mayst stomble against the stone. Gyue not thy selfe in to a laborious slypperye way, and beware of thyne owne chyldren. In all thy workes put thy truste in God frome thy hole herte, for that is the kepyng of the commaundementes. Who so bileueth Gods worde taketh hede to the commaundementes: and he that putteth his truste in the Lorde, shall want nothynge.

¶ The destruccyon of him that feareth God. The answere of the wyse. The tyrel determeyneth of a twoie. Man is in the hande of God, as the earthe is in the hande of the potter. we oughte not to dispose oure selues, to become subiect to other.

CAPI. XXXIII.

THere shall no euyll happen vnto hym that feareth God, but when he is in temptacion, the Lorde shal deliuer him. A wyse man hateth not the lawe, but an hypocryte is as a shyp in a rageyng water. A man of vnderstandyng geueth credence vnto the lawe of God, and the lawe is faythfull vnto hym. C

Be sure of the matter, then take therof: Be ryght well instructe, then mayste thou gyue answere. The herte of the foolyshe is lyke a carte whele, and his thoughtes ren about lyke the axel tree. Lyke as a wyld horse that neyeth vnder euery one that sitteth vpon hym, so is it with a scornefull frende. Why doth one daye excell an other, seynge all the dayes of the yere come of the sunne? The wysdom of the Lorde hath so parted the asonder, and so hath he ordeyned the times and solemne feastes. Some of them hathe he chosen and halowed before other dayes. And all men are made of the ground, and out of the earth of Adam. Holy dayes

In the multitude of science hath the Lorde sundered them, and made their wayes of diuers facyons. Some of them hath he blessed, made moche of them, halowed them, and claymed them to hym selfe. But some of the hath he cursed, brought them lowe, and put them out of their estate. Lyke as the claye is in the potters hande, and all the ordynge therof at his pleasure: so are men also in the hande of him that made them, so that he may gyue them as it lyketh hym best. Agaynste euyll is good, and agaynste deathe is lyfe: so is the vngodly agaynst suche as feare God. Beholde thus all the workes of the hyghest, and there are euer two and two agaynste two, and one set agaynste an other. I am awaked vp last of all, as one that gathereth after in haruest. In the gyftes of God and in his blessynge I am increased, and haue fylled my wyne presse lyke a grape gatherer. Beholde how I haue not laboured onely for my selfe, but for all suche as loue nourture and wysdome. Homes

Heare me, O ye greate men of the people, and harken with your eares ye rulers of the congregacio. Gyue not thy sonne, and wife, thy brother and frend power ouer the, while thou lyuest: and gyue not awaye thy substaunce, and good to an other, lest it repent the, and thou be fayne to begge therfore thy selfe. As longe as thou lyuest and hast breth, let no man chaunge the: for better it is thy chyldren to praye the, then that thou shouldest be fayne to loke in their handes. In all thy workes be excellent, that thy honoure be neuer stayned. At the tyme when thou shalte ende thy dayes, and fynisshe thy lyfe, distribute thyne enheritaunce. The fodder, the whyp, and the burden belongeth vnto the asse: Meate, correction, and worke vnto the seruaunt. Seruaunte

Yf thou set thy seruaunte to labour, thou shalte fynde rest. But yf thou let him go ydle, he shal seke lybertie. The yoke and the whip bowe downe the necke, but tame thou thy cuyll seruaunt with bondes and correction. Send hym to labour, that he go not ydle: for ydlenesse bringeth moche cuyll. Set hym to worke, for that belongeth vnto hym, and be commeth him well. If he be not obedyente, hynde his fete, but do not to moche vnto him in any wyse, and without discrecion do nothyng. Ecclesiasticus vii. If thou haue a (faythfull) seruaunt, let hym be vnto the as thyne owne soule, for in bloud hast thou gotten hym. If thou haue a seruaunte, holde hym as thy selfe, for thou haste nede of hym as of thy selfe. If thou intreatest hym cuyll, and repent him hard, and makest hym to departe, and to renne awaye from the, thou canst not tell what waye thou shalt seke hym.

¶ Of dreames, dyuynacions, and enchauntementes. We ought to confute vayne hope, and lyenge. The prayse of them that feare God. Of vyuers workes of men. God doth not alowe the workes of an vnfaythfull man.

CAPI. XXXIIII.

Dreames. VAnyte people begile them selues with vayne and deceytfull hope, and foles trust in dremes. Who so regardeth dremes, is lyke hym that wil take holde of a shadowe, and folow after the wynde: euen so is it with apperinges of dremes. Before the face is the lykenesse of a face. Who can be clene of the vncleane? Or what truth can be spoken of a lyar? Sothsayinge, witchcraft, sorcerye and dremynge is but vanitie: lyke as when a woman trauayleth with chylde, and hath many fantasyes in her hert. Where as suche vysions come not of God, sette not thyne hert vpon them: for dremes haue deceyued many a man, and they failed that put their trust therin.

The lawe shal be fulfylled without lyes, and wysdom is sufficient to a faythfull mouth. A wyse man that is well instruct, vnderstandeth moche, and he that hath good experience can talke of wysdom. He that hath no experience knoweth lytle, and he that erreth causeth moche wyckednesse.

When I was yet in errour, I learned moche also: yea I was so lerned, that I could not expresse it all, and came oft in perylle of death the rather, tyll I was deliuered from it. Nowe I se that they which feare God, haue the ryght spirite: for their hope standeth in hym that can help them. Who so feareth the Lorde, standeth in awe of no man, and is not afrayde, for the Lorde is his hope and comfort.

Blessed is the soule of hym that feareth the Lorde: In whome putteth he his trust? who is his strengthe? For the eyes of the Lorde haue respect vnto them that loue hym. He is their mighty protection and strong ground: a defence for the heate, a refuge for the hote none daye, a succoure for stomblynge, and an helpe for fallyng. He setteth vp the soule, and lyghteneth the eyes: he gyueth healthe, lyfe, and blessyng. He that gyueth an offring of vnryghtous good, his offeryng is refused: and the scornefull dealynges of the vnryghtous please not God. God hath no delyte in the offrynges of the vngodly, neither maye synne be reconcyled in the multitude of oblacions. Who so bringeth an offryng oute of the goodes of the poore, bothe euen as one that kylleth the sonne before the fathers eyes.
